Strange Disappearance of Thurlow Farmer Causes Alarm ---- Six Hurt in Motor Crash

SIX HURT WHEN MOTORS CRASHED ON FOXBORO RD.

Wessels Family Badly Shaken Up In Collision at Foxboro

AUTO WRECKED

William Hamilton Fails To Notice Approach of Belleville Car

Mrs. Walter Wessels, 71 Lewis Street, side badly injured; Walter Wessels, scalp wound, severe forehead abrasion, cut nose, blacked eye; Mr. V. Peal, collar bone fractured; Mrs. Armstrong, head cut open; Oscar Peal, teeth injured; Arnold Wessels, aged 21, hand badly lacerated; these injuries were sustained in a Sunday afternoon automobile smash on the Foxboro Highway at five o'clock yesterday.

Mr. Wessels who was driving the Wessel car, was proceeding south on the Foxboro highway from Sidney town hall where he had visited his cousin, Mrs. Reynolds. At the same time, Mr. George Ketcheson, Belleville, was going north. William Hamilton, proceeding at right angles from the second concession of Sidney, seeing the Ketcheson car slowing down to allow him to cross the intersection, jammed down the accelerator and crashed into the Wessels car which he had not noticed coming from the north. Following a sickening smash the Wessels car turned turtle and landed in front of the Ketcheson car, wheels in the air. The scrambled humanity was slowly extricated from the wreckage, and the police car was called. Mrs. Armstrong and her sister Mrs. Wessels were taken to the Belleville General Hospital where Dr. Proctor took charge. Wessels who is an employee of the St. Charles Motor Accessories was taken home in a dazed condition where he will be confined for several days. Only her having been at Sunday School saved Mr. Wessels' daughter from being a participant in the accident, as she would probably have driven in the front seat with Mr. Post. Mr. Wessels and Oscar, the three who received most severe injuries.

Felt Badly

None of the three occupants of the Hamilton car were injured in any manner whatsoever. The Hamilton car was not badly battered, suffering a broken front wheel and minor dents. Mr. Hamilton was not affected at the result of the smash-up and broke down completely some time after the crash. It is not definitely known whether a charge of reckless driving will be laid against Hamilton or not.

FREIGHT VESSEL OPENS SEASON

Glen Allan Calls at Port of Belleville on Maiden Voyage

The Steamer Glen Allan, freight boat commenced her maiden trip from Trenton to Montreal to-day calling at the Port of Belleville.

This boat will make a weekly trip between Trenton, Belleville and Montreal until navigation freezes up next fall leaving Trenton every Monday at eleven o'clock and arriving back at Belleville Saturday night.

To-day Mr. George P. Ostrom of this city, produce merchant shipped two carloads of eggs to a warehouse in Montreal by the Steamer Glen Allan.

This boat has been laid up at Picton all winter and is in charge of Capt. Carlisle and Bursar Wilson, both Picton men.

LIQUOR STORES WILL NOT BE READY FOR HOLIDAYS

Belleville's and Trenton's liquor stores will probably be opened between the 25th and 30th of this month. It was hoped that plans would be in such shape that the Government depots could be ready in various parts of the Province about the middle of May but the mass of detail involved has made it necessary to postpone the inauguration in most places for from one to two weeks. It is possible that in Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa, London, Hamilton and Windsor where dispensaries were in existence under the O. T. A. that these places may be converted into liquor stores and used a week or ten days before less fortunate localities are served.

Mr. Stewart McClennaghan of the Liquor Control Board is expected in Belleville any day now to formally appoint the local vendor and his assistant and also to pass approval on the site selected for the store. At the same time Trenton's store and vendor will be arranged for. At the present time it is not likely that the Government will establish a liquor store in either Deseronto or Picton so that thirsty residents of the Eastern part of the County and of all Prince Edward will have to trek to Belleville to secure their supplies.

Intelligencer's Forecasts Likely Correct

While no official notification of appointments or of the site selected has been received here the Intelligencer's forecast on both these points will no doubt be confirmed according to reliable information, unless some untoward incident makes a change in present plans necessary.

Mr. W. H. Ireland, M.P.P., was in Belleville on Saturday afternoon but it was on private business.

On March 30th last the Intelligencer carried a story to the effect that a rumor credited Mr. B. L. Hyman with getting the appointment as Government vendor here and on April 13th another forecast said that the Liquor Store would probably be located at 52 Bridge Street East, in the property now occupied by the Modern Dry Cleaners as their up-town office.

BAYONETED FATHER AND CHILD AS THEY LAY HELPLESS ON GROUND

Details of Revolting Murder of Rev. Slichter and Daughter

Hong Kong, May 2.—Rev. Morris Flichter, of Toronto, China Inland Mission worker, who was murdered recently by Chinese bandits near Yunnanfu with his eight year old daughter, was bayoneted after being thrown to the ground, according to mail advices, that reached here today from Yunnanfu. Beside Mr. Slichter and his daughter, the party was made up of Mrs. Slichter, a five-year-old son, Miss Mary Crafe, medical missionary of Philadelphia and a Roman Catholic missionary. The latter escaped and the boy were captured. They are now reported to have been released.

Advices state that when 250 bandits attacked the party their escort of 110 soldiers fled. The missionaries were surrounded and Mr. Slichter was shot and wounded. He was knocked down with a rifle butt and he was then on the ground with his daughter in his arms. They were killed by bayonet thrusts. The little girl was killed in a similar manner. Mrs. Slichter was stabbed in the back several times and the Catholic priest was shot at but he escaped behind a wall.

WINNIPEG'S MAYOR SAYS PROHIBITION WONT WORK

Winnipeg, May 2.—"I am a prohibitionist and will work for it, if you can make it effective, but it can't be done," declared Col. Ralph H. Webb, Mayor of Winnipeg, in an address last night at a mass meeting of the War Veterans organization, held in support of the ballot for sale of beer by the glass.

"If you want prohibition, have it one hundred per cent. but if you are going to have the sale of liquor and beer have it as honest to God way," he urged.

"Knowing the Quebec system as I do, I want to say that if we had the same in Manitoba all our problems would be solved."

W. D. ROBB, C.N.R. VICE-PRES. CHIEF ROTARY SPEAKER

Distinguished Former Belleville Resident Honored By Local Club

Mr. W. D. Robb, Vice President of the C. N. R. line and a former distinguished resident of this city was the guest and chief speaker at the Rotary Luncheon to-day. Mr. Robb quoted some very interesting figures showing the progress which the C. N. R. has made during the past decade. In 1922 the surplus of earning over operating expenses were less than three million dollars, in 1923 it was over twenty million, in 1924 over seventeen million and in 1925 the surplus amounted to thirty-two million, two hundred and sixty-four dollars. Even this figure was beaten by the record year of 1926 when the figures were 4.125,000, of surplus over operating expenses.

Mr. Robb's address will appear in full in the Intelligencer tomorrow.

Mr. Mackenzie Robertson gave a short report of the Jamestown Rotary Convention last week. Among the guests at the club to-day were Jodge Massage of Durham City, Walter and Martin Robb, sons of the chief speaker and P. H. Martin.

FARMER DISAPPEARED ON EASTER SUNDAY EVE.

On Easter Sunday April 17th Mr. George White a well to do farmer on the Fourth Line of Thurlow took his car out of the garage and drove away. Since then his wife has not seen him or had any definate information as to his movements, and his strange disappearance is causing alarm. Mr. White has not been in the best of health for the past few weeks and the family are afraid that some accident may have happened. He spoke the week previous to his disappearance of going Toronto for a few days and it was naturally supposed that he made the trip but when he failed to return home inquiries were instituted. Absolutely no trace of his movements has been found since he drove out of the barn yard two weeks ago last Sunday evening, except that he is thought to have been recognized in a Belleville store on Saturday, April 23rd.

The White farm consists of a hundred acres and there is no suggestion of financial trouble. There had been some disagreement between White and his father Mr. Charles White who lives on the farm and has some interest in it about selling off the stock. The son was resirous of bringing out an auctioneer and having a sale but the father refused to sanction the course in this argument and some other slight domestic difficulty is thought may have unsettled him enough to account for his strange coure of action

Mrs. W. George White herself had just returned from the Belleville Hospital about two weeks before Easter after a very serious illness and brought back with her a young girl Miss Winnifred Carr to assist with the housework. The husband drove Miss Carr back to her home just outside the city limits of Belleville on Easter Saturday. At that time he said nothing to his wife about leaving, but on the Sunday following parcels and some of his clothes and drove away without offering any explanation. It was Miss Carr and her mohter who thought they recognized Mr. White a week later in the Belleville store but they were not at all positive of the identification.

George White is a man of about fifty years of age. He was married about nine years ago but there are no children. The districted wife is carrying along the farm work with the aid of the aged father and what hired help she can secure.

THIEF CAPTURED BY AUTHORITIES

Arthur Boufford Is Arrested Five Hours After Stealing Car

Arthur J. Boufford, probably realizes to his discomfort now the efficient methods of detection used by the Canadian police. At noon on Saturday he took Mr. Arthur G. Alpva's Rossmore Chrysler car from in front of the Dominion Bank in Belleville.

The local police promptly wired the towns east and west of Belleville, and Boufford was picked up in Oshawa. He had parked the car in Oshawa and Constable Paxton of the Oshawa Police force escorted him at five o'clock in the afternoon. It was learned in conversation with the Oshawa "Reformer" that Boufford who hails from Rochester N.Y. appeared in Police Court this morning and was remanded until to-morrow morning. Mr. Alpva's on account stood Chief Kidd when he went to Oshawa to bring Boufford to Belleville is the trial and deme his father's car here.

Peter White, K.C., Acts In Company's Wage Dispute

Ottawa, May, 2.—A minority report by Peter White, K. C. Toronto, company's representative on the conciliation board which considered the wage dispute between the Canadian National Railways and certain of its employees, recommends an increase of two cents per hour for hourly rated employees and an equivalent increase to monthly rated employees. This recommendation is in accordance with the majority report published on Saturday, recommending an increase of two cents per hour to hourly rated employees and proportionate increase to monthly rated workers.

Mr. White agrees with the recommendation in the majority report for an additional increase of "one half cent per hour for hourly rated employees and the equivalent to monthly rated employees" to remove inequalities between different groups of the same class of employees, "particularly between certain employees on the old Grand Trunk System and the rest of the system."

GOYER BROTHERS LAUNCH CAUGHT BY U. S. EXCISE

Revenue Cutter Fires On Unarmed Thirty Footer Off Oswego

BOAT CONFISCATED

Cargo of Beer Also Impounded—First Trip For Young Men

The unarmed thirty foot gasoline launch, belonging to Archie Goyer of this city, was bombarded by the commander men on a revenue cutter about ten miles out of Oswego at two o'clock Sunday morning and one hundred bags of beer or in other words, two hundred cases, together with the launch, were confiscated by American Excise Officers. The boat was in charge of "Ollie" and "Nap" Goyer, brothers of the owner of the boat.

This launch which was loaded with beer from a Western Ontario Brewery left the Bridge Street dock on Friday afternoon for its destination.

The Intelligencer, in conversation with Mrs. Archie Goyer over the phone this afternoon, learned that as yet no information has been received by her husband from the Goyer brothers and she could not say definitely whether Mr. Goyer would go to Oswego or not.

This was the first trip that these two brothers ever made across the lake.

TELEPHONE MEN TO FINISH WORK

The workmen of the Bell Telephone Company are again back in this city to finish the work which they commenced sometime ago of installing new lines throughout the city. This work is costing the Bell Telephone Company about fifty thousand dollars and when finished the city will be thoroughly covered with cables.

The workmen have been away at Smith Falls for sometime working there but are now back to finish the Belleville contract which will probably be completed in about one month's time.

DRIVER LOSES CONTROL OF CAR

Parties Escape Injuries In Accident at Jones' Creek

When L. A. Megson, driving towards Trenton yesterday afternoon lost control of the steering gear of his car and was careening from side to side on the road he crashed into an automobile driven by Mr. and Mrs. Margaret Gulliver, 70 Charles Street, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gulliver, smashing the axle on the Gulliver car and denting the mud-guards.

Mr. and Mrs. Gulliver, their daughter, son and his wife were in the Gulliver car at the time of the accident, while in the other car were two or three children. Miss Gulliver tried her best to turn out of the way and crowded over by the ditch. Mr. Megson taken off his hands in the accident and is willing to pay expenses. No one was injured.

The cars were both damaged and were towed to the city for repairs.

REALIZES LIFE'S AMBITION IN ROLE OF TRAFFIC COP

Realizing a life's ambition to direct traffic a man who became temporarily insane about 5.30 Saturday afternoon, stepped out from the curbstone in front of the Quinte Hotel and proceeded to act the part of a smart traffic officer, Sergeant - Detective J. M. Trualach was called and tapping the man on the shoulder asked him if he wouldn't like to accompany him to the police station. That was as far as this pleasant little request got. The insane man swung a hard fist underneath the Sergeant's chin, and the fight started. The man was easily overpowered and was taken to the Police Station, only to be sent to the hospital immediately for medical attention. A crowd gathered at the scene when the would-be pugilist matched his strength against the Sergeant.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Good luck consists largely in saving your money.

JUSTICE IN U. S.

Nowhere perhaps is the United States seen to such advantage as in her courts, both civil and criminal. The great republic perpetuates a state of affairs which would not be tolerated for a day in the "effete" nations of the Old World, and if justice emerges from the hopeless confusion into which an important trial resolves itself it is by blind chance.

Two instances have come prominently before the public in the last few days. The libel suit of Aaron Sapiro, a Jewish lawyer and promoter, against Henry Ford ended in a mis-trial after six weeks of argument and evidence because a juror had been quoted in a newspaper interview. Apparently neither juror nor newspaper was punished. It was taken as an unfortunate and expensive incident, and the judge expressed merely passing annoyance. The Snyder-Gray murder trial, now in progress in New York, is an example of the ineptitude and, to Canadians the shocking indecorum of American courts in criminal cases.

The choosing of the jury occupied the time of the court for a week. Men summoned for jury duty were cross-examined as though they were vital witnesses, and rejected for all sorts of inconsequential reasons—or they did or did not believe in capital punishment they would or would not execute a woman, they had read newspapers or discussed the case. One man was turned back because he was an insurance agent, apparently on the theory that he might be influenced against the accused because they are alleged to have increased their victim's insurance before breaking in his head with a window sash weight. Twelve men sufficiently uninteligent to satisfy all parties having been found at the cost of much time and expense—they are described as "fat, placid-looking, elderly men" and "good, old-fashioned husbands"—the court adjourned for the week end, and with every juror to his home went a detective; a precaution taken to prevent such an "incident" as called the Ford hearing.

Thus the case proceeds in an atmosphere threatrical and unhealthy. There are more than one hundred "special writers" present—novelists, dramatists, psychologists, screen stars preachers, sob sisters who bewail the plight of the demure widow. There are also, thank heaven, a few old-fashioned reporters for some old-fashioned papers more interested in the news than in the reaction of the trial on ever-so-charming a killer. It is a prime spectacle, in which the melancholy fact that a man and woman are on trial for their lives for an atrocious and cold-blooded murder is quite lost sight of.

American legal and judicial procedure has got itself into an unholy mess out of which there seems no way save in the ruthless scrapping of the whole machinery. No one knows its difficulties and dangers more than the better-informed of American jurists, but all efforts at reform from within have proved of no avail. In the meantime justice is left but strangled in red tape.

MAKING TROUBLE

When the Canadian people are called "seizers" because they do not do more for Empire defense, it makes a great deal of difference who does the calling.

"Disgust and indignation" are said in a newspaper cable to have been aroused among Canadians in London by an article published in the National Review, and written by H. S. Morton which contains the phrase quoted; and as well attacks Mr. Mackenzie King and directs some special invective at Quebec.

Nowhere in the newspaper cable referred to is it mentioned that Mr. Morton is a Canadian, a well-known correspondent of a Toronto daily paper which says the same thing day in and day out in its editorial columns. The fact is not mentioned. The reader is left to infer that this is an English attack on Canada's naval policy, couched in vicious language and revealing a bitter spirit, rather than a criticism of Canadian policy by a Canadian writer.

A Canadian writer is mischief-making when he publishes such an attack overseas. But he is not nearly so dangerous as the newspaper that represents his article as an English attack on Canada.

OSTRICHES

When the women of the world abandoned their broad, streamline, ornamented hats for simple, close-fitting structures more appropriate for bobbed heads they doomed the ostrich industry of South Africa to bad times. Between 400 to 500 ostriches are being slaughtered daily. It is reported, because there is no market for their plumes.

Ostriches are expensive birds, and apparently have no economic justification save in their decorative qualities. Their feathers cannot be disfused as anything else, and South Africa farmers cannot afford to raise and feed these great, eight-foot, 300-pound birds to provide handsome feather dusters for the housewives of the Dominion.

When the cycle of style completes its course and feathers are required on every well-bred hat the Cape Colony producers will benefit from the operations of the old law of supply and demand. There will be few ostriches therefore prices will be high, and the demand imperative. When feather are the thing nothing can take the place of ostrich plumes, for not the most arrogant rooster can put conviction into his most brilliant plumage when he has to meet comparison will the stately African bird.

GOOD FAITH

Refusal of the Parliament of the Irish Free State to abolish the oath of allegiance to the King is giving rise to some astonishment to the press of the United States. It is a matter of no surprise at all, however, to those who have been following recent events throughout Southern Ireland. In reality the oath is the Dail only a few weeks ago. Mr. Blythe, the Free State Minister of Finance, said that if he could now secure a republic by crooking his little finger he would not make the effort and Mr. Kelvin O'Higgins, who followed him, said that if war should ever come again then the troops of the Free State would co-operate with the armies of Britain "for the common defence of these islands."

The truth is that those in Ireland who are dissatisfied with the Treaty of 1921 are but a small and decreasing majority. The British Government has lived up to its part of the Treaty with scrupulous honor, with the consequence that there is more than one D'Arcy McGee today among the erstwhile rebel leaders of Ireland. "The oath of allegiance," declares President Cosgrave, "is a fundamental provision of the Anglo-Irish treaty. It has been accepted by the Dail and approved by the people at the polls, and the Government of which I am the head is going to stand by it."

A BUTTERFLY

Ah! beauteous touch from Nature's brush
Of dazzling blue, of orange, chrome—
A daub from Nature's hand.
Ah! creature frail, a fragment mere
Of summer warmth and flowers
That in thy darkened cell dost sleep
Through unkind winds and showers
With Spring deferred, assaults from frost.
Thy sparks of life still burn
Till sweet mild zephyrs gently blow,
And thou, winged beauty turn.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Woman was made before mirrors—and she has kept in front of them ever since.

—Toronto Telegram.

Just for a moment it looked as if long hair had the bobbed coiffure on the run. A woman in one of Indiana's hamlets was bowled over by an automobile and when the back of her head hit the pavement her generous coil saved her life. This may seem like a good knock-down argument; but the sad thought immediately arises that some short-haired whippersnapper will cheerfully admit that people who can't keep out of the way of automobiles ought to wear long hair and about 14 petticoats also.

So they jacked up the concrete a few inches over two feet and thirty-two fifty-pound cakes of ice were fitted under it. In sixteen hours the ice melted enough to lower the slab to its new foundation.

Are you wasting money on needless repairs?

How to avoid needless car expense

The failure of lubricants to master deadly heat and friction needlessly costs the car owners of Canada many millions of dollars each year—a repair bill in which you share.

Needlessly—because there is one oil—Veedol—that successfully resists heat and friction, the two causes of 75% of all motor repairs. Veedol keeps a thin tough film of oil between all the whirling flying metal surfaces in your car. Not even the heat developed in the modern motor can penetrate that fighting "film of protection". Destructive friction has no chance to begin its insidious work.

In Veedol, Tide Water technologists perfected an oil which masters heat 100 degrees hotter than the hottest friction-spot in your car.

Let Veedol guard your motor against repairs—and your pocketbook against repair bills. Drive to a dealer who displays the orange and black Veedol sign. Ask for Veedol by name.

MARKET SPOTLIGHT — MOWAT M&M MINING STOCKS

HOLLINGER declared a regular dividend of two per cent. payable May 20th to stock holders of record at the close of business May 4th, 1927.

Attention should again be given to MINING CORPORATION. The tests show the ore from the Flin Flon property averaging from $10.00 to $13.00, as compared with indicated values of somewhat under $10.00. This stock has a par of $5.50 and is selling at $3.50. Watch it.

The unexpected rise in Corona was caused by the news being circulated that some encouraging information from the Company may be expected in the near future.

The stock has been discounted on Nipissing. The Company has discovered that the old property contains more ore than might have been expected. Their annual report was the usual conservative one. They are old hands at the game. Results on their Monthray property have been quite satisfactory to date.

The Argonaut mill has recently been enlarged which will greatly increase production. The copper-gold crease arrangement which is peculiar to the upper levels. They are now working on the 1,000 foot level.

The strength in Tywagamink is due to the milling of ore by diamond drill at a depth of 400 feet. This ore was cut on the second level below number 3 ore body. Previous diamond drilling disclosed ore to a depth of 312 feet. It is also possible that the ore cut slightly below the 400 foot horizon is a continuation of the number 3 ore body as previously proved to 312 feet. The new strike assays 3 per cent. to ore reserves.

MINING GOSSIP

The next two or three weeks are destined to be important in the history of the Argonaut Consolidated Mines. Four veins are to be tapped respectively. Three of these veins will be cut within a distance of 150 feet on the shaft. This working reached the 1,250 foot level about the fifth of the month. Station cutting has been completed and the lateral work necessary to reach the veins is now under way. Two shoots have been opened up in these four veined at the 1,000 foot level, ranging in length from 150 to 150 feet. The veins are Nos. 1,014, 1,018, 1,022 and 1,027.

Following up their extensive surface work of last year on properties at Lake Deine, Que., the Red Lake Reyn Gold Miner Exploration Co., Ltd., has shipped a plant into the property. This is now being set up. The equipment consists of an 80-horse power boiler, three-drill compressors and 8 x 10 hoist. The shaft has been sunk to a depth of 15 feet by hand steel and is being continued by this method so that as soon as the plant is ready for operation there will be no delay. It is proposed to sink the shaft at once as possible to a depth of 100 feet. From this point the wide mineralized zone which has been found on the property will be prospected.

New York, May 2.—Heavy buying of the low priced rails, several of which attained their highest prices in years, monopolized speculative interest in today's stock market. Reports of increased Mississippi river flood stages brought about some liquidation of the South Western rails. Bunaka exhibited $1,000,000 bonds, but there appeared to be plenty of funds available in the money market for all of them. The federal reserve report of brokers loans for the week ended last Wednesday which will be made public after the close is expected to show another slight increase. Chicago, Great Western, Peoria and eastern, Chicago and Eastern Illinois, St. Paul, Chicago and Atlantic issues were in demand. Hudson and Manhattan was run up three points on the curb price. Many issues ran up to new high records for the year. SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barlour

CHAPTER 9

THE PITIABLE VICTIM

The death of Daisy Vaughn stirred the embers of the old scandal which the passages of years had mercifully allowed to cool, and once more gossip was aflame.

The Ross and the Vaughn names were on every tongue. People speculated, conjectured, set forth ruthless opinions. Had there been other men in with Ross, or had she remained with the handsome scapegrace all this time? Daisy' life since she had run away

The scandal-mongers hoped for the worst and withdrew from contact with the innocent families of the guilty pair as definitely and pointedly as they had six years ago.

The Vaughan house, which had begun to open its doors to a chosen few, again was dark and silent. Why Mrs. Vaughn did not go abroad or to the Orient, where new scenes and interests might have helped her to forget, no one ever knew. Perhaps because the was prostrate because she was dying she did not feel equal to the effort.

At any rate, she elected to remain at home.

Sybil sometimes saw her walking in the garden and pity welled up in her young heart.

At first, when she was able to under stand what her father's elopment with Daisy had signified, she had hated the girl and her mother—not as individuals, but as symbolic of something which had taken her father from his family and made her mother weep.

But, even before the news of Daisy's death, she found that hate mysteriously vanished. Pity and compassion took possession of her. Lately, she began to understand that Daisy had been the victim, rather than the culprit. Ted and Jimmie unconsciously taught her that. With her wise, young-old eyes, Sybil had often seen Ted, suave, handsome, gallant, chatting with graceful deference with some pretty girl on the street—a girl who looked at him with her young heart in her eyes. And, half an hour later at home Ted was joking brutally, valorously, with Jimmie about this same girl.

Sybil came to understand that just as her handsome father must have wooed Daisy Vaughn. Just so she, too, must have met with flippancy, indifference, and disrespect, when the novelty of possession had flagged.

While Sybil went about her household tasks, dishe, shrinking from the flame of rekindled gossip, yet bearing herself with outward defiance, she thought these long, bitter thoughts which should have had no place in the mind of a girl. She reminded herself that Daisy probably had paid as steep a price as she and her mother had paid all those years. Daisy and Mrs. Vaughn and Sybil and her mother!

But the man and his sons were exempt from punishment!

While Daisy's heart-broken mother sat alone in her home, with Mary Ross ruined her eyes over fine needlework in Madame Irene's establishment, while Sybil, still scarcely more than a child for all her budding loveliness, slaved over house-hold tasks and pinched pennies and thrust back her longing for an education and social life, the one who had precipitated this tragic state of affairs was probably going his carefree way. His two sons following closely in his footsteps, were welcomed, feted, for the very characteristics and temperament which had brought about the catastrophe.

"It's unfair! Oh, it's unfair!" some times burst from Sybil's young lips in the silence of the empty house. But, to her mother, she confided nothing of her bitter thoughts. Never had Daisy Vaughn's death been mentioned between them. Never had the elopement of her father and the girl been discussed.

Mary Ross hoped that Sybil remembered little of the affair... "She was so young when it happened," she used to reassure herself. But, looking into her daughter's eyes, she sometimes felt that hope grew faint. It frightened her to the uncanny wisdom there. It seemed to her that Sybil's beauty was like a rose—and then curious wisdom in her eyes was like a canker in its heart.

She knew that, even under the temptation of beauty, most men respect innocence; but beauty, without innocence—beauty that flaunts a meaning wisdom, is a dangerous gift. She was cruelly, bitterly, afraid for her daughter's future.

"Let me go to work," Sybil had begged one night, as she sat on a hassock before her mother. "I've enough shirtband now to get a job. You're tired, Mother, you should rest."

But Mary Ross laughed and put her off, week after week, month after month.

The truth was that she was afraid to send Sybil out into the world.

CHAPTER 10

The Return of the Prodigal

When Sybil was twenty, the unexpect happened. Her runaway father returned.

His return was preceded by half a column in the newspapers. En route he had become the hero of a railroad wreck. Himself injured, he had gone to the rescue of other passengers at the risk of his life.

It was like Fred Ross—that dramatic gesture. Bill, when he made his appearance, one arm in a sling, limping along—rather gracefully, it must be confessed—with the aid of a stick, there were many of his old acquaintances who hadn't a fine heart, or the courage, to give him the cold shoulder He possessed that dangerous gift of personal charm, the art of winning people with his willing, under his spell Whatever his critics might say behind his back, in his presence they were so much putty.

Added to his personal charm was the public acclaim for one who had performed an heroic act. Small wonder, then, that in certain quarters his defection was minimized. If he had returned, ashamed and slinking, if he had looked poor and beaten, he would have received the scorn he deserved. But Chance had given him the key to public favor, and he made use of it adroitly. It was not long before his former friends and associates were saying of him—with an apologetic shrug, perhaps: "Well, Bill was sorely tempted him—"

He approached his brother Albert while he still flaunted the sling and the stick. What happened in the gloomy old house on the best residential street, no one ever knew. But, for once, Fred Ross found that his charm failed. Pained and incredulous, he was turned from his brother's door.

A week later, while he still lived at the Hoffman House on credit advanced by the proprietor, who was an old crony, he presented himself at the little, old-fashioned home from which he had fled that night, ten years before, with the daughter of the neighbor from across the street.

Could not be persuaded to change

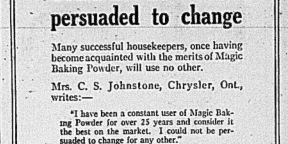

Many successful housekeepers, once having become acquainted with the merits of Magic Baking Powder, will use no other.

Mrs. C. S. Johnstone, Chrysler, Ont., writes:—

"I have been a constant user of Magic Baking Powder for over 25 years and consider it the best on the market. I could not be persuaded to change for any other."

Magic Baking Powder is always uniform in quality —a fact which helps wonderfully to insure successful baking. There is no other "just the same." Insist on "Magic."

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am twenty-five years of age and have been keeping company with a boy for nine years.

For the past four years my friend has been attentive to another girl.

We quarrel about this and many other things, but I will not release him. We are not formerly engaged, although I have told many people that we are.

Do you think I would do well to let him go to the girl he loves? My parents strongly object to my releasing him.

FLORENCE C.

FLORENCE C.: By all means release the young man from a bond that is purely artificial. What possible chance would a marriage have that would be held together by a purely legal tie Could you be happy married to a man who had given his love to another girl and was engaged to her, too?

Let him go to the girl he loves. If you cannot love him completely, you gain nothing by keeping him from her it is the dog in the manger attitude that will never bring you happiness And I am sure there is happiness still in store for you if you plan your life over from this moment on.

After all, you met your friend when you were very young. What happened was really inevitable. You were both too young to have found a real love. Apparently he believes that he has found that now. Give yourself time, make new contacts, acquire new interests. It won't be long before another and more important love will come to you.

Explain the matter to your parents

First Refugee from Chinese War

Mrs. Melvin Southwick, of Harrison, N.Y., returned to New York April 12th, on board the world-cruising Canadian Pacific Empress of Scotland, with her infant daughter (then 12 weeks old), who was born in Hankow, China, a few days before the inhabitants were ordered to evacuate. She went to Shanghai and thence to Kobe, Japan, where she embarked on the Empress of Scotland. Her husband is still in Hankow, being as representative of the Standard Oil Company there. She was met by her mother, Mrs. Freda Becker, when the Empress docked. Mrs. Southwick says she never for her adventure, but that may be due to the kindness of the passengers on the C.P.R. vessel's world trip, who couldn't do enough for her and for whom her dramatic escape and presence on the ship added a final thrill to the many they had experienced on their globe-circling journey. As for Mrs. Southwick, she wasn't interested either in the Chinese or her monstrous adventure.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

When selecting a lobster, be sure and get one whose tail is curled tightly to its body, for this is a sign of freshness.

When the red lites of the fireplace or porch floors become dull, rub them with a cut piece of lemon dipped in salt and then wash with warm soapy water.

Cakes, bread and pastry need air in their composition, therefore beating is better for them than stirring when mixing ingredients together Stirring is a slower movement while it stays more with the pan, while beating hits a portion of the mixture and takes a certain amount of air with each lifting of the spoon.

A New York woman editor remarks: "The New York clothing industry is starting a movement to persuade women to 'suggest' dress buying, not to buy all their new duds just before Easter but to shop every week. We were of the opinion that women now do that very little thing and our opinion is shader by most husbands.

Sheer Frocks and Women's Hygiene

New way safer—Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND

THAT filmy gowns and women's oldest hygienic problem now gasely together is a fact millions of women are learning.

Old-time sanitary "pads" with their worries and dangers are giving way to the utter protection of a new way called Kotex.

Kotex discards as easily as tissue. Thus no laundry, no embarrassment of disposal.

Think of the bliss there is nothing to be gained by keeping the young man to a promise that has lost its meaning. It was a mistake to have held on this long. But we all make mistakes. Don't try to retrieve things by making the additional mistake of embarking upon an unhappy marriage.

THE BARRIER TO HEALTH—WASTE MATTER IN THE SYSTEM

London, Ont.—"I have never taken a medicine that is so good as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. For many years I was bothered with sluggishness. I would become constipated, have dull headaches, feel drowsy, sleepy and mean. I took different pills but without results until I began taking Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Since taking them I have had no such trouble. I take them about twice a week and they keep my whole system in perfect condition. GIRLS' GROUPS ATTEND SERVICE AT ST. ANDREW'S

Rev. R. G. Stewart Delivers Interesting Sermon to Large Congregation

The Rev. R. G. Stewart, Pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, delivered an impressive sermon to the Girl Guides, Brownies and the various C.G.I.T. groups yesterday morning. The girls turned out in large numbers and occupied the centre pews which were filled to capacity.

Mr. Stewart chose an appropriate subject for his discourse, in the person of Esther, whom he said was one of the most outstanding of Bible characters.

Mr. Stewart welcomed the visiting girls and congratulated them on their privilege of living in the greatest land the world has ever known and in the greatest land that God ever made. He spoke of the fine leadership that they enjoyed.

He told them the story of King Ahasuerus and the banquet at which everyone was invited, and of the King's orders to Queen Vashti to exhibit her beauty before the multitude and of the latter's refusal and therefore subsequent elevation to the Throne.

"Esther is well-known in Bible storles as Queen of Persia since the beauty cess was due to her overcoming her adversities. Esther was a slave and an orphan and both of these were tre mendous handicaps. The tendency to say," warned Mr. Stewart, "is to wait for opportunity to knock at our door rather than take advantage of the privileges before us."

The Minister spoke of Esther's good qualities: (1) Not to mar the beauty that God gave her, (2) She did nothing to betray the trust placed in her.

At this point the speaker told of his great quality of being able to keep a secret.

"Esther did nothing to compromise her religious principles and we often forget our religion when we go out with a crowd," Mr. Stewart said.

"Esther remained loyal to the customs of her own people. She was a slave and came from a poor home and of poor relations and tribe. She used her good fortune for the benefit of others and risked her life to redeem her friend. Her true greatness was not as a Queen but as an individual and a representative of an organization."

Mr. Stewart referred to her as a real ideal for girls to follow.

"Esther's faith was tried, disappointable and hard but by implicit obedience to her leader she played her part well and did these things by discovering the conventions of a Queen and the different and rigidity which is often seen in our everyday life. Her success was partly possible by her true nobility, her womanly virtues and her refusal to deprive herself of the beauty given her.

"You girls are in the King's uniform," directed Mr. Stewart, "and you of those who have gone before you, come of it by the nobility and sacrifice and if you are true to your trust and your forerunners. God places a solemn responsibility of doing the things really worth-while were Mr. Stewart's closing words.

Mr. Wheatley presided at the organ and Miss Alice McIntosh rendered a solo.

Members of the C.G.I.T. group acted as ushers and sang in the choir.

MRS. S. HINSON DIES AT 83

Fredericton, May 2.—The death occurred this morning at the home of George M. Bryon, King's Printer, of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Susan Hinson, widow of the late Captain Daniel Hinson, of Lebec, at the age of 83 years. Deceased made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Bryon, who survives her. Two sisters also survive: Mrs. Mary Cosby and Mrs. Anna Wiley, in New Jersey.

RAISING CHICKENS

Forest, May 2.—It never was safe to count the chickens before they were hatched, and even now with leg weasels and hawks one cannot be sure of his bird until it is fully feathered and ready for the market. Then it is almost necessary to sit up at night with a shot gun to prevent chicken thieves from robbing the roost. There is money in poultry, but one surely has to earn it.

W. H. ROBB TALKS AT PETERBORO

Addresses Women's Art Association on Bird Life

A most interesting lecture on Birds and their Beauty was given by Wallace Havelock Robb of Belleville in the auditorium of the Conservatory hall Peterboro on Saturday night, under the auspices of the Women's Art Association. Mrs. Robb had some very beautiful pictures of birds, painted especially for him to show in his tour of Major Brooks, the greatest of all bird artists in North America. In addition to slides shown by Mr. Robb, he carried many with him his own collection. The paintings of Major Brooks are to be presented to the Royal Museum of Zoology and together with some literature attached to them are to be sold at the very reasonable price of five cents a copy to anyone wishing to obtain the reproductions.

Oblala Material

Men who write songs usually obtain some of their material from the warmth of birds and barely a song goes by without the composer mentioning a line or two concerning some species of the bird family. Mr. Robb told this evening that there is more about birds and their ways of living in Work is very much for pioneers, such as Jack Miner and himself, and he wished that more people would be interested in the preservation of the birds of the air. Mr. Robb has also written a book about birds and their ways of living, which he hopes to publish in the near future.

That the New York Tribune says "My first marriage," Pola Negri confided to the reporters at Cherbourg yesterday, "was merely a slight error of youth." INDUCTION AT BRIDGE ST. CH.

Dr. F. E. Malott Assisted By Other Ministers Conducts Ceremonies

An interesting and impressive service was conducted at Bridge Street United Church yesterday morning with the induction of officers of the Church. The Church was well filled by eleven o'clock and several ministers of the gospel were present on the platform. They included the Rev. Crossborn, Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., D.D., Rev. Roy Rickard, M.B.E., Rev. E. W. Baker, M.A.D.D., Rev. F. E. Malott, B.A.D.D., (Pastor), Rev. C. W. Bishop, M.A.D.D., and the Rev. W. D. P. Wilson.

Special and beautiful music was presented by the choir, assisted by the Young People's Singers.

The induction itself was extremely impressive, and was conducted by the Rev. F. E. Malott. The prayer of induction was rendered by Rev. C. W. Bishop, and Benediction by the Rev. W. D. P. Wilson. Officers of the Church consists of all friends, in fact anyone that had anything to do with the Church all stood while the induction service was read by Rev. Malott. Every office holder was then asked to repeat the following vows:

Trustiny in the help of the Holy Spirit we promise that we will endeavor to live righteous, sober and godly lives.

That we will endeavor so to live that our example may never be cited as an excuse for wrong doing.

We pledge ourselves to loyalty to our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and loyalty to our Church in its worship and its work.

We promise that we will be present, whenever possible, at the times of worship, that we will honour the Lord with our substance, and that we will attend faithfully to all our duties as office bearers in the Church.

The Sermon

Dr. Malott chose a very appropriate subject for his sermon—"The value of leaders." The speaker began his address by showing the need of leadership, taking as example the times of the Old Testament. He told of the oppression of the people in those times and explained how at different times God had raised certain people to be great leaders of the multitude.

The problems in the Church today are solved by men and women co-operating together, the speaker explained. It was by that means that the people were saved in Israel's time. It was because the leaders took the lead and the people offered themselves and their service freely that they were able to conquer the common enemy.

"The leaders need to be limited," stated the Doctor. "The biggest work of the Church is getting leaders for the Church. Leadership is essential. So with our colleges and our political parties: our businesses and our Church have these talents.

HAS NOT YET MET THE RIGHT HUSBAND

New York, May 2.—Mrs. Winifred Sackville Stoner Hyman, known during her childhood as the "wonder child" has still to make a success at matrimony.

She was granted a divorce from her record husband, Louis Hyman, whom she married eighteen months ago. She charged infidelity.

Mrs. Hyman at the age of one spoke in polysyllables, at two she kept a diary; at three she used a typewriter and at four she was making public speeches. At the age of twelve she could speak seven languages and had knowledge of as many sciences.

We need leaders! We have to select them from among ourselves. We have chosen our leaders in the various parts of this Church and today we induct them."

In closing Dr. Malott pointed out three things of value in leadership.

1—Men of integrity; men whose reputations are undevelopment.

2—Men of piety, full of faith and the Holy Spirit. It is most important that the spiritual life of the Church be built up.

3—Wisdom and good judgment. We want officers who will face their tasks and do it.

"We shall go forward," stated the Doctor, in the concluding sermon.

"Because the leaders took the lead in Israel and because the people of Israel willingly; blessed be the Lord."

"Work, Brothers, work; let us slumber no longer."

Mixing a pail of paint on a store caused an explosion which killed Mrs. Geo. Allenn, 78, in Elkhorn, Man.

Frank Parsons, Vancouver lawyer, is under arrest in San Francisco, charged with wholesale smuggling of liquor.

"Forgotten"

When to your work you have to go,
Be sure and take your ear, also.
Then to your work yourself apply,
And one will surely seem to fly.
And when the whistle rises will blow,
To your tin tune for you to go.
So grab your pail and hurry on,
And join in with the motley throng.
It takes more time to homeward go,
Because to walk it is so slow.
For "Lizzie is forgot, you see—
By one whose name it is "Jimmie."

ASBESTOS FOUND LIGHT IN N.Y.

New York, N.Y., April 26.—Asbestos has been discovered in Central Park.

The best veins yet found in or around New York have been struck by workmen excavating for the Eighth Avenue subway line at Central Park West and Eighty-First street. Veins from half an inch to two inches wide were found in rocks weighing from 200 to 400 pounds. The quantity, however, is insufficient for commercial use.

Dr. Charles P. Berkley, head of the Geology Department of Columbia University, said it was of unusually good quality and is at first looking as the pro duct that comes from Canada for use in the manufacture of high grade insulating materials.

EASILY WALK FROM ESCAPE-PROOF JAIL

Jackson, Mich., May 2.—Three men escaped early yesterday from the new cell block at the State Prison here, and by so doing revealed that seven of the 617 other prisoners in the block could have walked away as easily from the prison which was not guarded on the outside, because it was said to be impervious to escape.

Built at a cost of about $500,000 the cell block was characterized as the most secure in prison construction.

Each cell contains a lavatory, with hot and cold water, mirror, electric light and hot and cold air currents, and it developed yesterday a means by which any prisoner could crawl out of his cell and through a tunnel to freedom. Only the fact that the trio escaped were unwilling to wait for general jail delivery prevented all the 620 prisoners from gaining freedom.

The electric light and mirror in each cell showed the way to liberty for the convicts, the light and mirror are fastened into the back of each cell with a steel plate held by four bolts. The plate can be removed from the back of the cell to permit replacing the light bulb and it was through this aperture that the convicts made their way to freedom. They still are at liberty tonight.

Backing-up of the waters of the Kenogamche River was noted at the falls feet of logs out to sea when the ice breaks.

GARDENING

As certain kinds of vegetables should are grown those flowers such as Cornflowers or Bachelor Buttons, Morning Brides Sbahious and Sahpiosoia, which have beautiful blooms but poor foliage. The main crop of asters may be grown here, as these plants occupy a great deal of space before producing flowers. Zinnias, Marigolds, California Poppies and scores of others may be grown in both the cutting garden and flower border. An all-season cutting garden will have Annual Gypsophila, Schizous, Cornflowers, california Poppies, Calliopsis, Zinnias, African Daisies, Snapdragons and other staples started as early as the ground can be worked. The cutting garden can be planned in conjunction with the vegetables garden for convenience.

Snapdragons

Snapdragons are really grown and there is no finer annual for garden, decoration and for bouquets. The main thing in growing them is to sow early. The seedlings will come up and apparently stand still for several weeks but in reality they are simply gaining speed for the sprint later on. For a bed of colour the intermediate height class is best. For edging the dwarf type is excellent, and for massing one should choose one of the giants. Do not plant in freshly manured soil. these flowers grow best in ground which was well fertilized and cultivated the previous year. During dry spells it is better to give these flowers a good mulch of lawn clippings rather than water frequently. In fact with this flower and all others an occasional soaking instead of frequent sprinkles give much the best results. To grow large flowers, confine plant to single stems, pinching out the side branches as they appear. The medium and large types require a foot each way.

Perennials

Perennials. Once the soil loves the moisture of early spring and the hot dry winds commence a much larger proportion of plants is likely to die than if planted earlier.

A Short Cut

With a little nitrate of soda one can make up for a late spring. In small gardens a heaping teaspoonful is sufficient for a square yard of soil, repeating the application about every ten days or two weeks. This fertilizer should not be allowed to touch the foliage if the latter is moist, as it is apt to burn it. On this account it is safer to dissolve in water and sprinkle, or it may be broadcast by hand during or just before a rainfall or before the hose is turned on. It should not be applied until growth has started.

A Cutting Garden

Often the beauty of the regular flower garden is marred when blooms are cut for decoration indoors. The practical gardener now has a special patch which he grows in rows like vegetables, making it easy for cultivation, for cutting purposes only. Here too

REGENT THEATRE

Said to be one of the most dramatic pictures in which she has been seen in many months, Priscilla Dean will be seen in her new Metropolitan star vehicle, "The Dice Woman," at the Regent theatre today. John Bowers plays opposite the star. The story concerns a young American woman of wealth, who is forced to flee to China to escape arrest for an offence of which she is innocent. There are thrills in every scene and the action is decidedly swift.

BELLE THEATRE

Many months of preparation were devoted to the production of "MONS" before even a foot of film was turned and Captain Walter Summers, the director, was fortunate in securing not only the assistance of the War Office, but also the co-operation of several of the officers and men who lived through the famous and glorious retreat. Every man in the picture is at present serving or has served in the Army, and the heroism and courage which are such features of the picture cannot fail to inspire every audience. The majority of the scenes were filmed on the actual sites where they occurred, and although this picture deals with one of the most tragic but brave events in the Great War, it has its lighter side. At Belle today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

RUTH HAMMERS TWO HOME RUNS

Robins Snatch Game From Giants In Closing Moments

New York, May 2.—The Yankee beat the Athletics, broke the tie for the American League leadership, stopped the Quakers' winning streak and providing 70,000 fans with their money's worth of amusement at the Yankee Stadium yesterday, all with three home runs.

In fact, the first two homers for nothing, allowed the Yankees just two hits, but those two hits were enough to beat him and his teammates and they drove old John Thrun the box before he had pitched six full innings. What happened after that happened to a couple of young left-handers, Willis and Walberg.

Starting his first major league game, Lisenbee held Boston to seven hits at Washington yesterday, and Washington won, 6 to 0, by bunching hits off Russell. Goslin got his second homerun of the season in the first inning.

The Chicago White Sox ran their winning streak to six games yesterday by defeating St. Louis, 7 to 6, in a hectic contest. Pitchers came and went with great regularity, but Thomas finally managed to stop St. Louis just short of victory. Bud Clancy delivered the winning single with Falk on second from a single and a sacrifice.

Earl Whitehill, backed by perfect support, shut out Cleveland and Detroit took the closing game of the series, 7 to 0. Benny Karr started in the box for Cleveland and for five innings he and Whitehill staged a spectacular pitchers battle. When the sixth inning opened the Tigers held a one-run lead and then proceeded to clinch the game with five additional tallies.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Brooklyn, May 2.—There is, after all, such a thing as beating the master with his own tricks. This painful discovery was made by John McGraw himself along about five o'clock yesterday afternoon when, before a howling mob of 30,000 fans that packed the stands at Ebbets Field to suffocation, he saw the Robin wrench a ball game from the Giants with a two-run rally in the ninth that was accomplished in the very best approved style of McGraw dash and darling. The final score was 6 to 3 and if this startling result sent half the crowd and John McGraw back to Manhattan, confounded and speechless, it sent the other half home in a perfect delerium.

Sharkey Rast blew up in the ninth inning at Chicago and after walking three men was touched for a hit which sent two runs across the plate, giving Pittsburgh a 7 to 6 victory. The Cubs came from behind, overcoming the visitors lead with th eaid of home runs by Mack Wilson and Charley Tolson, the latter bagging his with the bases filled in the seventh inning. A crowd of about 25,000 was present.

The St. Louis Cardinals, defeated the Cincinnati Reds in the final game of the series between the two teams at St. Louis yesterday. Frankie Frisch, Cardinal second baseman, hit his third homer in two days. Jim Bottomley added another homer. The Cardinals left today for a month's tour in every city on the National circuit.

COLTS LOSE TO BALTIMORE 10-5

New York, May 2.—The Baltimore Orioles broke the tie for second place existing between them and Rochester by winning the first game of their series at Rochester yesterday by 10 to 5 before a crowd of more than 15,000. The Orioles staged a five-run rally in the eighth to come from behind to win.

Again led by Captain Bill Huber, who blasted a three-base hit with two out, two on and two runs needed to tie in the eighth inning, the Bisons came from behind and trounced the Jersey Streeters at Buffalo by a score of 11 to 10. Huber, after chasing the tying runs home, tallied the winning marker in the same inning on Fisher's vicious drive to left.

The stars' ninth inning rally fell short yesterday and Newark took the opening game of the series at Syracuse, 5 to 3, winning in the ninth with a four-run raid climaxed by Elliott's home run. The Stars found Davis for three hits in the ninth, but were stopped by Zubrik.

HARRIS MADE GOOD TRADE

While Bucky Harris, manager of the Senators has been chuckling over the acquisition of Pitcher Hollis Thurston in a trade with the White Sox for Roger Peckinpaugh, he is charged will saying hastily in getting rid of three valuable boomers.

Zachary, the left-hander, who beat the Giants twice in the 1924 world series, was traded by arris to the St. Louis Browns for whom the veteran has pitched winning ball ever since.

Alex. Ferguson, in spite of good work against the Pirates in 1925, was sent to Buffalo by the Senators' young lead er a year ago, after first securing pavers. But Ferguson now is one of the Phillies' mainstays, the Giants suffering defeat at his hands on Thursday.

Harris turned "Dutch" Reuther over to the Yankees last fall in exchange for Braxton, the young southpaw, and felt sure that he had made no mistake. Yet Ruether has beaten the Athletics and Red Sox since April 12, the latter being shut out with four hits.

The Senators' manager has picked up three fine young pitchers in Crowder, Murray and Lisenbee and is getting excellent results from Crowleside and Marberry. But if the Senators fail to win the pennant, Washington fans ne will blame Harris for turning adrift Ferguson, Zachary and Ruether too soon.

BELLEVILLE IN SEMI-PRO BALL

Mail and Empire Says New Eastern Circuit In Formation

The Toronto Mail and Empire says: "It would occasion no surprise if a semi-professional league were organized with teams representing Ottawa, Belleville, Kingston, Peterboro and Oshawa. The latter club has been sounded on the matter by clubs in Eastern Ontario and there is no doubt that the league will materialize. The signing of so many young professional hockey players last season has left many former amateur baseball players out in the cold this summer, unless they are able to play in such a league."

The above sounds like a pipe dream to local sport followers although there has been some little talk of such a circuit. It is problematical if semi-pro ball would be a success here as amateur sports have found the roads in the past six years rocky at times. It would no doubt be a right smart circuit with these four leading clubs included but the financial end is a big proposition and it's doubtful if it could be made to pay. Belleville will enter the Intermediate class for this year at least and next year they may jump back into senior company or possibly semi pro.

THIRTEEN 'DONTS' IN ENGLISH PUBS

Carlisle, England, April 27.—"The Thirteen Commandments," is the nickname which barmen and barmaids have given to new regulations and instructions issued to them in State controlled public- houses here.

One instruction reads: "Never lose your temper with a customer or be discourteous to him. Be firm but also polite." Another tells barmaids and barmen to "assist in maintaining the highest possible standard of sobriety and good order."

One commandment direct that no one between the ages of 16 and 12 is to be served with wine or spirits, while another instructs that spirits must be served in a large glass to enable customers to add sufficient water.

PROBLEM FACES GIANT PLAYERS

Grand Stand Wall and Sun Field Make It Difficult

New York, April 30.—George Harper and Al Tyron, regular right and left fielder, respectively, of the Giants, will not fit snugly into their new berths until they have worked out a means of successfully combating a problem which faces each. Harper's problem is the grandstand wall, Tyson's the lights and shadows of the grandstand and the blinding rays of the sun. Between them, these men are responsible, when the Giants are at home, for the two most difficult fields that there are in the National league.

Harper and the rightfield wall at the Polo Grounds are not exactly strangers, for George played rightfield in Harlem many and many a time when he wore Cincinnati and Philadelphia uniforms. Still, that wall must be studied day after day before one can know all its tricks, and it will be many a day before George has it accurately chartered. In one of the games of this late series with the Phillies, a drive against the wall went for a triple because Harper misjudged the rebound, whereas, had the ball been played properly, it would have been good for no more than a double and, possibly, for no more than a single. The batter got the added distance while the distressed leper was pursuing the ball along the base of the concrete.

To get the range of the rebounds, one must note, through many hours of practice, where the ball will go when it hits a given spot, and arrange these spots in one's mind. Ross Young, who played this wall better than anyone else ever did, had the basis of his system for judging the carom shots on the lettering of the advertisment that adorns it. Having devised this system and practiced it for a few months, Young seldom, if ever, was caught flat footed by the ball as it glanced off. So nearly perfect was his system, in fact, that he usually was set for the ball.

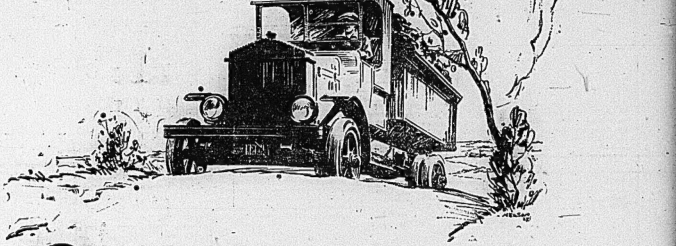

Commemorating the famous landing at Calilpoli, 40,000 Anzacs marched past the Duke and Duchess of York at Melbourne; 29 V.C.'s were in the parade.

AEROPLANES NOW MUST BE TAGGED

Washington, April 30.—Aeroplanes, from now on must carry licence tags similar to those on automobiles. In line with recent legislation by Congress the Commerce department has issued regulations governing markings for aerial traffic.

The letter "C" in front of the licence number will signify a commercial plane, the letter "S" a plane belonging to a state, the letter "X" an experimental plane and a straight number, a private plane.

Air pilots will be divided into four classifications, ranging from the grade of private chauffeur to the high est distinction of "transport pilot," a term applied to the driver of a big machine for long distance carriage of goods and people. Besides there is a commercial pilot grade, and a "limited commercial pilot" grade, the latter permit going to a pilot competent to take up passengers for short trips around an air field.

9 Year Old Truck Averages 12 Hours Steady Running Daily on Marvelube Motor Oil

THE firm of J. Lampman & Son, Hamilton, Ontario, owns and operates five dump trucks—three Packards, and one Peerless and one Mack. After four months' steady use of Marvelube Motor Oil, Mr. J. Harry Lampman reported as follows:

"These trucks are on road work and operate under the most severe conditions. Their gear ratio, in order to carry heavy loads, is extremely low.

"One Packard truck handles hot batches of asphalt that comes from the mixer. This truck is nine years old and averages 50 miles per day. It is on the road from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. during which time the motor never stops.

"Previous to Marvelube we paid a much higher price for another oil. Marvelube costs us less; our oil screens are free from gummy deposits found in other oils; our motors are almost free from carbon; the oil pumps vary slightly under extreme heat conditions; and the oil consumption is less."

Severe operating conditions "show-up" the weak points of a motor oil. To give the exception al lubricating results reported by Mr. Lampman—especially in the case of the 9 year old Packard truck—Marvelube met and passed a test such as it would never be called upon to undergo in the lubrication of an automobile.

To the average motorist, however, it is assuring to know that, using Marvelube, he is getting an extra measure of safety and efficiency of operation which has an important bearing on the life of his car as well as its present satisfactory performance.

Toronto, May 2—Some idea of the character of Toronto's Diamond Jubilee celebration of Confederation will take, was given in a number of guests of the Province of Ontario at a luncheon in the Speaker's dining room, Parliament Buildings. In addition to representatives of public bodies in the city, there were also a number of prominent private citizens.

Toronto's celebration will last two days, the first being given over to a military demonstration, the second to pageants of the people themselves. Hon. G. P. Graham suggested that all Lieutenant-Governors and Provincial Premiers should exchange formal greetings with the Governor-General and the Federal Premier in order to convey Canada's unity.

The whole celebration is to be devised chiefly for school children, with a series of contests, in which medals of various sorts are to be awarded.

Famous "Husky" Can Now Be Had In This City

Wonderful Spring Tonic Which Is Relieving Thousands Of Sufferers In Ontario, Offered Local People.

Husky, the wonderful spring tonic which is giving new health to thousands in Toronto, Hamilton and other Ontario cities and which is well known to many local residents, can now be purchased in this city. Husky is recommended to relieve stomach, liver, kidney and bowel ailments and the ills brought on by disorders of those organs, such as headaches, dizzy spells, indigestion, gas and sour stomach, rheumatic pains, nervousness, unsound sleep and weak, worn out feelings.

Husky is a reconstructive tonic as it builds up the body as it gives relief. It is nature's own remedy as it is compounded from the pure juices of certain herbs, roots, barks and berries and contains no harmful drugs or chemicals. It is famous throughout Canada because it does all that is claimed for it.

Mrs. McKim Speaks

One of the very interesting cases which prove the merits of Husky is that of Mrs. Edith McKim, 671 Augusta Ave., Toronto, who tells of her experience with Husky as follows:

"My health was badly affected. I suffered from stomach trouble. My appetite fell away until I ate very little. The little I did eat would not digest, my food would form in a ball and lie in the pit of my stomach. Gas would form and I would have a terribly bloated feeling. During these spells I would hardly get any breath. Constipation added to my misery. My nerves were in a weakened condition and I could not sleep well.

"Husky has relieved my ailments. This medicine has overcome the stomach trouble. I can now eat heartily and never suffer from indigestion, gas or bloated feeling afterward. Those smothering spells are a thing of the past. I now enjoy regular bowel action and my nervous system has also been strengthened. I can now sleep soundly and feel rested and refreshed when arising in the morning.

"I will take Husky for some time yet. I can notice more improvement each day. It is a pleasure to tell my experience, and after the way I have been helped I can recommend Husky to any person who suffers in any way I did. I have found Husky will do all that they say it will."

At Local Drug Stores

Every person in this city suffering in any way from stomach disorders, or relief, is urged to investigate this medicine and begin its treatment now. Husky can be obtained at good drug stores every where.

CANADA IS A NATION

Canada is a million, some day in the near future she will be a great nation, and it is within the range of possibilities that she will be the greatest unit of the British Empire. It is a wonderful country, a country of unlimited resources and magnificent possibilities. As a nation she celebrates her sixtieth anniversary this year. What better way for you to celebrate it than by taking a trip "Across Canada and back", and see for yourself the reason for this optimism about the future. Prof. Laird, of Macdonald College, Que., has arranged with the Canadian Pacific Railway for a special train of sleeping cars to leave Toronto on July 26th, cross the continent and get back to Toronto on August 15th, and in that space of 21 days to see all the principal cities, and the noted beauty spots of the land. After Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and the principal cities of the prairies, there is the magnificence of the Rockies, and these famous beauty spots, Banff, Lake Louise, Emerald Lake and the Yoho Valley. Then there are two wonderful motor drives, from Banff to Windermere 104 miles, and from Field to Lake Louise 40 miles. The Bootonay district of which Nelson is the capital, and Okanagan Valley fruit country in which is located Penticton will be visited and Vancouver and Victoria. Next, rapidly growing Pacific Coast cities will delight everyone.

An illustrated booklet descriptive of the tour is now ready, and can be had on application to W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Toronto, or to Prof. Sinclair Laird, Macdonald College, P.Q., Que.

The Irony of Love By Charles Garvice

MRS. EDITH McKIM

"I'm visiting Edinburgh, to attend a church meeting, Lord Stranlyre," said Mr. Gilfillan, a little out of breath. He had long since come to understand Rafe, and was not offended by his rough manner and unreverential vernacular. "I am very glad to see you. I caught sight of you as I came round the corner, and I feared I should not overtake you. Are you staying in the city?"

Rafe smiled, yet with a touch of color and a sudden change in his manner, a wholesome shame of anything like concealment in the presence of this good man, for whom he had a very warm regard.

"Yes—well, partly. I'm staying at the big hotel there. See me there and have lunch with me?"

"Thank you very much, Lord Stranlyre, but I must go straight on to my meeting. When said I was glad that I had recognized you, I wished to express something more than my natural pleasure at meeting with you here. Have you heard any news from Glenlyre during the last few days?" he asked gravely.

"No," said Rafe, smitten by a sudden fear; was Maude ill—had anything happened to her?

"I had an impression that you had not," said Mr. Gilfillan, gravely, "I think that Lord St. Ives was not in possession of your addresses. I may be wrong," he went on quickly, "but I understand that for the moment they did not know exactly where you were."

"No. I don't think they do," said Rafe, feeling pretty much as he would have put it. "I've got some business up here——"

"Quite so, quite so," said Mr. Gilfillan, as if he were anxious not to seem intrusive. "There you have got a friend of little Lady Eva's illness?"

"Eva!" said Rafe quickly, and with a note of fear. "Oh, is she ill? What's the matter with her? Where is she?"

"At the castle. She came out a visit to Lady Maude, three days ago. She was apparently in perfect health when she arrived—she came down to tea at the manor—Mary and she are great friends—and she seemed as bright and happy as usual. She is a very sweet, high-hearted child, Lord Stranlyre."

"That's so, bless her heart!" said Rafe, "What's the matter with her—tell me all about it!"

"Well, the day after her visit to the manor, she was taken ill. At first Lady Maude thought it was only an unimportant rubbish ailment, but, on hearing that Eva refused to get up, that the dear little one was stricken by typhoid fever——"

"Typhoid! What's that?" asked Rafe anxiously. "I mean, is it dangerous?"

"Sometimes, very," replied Mr. Gilfillan, "and I fear that this is a very bad case. But pray do not be unduly alarmed, Lord Stranlyre; Lady Eva is, thank God, in extremely healthy child and it is scarcely necessary to remind ourselves, she will have the very best attention. A couple of skilled nurses are already engaged and everything that can be done for her will be done. At present the fever is at its height, and the poor child is unconscious and quite delirious. I suggest, then added: "I wonder why I ought to tell you, Lord Stranlyre, that, in her wanderings, she repeatedly calls on you."

Rafe's face was white, but it looked almost stern and fierce. Little Eva ill, perhaps in danger and calling on him! Not for a single instant did he waver or hesitate. He took out his watch and look his measure of it, so that Mr. Gilfillan should not see the emotion they revealed.

"I suppose there's a train pretty shortly?" he asked in a low voice.

"There's one at half past one," said Mr. Gilfillan. "You intend going, Lord Stranlyre?"

"Why, of course!" responded Rafe, as if surprised at the question. "Where else wants me? Of course, I'm going to her."

Mr. Gilfillan held out his hand. "I beg your pardon for asking so unnecessary a question, Lord Stranlyre," he said. "Of course you would go. She is very much attached to you; she hears for you that pure and holy love which an innocent little child lavishes so freely on those to whom it has given its heart. Is there anything I can do for you—you are leaving the city so suddenly?"

"No—no thanks," said Rafe. "I'll just catch that train and get there as soon as I can. Yes, 'm glad to have met you, Mr. Gilfillan. Think of her often there and calling for me—little Eva!"

Mr. Gilfillan held out his hand "I locked after the stalwart figure as it strode up the street. "The Glenlyre people are right," he said to himself. "The young laird has a warm heart."

Rafe had actually got to the hotel before he remembered Phenie. He could not leave her without some message, an explanation. At first he thought of writing to her and sending the letter by hand, but he looked up at the big clock opposite the hotel, calculated that there would be time to go to the cottage at Liberton, and, calling a taxi, had himself driven there.

Mrs. Todhunter received him with her usual benevolent smile, but, to his annoyance, he learned from her that Phenie had gone out to do some shopping and would not return until some where about two.

"Your good lady is never one for much of a lunch, Mr. Moore, and, like the rest of us, she sets more store by a cup of tea, so it's not certain when she'll return.—Will ye no' come in and wait for her? She'll be distressed at missing you, but didna expect ye. It's way you husbands have, Mr. Moorer, to turn up unexpectedly."

"I can't wait," said Rafe. "I have to go suddenly to"—he paused and frowned at the slip which he had been on the point of making—"into the country. I'll write a letter to Phe—Mrs. More."

The attentive landlady followed him into the sitting room and placed writing materials before him; and Rafe, squaring his elbows, as he always did when engaged in the difficult task of writing, scrawled a few lines:

"Dear Phenie: You just heard that I'm wanted at the castle. I'll come back as soon as I can, and if I don't, I will write, of course. Yours——"

He was on the point of signing "Stranlyre," the signature to which he had grown accustomed; but it suddenly struck him that he was "Angus More" here, and, too confused to deliberate—"Rafe" would certainly have been the name if he had considered further—he actually wrote "Angus More."

GOVER BROTHERS HELD TO TRIAL IN OSWEGO JAIL

No Trace Yet Of George White Who Disappeared From His Thurlow Farm Easter Sunday

GOYER BROTHERS HELD ON CHARGE OF ATTEMPTED LIQUOR SMUGGLING

Despatch From Oswego Says Launch Carried Cargo of Beer

ARRAIGNED TODAY

Second Boat Escaped In the Darkness of Early Morning

(Special to The Intelligencer)

Oswego, N. Y., May 3.—Napoleon Goyer, 37, and Lawrence Goyer, 22, brothers, giving Belleville, Ontario, as their home, were caught and their boat containing one hundred cases of bottled Canadian ale seized by U. S. Coast Guard in Lake Ontario, off Selkirk, fifteen miles east of Oswego early Sunday morning. Coast Guard officials claim they were attempting to land their contraband cargo on American shore when apprehended. Coast Guard Picket Boat No. 2207 overtook the launch which was driven by Boatswain Mate Merle B. M. McCune was cruising on the shore when they heard the rhythmic beat of engines. Mate McCune fired a warning shot from the craft's one-pounder into the air and the oncoming boats hailed. When the picket boat drew alongside the crew saw two boats, one of which scudded away and was soon enveloped in the murky mist of the early morning.

Lodged in Jail

The Coast Guard crew boarded the remaining boat and after a look around, placed the Goyers under arrest. Towing the craft to Oswego they turned it over to U. S. Deputy Customs Collector C. A. Bentley. The Goyers were taken to Oswego County Jail whence they were to be taken before U. S. Commissioner Charles N. Bulger late today for arraignment on charge of attempted smuggling in violation of the Tariff Act.

The Goyer boat is a new 28-footer, engined with a Scripps motor and self-starting attachment. She was apparently built for rum running. The identity of the other boat and crew were this disclosed but she is said to have had one hundred and twenty-five bags of Canadian ale on board. The Goyer craft was taken Monday afternoon to Rochester and the contraband ale placed in a warehouse by Collector of Customs.

A report was circulated but not confirmed that trucks were in waiting for the cargo at an inlet near Mexico Point, where the boats could be run close to shore and grounded in sand without danger of damage. The capture of the boats and the arrest of the Goyers is the first seizure to be made this season of attempted rum runners near Oswego.

JUDGE WILLS IS BACK FROM TRIP TO BARBADOES

His Honor Believes Great Possibilities Exist For Trade

Judge J. F. Wills and Mrs. Wills after an extended holiday in the Barbadoes Island returned to the city yesterday and His Honor was launching an attack upon a pile of correspondence that had accumulated in his absence when see by a representative of the Intelligencer this morning. Judge Wills is perceptibly improved in health and although he enjoyed his stay in the south he was radiantly pleased to get back home and exchange greetings with his many friends.

While in the south Judge Wills made a close study of climatic conditions and the people themselves. The Barbadoes are a British colony established three hundred years ago and situated off the coast of Central America. While there Judge Wills had the privilege of attending the celebration at Bridgetown, the largest city of the settlement, celebrating three hundred years under British rule. The flagship of the North Atlantic fleet together with a thousand marines took part in the gigantic festivities.

A large number of Canadians particularly from Toronto and Montreal visit this beauty spot each yers and Judge Wills came in contact with many of them during his stay.

Small Islands

Bridgetown, the capital of the Barbadoes is a city of thirty-five thousand inhabitants. The island itself being approximately as large as the township of Sidney and is a hundred and sixty six square miles in area. One hundred and fifty seven thousand people populate the colony. The climate is unusually mild with an average temperature of 70 degrees which varies in different seasons very little with the tempered the Trade winds. The Barbados Government Railway is the only steam system of transportation with the exception of the numerous omnibuses which ply between the different villages, or parishes as they are known here. The Island is governed somewhat similarly to Canada with a governor, representative of the King, the chief executive. A council partly appointed and the remainder elected together with a house of assembly assemble to maintain the affairs of the Island. Each parish is controlled by a vestry system, which corresponds to a local section. Judge Wills was very much enthused over the up-to-date water system which supplies the life-giving fluid to the natives. Pipes take the water from artesian wells throughout the country and at different points along the roadside taps are connected where the inhabitants can daily avail themselves getting their supply and carrying it away in tin pails or other make which they place on the top of their heads.

LAWYERS THREATENED PHYSICAL COMBAT BEFORE THE TRIAL COURT

Mrs. Snyder's Counsel Objects to Tactics of Prosecuting Attorney

DENIES CONFESSION

Woman Badly Tangled Under Stiff Cross Examination

New York, May 3.—Counsel for Mrs. Ruth Snyder and the State almost came to blows at the Snyder murder trial today. Assistant District Attorney Prosser asked Mrs. Snyder in cross-examination if she had made a mistake or lied in reply to the question when her lawyer, Edgar F. Hazelton, shouted at the prosecutor and moved belligerently to meet him.' A clash was narrowly averted by the prompt remonstrance of the court.

Mrs. Snyder denied almost entirely her confession version from the time of meeting Gray through the killing of her husband. Excitement ran high as she answered "yes" to the question whether she had seen Gray out of the house after the murder.

"Why?" Prosecutor shouted; "you were bound upstairs at that time."

"Yes, of course I was" she replied as her hands fluttered to her mouth.

"Then you were lying" [illegible]. Prosecutor Prosser and Hazelton jumped to their feet protesting against "the tactics of the State Attorney." The lawyers moved belligerently towards each other, but a swift rebuke from the Judge prevented their coming to blows.

Claims She Fainted

New York, May 3.—Mrs. Ruth Snyder testified today that when she saw her corset salesman paramour and co-defendant, Henry Judd Gray, leaning her husband's dead body and after reviving made no effort to find whether her husband was dead or alive. Mrs. Snyder was under cross examination by Assistant District Attorney Charles Prosser and maintained that she had no hand in the murder.

"You didn't even look to see if your husband was warm or cold?" she was asked.

"No."

"Dead or alive?"

"No."

"And you stayed in the next room with Gray for two hours!"

"Yes."

"And you hid your jewellery?"

"Yes, from Gray."

"Madame, were you not more concerned about your jewellery than about your husband?"

"No."

"But you protected your jewellery from Gray although you did not protect your husband from him?"

"Yes."

TODAY'S THOUGHT

So near is falsehood to truth that a wise man would do well not to trust himself on the narrow edge.
—CICERO.

A FINE SPIRIT

That was a most commendable spirit shown by the medical students of the graduating class of Western University, who have insured their lives in favor of the university, with a view to providing an endowment fund. This will be a good thing for the university and for the insured. The university will profit financially and the insured graduates will be all the better for the little sacrifice that their generosity involves and for the knowledge that they are doing something to help their Alma Mater, to strengthen her place among the universities of the country. Besides, a bond of interest will be created between university and graduates which will be mutually helpful.

The fine example set by the final year medical men is likely to have a far-reaching effect. We are told that succeeding classes are likely to do the same, and it would not be surprising if the movement spread to other departments of the university. The action of the embryo doctors is also likely to inspire financial aid from graduates and citizens who must realize that a university which can inspire such devotion is something that is worth while. Here's hoping that every one of the twenty-three young men who have insured themselves to help their university will live to see their policies surrendered twenty years hence and each so prosperous that he will have no financial regret in seeing the money handed over.

A HAPPY THOUGHT

One of the finest suggestions that have been made in connection with the coming celebration of the jubilee of Confederation was put forward the other night by Premier Ferguson. He proposed that the son of George Brown, who is living in Scotland, and the son of Sir John Macdonald, who is police magistrate of Winnipeg, should be brought to Toronto for Dominion Day to clasp hands, as their fathers did sixty years ago for the greatness of Canada.

That would be an inspiring thing. For the celebration of Confederation will be a failure if from it Canadians do not learn that what is wanted in Canada today is the spirit of compromise and of patriotism which, surmounting all small and sectional differences brought the men of '67 together for the sake of unity.

In recent years, unfortunately, the spirit has not been overly manifest in this Dominion. We have been too prone to exaggerate our differences and to plead the grievances of sections, forgetful of the good of the greater whole. A little more of the spirit of the Fathers of Confederation would make us a greater people; and anything that may help to foster the spirit should not be overlooked. We hope that Mr. Ferguson's suggestion will be taken.

COST OF CRIME

Speaking at the convention of the 20th district of Rotary on its opening day, the consulting physician at Sing Sing Prison, Dr. Amos O. Squire, stated that the cost of crime in the United States was between eight and ten billion dollars every year. This is only a tremendous cost for lawlessness in a country which has more laws and more officers supposed to enforce them than any other country in the world. While pointing out some of the causes of the large amount of crime in the United States, Dr. Squire quite openly said that there were too many laws enacted. In the United States, he said, there were two million laws and ordinances, and new ones were being manufactured at the rate of 100,000 a year.

It is quite evident, from the large amount of crime in the United States, that a surfeit of laws often makes for a surfeit of lawlessness. The more laws there are made, the more there are to be broken, and the multiplicity of laws undoubtedly lessens respect for them. It would be far better to have fewer laws which can be properly enforced, than to have a surplus of laws which are honored more in their breach than their observance.

THE VANISHING RACE

Within the past decade or two there has been a tendency to refer to the Canadian Indians as "The Vanishing Race." Figures compiled by the department of Indian affairs, however, indicate that, instead of banishing, the Indian population of Canada, and particularly in the west is on the increase. In the reserves of the three prairie provinces, during the past year, there was a substantial natural increase in the Indian population, and it is estimated that there are now 33,000 Indians in these three provinces.

What is of more importance, however, is the fact that these Indians are rapidly approaching a state in which they will be self-supporting. In Ontario, as well as in the west, they are taking a keen interest in scientific methods of agriculture and they have won outstanding success in grain growing and cattle raising. In the Ontario plowing matches, they are winning some of the highest honors, and they are showing capabilities as farmers which were little suspected a few years ago. There has been a tendency in the past to look upon the Indians as a heavy liability to the country, but under the guidance of agricultural experts, they are gradually becoming an asset of some importance, and are making a worthwhile contribution to the general well-being and economic prosperity of the country.

PLANTING MAPLES

In an number of municipalities it has been decided that one of the features of the local celebration of the diamond jubilee of Confederation shall be the planting of a maple tree. The national celebration committee approves of this feature and recommends it to all local committees.

The recommendation is worthy of acceptance. One thing that is likely to commend it is that the planting of a seedling maple would be so inexpensive. Nature would be chiefly responsible for the erection of this jubilee memorial. But, though the cost would be practically nothing, the memorial would in time become a thing of local interest. Generations hence the Jubilee Maple might be one of the most prized of local assets.

Belleville has a wealth of trees, but might fittingly plant an avenue of Jubilee Maples in some selected spot.

FIR BALSAM

The scented fir whose tall and sombr. spirt
Might pin a rainbow's ribbon to the sky
Now shares with me at home beside the fire
A quessure of its needles warm and dry.

A treasure in its needles warm and dry
Which breathe the breath of heaven and a wood.
O, little balsam pillow, you and I
Will dream of hilltops sweet and clean and good—

Will dream of hilltops sweet and clean and good,
O, balsam pillow by an open fire,
Recalling how your sturdy parent stood
And pinned a rainbow's ribbon with his spirt!

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Henry Ford, according to testimony recently given, has refused three separate offers of $1,000,000,000 for his motor car company. Former partners have estimated that he has more than $500,000,000 cash in banks and that his total fortune is not less than $2,000,000,000.

"What, according to your view, is the burning question of the day?"
"Shall I eat or buy gasoline?"

"Lay down, pup; lay down!" ordered the man. "Good doggie—lay down I say."
"You'll have to say 'Lie down,' Mister," declared a small bystander. "That's a Boston terrier."

"What's all that snuffling going on in the kitchen, Mary?"
"Well—er—sir, I'm sorry, sir, but the policeman tried to kiss me."
"Oh, I see. You forcibly objected."
"Er—no sir. The policeman did."

However, these squirrels dropped off one by one and for a time the fire hall had no pets but now the black squirrel that was recently secured has again commenced to draw a large number of visitors to the lower fire hall.

TWO YEARS FOR THEFT OF CAR

James Riley Committed To Reformatory on Previous Bad Record

A crowded court-room greeted the Magistrate this morning, with all desiring to appear before him. The first case to come up was that of Arthur Boufford, an American, who hails from Rochester, N.Y. On Saturday he stole an automobile owned by Arthur Ayres, of Rossmore, and started in the general direction of Toronto. This morning he pleaded guilty to the theft charge and was sentenced to serve a year in the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph. The young man did not appear very much affected with his sentence and took it with a shrug. Boufford will no doubt be deported to the United States upon his release from the Reformatory.

James Riley who some time ago obtained a Chevrolet automobile from John T. Warren under false pretenses, causing a bad check upon him, was the next case to appear in the docket.

He also pleaded guilty to his charge and meted a sentence of not less than six months and not more than two years less a day in the Ontario Reformatory. Riley has a previous prison record, being convicted in Stratford, Ontario of a somewhat similar offence. He was let out on parole and his sentence by his first conviction would expire until 1929. Directly following this term he will have to serve the sent ence he received today.

Case Remanded

William Rose, charged with driving a car while under the intoxicating influence of liquor was remanded again this morning, as he did not appear before Magistrate Mikel on Monday, May 9th. As present he is out on $500 bail, a surety drunk netted a fine of $15 and $9 costs.

The case of Rex vs. Wilfred Raymond Sanford was closed this morning when Sanford was found not guilty by the Magistrate. Sanford was charged with having carnal knowledge of a girl under fourteen years of age. He pleaded not guilty to the charge against him and as the case depended upon the girl's word against his, the Magistrate gave him the benefit of the doubt. The girl after the trial of the case stated a dance with the accused on the night of February, when a rape there was had, and it was here the alleged crime had been committed. When Sanford took the stand in his own defense, he admitted taking the girl to the dance but denied any such crime of which he was accused. He was acquitted.

Samuel Bowler, charged with the rame offence against the same girl, was also acquitted.

A man convicted of a violation of the City Traffic By-law paid $500.

MINING GOSSIP

Copper-gold properties in the area east of the T. & N. O. Railway have been interesting to prospectors since before the discovery of gold in the Porcupine field in 1909. Records show that as far back as 1905-1906, the Clover Leaf Mining Company, an American organization, had staked claims in the township of Skead for copper. In the township of Skead for copper-gold ore. Engineers working for the company at that time reported the finding of a line of economic importance over a width of 4 feet. According to the gold values contained in the ore body, ore of ore found run up to $52 a ton. Without railway connection or roads beyond New Liskeard at this time, the company eventually decided to abandon the ground. It is altogether probable others have since acquired it as the entire township of Skead is staked solid.

Eight silver mining companies shipped ore over the T. & N. O. Railway during the month of March. Shipments were slightly heavier than in the month with a total of 628.55 tons, compared with 572.88 in the previous month. Coleman Contact which has been a steady shipper since the middle of last year, is missing from the list for March due no doubt to the breaking of the crusher delaying operations for some time in this period. J. H. McLeod, showing in the list with a shipment of 25.00 tons. is the only newcomer to the Hudson Bay property, which was being operated under lease. Work has been suspended indefinitely by the leasors as very little ore has been secured during the past few months.

Latest reports from the Kirkland Lake Mine are to the effect that drifting operations are still in progress both east and west from the main crosscut with the vein on the 2475 foot level. Good ore was being found in both directions. The find is believed to be from 7 to 8 feet wide with assay returns running quite high. The results of this find will be quickly felt when the machinery of the mill is adjusted to recover these higher values.

The find made on the Osisko Lake property was on the 1400 foot level. It is proves the high mineralization to be present in depth and therefore gives great deep-seated and therefore gives great encouragement to the pioneer developers of this camp which extends over six large townships.

The rapid rise in the Chapui Hughes stock from 8c to 13 1-2c in the few days is due to the fact that ifsm each new level of the Kirkland Lake property the new high-grade find dips to the south towards the Chapui Hughes boulder. For this reason Kirkland Lake have purchased control of the Chapui Hugh es Company. What arrangements will be made with regard to the Chapuis Hughes shares outstanding is not known but if rich ore occurs on the property a greater depth the stock should be worth a good deal.

SYBIL, TRAPPER of MEN

By Mildred Barbour

His daughter, whom he had not seen since the days when she was a bigeyed, silent child of ten, opened the door in answer to his ring. He recognized her at once, although the Sybil who stood in the doorway, an apron tucking her slim figure, was a long cry from the long-legged ten-year-old.

Even his blase eyes opened wide before her young beauty. He smiled with smug satisfaction that struck Sybil as disagreeably feline.

Of course, she knew him. One did not easily forget Dads. If she'd remembered his every feature, there was young Ted to remind her.

But she said nothing, waiting stoutly by the open door for him to speak, her lovely face hard and impassive.

"Little Sybil! It is little Sybil!" His charming, well-remembered voice —young Ted's voice—sent a quiver through her, but she merely looked at him mutely.

"Don't you recognize me?" There was actually pain in his face, still handsome, despite years of dissipation. "Don't, you remember Dads, Sybil? Child, I'm your father."

Her cool gaze wandered the length of his jauntily attired figure, even noted the cane on which he leaned.

"I have no father," she said—and closed the door in his face.

"I only hope he's not going to hang around and worry Mother,' was her unfilial thought, as she returned to her work in the kitchen.

If she had known that Fred Ross, routed and take aback, had repaired to the Hoffman House and there, over a drink of synthetic whisky with the gymnatheik proprietor, had actually wept into his glass and quoted inaccurately something about "sharper than a serpent's tooth," she would only have made a wry grimace and dismissed the thought with a shrug of her slim shoulders.

She didn't mention his visit to her mother, when the latter returned from Madame Irene's. "She'll know soon enough!" though Sybil wearily.

Her eyes wandered to the garden across the street. Did Mrs. Vaughan know that Dads was in town?

Later that evening, Jimmy said to Sybil, in an aside: "I say, the old man was here today, wasn't he? I saw him down town, and he was fearfully cut up—said you shut the door in his face."

"I wish his nose had been in it when I closed it," was Sybil's crisp reply.

Jimmy stared.

"Gosh, you're hard! I'd hate to be a chap that was sweet on you. I'll bet you'd lead him a dance."

"You wouldn't lose, either," Sybil answered, with a toss of her head.

Jimmy glanced around cautiously to see if the sitting-room door was closed.

"What do you think Mother'll do—take him back? I've a hunch he's going to ask her to.

Furious color suffused Sybil's cheeks.

"She wouldn't do anything so—so mad!"

"I don't know," shrugged Jimmy. "Women are funny; he added, with a smug consciousness of his own superiority, when it comes to a man."

Sybil's lip curled with disdain.

"Mother will never take him back!" she declared.

But the next morning, the postman delivered a letter to Mary Ross from her husband.

CHAPTER 11.

THE INEVITABLE FLEA

Mary Ross read her husband's letter between snatches of toast and coffee, as she made a hurried breakfast preparatory to being at Madame Irene's at nine o'clock.

Jimmie, who was jobless, still lay abed, but Ted was down to breakfast. He had come home very late the night before, and his eyes were puffy with lack of sleep and the excesses of the previous evening. Sybil ate slowly, making frequent trips to the kitchen to refill the coffee cups and bring fresh hot toast.

"This letter is from your—your father," said Mary Ross rather pathetically, as she finished reading it.

Sybil was silent, but Ted said:

"Yeah? I saw him down-town yesterday. The old boy's looking right spry—hat on one side and a pench of striped waistcoat. What I know who his tailor is."

"He says he's—destitute," murmured his mother.

Ted laughed loudly.

"And he wants to be taken back, eh?"

"I—I think so." Mary Ross cast a hesitant glance toward her young daughter, who now was calmly arranging crimson and russet asters in a bowl in the centre of the table.

Although Sybil had never once denounced her father, her mother felt instinctively that the girl's attitude toward him was harsh and unrelenting. The two boys didn't care, but Sybil—

Mary Ross sighed, glanced at the clock, and rose hastily.

"I'll just leave the letter for you to read," she said to Sybil speakingly. "We'll talk about it when I get home this evening."

Sybil rose from the table, slipped her arms around the frail, drooping shoulders, and kissed her mother's flushed cheek.

"Very well, dearest," was all she said but, when she had waved adieu from the door and returned to the dining-room, she threw a contemptuous glance at the letter which Ted was perusing with chuckles.

She heard some one say once that Dads could charm the heart out of a wooden Indian. He's certainly spread himself in this epistle."

After he had gone off to work, and while she waited for Jimmie to make his belated appearance at the breakfast table, Sybil read her father's letter.

She read it without a trace of emotion, with the critical mind of emotionless youth. To her, it was only flowery tall, without a shred of truth. Fred Ross could write well; he under stood the art of phrases. His letter contained all the things which Sybil, in her unsentimental wisdom, knew he would say. He spoke, in extravagant terms, of his repentance. He reminded his wife of the early days of their love, of the coming of their children, of the happiness that had been theirs. He said he was an old man now, a wiser man, and a better one. He besought her to forgive a repentant sinner and, for the sake of the past and because of their children, to receive him again into the home from which he had strayed in an evil hour. He spoke of the ineffable blessing of going, hand, in hand with her, on their journey into the sunset of life.

Sybil carelessly dropped the letter on a platter on which bacon grease was congealing. She brushed her fingers, as if the touch of the closely written sheets had contaminated them.

When Jimmie finally straggled forth, down to the dining-room, she was still sitting at the breakfast table, her chin in one small hand, staring out of the window into the garden.

"What're you thinking about?" he demanded curiously.

"I was thinking about — Daisy Vaughn."

"Oh, aren't you ever going to forget that old stuff?" he asked in disgust, as he ate a piece of cold toast and made a wry grimace.

Sybil raised her head.

"Would you forget it, if it had spoiled everything for you? I know it means nothing to you. You've never had to suffer. You don't care that it made an old woman out of Mother; that's she's had to slave to buy food and clothes for us; that she's been sneered at and snubbed, as if it was all her fault. You don't care that I've never had any fun or any friends, that I've been pointed out everywhere and avoided because I was the daughter of a man who deserted his wife and family and ran away with a young girl! Oh, no, it's nothing to you or Ted! You're men! You've never had to pay."

She sprang to her feet, flushed with passionate resentment. Jimmie was actually wincing. There was unwilling admiration, too, in his lazy eyes.

"I say, Sybil, you're good when you're in a rage. You ought to go on the stage. Tragedy, and all that!"

She flounced out to the kitchen, but he called after her teasingly:

"You're certainly fixing to make it hot for some man. Guess I better warn all my boy friends off. Say, what's this letter—all gummed up with bacon grease?"

"Applesauce!" she said succinctly.

MARKED PROGRESS OF CANADIAN NATIONAL REVIEWED BY W. D. ROBB

Vice-President Dealt With Interesting Facts Before Rotarians

Following is the address delivered by W. D. Robb, Vice-President of the Canadian National Railways to the Rotarians at their weekly luncheon yesterday. Mr. Robb gave a complete and comprehensive review of the great government-owned system and will be interesting to citizens and railroaders:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

It is needless for me to say what great pleasure it affords me to be the guest of the Rotary Club in Belleville today. I deeply appreciate the compliment you have conferred up me in asking me to address such a representative organization as the Belleville Rotary Club. There is no place in this wide Dominion, in fact anywhere that is affords no greater pleasure to visit than the place I call my old home town, Belleville. I am ever conscious of the great hospitality of a few years ago, when I was given the freedom of the city. That indeed was a memorable occasion in my life, and one which will ever be remembered not only by myself, but by my family.

There are early associations connected with this city which are dear to me. Naturally, these old associations will come to mind, as the basis of real friendship is generally made in the past, and it is a trait of the human race that, while you may make new friends after you have passed your youth, you never forget the old friends nor the old associations. As I made many and lasting friends in Belleville you can readily understand why it is such a pleasure to me to re-visit the old town.

It is a standing rule with our President and his executive officers to visit Clubs, Boards of Trade and other societies and organizations as often as possible, for the Canadian National Railways belong to the people of Canada, and it is only right that the officers of the railway should make every effort to get acquainted with the people more especially the people who are due to be public affairs, to show and demonstrate to them the kind of men who are handling their properties and to give an account from time to time of their stewardship. Therefore, you will understand me when I say it is a great pleasure to meet such a number of representative people in Belleville today.

A Government Owned Railway

I want to digress for a few moments to speak to you about one feature of our relationship to one another—the C.P.R. My reason for mentioning this is because I have found that our competitors have made the statement on several occasions that we are appealing to the people of Canada on their patpnage on the ground that we are a Government-owned railroad and that they should patronize the Government-owned railway because it belongs to the people.

I want to make it clear that this is not correct. Neither the President, myself nor any of the Canadian National officers expect to receive the patronage of the people for ownership. All reasons. We know perfectly well that, no matter how kindly a man may feel towards the Canadian National Railways, if in shipping his goods by our line he loses money or does not get the service our competitors would give him, he will not long patron-ize the Canadian National Railways very long. We desire to be treated as a private railroad, and we appeal to you for your patronage on a strictly one, namely, service. If we are

Wonderful Progress Made

As to my first subject, that of the Canadian National Railways, I am not going to speak at length. The progress made by this Company is well known, as the reports are continually before the public through the newspapers, and also through Parliament, but I should like at this time to particularly draw your attention to the situation today as compared with the condition which existed in the fall of 1922, when the amalgamation took place and Sir Henry Thornton, our President, was appointed to manage the various properties then being merged into one unified system. There was a great deal to controversy at that time, and the people were divided into two camps, one proclaiming against Government ownership, that the Government of that time had no alterna tive, and, because of the financial difficulties of the roads was compelled to take them over. While one camp predicted disaster, the other maintained that with proper management there was no reason why success

The Man Behind the Gun

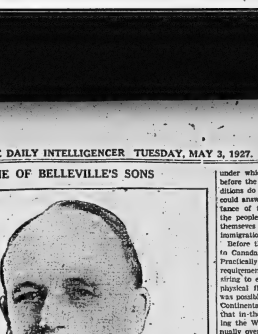

While great credit for this state of affairs must be given to all the officers in charge of the different departments, and to all employes, for their loyalty, co-operation and enthusiastic team work in their endeavor to make the Canadian National Railways a complete success; at the same time the king pin, the moving spirit, the man who deserves the greatest credit, and the thanks and admiration of the Canadian people, is Sir Henry Thornton, our President, a great railroad administrator under whose inspiring influence the success of the past will be further realized in the future.

The manner in which 1927 has commenced gives ground for belief that this year will surpass the excellent record of 1926. From January last to April 21st, the gross earnings were $4?7,262,563, an increase of $4,369,349 over the corresponding period of 1926. The $48,125,000 operating surplus for 1926 pays the interest on all the securities held by the public. If the Canadian National had rates similar to those in effect in the United States our operating surplus last year would have been $76,000,000, which would pay not only all fixed charges on securities held by the public, but all liabilities, including interest on advances from the Government. The white elephant is taking on a hue of real gold.

I come now to my second subject. One of the Departments of the several under my jurisdiction is that of Colonization, Agriculture and Natural Resources. a Department which deals with matters of great importance, deeply concerning the present and the future of this country.

In the minds of some now present, the question may arise, "Of what interest can such matters as Immigration and Colonization be to a railroad?" That question is soon answered.

ONE OF BELLEVILLE'S SONS

W. D. Robb, Vice-President C. N. R.

to make operations profitable. It is an unfortunate railroad law that any system of railway transportation is dependent for this success upon number of persons who travel itself, and to increase the population along the lines of the

A Comparison With the U. S. A.

It will be of interest to you to note that some figures have furnished by Canadian National Railways is one of the reasons for the existence of the Colonization Department of the railroad. Therefore, Transportation and Colonization go together and must work hand in hand.

tion of less than 9,000,000 people, prepared no less than three transcontinental lines.

These striking figures clearly indicate the first for the future welfare of this country it is necessary to obtain more by population—to bring the landless men of Europe to the manless land of Canada.

The people of the West, as well as the people of the East, in fact throughout the whole of Canada, are beginning to realize the need for Colonization. There is hardly a public speaker who talks of the welfare of Canada without calling attention to the necessity of increased population, and the subject is continually discussed in newspaper articles and editorials and in Parliament. The whole Dominion is beginning to realize more and more the benefits that will accrue from increased population.

Railroad's Colonization Policy

You may ask me the question, "What is the Canadian National doing to help the situation?" For your information, the Colonization Department of the Canadian National Railways is endeavoring to fill up the vacant spaces, and we have the facilities and organization for securing suitable settlers and their families.

In the British Isles, we have representatives in England, Ireland and Scotland engaged in the work of selecting suitable families and single farm laborers.

In Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland, we have also our representatives for the selection of suitable agricultural settlers.

On the Continent in what are known as non-preferred countries where we operate under an agreement with the Department of Immigration, we have our officers for the selection of suitable people.

Without burdening you with a lot of statistics, but only going back a few years, I may say that the total number of people entered Canada before the War, and under what conditions do they now come?, how few could answer. Considering the importance of this Immigration question, the people of Canada should make themselves more familiar with our Immigration laws.

Before the Great War, Immigration to Canada was largely unrestricted. Practically no bars existed except the requirement that men and women desiring to enter the country should be physical fit, and a large movement was possible from British Isles and Continental Europe, with the result that in-the years immediately preceding the War we were receiving annually over 200,000 newcomers, and in 1913 the total entry reached the immense figure of 402,000. There was a large number of newcomers in the early months of 1914, but during the War immigration was almost at a standstill. After the War, influenced by the grave economic situation, immigrants from the Continent of Europe was restricted to Colonization organizations. The restrictions in force hampered the movement of immigrants to such an extent that the railway companies of Canada made an agreement with the Government, which is in effect at the present time and which allows freerer movement of immigrants who are agriculturists or domestic servants from the British Isles, Scandinavia, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany and Switzerland, immigrants even more freely as long as they are physically fit, and possess sufficient capital to preclude the likelihood of their becoming public charges. From other countries, which we call the non-preferred countries, such as Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Esthonia, Latvia, Austria, Russia and Russia, only farmers, farm laborers and domestic servants are accepted, and these have to be nursanted employment for at least twelve months. From other countries such as Italy, Greece, Turkey, etc., no grants are allowed to come except by nominal or special form the Department of Immigration.

Canada is big, but best of all, it is British. To maintain its British allegiance, we must keep the country British in its population. Already our British settlers in the West are realizing the danger of a too free settlement of people from other lands, for we have noticed on the application forms submitted by them to our officers, requiring harvest and other help that there has been an unprecedented demand for British help. Never before did we receive so many applicants with the phrase: "British Preferred," written upon them; in fact, they constituted more than 50 per cent. of the total number of farm help applications now being received.

Next 40 British comes the request for Scandinavian help.

My suggestion in dealing with these applications would not be to open the door wide, but, as I stated previously, I would like a little more freedom and greater latitude in selection. The two railroads, as they are now handling the bulk of the new settlers under the agreement with the Government, are in a position to know the number that can be absorbed in any one season and can take proper measures to bring about only an inflow of people as can be properly provided for, in each section of the country.

Reduced Rates

While there is an agreement between the Railways, the Steamship lines and the Governments under which certain classes of immigrants from the British Isles may come to Canada at greatly reduced rates, these reduced rates apply only to immigrants who are to engage in agriculture or domestic service, and up to the present time four out of every five of the British settlers coming here have had to be experienced hands. Under such an agreement it would not be possible to people this country in hundreds of years, as the number of agriculturists in Great Britain is limited.

Inasmuch as we are not able to procure sufficient experienced agriculturists from Great Britain to meet our requirements, representation were made to the Government, and I am pleased to say that at a meeting in Ottawa last February between the Minister of Immigration and Colonization (Hon. Mr. Forke), his Deputy (Mr. Egan), other officers of his Department and officials of the C.P.R. and Canadian National, arrangements were made to allow immigrants under the reduced rates agreement three inexperienced agriculturists to two experienced. The new arrangement will give us an opportunity to greatly increase the number of people who will be brought to this country.

I want to take this opportunity to say that Mr. Forke met the officials of the Railroads in a very splendid spirit . For the limited time that he has been Minister of Immigration and Colonization, he already shows a wonderful grasp of the Immigration situation, and I am satisfied that this vexed question will now make more progress under Mr. Forke's administration than it has made for many years past.

While I have been dealing with purely technical at an increase in the population of Canada, it is quite possible that some of my hearers have asked themselves the question: "Can Canada support a much greater population?" To answer that question allow me to offer some figures of an interesting character.

No Overcrowding In Dominion

The United States has a population of 120,000,000 people, and I may say you distribute that enormous population in a territory the same miles of it as the surface area of our great neighbor Uncle Sam has only 35 individuals to each square mile. In comparison with this figure, England has a population of 700 on each square mile, while Scotland provides for 150 people on every square mile. Across the Channel France has 175 people on the square mile, while its gallant little neighbor, Belgium, provides for 650 on the same space. Germany carries 348 to the square mile and Denmark 220. Now recall those figures and ask: "What population can these Islands support?" The answer is that in this Dominion just a fraction over two people inhabit each square mile of land, and even that you will admit.

I am sure you will agree that there is no overcrowding in the United States, and that great Republic can sustain 25 people to every square mile, so can Canada. Taking that as a min imum figure, 25 people and every square mile of Canada would give to this Dominion a total population of 125,000,000 and there would be plenty of room for everybody, both to work and to play. Therefore, as you see, there is nothing to fear from a material increase in our population, but everything to gain; nothing to fear concerning the tranquility of our present economic situations, and everything to gain in an increased prosperity.

With health, congenial work, a home and kindly neighbors, happiness is not far off for normal people. All these Canada surely contains and our people in Canada today are participating and enjoying these benefits. This is seen in the physical development of the Canadians, as well as being manifested in the courage and hope with which they enter into difficult enterprises. Optimism is the keynote of the life and it is with a pleasure apparent on all hands that Canada is building for the future. It is for the future generations she is building her schools and universities. Per the future her cities are so continually planning and her transportation systems that span the Continent are not for today or tomorrow, but for all time Her citizens have harvested the mighty power of water for in excess of their needs for the encouragement of those who shall come after them. Bold men of desire, confidence in ultimate triumph, with a dominant sense of security, are evident everywhere from Halifax to Vancouver. There is nothing feverish in all this. Canadians know they are building on sure foundations. The power is permanent, the wealth real in mine and mill, in land and forest. Canada calls to the enterprising and industrious everywhere to enter into this great heritage for the development of the Empire and the well-being of the world. Canada cries, "Come if you have the courage to conquer."

Before closing, gentlemen, let me say that the Railways in Canada, and the Canadian National Railways, are one of the most important factors in buildingup the Dominion. We railway people believe that the railway situation in Canada offers a field of patriotic endeavor unequalled in any industrial phase of our national life. The transportation systems are the arteries through which the life stream of the nation must flow. To keep these arteries from becoming unhealthy and atrophied involves upon the railway people and the people of the Dominion. We do not forget, gentlemen, that the eyes of the whole world are upon the men who operate the iron roads upon which we must travel if our destiny is to be fulfilled. Happiness lies in the furthering of service for the nation we have yet to people this vast heritage.

BELLE THEATRE

This is a war picture without any camouflage from start to finish. It is a faithful reproduction of what occurred at "Mons", that citadel of Belgium during the beginning of the War. It took two reels to warm me up to it but when we got into the third reel, I began to "sit up and take notice." I have a prejudice against War films, but I must say "Mons" swept away the prejudice and made me acknowledged that it was about the best all-round British War film I have yet seen. It has been excellently directed. The suggestion of the love-interest is not given much encouragement, which sticks to facts, but humans have imagination; and the director, having ignored the spark of a love interest, the audience completes the picture mentally and leaves you in a state of expectation as to the future that is a little more love is to be presented.

CAPITOL THEATRE

An unusually large crowd at the Capitol Theatre last evening greeted the first presentation of the Imperial Players offering "Smilin Thru" and the playlet scored a distinct hit.

Miss Myrtle Bigelow, leading lady of the Imperial Players, was a great favorite with the audience and her caudle acting was a real treat. Clever comedy and clean humor contributed to make the offering this exceptionally good stock company thoroughly enjoyable in every way.

Not the least important feature of the programme is the film feature "Fashions For Women" starring Esther Ralston, the picture includes one of the most striking fashion shows ever screened. Another large crowd is anticipated to-night, the show will commence at 8 sharp and the regular admission is prevailing. It will be advisable to get there early to get a seat.

ROYALTY MEETS EX-SERVICE MEN

Adelaide, Australia, May 2.—Canadian Press Cable!—The Duke and Duchess of York today met 2,000 ex-service men, now farmers, who sang "Tipperary" and other familiar war tunes with re-doubled zest when they saw the Royal visitors joining heartily in the song. The "diggers" cheered their spokesman when he said that though they were now on active service, they were ready to service the King and the Empire again, any time they were called. The Duke made a short speech of thanks, addressing them as "fellow diggers."

LIFE PRODUCED WITH VIOLET RAY

Chicago, May 2.—The Herald and Examiner today said that two University of Chicago scientists had been successful in experiments to produce living organisms by ultra violet rays. A live fish was produced, the newspaper said by placing the fish egg under a powerful ultra violet rays for five to ten minutes. In this manner, the account added, Dr. Ralph Gerard and Dr. A. Hinrichs, who conducted the tests, created life without the male sperm. "We placed the eggs of the sea urchin under the rays of the ultra violet light machine for from five to ten minutes and the egg became twin sting fish larvae" Dr. Hinrichs said. "This eliminated the male entirely".

YANKS CONTINUE WINNING WAYS

Brooklyn Robins Administer Trimming To Cocky Giants

New York, May 3.—The senators dropped the first game of the series at Washington to New York yesterday, 9 to 6. The slugging Yankees got 17 hits off four Washington pitchers. Lasserit pulling a homer into the centerfield stands in the eighth. Before the game Walter Johnson, Washington's star pitcher, was presented by Speaker Longworth with a silver loving cup, won in a popularity contest.

The Athletics won the opener of a four-game series at Philadelphia with the tail-end Boston Red Sox by a score of 6 to 5. The game went ten innings. A wild throw to first by Wanninger in the tenth allowed Hale to score from second with the winning run.

Rallying in the ninth inning for five runs the St. Louis Browns defeated the Cleveland Indians 7 to 6. Sisler started the scoring in the last half of the ninth by hitting a home run with one on. Sebang, who got four hits yesterday, clinged to bring in the winning run yesterday. Burns got four safeties including two doubles.

The Chicago White Sox ran their string of consecutive victories to seven yesterday by defeating Detroit in the opening game of the series there, 3 to 1. Lyons, outpitching Holloway from the start, beat the Tigers for the second time this season. He held them to five hits and, aided by perfect support in the infield, was master in all save the seventh inning. In addition to his excellent pitching, Lyons contributed a home run to Chicago's cause.

New York, May 3.—The trouble with this business of baseball is that you never can tell what to expect next. Take, for instance, the proceedings at the Polo Grounds yesterday. Things happened that never happened before and others that may never happen again.

The Giants came home prepared to spend a quiet afternoon clipping the wings of the so called rookies Robins. They were looking forward to a little batting practice at Brooklyn's expense, a tighter grip on the league leadership, a quick shower and then a nice dinner with all the family gathered around in a happy frame of mind.

But things didn't turn out that way at all. The Robins neither were rookies nor in a quiet mood. Something must have made them mad. Perhaps it was the jibes of the scribes. In any event they maried and growled and snapped their teeth. They pounded the Giants to a pulp and then flew away flapping their wings in derision. Ruinies indeed. They beat the Giants 10 to 7.

WEBB DOES WELL WITH CHICAGO

When Joe McCarthy led his Chicago Cubs home a few days ago to open the season about the only new piece of furniture he had to exhibit to Cub fans was one outfielder.

But that, as Earl Carroll remarked when the judge gave him a year and a day, was plenty.

For this one new piece of bric-a-brac, Earl Webb, appears to be quite an exhibit.

First thing he did was to sock out two home runs in the first game, total by ignoring the fact that Mr. Grover Alexander, hero of the 1926 world's series with the Cardinals, was hurling part of the game at least, overlooking also, the fact that the whole durned bunch playing against him were champions in their own right.

Webb isn't exactly a newcomer to the big show. Like hosts of other big league players he had a brief tryout in a major suit rahways return your partner's lead early in his career.

Back in the spring of 1924 the New York Giants gave him the once-over. He had drawn attention through his work with the Pittsfield club in the Eastern league—as an outfielder and pitcher.

Deciding he was a bit too green to burn, the Giants sent him back to the Eastern league outfit. That year he played 83 games in the outfield and worked in 32 in the box. He turned in ten victories and was beaten seventeen times.

The next season found him with Toledo, under Giant control, and in 114 games in the outer works he played good ball and turned in a batting average of .320. Last year he moved over to Louisville and hit .333 in 130 games. His fielding wasn't impressive. As a matter of fact, he ranked well down in the list as far as clean fielding was concerned.

While a dozen regulars on various teams outhit him in the averages, he was tied with Grimes (of Columbus and later Toledo) for efficiency in sour ball. He was responsible for a total of 111 runs. Scored 99 himself.

COMPOSER NOW IS PARALYZED

Gres-Sur-Loing, France, May 3.—Frederick Delius, the British composer of symphonies, a civilian victim of war, is hopelessly paralyzed, threatened with blindness and unable to use his hands in a musical work. His wife, who has abandoned painting to use his hands in musicnd work, male nurse look after his needs.

Delius settled in this quiet village on the Loing thirty years ago.

But the war shook him out of his quiet retreat. The clash between the Germans and the French on the Marne rocked the Delius cottage day and night, and along with the rest of the population of the village Delius and his wife fled to Paris. The composer was 50 years old then. His nerves crashed under the strain of air raids. Nervous collapse was followed by paralysis.

During the past year Delius' strength has returned somewhat; He believes he will recover sufficiently to resume his work.

The composer is fond of the radio, and a set supplies him with concerts from London, Berlin, Paris and Vienna to vary the monotony of bedridden days and nights.

TORONTO WINS FROM READING

Pitchers Battle Results In Victory For Leaf Slabsman

Toronto, May 3.—Toronto defeated Reading, 4 to 0, in the opening game of the series here yesterday before a small crowd. It was a pitchers' battle between Maley, of the Leafs, and the left-hander Slapper, and it was Maley's two-base hit in the fifth inning that paved the way for his victory. Hargrave followed with a single to score the pitcher, and counted himself on Lamotte's triple.

Outside of that inning Slappey had the Leafs well subdued, but gave way to a pinch-hitter in the eighth and Carlton drove the last half of the inning, yielding two runs on a walk, a single by Lawry, who also contributed some great base-running, and Lamotte's sacrifice fly.

The Keys had several opportunities to break into the scoring, but always were one hit shy.

Baltimore made it two straight over Rochester yesterday by winning, 9 to 5. A seven -run rally in the third inning gave Thormahlen off the mound and clinched the game for the Orioles.

Al Grabowski, veteran left-hander, making his first start of the season, hurled Syracuse to 4 to 2 decision over the Newark Bears at Syracuse. Grabowski started slowly, allowing a walk and a hit, which combined with an error, gave the Bruins two runs in the first inning. Thereafter, however, Grabowski pitched steadily and strongly and backed up by three double plays.

The Buffalo Bisons extended their winning streak to six straight games yesterday when they vanquished the City Skeeters 5 to 4. Del Bissonnette, former Skeeter, accounted for the winning run with a long home run in the eighth round. Brice fanned Shannon for the last Skeeter out, with runners on second and third.

Hecklers, enraged by the Roman Catholic flavor of new prayer book, doubted down the Archbishop of Canterbury when attempting to address a religious society in London.

SENATORS GET MUCH SYMPATHY

New York, May 3 (By Canadian Press).—The Ottawa Senators, who twice within recent years were eliminated from the Stanley Cup series by second place teams after leading the National Hockey League all season, receive sympathy from the Daily News which attacks the play-off system now in vogue following the defeat of the New York Rangers by the Boston Bruins.

The writer questions the situation "whereby a team can loaf in third place all season concerving its energy and then on the crest of a spurt ride through to beat a team that has been playing consistent flashy hockey throughout the playing season."

"The only real world series would have been between the two teams (Ottawa and Rangers) that finished first," the News says. "What a fine mess the baseball season would be if they wound up that way with second and third teams playing to get into the world series. How extraordinarily silly."

MODERN PORTIA IN OLD COUNTRY

Leads Young Suffragists In England to the Voting Polls

Liverpool, May 3.—A modern Portia has arisen here to lead the Young Suffragists of England to the polls.

She is Miss Nancy Stewart Parnell, a descendant of Thomas Parnell, the great Irish leader and poet of the eighteenth century. Her father, prominent as a poet and playwright, is a first cousin of Lord Congleton.

Miss Parnell is an honors graduate of Liverpool University and was a leader in efforts of women students toward obtaining their emancipation. She is a debater, and is secretary of the Liverpool branch of Saint Joans Social and Political Alliance.

She came into prominence as spokeswoman for the Young Suffragists when a deputation called on Prime Minister Baldwin to petition the government for the ballot.

"The Young Suffragists of England," Miss Parnell informed the prime minister, "are the women less than 30 years old. They include teachers, professors, doctors, mothers, office and factory workers, and strangely enough, par liamentary candidates, for a woman may be elected to the House of Commons at 21 years old, though she may not vote until nine years later."

NEW EXPEDITION FOR FAR NORTH

Chicago, May 3.—Setting sail from Wiscasset, Maine, next June 20, Commander Donald B. MacMillan, arctic explorer, will lead a new expedition into the far north to spend 15 months exploring and studying uncharted Arctic wastes, the Field Museum of Natural History, sponsoring the expedition, has announced.

A race still living in primitive state and virtually unknown to science except as Wakapi Indians, will be sought out and studied; the fossils mountains of Baffin Land, a region of creatures or evidences believed to have lived there thousands of years ago, and the remnant of the last great ice sheet which in a past geological age crept down across part of North America, will be explored and studied.

OUR SISTER CITIES

Newsy Neighborhood Notes

Oshawa, May 3.—According to information received yesterday, Oshawa is not likely to have a liquor store for some time, or until the people vote on the question again. In the last Provincial election, Oshawa voted against Government Control by a majority of 44, but an announcement following that was to the effect that all places which had never held former Local Option would be given liquor stores.

AVIATION SCHOOL

Peterboro, May 3.—The aviation ground in Ouseabee sprang to life over the week-end with twenty-seven pupils enrolled and about one hundred on taday way. Harold P. Ayres, who was a Captain in Royal Flying Corps, and served during the war in Belgium and with the fleet, is organizer and instructor at the Aviation School. He has two planes on the ground and expects before next Spring to have fifteen in commission. Several of the pupils were busy on Saturday assembling the Curtis Canuck that will make its debut over Peterborough in about a week.

PRAISED COURSE

Oshawa, May 3.— Major H. C. Cowan had a party of twenty-five golfers at Oshawa golf course from Toronto on Saturday and they were absolutely delighted with the local eighteen holes, and said so in measured terms. Then Mr. Jackson Waller, winner of the Ontario fall championship, was here also at the week-end and left Mr. Robert Henderson who had so much to do in the original laying out of the course that it was the best natural layout for a course in Ontario.

OTTAWA'S CONTRIBUTION

Ottawa, May 3.—One of Ottawa's contributions to the Confederation Jubilee celebration will be the erection of a large temporary monument on Connaught Place, should plans now under consideration materialize. The monument will be an architectural masterpiece, as the plans already drawn up are based on the Choragic Monument of Lysicrates, the most perfect example of Corinthian order found in Greece.

NEW LOW RATES

Cobourg, May 3.—New low rates on the Cobourg-Rochester ferry were made known today by A. J. O'Connor, special representative of the C.N.R., who visited Oshawa. An attractive rate has been struck for transportation of a car across the lake. Size of the machine matters not. Then there has been a reduction in rates for the individual, of some 67 cents on a single ticket, and a new rate is also announced for a six day, short term stay in the States. These rates were put through but recently, and are subject-tec. They come into effect May 28.

PETERBORO BOOMS

Peterboro, May 3.—Building in the best month but taken on its old time vigor in this city. Seven new dwelling houses are being erected, and twenty-two garages, and there were thirty miscellaneous permits that were issued by the City Engineering during the month of April. These permits involve a total of $25,815.00, which is more than double the amount issued in April, 1926.

The Irony of Love

By Charles Garvice

Rafe put the note in an envelope and addressed it "Miss Wilde"—but, against the consciousness, the remembrance that the landlady had given Pirenle to be his wife, struck him; she carefully traced up the envelope, he addressed a new one: "Mrs. Angus Alore," and left it in the center of the table, where Pirenle would not fail to see it immediately she came in. He put back to the factotum and was driven to the hotel. There was barely time to pack his portmanteau and catch the train; but he succeeded in doing both, and, leaning back in the carriage and lighting a pipe, he gave himself up to anxious thought about Lyn.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Crisis

Rafe had wired for the depart to meet him at the stations and, as he sprang into it, he asked the groom how Lady Ern was.

"I'm afraid her ladyship's very hot my lord," said the man, with a shake of his head.

"Is she cold in her mind yet?" asked Rafe Anxiously.

"No, my lord, I believe not," said the groom crawely.

"Is this the best piece you can get out of this horse?" demanded Rafe, impatiently. "Put him on a bit, will you? It won't hurt him to stretch himself and I'm—in a hurry."

As he sprang from the depcart and strode into the hall, Maude came down the stairs to meet him. She was dressed in a plain frock of soft gray and trod noiselessly in her felt slippers and Rafe saw that she was very pale and that her face was drawn as if she were suffering from want of sleep. Even in this moment of his anxiety his heart-beat quickly in his recognition of her beauty and grace; it seemed to him that he had been away from her for months, and he realized how sweet the sight of her was to him.

"I'm glad you've come, Strandyre," she said, in a low voice, which unconsciously becomes habitual when there is perilous sickness in a house. "I'd have written to you, but I did not know your address."

"I'm sorry," he faltered. "I've been away—kept by business—"

"Yes," she said, as if she were only satisfied with the explanations of his absence, "I've had some business laid for you——"

"Thanks. I dont want any," he broke in quickly. "Tell me how she is; the groom said she was no better."

"No" said Maude, "the crisis has not been reached yet, and until it has

POOR CATS NOW FACE EXTINCTION

Lemingrad, May 3.—A war on cats has started since the State Clothing Syndicate announced fifty cents would be paid for every cat brought to its factory. Their skins are valed in making popular-priced fur coats for women.

Midnight and daylight raids are reducing Leningrad's feline population Cat-catchers carrying huge bags and iron bars go about the city coaxing cats into captivity or killing them out right.

Disappearances of family pets as well as the cruelty of their deaths have caused newspapers to protest. The syndicate, however, contends that the campaign meets the need for cheap furs, since well to the unemployed and reduces the hydrophobia risk.

Commander Noel Davis and his alternate pilot, Lieut. Stanton H. Wooster, were killed on Tuesday in Virginia on their last test flight before shipping their plane to New York, where they were to enter the New York-Paris non-stop flight for a $25,000 prize. The machine was a biplane with three engines and was named "The American Legion." Picture shows Davis and Wooster in the cabin of the plane. Davis being to the left. Above is a view of the "American Legion."

TURKS WILL TRY TO FIGHT HIGH SUICIDE RATES

Constantinople, May 2.—The government has set out to fight Turkey's rising suicide rate. It has designated a professor of Stamboul University to prepare a course of public lectures aimed at preventing suicides.

Statistics compiled by the professor show that the present number of suicides has risen within the past ten years from thirty years to 180. Most of them are girls, although in other countries the number of male suicides almost doubles that of women.

The press also has started a campaign to build up the morale of the nation. Newspapers publish cartoons ridiculing suicide. One of them shows a woman discussing fashions in self-destruction, disapproving of the winter styles, such as poisoning, hanging and shooting, and declaring her intention of waiting for summer in order to employ the "more ladylike" method of drowning.

Sir James Wilson came down yesterday; he said she was very ill, and everything is being done——

They had been standing by the great oak table. Rafe sank on it, and, gripping the edge with his hands, turned his face away from her.

With noiseless steps, she went into the dining room and brought him a glass of wine, and Rafe did not refuse it, for his heart was heavy with dread and remorse. If he had only known earlier that Ern wanted him!

"I want to see her," he said, "I want to go to her at once."

"But, Strandyre——" said Maude hesitating. "I don't know whether you ought to do so. Typhoid is contagious, you know."

"You mean the thing's catching?" he said, staring at her. "Well, what if it is? You don't suppose I mind, that I'm afraid——" He broke off with a short laugh of impatience at the suggestion.

"No, I don't think you're afraid," she said, with a faint smile, "but Ethel's——"

Well you ought not to run any risk. You are—well, you see, you are Strandyre, you know."

"What do I matter? I know Ern wants me, has been calling for me—— She has, hasn't she?"

"Yes," assented Maude. She is always asking for you. I don't quite understand it. Of course, I know she's fond of you, but—but she seems to be troubled about you, as if she thought you had some cause to be offended, or be angry with her."

Rafe rose. "I'm going to her at once," he said.

"Very well," said Maude, after a momentary pause. "I will go up first and see if the nurse will let you see her now."

"What's the nurse got to do with it?" he demanded, with a frown. "Why aren't you nursing her? I can see you are; you're pale and thin. you look as if you hadn't been in bed for days, weeks."

"I would have liked to have nursed her altogether," said Maude simply, "but they do let me help them sometimes. I think she knows me, and—and I hate being out of the room.

"I know you would," he said kindly; and as his eyes rested on her face, she appeared to him to have undergone a sudden change; this girl with the worn face and subdued voice was different from the fashionable Lady Maude of Belgrave Square and the London ballrooms. At that moment she seemed nearer to him than she had ever been. Again, love welled up in her heart, and his hand went out toward her, only to touch the soft gray dress; but he drew it back; she was not his to touch. His eyes followed her wistfully as she went up the stairs and along the corridor. While he was waiting, Lord St. Ives came in.

"Hello, Strandyre, got back?" he said gravely. "Bad business, this, isn't it? Poor little soul! I sayl when you go off suddenly, as you have just done, you must leave us your address. All sorts of things might turn up, you know."

"I will," said Rafe. "I'm sorry."

He was scarcely listening, his eyes were fixed on the corridor. Maude came down.

Goyer Brothers Released On $1200 Bail ---- Hillier Man Dies Of Burns In Picton Hospital

GRAY CLAIMS HE WAS VIRTUALLY SLAVE TO LOVE

Mrs. Snyder Was So Aggressive That He Was Helpless

PROCURED POISON

Says He Told Her She Would Have To Do Job Alone

New York, May 4.—Henry Judd Gray secured information about what poisons for Mrs. Ruth Snyder, his co-defendant on a charge of murdering Albert Snyder, he testified today, but when she suggested his active participation in the murder of her husband he refused.

Under direct examination in his defense he said she had asked him to shoot Snyder after her attempts with poison and gas had failed and he told her "you will have to see this thing through alone". He admitted that he once promised Mrs. Snyder to help her obtain poison to kill her husband. During his recital he seemed to be struggling with a lump in his throat and sometimes sighed deeply.

Mrs. Snyder met with her head bowed low, but she did not cry. Gray said that after she had told him of her domestic troubles he urged divorce but she said that was not the way out. He told of a motor trip to Newark, Kingston, Troy and Amsterdam and declared that love-making was so aggressive that he became to all intents a slave to love. It was this condition of helpless submission that Gray's counsel says the corset salesman was in at the time of the killing at Amsterdam, said Gray. Mrs. Snyder learned by telegraphic that her husband was ill. He said he suggested that she return home, but she replied, "let old Jerry die."

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH WILL RE-OPEN FOR WORSHIP IN THE NEAR FUTURE

The Rushlow Triplets To Be Christened at the First Service

NEWLY DECORATED

Rev. John Lyons of St. Thomas' Will Officiate Without Charge

After having been closed for nearly ten years, St. Paul's Church at 25 Wharf Street, will again be opened for service according to a decision reached at a well attended and representative meeting held at the home of Mrs. Coulson, 27 Wharf Street, last evening. Rev. John Lyons, Vicar of St. Thomas' Church, was also in attendance at this meeting. It is thought probably that at the first service to be held in the church the christening of the Rushlow triplets will take place. To start with, Sunday School and Tuesday evening services will be held and Mr. Lyons will assume this additional charge gratuitously.

St. Paul's Church is nicely decorated inside and when some minor refinishing is done and new windows put in, this edifice will again be in good condition. Mr. Harry Smith of Foster Ward has promised to aid in superviving the maintenance of this church. The residents of Foster Ward will gather all financial obligations in connection with St. Paul's Church.

Magistrate Mikel has suggested that at the first public service that every person in attendance donate a cent for each year of their age to the church and the donation will be used for St. Paul's Church.

BANK ENLARGES THEIR PREMISES; MORE BUSINESS

Have Taken Long Lease On Store Occupied By Earl Foster

START ALTERATIONS

Possibility That Later Whole Block May Be Purchased

To cope with their rapidly increasing business the Bank of Montreal have leased the store on Front Street, lately occupied by Earl Foster, immediately adjoining the bank premises. Alterations will be commenced immediately to adapt the building for banking purposes. The door on Front Street will be taken out and the front changed to conform as closely as possible to the bank building. Inside large archways will be opened between the two buildings to make them as nearly as possible into one large room.

The manager's office will be located in the front part of the old Foster store which will give considerable more counter room and lobby space for the bank's customers. By moving some of the staff into the new quarters room will be secured for the service of clients, using the safety deposit boxes of the bank.

For the past few years, the Bank of Montreal have felt the need of increased accommodation and the growth of their business in the past twelve months has rendered it absolutely necessary to provide more room. They have secured a long lease on the store which is owned by W. J. Thomson, Power Avenue. It is possible that the bank may later purchase the whole block in order to erect a building in strict conformity with their own.

When the Bank of Montreal absorbed the Merchant's Bank some years ago they secured the Belleville office from the Corner of Pinnacle and Victoria down to their present quarters at Front and Bridge. The combined business of the two banks made it necessary to use every available inch of space and as their business kept growing they were always cramped for space. Two years ago when the Molsons Bank was taken over some change became imperative.

Mr. G. A. C. Weir, the present manager, came to Belleville about eighteen months ago after the death of the late H. A. Toffield. He has had wide banking experience in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia, later becoming the Head Office in Montreal. Under his management, the bank's business has augmented rapidly. Mr Weir just received a telegram this afternoon from Head Office, stating that the arrangements for the lease of the building has been confirmed.

Important Note To U. S. Government To Be Released Tomorrow

Londonu, Eng., May 4.—Full exposition of the British viewpoint as regards to the war debts is believed to be contained in a lengthy Britain note which has been dispatched to the United States and the publication of which is set for tomorrow. News that the note had been sent caused surprise of its existence until word was received in London, as there was no intimation that Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador, had delivered it to the United States. State Department.

The not li understood to be the out come of the controversy over the war debt between the Secretary of the United States Treasury, Andrew W. Mellon and the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Winston Churchill. It is thought to be in the nature of reply to Secretary Mellons viewpoint that Great Britain is receiving more from her continental war debtors than she is paying annually to the United States under the Washington debt funding agreement.

(Special to The Intelligencer)

Oswego, N. Y., May 4.—Napoleon Goyer, and Lawrence Goyer, brothers, of Belleville caught by the U. S. Coast Guard off Selkirk in Lake Ontario near Oswego early Sunday morning were arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Charles N. Bulger, here Tuesday and held on $1200 bail for the U. S. Grand Jury which sits in Binghampton, N. Y., the first Tuesday in June. Both defendants waived examination. They were charged with a violation of the tariff act in an attempt to smuggle goods into this country.

The accused men were in communication with friends in Belleville and it was expected would be released on bail probably today. If the Grand Jury should return indictments against them the men will be held for trial at the October term of the U. S. District Court at Auburn N Y.

MAGISTRATE MIKEL THINKS KNOWLEDGE ONLY REMEDY

When Magistrate Mikel's attention was drawn to an article appearing in the Toronto "Times" of May 2nd stating that several prominent men in Toronto were with his assessment that full details of crimes against women should be published, he replied as follows:—

"I am following the campaign of the Social Hygiene Council of Ontario and in my opinion the Council is doing splendid work and a great deal of good. There is an old saying that Knowledge will make you free, and I believe that the greater amount of knowledge the public possesses concerning crimes of this nature, from their publication, the greater number of this nature there will be committed and the easier it will be to control venereal disease.

"Knowledge Only Cure

"Knowledge is the only safeguard and protection," the Magistrate stated. "Children cannot learn about these matters too soon. Every home in the land should have pictures depicting the beautiful story of the birth of life. Ignorance is no protection," went on the Magistrate. "Over the entrance to one of the great institutions of learning in this country is the motto—The truth will make you free.'

"If knowledge is dangerous then we had better close our schools and churches and then we've got to Heaven for our education."

Samuel Wright Burned To Death While Clearing Out Stumps

TERRIBLE INJURIES

Died In Picton Hospital Two Hours After the Accident

Samuel Wright, aged 27, married of Hillier, Prince Edward Township died in Picton Hospital at 11 o'clock this morning from severe burns which he received while burning a stump near his home about two hours previously.

Mr. Wright when found by Sid Palmer a neighbor, was badly burned about the body and was immediately rushed to Picton Hospital. It is presumed that the victim spilled some oil on his clothing which became ignited, burning his whole body. When found Wright's clothing was completely burned off his body.

Wright was married about eighteen months ago to Miss Dorothy Christie of Wellington. He lived on the farm with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Wright, who were not at home at the time of the fatality.

The victim of the accident left the house about eight-thirty this morning to burn some stumps, leaving his wife alone in the house.

Mrs. Wright was not aware of the peril which her husband was in until notified by neighbors.

The body was immediately taken to the undertaker's establishment at Wellington where it was prepared for burial. Surviving, besides a sorrowing widow, and parents are four sisters, Mrs. S. Lummiss, Belleville, Mrs. T. Boyle, Wellington, Mrs. Mather, Winnipeg and Mrs. Eckard, Toronto.

Funeral arrangements were not completed at a late hour this afternoon.

STATEMENT IS NOT ALLOWED

Mr. Justice Logie Rules Out Dembner Girl's Dying Declaration

Toronto, Ont., May 4.—In the trial of Dr. O. C. J. Withrow and Bartlett J. Brooks for manslaughter, in connection with the death of Ruth Dembner, Mr. Justice Logie today ruled out as not admissable the sworn statement taken from the girl forty minutes before she died in the hospital at Grasgreen Bruyere, Quebec. The Judge ruled the so-called 'dying statement' was not admissable unless made by a person who had abandoned hope of life. The statement of Miss Dembner had been admitted at the inquest and also at the preliminary enquiry in the police court. A statement was taken, with the jury absent, as to the circumstances surrounding the taking of the statement and the time taken to avoid any mention of what was actually in the declaration.

The site comprises about two acres of land and is well shaded and has a nice sandy beach.

The special committee who made the selection yesterday, was composed of Mrs. J. A. McPee, Miss Harris, Chairman of the Shelter; Mr. H. H. Ketchenon, Mr. W. H. Merry, Capt. Ruston, Children's Aid Inspector and Mr. Charles Hamlin, M. P.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Kindness—a language the dumb can speak, and the deaf can understand.
—BOVEE

TIME TO START

In less than two months Canada's sixtieth anniversary will be celebrated throughout the Dominion, but as far as we can learn no adequate steps have been taken to make Belleville's participation worthy of the event. The Parks Board, we believe, has discussed the matter at some of its meetings. For sometime the members were under the impression that some of the money voted by the Dominion Government would be available for the various municipalities to stage suitable demonstrations, but this money, it solely for the Ottawa celebration, for publicity and for the providing of medals to be donated to school children throughout Canada, marking the event.

There is no time to waste. Belleville is the heart of the United Empire Loyalist Country and if any part of Canada should wholeheartedly take part in this celebration, it should be Belleville. And the celebration should not take the form of a baseball game or a horse race.

The "Orillia Packet" started a suggestion some months ago that every municipality in Canada, big or little, should build a enormous bon fire to be set ablaze at a set hour so that the towering flames might carry the message of Canada's virile patriotism to the whole world. This good suggestion might form a basis for a celebration which would bring home to the minds of the people of Canada a sense of pride in their country, of her glorious past and still more glorious future.

REASONABLE INTEREST

The comment has been made that more interest is being taken in the opening of the Government liquor store in Belleville than in the war in China and we believe the comment is justified. Ask the next half dozen men some question about the Chinese troubles and the best you will get is a languid and prefunctory interest, but ask the same six men if they know where the new liquor store is going to locate and who is going to run it and you will be sure of a much more vivid tone in their answers.

We do not know who is to blame for this or whether there is any particular one involved. But we do know that a whole lot of very fine citizens of this and other cities are keenly desirous of knowing when they will be able to go respectably to a store to purchase the wherewithal to slake their thirst, sure of getting good stuff and forget forever the telephone number and address of their old bootlegger.

HAPPINESS

"If you don't care for the thing you can't obtain you will be fairly happy."

On the surface it is not an inspiring message. Not to care for the thing we can't obtain is to resign, give up the supine. And when we quit in life's struggle we pay a dear price, indeed for our meagre mete of happiness. Most of us perhaps, would rather keep on fighting. There is joy in the fight joy at least to know there is fight in us.

Let us reverse the formula.

"If you care enough for the things you have obtained, you will be supremely happy."

The humble farmer, on his little farm—if he loves that farm—may be happy beyond compare. If he loves it well, he will till it well, intelligently, thoroughly, and it will yield him rich store. The widowed mother in the little cottage, has her children, and if she loves them well they will be her life. The clerk at the desk, if he loves his work, will be happy in it. Or the nobleman in his cab of steel may find in the easy response of the throbbing motors and his rolling place, a sense of responsibility for the pleasing multitude that will bring him pride and joy.

It is truly happy in our lot we need not be contented. Indeed, happiness and contentment, while we keep moving on life's highway, are not to be recorded. If we love the work we do we shall be thrilled not alone to do it well, but to do it better.

CRIME AND NEWS

Mr. Justice Logie, presiding at the trial of Dr. Withrow and Bartlet Brooks at Toronto, asked the newspapers not to print any of the malodour details of the case, as he felt it would be a good influence on the mind of young people. Magistrate Mikel of Belleville announces that he is going to force the newspapers to print all the details of sexual crimes as he considers these things should be matters of common knowledge and not kept in the dark, if they are to be checked.

The conflicting viewpoints of these two learned judges each have something to commend them. Most people will agree with Justice Logie that it is unpleasant, to say the least, to have the nauseating facts of particularly offensive sexual case forced on the attention of young people on the other hand Magistrate Mikel is quite correct in his contention that many of these offences are committed in positive ignorance and that if the horrible nature was displayed and understood that mixed suffering would be avoided.

The newspaper's point of view is half way between that of these two jurists. The newspaper will not hide or cover up crime to protect anybody. Neither will a respectable newspaper print offensive stories or lurid details which are calculated to shock and offend clean minded people. There is a certain type of yellow sheet which builds circulation by pandering to the morbid curiosity of the lower element of society, but decent newspapers try to avoid this course.

ON THE TROUT RUN

Summer long, where a quick stream laughed,
Trout King vied with the Knights of the Craft;
Great-gilled, hook-scarred, wary, wise
Slow to the lure of the painted flies,
Warned by the chill as the brook tore down,
Trout lying fled as the world burnt brown;
Into a lair, as the white frost cast,
Led where the fins of his fathers passed.

Blue-bottle danced in the filtered sun
That wove with the trees on the Trout King's run;
Something stirred with a silver gleam,
In the blackest pool of the ruffling stream.

Trout King lanced for the dance o' doom.
Dripping pearls from his red-flecked mouth
Arching back with a sounding—plop
Startling 'Pluter of the tousled top.

First of the Craft, in the fish Spring feeds—
Whirr of the reel—and the fight begun—
Trout King's back on his old trout run!

Mother sent little Harry to take his smaller sister safely to the kindergarten. He was back sooner than she expected.

"Well dear," she said, "did you treat Mary like a little lady, as I asked you to?"

"Naw," replied the youngster, disgustedly, "we canned that lady and gentlemen stuff...an' I chased her most of the way."

NEW ARRANGEMENT FOR HANDLING OF TOURISTS' AUTOMOBILES BETWEEN COBOURG AND ROCHESTER

The Ontario Car Ferry Company of the Canadian National Railways takes pleasure in announcing that arrangements have been completed for the handling of tourists' automobiles between Cobourg, Ont., and Genesee Dock, N.Y., via the steamers Ontario No. 1 and Ontario No. 2, commencing with the scheduled summer service on day 28th.

This new arrangement will undoubtedly prove of great convenience to auto mobile tourists who will be able to take full advantage of this short and pleasant direct route between Central Ontario and Central New York State. Only a limited number of cars may be handled on any one trip of the steamers, and in view of the anticipated heavy traffic, it will be necessary to make reservations in advance through the Agent at Cobourg. The charge for each automobile will be 12.50 each way.

Tourists will also require to comply with the regulations of the Canadian and United States Customs respecting the export and entry of their cars.

Vice-President and General Manager J. A. Maud, of Argonaut states that yesterday morning word was received from the mine to the effect that, the downward extension of vein number 500 had been picked up at the 600 foot horizon. This is Argonaut's widest and richest vein and the one from which the major proportion of the tonnage has come from for over a year. This new development is important as it will materially increase available tonnage and be a factor in profits and the cost of further development at the lower levels. Work is being pushed on the 1,250 foot level and good results are being met with.
A new producer will be added to the Kirkland Lake camp this week when the Sylvanite mill commences. Still further delays have occurred in the delivery of some of the equipment but it is only a matter of days now until the mill is operating. Mr. Simon Elliott, salesman at the Belleville Motors, this city and formerly of the Ontario Provincial Force, left to-day for Brockville, where he will attend the trial of Albert DeBrudge, who is being charged at that place with arson. It will be recalled that this man was tried at Ottawa a few weeks ago with the murder of his common law wife, whose charred remains were found in the ruins of their home near Brockville, and acquitted. It is in connection with this fire that the present charge is being made against DeBrudge.

INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE

The Persistences won their first game in the Industrial League last night from the Cisco girls by a 21-10 score. The Bell factory lassies have plugged through the schedule with a determined effort and were finally rewarded last evening. The Cisco boys had a slight margin over the C.P.R. boys and came out on the long end of a 19-11 score. Both were fast games and a large crowd attended. Allen Meagher and "Bill" Knott umpired. Plans for the dance tomorrow night are progressing favorably and the officials are preparing for a large crowd. A community affair is an innovation here and should be a hit.

INSTALLING SWITCHBOARD

A new up-to-date telephone switchboard is being installed in the Hotel Quinte so that outside calls can be made from all the rooms as well as for inner connections. With the installation of this switchboard in the Quinte Hotel, it puts this hotel on a par with the bigger hotels in the larger centres.

PETER PAN A FAILURE AS BOSS OF A HOME

By ELSIE HARLOWE

The husbands who have never grown up—did you ever happen to own one of 'em?

Stella does, and she's beginning to think that as household pet he's just about as successful as a case of hives.

DEAR ELSIE:

I am twenty-five years old, married five years to a man two years my senior. I loved him with all my heart when we were married, but my love is dying. He was an only child and has been badly spoiled. He is not selfish or mean, but he lacks the spirit and pep that will make a man move along in this world.

I have been working for four years in a doctor's office. I do bookkeeping for the three doctors, and my job is not easy; besides this, I take care of our six-room flat. My husband had a good job at $200 a month. Through some fault of his he lost it and since then has been content to work in a factory at $25 a week. He doesn't even attempt to find a better position. I suppose if some one would hand him one he would take it.

We are in debt, and he brazenly borrows money. I didn't even know we had bills until the collectors called. My folks have dressed me ever since I married. I have offered to sell the furniture and the car and send him to school on the proceeds so that he can learn something that will establish him in the world of business. He doesn't even know what he wants to do. Do you think he is worth the sacrifice? Just when I get him to thinking about doing something his mother pipes up with, "Never mind, kid, you're all right anyway."

He is good in a great many ways. He isn't foolish and he doesn't tear around at nights. I think he is just lazy. What do you think of it all?

STELLA.

You have given me the solution in your letter, my dear—"He's a spoiled child," you say—a spoiled child who has always been petted and shielded and who has never been allowed to face consequences. Even now he does not face them. You do the facing and mother continues the petting. And as a result he doesn't appreciate what you are doing for him nor feel any shame because of what he is doing to you.

What's the answer?

The answer is that he'll have to grow up some time and that, until he does, he won't be worth home room. So he'd better start growing and since he evidently isn't a self starter, you'll have to do for him.

How?

By letting him see how it feels to stand on his own hind legs. You have no children and you are already earning your own living. Then go on earning it, but stop earning his. Don't nag. Don't reproach. Don't weep. Be your cheery, independent charming self and—

DON'T WEAKEN! Don't let him depend on your earnings.

Remember that you're not doing this for a selfish reason. You're doing it to save your home. You're doing it because you love your man and because no one else has ever had the courage or sense to do this for him.

"But, suppose he doesn't try to get a better job?" you ask. "Suppose he gets mad at me and goes back to his mother and lets her take care of him?"

Then if he's that kind of a mollycake, isn't it time you discovered it, Stella?

And isn't it better to do the brave, drastic thing which is really worthy craving which will end in resentment and hate? The wrong kind of loving can be as deadly as any other "dope" Stella. Show the purity of your love by the measure of your courage.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my early teens. I like to have a good time, but my parents do not approve of my mixing boy friends. I do not go out to parties as other girls of my age do.

Most of them are permitted to have boy friends visit at their homes. What can I do to change the attitude of my parents?

BROWN EYES

BROWN EYES: The very fact that you are giving so much thought to having boy friends is probably the real basis for your parents' objections. They probably feel that you would permit yourself to be distracted from your studies.

Remember that your parents want to do what is best for you. You are too young to be thinking of "parties" and going out with boys. Devote your self to sports. They are the natural activities of youth.

Paris reports that for pearly there is only one alone this season, the accessorwhite, which owes its revival vogue to the collaborated efforts of the Mesdames Patou and Pacquet.

Paris reports that fabric flowers continue to be smart in matching sets with costume and of "natural" flowers, carnations (worn double) and bunches of violets are most frequently seen, while boutonnieres are especially worn with tailored suits.

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Poppies are the latest rival of chrysanthemums in Paris for boutonnieres.

Black georgette frocks with frill at the wrist, sleeves embroidered solidly in big buttons of roses are new Paris vogue.

Slenderness starts at the top this spring and the crown of the hat must hew to the headline, tightly enough to delineate its contour.

For a recent big New York wedding Orchid chiffon cape back frocks were worn by the eight bridesmaids and maids of honor and satin strap pumps and large bouquets of mauve to correspond formed a pastel harmony with the yellow and lavender of the bouquets of snap dragons, sweet peas and pansies, while the maid of honor's costume differed only in a minor accessory, the satin ribbons of her bouquet being yellow where those of the bridesmaids were lavender.

Double inroads of gold necklets, the classic string of pea-sized pearls twisted twice or thrice about the throat is still the favorite Parisienne ornament for the day and large pearl ball earrings have been seen frequently of late, even with tailored costumes, while some women carry their pearl chain for pearls to the point of wearing one or two large ones in lieu, but this is less frequent than collar or earrings.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

CHAPTER 12

THE PULSE OF STIFLED YOUTH

The following day was Sunday. Sybil and her mother were in church, after a silent exchange of glances over the breakfast table—an exchange which asked: "Have you the courage to appear in public the first Sunday after his return?" and was answered gently by the affirmative by Mary Ross and piously, defiantly, by her daughter.

But, for all her outward composure she also followed her prayer book the aisle of the familiar little church to the family pew, Sybil was fiercely angrily, conscious of the curious glances from whispering people as they passed.

Sybil knew the question each one had in mind. It was Will Mary Ross take her husband back?

She followed the service half-heartedly. She had come to church only because she could not bear to let her mother go alone. Poor, gentle, bewildered little mother, whose family were churchless! Sybil always thought the case in her mother's gentle way—thing of the stupefaction of the hen whose brood of ducklings took to the pond and left her alone upon the bank.

With the benediction, the two women hurried out, anxious to avoid the curious stares of the whispering groups in the vestry. But Sybil hear three name spoken over in church, and her young lips quivered scornfully.

As they walked home through the quiet streets, Mary Ross said hesitantly:

"Sybil, honey, I want to talk to you about your father."

"Yes," said the daughter.

"I—you—didn't you think this morning in church when we said, all together, 'forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us'—didn't you think about its being more than an idle phrase? Didn't you feel that we ought to practice it first at home?"

"No," said Sybil flatly.

Mary Ross looked slightly dashed. "Your father needs us, Sybil."

Her daughter's lip curled.

"We needed him—seven years ago. You didn't stop him from doing what he did."

Her mother flushed painfully.

"But—he's ill and alone and without any money," she murmured.

Sybil's level young gaze sought her mother's.

"You believe that the accident—the limp—and the stick—are real?"

"Sybil!" gasped Mary Ross. "How can you think such a cruel thing! Your father was hurt trying to save the lives of other people. I—I understand that the injury is permanent."

"Making it impossible—or, shall we say, inexpedient—for him to work any more?"

"Yes," faltered Mrs. Ross, looking on pathetic that Sybil's courage failed her. She squeezed her mother's arm in its shabby black sleeve and said gently, contritely:

"I'm a beast, dearest. Don't pay any attention to me. Do as you think best."

"That's just the trouble," confessed Mary Ross distressedly. "I don't know what is best for you and the boys. For myself, it doesn't matter, but for you children—"

"Oh, we can work it out somehow," Sybil assured her cheerfully, hiding her dismay at the knowledge that her mother really entertained the idea of taking her husband back. "If you decide to do it, I'll say Ted and Jimmie can be persuaded to help a little with the extra expense, and I can go to work, too."

"You will do nothing of the sort," declared her mother spiritedly. "Ted and Jimmie will have to help. After all, they owe it to him; he's their father."

Sybil was decidedly skeptical about either brothers sense of filial obligation, but she kept the thought to herself.

After supper that evening, when her mother had gone to her room where, Sybil suspected, she was composing the difficult answer to Fred Ross's letter, Sybil sat alone before the fire. The house was very silent. The old clock ticked ponderously, seeming to measure the beats of her own heart—slow, breathless, suspended—like the quick, brown pulse of Youth.

Sighing, she rose and went to the window, staring out into the darkness. A chill wind was blowing. She could hear it rustling the dead leaves on the paths. The window-pane gave back the reflection of the sitting-room—tidy, immaculate, incredibly shabby. The same old-fashioned furniture of Sybil's childhood. The same shabby rose worn, showing a neat patch or two. The brass fire-screen, limed and lustreless with much polishing. The home-made mat lamp-shade—a crewel and bobbin work over—than the old fashioned by Sybil's fingers.

She saw her own reflection, slim and graceful. She saw her own beauty and smiled back at it mockingly. Of what avail it, she thought, when she was always alone?

HON. 'BOB' COOK GUEST OF MOIRA CHAPTER R. A. M.

Hydro Commissioner Proposes To Amalgamate Three Systems

"A gala night indeed was Hydro Night at Moira Chapter R.A.M., No. 170, R .C. last evening. Following the regular meeting the brethren repaired to the dining hall where a sumptuous banquet awaited them. During the progress of the banquet, toasts, responses, songs and instrumental solos and ensembles were enjoyed by all present."

The most important event of the evening was the response to the toast to the guest by Bro. the Hon. Robt. Cook, M.P.P.

The Grand Chapter of Canada toast was proposed by Comp. W. H. Gerrie and responded to by Bi. Ex. Comp. H. J. Clarke. The toast to the guest was proposed by Ex. Comp. W. C. Mikel and responded to by Bro. the Hon. Robt. Cook, M.P.P. The toast to the visitors was proposed by Ex. Comp. G. T. Cherry and responded to by Bi. Ex. Comp. C. A. Walters.

Solos by Comp. J. D. Bankier and Comp. J. Arnold Thompson, violin solos by Bro. Cecil Searles, a duet by Comps. Bankier and Thompson, and an instrumental trio composed of Comp. E. C. Dolman and Bros. Searles and Searles all combined to make the evening such a huge success.

Companion W. H. Gerrie was the first speaker, proposing the toast to the Grand Chapter of Canada. This toast was ably responded to by Bi. Ex. Comp. H. H. Clarke, who explained the workings of the Grand Chapter. "The Grand Chapter is in a very flourishing condition", the speaker stated. "Twenty-five thousand eight hundred and fifteen members compose the Grand Chapter. $161,556.19 was taken in, and the expenditures amounted to $13,886.32 last year.

Excellent Companion W. C. Mikel then arose and introduced the speaker of the evening, the Hon. Robt. Cook.

"We have a distinguished guest with us tonight," Ex. Comp. Mikel stated. "I don't know whether the young man of other days ever thought he would hold such a high office in the Hydro".

The speaker told of different incidents in the parliamentary life of Brother Cook.

"There have been three outstanding characteristics of our Guest—his modesty, his willingness and his straightforwardness, and his studiousness." It is generally reckoned that Mr. Cook is the most prominent and important figure in the Hydro Company today. He is one of the ablest debaters in the House. I think no man in the House has the confidence of the members as much as our Guest has. We ought to feel highly pleased that he is a member of our Party and a resident of this part of the Province."

Hon. Robt. Cook, M.P.P.

"This is the first opportunity I have ever had of addressing a Masonic gathering in Belleville," stated the speaker in his opening sentence. "There is as much true christianity taught in the Craft lodge as in any Church today."

This Country today is very new in its history. It seems like a fairy story to recall the progress the Power Commission has made in the last fifteen years. In 1911 we had a total investment of $4000,600. Last year the investment had grown to a total investment of $276,000,000. Last year we distributed a huge quantity of horse power. The Commission has accumulated $18,000,000 in reserves. The revenue by the Commission was $18,000,000, and the municipalities of Ontario $9,000,000. Out of this total development of 960,000 Horse power 95% was used in urban spaces up to four years ago. In October 1923 the 1st subsidy of $2,250,000 was paid by the Government for rural distribution. In 1924 they nearly doubled the $425,000. The Government now pays out about $2,500 a day for rural distribution.

In 1916 the Government purchased the Central Ontario System for about $5,000,000. Previous to the Government doing the system, the other companies had entered into several contracts with different companies."

The speaker told of the various assets of this old Company.

"As soon as the Government took over the System they at once revised the rates and decreased the rates more than half. During the ten years between 1916 and 1926 no provision has been made to retire the debts of this system. It then became necessary to again revise the rates of Central Ontario. We had to secure from this system an additional $1,000,000 for a sinking fund. The unsympathetic event to have forgotten that but the Commission enforced the original rates they would have made a saving of $1,-2,000. He never made a saving of $6,000 in those ten years.

An additional charge under the new revision is necessary to provide for a sinking fund and interest charges. Can any intelligent Scarlet today tell you were under the old Seagrave system. There has been an increase of 110% in home power production since the Government took over the old system.

My own personal opinion is that the best solution for the industrial areas, location in Central and Eastern Ontario is to amalgamate the Hydro, the St. Lawrence and the Central Ontario systems. It did seem to me that if we amalgamated these systems that the Commission could then say to the Municipality,—"We can give you reasonable rates that will encourage industrial development."

In my humble opinion Eastern Ontario today holds the whole industrial progress of the Province of Ontario. It seems to me that it is the Government's duty to build up industry in Central and Eastern Ontario. One need have no fear for the future of Hydro."

The speaker showed how the large cities of Ontario were paying less today for power.

"Today when science is showing that nothing is made in vain, then we say that no man is worthy of being called a Canadian who is unwilling to accept the burden that our opportunities present."

The following are the visitors last night—Ex. Comps. Houston, Madoc; Wright, Madoc; Cumming, Campbellford; Tinney, Campbellford; Purtill, Madoc; Green, Campbellford; Gillespie Morrisburg; Smith, Madoc; E. G. Smith, Madoc; Findlay, Quinte Preinship; Bablow, Quinte Preindship Kinnear, Quinte Priendship. Herity, Quinte-Priendship; Rt. Ex. Comp. H. J. Clarke, Belleville; Rt. Ex. Comp. C. J. Walters, Napanee; Rt. Ex. Comp. C. A. Walters, Napanee; Rt. Ex. Comp. W. J. Hill, Madoc and thirty - four other visitors.

THERMIT WORK IS REVIEWED BY CITY ENGINEER

Belleville, May 2nd, 1927.

The Mayor and Members of the Council, Belleville, Ontario.

Re, Moira River Flood Prevention Gentlemen,—

The work of treating the Moira River at its junction with the harbor with the Bay of Quinte with Thermit was carried out under the direction of Dr. Howard C. Barnes in accordance with the council's orders and the results noted by a study of definite observations.

Subsequent to the demonstration of February 9th, when 600 pounds of Thermit were discharged under the ice surface of the harbor, the council received and adopted a report from Dr. Barnes and he was engaged to carry to completion his treatment of the river on the instructions of the council.

Between Wednesday March 2nd and Saturday, March 5th, Dr. Barnes discharged 10 100-pound containers of Thermit in the deep portion of the channel from the front of the jam at Shuh Ice near the light house to a point within 1200 feet south of the railway bridge and the 5 remaining containers in approximately two parallel lines 50 feet and 100 feet south of the railway bridge. The purpose of this discharge was to remove the undermass of slush by combustion and dissolution and incite a movement of the waters of the Moira River from upstream into the main channel of the River, the expectation of this water movement being to remove the surface ice which was then 2 1-2 feet in thickness, 5 tons of Calcium Chloride were placed in two running a chester work approximately of 50 feet square underneath and to the north side of the railway bridge between the third and fifth piers from the east end of the bridge. The action of the Calcium Chloride dissolved the surface ice along these lines and enabled the heavy ice under the bridge to be readily moved through whenever a mass from upstream exerted any pressure against it.

A line of cinders about 15 feet in width and spread very thin was placed on the surface ice directly over the main channel and extending from the railway bridge 1800 feet south. The action in this case was the absorption of the heat rays from the sun and the consequent penetration of the surface ice and the weakening of the ice thus concluded the actual operations by Dr. Barnes.

The results were as follows: An observation was taken daily of the elevation of the top of the surface ice at a point in the front centre of the east end of the Canadian Pacific bridge. The water level under the ice was also noted. Following the discharging of the Thermit March 2nd to 5th there was a subsidence of 9 inches in forty-eight hours which increased to sixteen inches at the end of the week.

The lines of calcium chloride did very effective work in weakening the face ice. As soon as the increased pressure from above the field treated was exerted the lines of cleavage showed themselves to follow directly along the calcium chloride treated line, in the case following the line for a distance of 150 feet and the whole mass moving out without any breaking of the ice field. This is particularly noteworthy inasmuch as the field ice line was broken was that which had been adjacent to and under the railway bridge where it was not possible for the sun rays to penetrate.

The slush ice from the Light House to the railway bridge which was at the beginning of the treatment from twelve to fifteen feet in depth and very lightly consolidated was observed by a test made every few days in each of the holes where Thermit had been discharged. On Thursday, March 10th the report showed practically every hole clear in the main channel and the slush ice having all moved out. This moving of the slush ice permitted the free movement of the increased water flow from up - stream with its powers of erosion acting on the surface ice and the freedom of this movement of water permitted surface ice from up stream being carried underneath the solid field of ice in the harbor.

We found in testing on March 9th that the surface ice from upstream was present in some of the Thermit holes about 100 feet below the railway bridge. The observations noted in the area between the railway bridge and the lower bridge indicated by the settlement of the ice that the mass of the slush formation had moved out and except in the shallow portion of the river there was a marked stream underneath the surface ice.

The effect of the sudden removal of the slush ice supporting the surface ice caused fractures radiating over the whole surface field and extending north as far as the foot bridge and even beyond. These fractures together with the rapid stream movement produced an effect that permitted blocks of surface ice to move down stream without having to wait for some marked pressure of field ice above. From day to day the action became more pronounced, so that from Monday noon, March 5th until Sunday noon, March 11th, the whole river from a point 200 feet above the foot bridge to the north side of the railway bridge emptied itself of surface ice. The surface ice itself floated down stream and disappeared under the ice field in the harbor. The whole action of the removal of the surface ice in the vicinity of the river and the Pool Bridge and the railway bridge was, in my opinion, the result of the suspension of the mass of Thermit.

The flooding of a portion of the city in the years 1918 and 1920 occurred in the period from March 20th to March 25th in each year, when the river was discharging only 1800 cubic feet of water per second in 1918 and 2000 cubic feet of water in 1920. The peak discharge occurred on the 4th of March, 1927, when a rate of 3000 cubic second was discharged and on March 29th, 1926, when 7150 cubic feet per second was discharged. It was noted that the peak in 1918 came fifteen days after the flood commenced and in 1920 eight days after the flood commenced. In 1927 on March 12th the condition at the foot bridge on the River Moira was clear of ice from the railway bridges to the north end of the bridge, indicating a stream discharge on only 1800 cubic feet. This second stream discharge that occurred eight days later in 1918 at the beginning of that tremendous flood and which caused more loss than the flow which created the flood in 1920 at a period eight days later. From records from the Dominion Government Gauging Station show a discharge of 1800 cubic feet on the 12th of March, 1927, which was practically the peak flow for the year, approximating the 18 peak flow coming sixteen days earlier. The 1927 peak exceeded the 1920 peak by 1000 cubic feet per second and came ten days earlier. It is remarkable to note that in the years 1918 and 1920 with the advantage of ten days more time to destroy and weaken the ice cover, and the ice field in the river above the lower bridge south was a solid and unbroken field of ice and the volume of water started to came from the north it brought with it the upper fields of ice, the moving energy of which are not likely in reaching into and breaking up the solid ice field. This ended in the jam and when the waters started to rise produced the flood. The ice field in the river which fortunately did not break was about 1000 feet in width and 1 1-2 miles long on April 11th. At this time the river from the lower bridge to the railway bridges was also solid ice and the slight movement from upstream filled the river to the top of the pavement with fast formation of ice. Between the 1927 condition after the river was treated with Thermit discharged all the ice that came from above landed on Dam. Canadian Dam and Cerbyville Dam with no appreciable rise in the river beyond the normal winter elevation. The very heavy rains of the end of December 5th and Feb. 20th brought a great menace of slush ice which rised the harbor and river. An extremely early release of flood waters from the north brought the ice field over 3 weeks earlier than in the years 1918 and 1920 and yet we find that the channel was so successfully cleared of obstruction of the under slush that there was not the remotest possible danger of a flood in any part of the coming of the upper ice.

There was a very low stream flow, comparatively speaking, to induce this movement in the breaking up of this ice field and when the first ice came down from Lasier's Dam on Monday morning of the 14th and the Corbyville and Cannifton Dams discharged their ice fields downstream on the morning of the 16th, and the Corbyville of the ice was carried into open water to a point 300 feet south of the rail way bridge and with 8 feet clearance below the railway bridge cinders.

W. C. C. ELECTED 1927 OFFICERS

Mrs. F. C. Anderson President—Mrs. W. N. Ponton First Vice-President

Greatest enthusiasm for the coming year's work and satisfaction for the work accomplished last year, marked the 14th annual meeting of the Women's Canadian Club held yesterday in the Armouries at which the following officers for the ensuing year were elected:

Hon. President—Miss Hurley.

President—Mrs. F. C. Anderson nominated by Mrs. E. N. Baker, seconded by Mrs. McColl.

1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. W. N. Ponton, nominated by Miss Stewart Mason, seconded by Mrs. Wills.

2nd Vice-Pres.—Miss Jessie McCle.

Secretary—Mrs. John Kerr.

Asst. Secry.—Miss Flora Chandler.

Treasurer—Mrs. Nation.

Councillors—Miss Mason, Mrs. Demorandie, Mrs. Baker, Mrs. McColl, Mrs. Marshall, Miss Lazier, Miss Hurley and Mrs. Wills.

The New President

In accepting the nomination Mrs. Anderson, who came to the city four years ago from Ottawa, said that she felt reluctant in attempting to fill the position heretofore so ably filled by Miss Hurley and appreciated the honor conferred upon her by the Club in electing her. Mrs. Anderson was assured of the co-operation of the executive which had, Miss Hurley contended, been largely responsible for her success in the office of president.

In her report Miss Hurley referred to the six pictures of the Fathers of Confederation which the Canadian Club have secured to place in the six city schools celebrating Confederation Year. A card has been filled out to accompany each picture telling through whom the pictures had been secured. During the past year the retiring president said nine lectures had been given and all had been thoroughly appreciated.

The report of the Secretary and Treasurer each proved a successful year concluded.

During the coming year the Club will consider the offer of the Ontario Society of Artists to have an exhibition in the city.

Confronted by the problem of selecting twenty-five of the most beautiful girls in Hollywood, Irving Cummings, Fox Films director who wielded the megaphone during the making of "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl", which opens to-morrow at the Belle Theatre, was forced to admit that this was the most difficult assignment of his theatrical career. Miss Dorothy Janney has the starring role. Allan Simpson is the male lead.

"I needed two dozen girls," said Cummings, "and inasmuch as they have to be used as models for the show rooms of the biggest lingerie houses in New York, it was very necessary that they conform to the highest standard. Face, form, mannerism,—all had to fill the requirements to the letter.

PLANT MAPLES NEXT JULY 1ST

Ottawa, May 3.—The National Committee for the celebration of the Jubilee of Confederation throws out the suggestion that included among the ceremonies on July 1 shall be the planting of a Canadian maple in some central spot in every place where celebrations are held. Already certain parts of the Dominion have decided to do this, and it is the opinion of the National Committee that the ceremony should be universal.

It has further been decided that a young and lusty Canadian maple be sent carefully packed to Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, who is now visiting Australia, and that early in May, Lapointe plant the tree at Canberra, where the new Commonwealth Parliament building is to be.

For Canadian Confederation planting it is suggested that seeds be now planted in pots and that on the day of Jubilee, when the young plant has grown a few inches, the pot be broken and the maple placed in the earth

SHAUGHNESSY TO SCOUT FOR TYGERS

Montreal, May 3.—After five weeks' rest in the spring training camps of the Harvard and Williams football squads, where they developed the players in the use of the lateral pass, Frank Shaughnessy rugby coach at McGill University, returned to-day more convinced that the time is not far away when there will be little difference between American football and Canadian rugby, a practical uniformity which will come through each game taking features of the other.

Shaughnessy spent three weeks during the Harvard squad at the lateral passing game, a feature of Canadian rugby recently adopted by United States footballers, and two weeks with Williams, leaving the latters' camp Saturday. The McGill coach found the American players unaccustomed to the lateral pass and the rugby men will take some time to get them to use it to any extent.

Toronto, May 3.—Hon. George S. Henry, Ontario Minister of Highways has issued a warning to "snatch their step" in future to motorists who are inclined to take liberties with the rate of speed when they are away from their own particular jurisdiction.

Mr. Henry stated that at the quarterly meeting of the eastern conference of Motor Vehicle Administration, just concluded in Philadelphia, Ontario entered into an agreement whereby members of the conference, comprising some fifteen states and provinces agreed to suspend or revoke the license of residents who commit an offence in another state or province which, if committed at home, would result in such cancellation.

SPORTS

DODGERS AGAIN TROUNCE GIANTS

Chicago Bunch Hits In Fourth To Defeat Cincinnati

New York, May 4.—Something really ought to be done about the younger generation before it's too late. They're becoming quite uncontrollable. Every sport there will be no respect for age and experience at all. Yesterday at the Polo Grounds the dignified and doughty Giants were humbled again by those impetuous youths from Brooklyn. This thing can be carried too far and it's just about reached the limit.

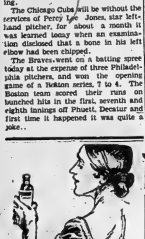

It was the third successive setback that the Robins have handed the mighty man of McGraw and it ceases to be either smart, cute or funny.

Overcoming a seven-run lead Pittsburgh slugged out an 11-10 victory over St. Louis in the Smoky City yesterday. Earl Smith, Pirate catcher, had two home runs and his single in the ninth with three on base brought in the winning tally.

Chicago bunched hits in the fourth, sixth and ninth innings yesterday to defeat the visiting Cincinnati team, 4 to 3. Gillenwa, home-run with a man on tied the score in the fourth after the visitors had scored three hits with two outs. Grimm then drove in the run in the ninth which put Chicago ahead and started the rally in the sixth inning.

The Chicago Cubs will be without the services of Percy Lee Jones, star left-hand pitcher, for about a month it was learned today when an examination disclosed that a bone in his left elbow had been chipped.

The Braves went on a batting spree today at the expense of three Philadelphia pitchers, and won the opening game of a Boston series, 7 to 4. The Boston team scored their runs on bunched hits in the first, seventh and eighth innings off Phuett, Decatur and first time it happened it was quite a joke..

ATHLETICS AND YANKS BOTH WON

St. Louis Even Count With Cleveland Indians—Tigers Halt Sox

Washington, May 4.—The merry tacksmen of Philadelphia are hanging rimly on to the Yankees coat tails, ut the Hugmen managed to keep one hop ahead of their pursuers. While he Athletics were winning again yesterday, the Yanks pinned a 6-4 defeat n the Senators, leaving matters status uo, so to speak.

Mr. Huggins' youngsters collaborated in the week's third straight victory. Larrupping Lou Gehrig smacked an infield single in the eighth which rove in the winning run. George Pipgras started his first game of the season and lasted until the middle of the seventh, when Deacon Wiley Moore, another virgining, came in to annoy the Senators for the second successive day.

In the opinion of the Senators, Mr. Moore ought to be suppressed as a public nuisance. He is rapidly becoming irritating if not actually oppressive. Squelching a Washington rally in the seventh, the deacon refused to tolerate any familiarities in the last two rounds.

At St. Louis the Cleveland Indians, smarting from a ninth-inning rally defeat by the Browns Monday, came back o even up the four-game series with a 5-3 victory. Pitcher Buckeye, of the Indians, went the full route, striking out five Browns, while Bullen, who started for St. Louis relinquished the mound after six innings in which he yielded eight hits and four runs. Vander held the Indians to one hit, a homer by Reis, in the last three innings.

The winning streak of the Chicago White Sox, which had extended through seven successive games, ended in Detroit, when the Tigers took the second game of the series, 5 to 1. Rip Collins outpitched Red Faber, whose wildness was costly, in the fifth inning, when the Tigers clinched the game with three runs. Faber walked three batters.

The Athletics made it two straight over the Boston Red Sox at Philadelphia, winning by a score of 7 to 2. The fifth inning.

TRY SALTS IF KIDNEYS HURT

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, there by often preventing serious kidney complications.

IMPERIAL ETHYL GASOLINE
Knocks out that Knock

IMPERIAL ETHYL

The Gasoline which eliminates "knocking" under all conditions

Makes present-day automobiles perform more efficiently

Be sure to differentiate between Imperial Ethyl and other so-called Anti-Knock Gasolines. It is because Imperial Ethyl contains Ethyl Brand of Anti-Knock Compound that it can be depended upon to eliminate knocking entirely—no matter what causes the knock. This compound was developed by General Motors Research Laboratories after eight years of scientific research which resulted in these two important discoveries:

1 That "knocking" is an inherent characteristic of all gasolines. What had previously been called a "carbon knock" or "ignition knock" or "engine knock" is in reality a fuel knock.

2 That "knocking" could be completely eliminated in gasoline by the addition of Ethyl Brand of Anti-Knock Compound.

So superior is Imperial Ethyl Gasoline to other anti-knock fuels that it has been adopted wherever unusual performance is required. That is why the United States Navy uses Ethyl Gasoline in its latest types of aeroplanes. That is why Ethyl Gasoline is used by the racing car drivers who are setting up new records. That is why Imperial Ethyl Gasoline is used by the Royal Canadian Air Force. That is why the Ontario Government uses Imperial Ethyl in its aeroplane Forest Patrol.

What Imperial Ethyl Will Do in Your Car

1 It will end all carbon trouble and make carbon formation an asset.

As carbon forms, both temperature and compression (pressure) are increased. Imperial Ethyl Gasoline neutralizes the higher temperature and the increased compression becomes increased power.

2 It will give you more power, particularly on hills and heavy roads.

3 It will make your engine operate more smoothly.

4 It will reduce gear-shifting.

5 It will increase acceleration, making your car easier to handle in traffic.

6 It will eliminate "knocking" under all driving conditions.

7 It will reduce vibration and engine wear and tear.

8 It will save the expense of carbon removal.

9 It will give you more power from each gallon of fuel that you use.

The Irony of Love

By Charles Garvice

"You can see her for a little while, Strandyre. I was going to say you must be very quiet, but what is isn't necessary; she is quite unconscious."

He went up with her; as they approached the bedroom he noticed the faint odor of disinfectants and saw that a large sheet which had been soaked in an antiseptic was stretched across the corridor. When Maude stopped at a door, he glanced at her questioningly.

"Why, this is your room, isn't it?"

"Yes, she replied, "it is large and airy, and faces south and is the best one for her."

For a moment or two he stood in silence, then he laid his great hand, so lightly and gently as if it were a feather, upon Eva's hot brow, and spoke her name in a whisper. She had been tossing to and fro when they came in, but at his touch she gradually grew quieter, and presently Rafe's heart was wrung by her voice wailing, almost inaudibly:

"Blunderbore! Oh, Blunderbore! I haven't tried to for—"

He put down on his knees, and, putting his arm around her, drew her toward him, so that her hot cheek lay against his. Lady Maude and the nurse exchanged glances of doubt and anxiety, and the nurse took a step forward as if to interfere, but she stopped cheek her head, and raised her brown at Lady Maude, as if to imply that it should be as well for them not to inter vene.

At first Eva moved restlessly, with that terrible, inarticulate look of hich fever but presently the doctor excited, and she lay perfectly quiet, her burning face pressed against Rafe's cool one.

"Do you think she knows Lord Strandyre?" Maude asked, in a whisper, of the nurse.

"No, my lady," replied the nurse decidedly. "She is quite unconscious how to explain it—there is something nothing in the contact with real friends and health. I have frequently noticed it! Very often she has shown more reliefs when we have taken her out or conducted her, but with loved friends—— I suppose it is the feeling of confidence, the firmness of the hold—a kind of magnetism.

"I think I understand," said Maude in a low voice. "See, she looks as if she were actually asleep."

The nurse went round to the man and the child, and Rafe took his eyes from Eva's face for a moment and glanced up at the nurse as if forbidding her to interfere.

"She's all right," he said huskily. "Leave her alone, don't touch her."

At intervals Eva grew restless, and the tossing and jerking recurred; but when this change came Rafe whispered all sort of tender endearments and soothing words in the accent of his voice alone —for she could have understood — in words—perhaps he took to understand again. Both Maude and the nurse knew that so still, so constraining an attitude must be trying intensely painful to Rafe; and at last Maude approached and laid her hand on his shoulder and whispered:

"You cannot sit any longer like that Strandyre. You must take her."

"Not yet," he said. "I can stick it for a long while to do. Sit by me, Maude," he added quickly, almost fiercely.

Maude let her outstretched arm fall to her side and went away. Another quarter of an hour passed. Rafe's back felt numb, were breathing a drop or two of sweat gathered on his brow; but the tenderness in his eyes the firmness of his hold—and his gentleness—never for an instant relaxed the nurse came round to him, bent over the child with a keen, searching look; then, with an air of wonder and relief, she whispered:

"She's asleep my lord; she's quite sound asleep! You may put her down safely, you will not disturb her."

Rafe still hesitated, was still reluctant to move; but Maude and the nurse insisted upon his doing so; and very slowly and cautiously they laid Eva in the bed again. Rafe sank into a chair and, leaning back, stretched himself, but retained his hold of the little burnt his hand. He was still seated there, Eva's hand swallowed up in his, when the doctor came in and Rafe had to make way for him. They told him of

Thousands In Ontario Praise Husky Treatment

As This Medicine Relieves Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowel Ailments and Builds Health.

Thousands in Ontario and throughout the Dominion are praising Husky, the reconstructive tonic and blood purifier preparation for the relief of the Stomach, liver, kidney and bowel ailments and their accompanying ills. This praise is being heaped upon Husky by those who have given this medicine a thorough trial and have received relief from such common ills as headaches, dizzy spells, indigestion, gas and sour stomach, constipation, catarrhal affections, rheumatic pains, nervousness, unsound sleep and weak, run down conditions. Others are praising Husky for its value as a spring tonic as it builds up the system as it relieves.

Mr. Irons' Case

Husky users can best tell of what this medicine will do and therefore we cite the case of Mr. Henry J. Irons, 55 Howie Ave., Toronto, who tells as follows of his case and how Husky helped:

"For the past two years my health had been badly run down. I suffered from stomach trouble. Indigestion came after almost every meal. Gas would form on my stomach, causing a bloated feeling. I thought I would choke during these spells. I suffered greatly from headaches. Constipation added to my misery. My nerves were badly run down and I was restless and unable to sleep well. I had a weak, tired feeling.

"Thanks to Husky, I am feeling like a new man. This medicine certainly helped me wonderfully. The stomach trouble is relieved and my food digests well." Gas no longer forms on my stomach after meals and that bloated feeling and choking spells are things of the past. I enjoy regular bowel action and headaches are no more affecting me. My nerves are stronger than in years. I can sleep as sound as a log.

"I am enjoying a new feeling of health and strength. I am still taking Husky—it is worth its weight in gold. That is the way I feel about it. I certainly recommend this medicine to all who suffer. I am sure it will help them."

At Good Drug Stores

Every person in this city suffering in any way Husky is recommended to relieve, is urged to begin the Husky treatment now. Husky can be obtained at good drug stores everywhere.

the extraordinary effect Rafe's presence and holding of the child had produced, and waited anxiously for the doctor's opinion.

"She is decidedly better," he said, "but she is not out of the wood yet. Her pulse is, of course, extremely beautiful; oh, extremely so! But the fever is still there, though her temperature has come down. She is very weak of you, I am told, Lord Strandyre."

"That is so," said Rafe. Say, now doctor, you've got to pull her through; you've got to!"

QUESTION FOR MANAGERS

Monsrel, May 4.—A theatre manager's life is no bed to roses. This was learned at the Laurier Palace Theatre probe yesterday when many of Montreal's Theatre managers followed one another to the witness stand and revealed what happens behind the scenes. The manager of a moving picture house had trouble determinating whether the ten children who trailed behind a man who purchased tickets for them were his legitimate offspring while the head of two local legitimate houses found the unions his chief source of worry.

NO ONE NEED STARVE

Ottawa, May 4.—"Nobody needs to starve in Canada. There is work for all if they are not too lazy to find it, at least enough to give them a decent living," declared Judge Roland Miller in sentencing Roland Archambault, "vagan Falls, to six months on a charge of obtaining $50 under false pretenses.

Goyer Brothers Expected Home This Afternoon ---- Distilleries Were Pestered By Politicians

GRAY CLAIMS HE WAS TOO SHAKY TO HELP IN STRANGLING SNYDER

Wife Asked Him To Hit Her On The Head To Help Story

FAKED BURGLARY

Took Two Drinks and Left Her To Face Police

New York, May 5.—Henry Judd Gray began his ordeal of cross examination by counsel for his co-defendant, Mrs. Ruth Snyder, with unruffled manner. In the first few moments of cross examination, he was forced to waive his seat and demonstrate how he had beaten Albert Snyder, over the head with a window weight. He did this without apparent emotion, lifting his arms and bringing them down like a wood chopper.

Mrs. Snyder averted her gaze during the demonstration and kept her head bowed until the room recess. Gray, in answer to question, said he joined Mrs. Snyder in the crime because she "sounded and dominated" him. "The dominance began about last May. The power over him grew gradually.

Direct examination of the self-confessed salesman, was concluded this morning and cross examination was begun by Mrs. Dana Wallace, counsel for Mrs. Snyder. Gray told in an unemotional voice of trying to strangle Snyder and his wife after he and the Art Editor's wife had beaten him unconscious and the had chloroformed him.

"But I couldn't do it" he said. "I was too shaky and intoxicated."

Both defendants seemed to have themselves well in hand after their collapse of yesterday when Gray told how the woman responded to his pleas of "moonie, moonie, help me" and asked her husbands fight for life by a mash weight blow from behind.

Gray today related how they burned their clothing and hid the sash weight in the basement of the house. "Then we went upstairs and into the room where Snyder lay," he continued. "She asked me if he was dead and I said I did not think so. She asked me to help her carry the body into the weld. I tried but I was so shaky and so intoxicated that I couldn't.

"I started to muss things up as if there was a burglary. She asked me if I would hit her over the head to help the burglary story, but I said I could not. I did tie her up however and took two drinks and left by the side door." He then told of his movements afterwards and the events leading up to his arrest. His confession was produced and he read it, omitting such parts as he asserted were untrue.

ST. THOMAS' TEA WELL ATTENDED.

Women's Guild Managed Splendid Function In Parish Hall

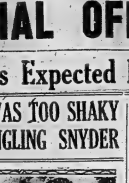

Breaking all records for attendance and for complete success in every way, the supper given last evening in St. Thomas' Parish Hall under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the Church attained by the ladies who was the means for over-four hundred persons between six and eight o'clock and all who came were delighted with the splendid manner in which the affair was run and the excellent service.

Four long tables ranged in rows, down the dining room hall were charmingly finished in silver vases of daffodils, yellow candles in silver candlesticks and were laden with every imaginable good thing to eat. Called out in relays of one hundred and thirty the visitors were served with cold meats of every kind, hot scalloped potatoes, pickles, salads, pies, cakes, jellied and hot coffee, all splendidly cooked and served in a most inviting manner. There was plenty of everything and everyone was urged to take advantage of each tempting viand on the table and not to hasten in leaving the table.

During the minutes of waiting an excellent programme was given by Miss Helen McCuaig, A.T.C.M. and Miss Potter which was thoroughly enjoyed.

WEATHER

DISTILLERS PAID FOR PROTECTION

Hiram Walkers Spent a Quarter Million In Three Years

Windsor, Ont., May 5.—An account headed "protecting trade marks" in the books of Hiram Walker and Sons, Walkerville distillers, covered payments to fight for government liquor control and against prohibition, small payments to political parties and payments for obtaining legal advice and "watching things at Ottawa." This was stated to the Royal Customs Commission this morning by Clement King director of Hiram Walker and Sons.

The amount of the payments charged to "protecting trade marks" over about three years was approximately $250,000. With certain payments charged to the books as "donations to association" they totalled approximately $250,000. Mr. King said that the donations were more or less pestered by politicians.

Your policy was to support candidates who supported you?" Hon. W. W. Rowell asked Mr. King.

"I think that is the policy of all of us" was the reply.

Mr. King said that the political contributions were made irrespective of party.

"Do the payments include sums for fighting prohibition?"

"Yes."

Did Not Go To Sea

Windsor, Ont., May 5.—The steamer "Killarney" never sailed down from Walkerville to the sea in winter, laden with Hiram Walker and Sons whiskey, bills of loading discovered by the Royal Customs Commission declare that liquor was shipped by the "Killarney" from Walkerville to St. Pierre Miquelon during the winter months. But today it was discovered that this portion voyage involving navigation of the Canal in winter, had not been made. Instead the liquor made the shorter, less perilous voyage across the Detroit river for United States consumption. W. H. Furlong, counsel appearing for certain of the liquor interests told the commission this morning that "there was no possibility of the Killarney having gone to St. Pierre" as stated in the bills of lading. The liquor had come across the river.

WOMEN WOULD DO BETTER SAYS AUSTRIAN DELEGATE

Geneva, May 5.—If women had sat around the treaty tables when the Great War was ended the peace treaties would have been more imbued with the idea of solidarity, Frau Emmi Fruendich, Austrian delegate, told the International Economic Conference today. She proposed the creation of a permanent international conference institution which would exercise control over trusts. This institution should include representation of all categories of the population, she said, including especially consumers and women. The latter she claimed, had deeper feeling than men for international solidarity. Dr. Neumann, Dutch Expert, declare that Europe must learn a lesson from the United States where labor gave a real return for high wage Europe, he said, was suffering from a plotara of public officials.

He acted as a trooper at the times of the Fenian Raid and was awarded a metal for bravery. For many years he acted as secretary of his Provincial District and County Lodges and also Scribe of the Royal Scarlet Chapter.

Besides taking a deep interest in Orange work Mr. Monroe has helped to organize the Sons of Scotland, the Cornwall Curling Club and the Board of Trade in that town. He has acted as Chairman of the Cornwall High School for many years. He has been secretary of the Public School for over sixty years and is an active worker in Church circles. He is truly a remarkable man and one of more Canada may be justly proud.

BRITISH PROTEST AIMED MAINLY AT HER DEBTORS

U. S. Reply is Brief Statement That Discussion Was Domestic

LETTER INACCURATE

Great Britain Is Not Receiving As Much As She Pays

Washington, May 5.—Britain has sought an official statement from the United States Government arising from the letter of Andrew M. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury to President Hibben of Princeton University regarding the British war debt, but Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State, in a two paragraph note has replied that the discussion was purely domestic and no desire for diplomatic exchanges is entertained.

Remove False Impression

London, May 5.—A responsible Down ing Street official said to the Associated Press today that Great Britain's war debts note to the United States was aimed primarily at her continental debtors, and was designed to remove false impressions conveyed on the continent by the letter of Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the United States treasury, in addressed to Princeton University.

Mr. Mellon's letter said Great Britain's schedule of payments for her debtors called for "a substantial amount more than he will pay to the United States".

The British government, this official said, had no critism to make of the brief reply made to their note by Frank B. Kellogg, United States secretary of state. Britain had no desire to enter the United States controversy over the war debts questions, it is stated here, but the issue was forced by what is regarded in official and governmental circles to be secretary Mellon's "misrepresentations". There, it is asserted, were creating a grave situation on the continent and could only be contradicted by a full statement of the British viewpoint in a formal note to the United States government. The note, now delivered, it is believed, cannot escape the attention of Great Britain's continental debtors.

It is pointed out that the fact that the British Government took no action regarding the Mellon-Hibben letter until now tithe letter was given out March 10 is evidence of Britain's desire not to be prejudiced.

The British government, it is asserted, had a clear opportunity to "expose Mr. Mellon's mistakes" weeks ago, but (Continued On Page Three)

BRANDON NEEDS RED CROSS HELP

Floods Spreading In Manitoba and Rain Continues To Fall

Winnipeg, May 5.— Financial and other assistance from the Red Cross is to be rushed to the flood victims at Brandon, Manitoba, as conditions warrant, Major J. W. Forbes, secretary announced before leaving for Brandon this morning. City officials are authorities there. The action was in response to an appeal from Brandon for assistance. It was stated that conditions were serious enough to demand attention.

Reports today indicate that west of Brandon and north of Virden, Man., conditions are becoming a serious one. Rain today having swollen the little Saskatchewan river at Minnedosa, Man., and the Qu'Appelle, the waters of Bear Creek, at Plapot, Sask., have washed out several bridges and damaged roads in the district. In the lowlands near Virden several families have been made homeless by the floods.

Should the youthful orator of Belleville be confidently expected to win the contest, he will enter the Dominion one later on. The contestants are not warned far ahead of the date for the competition so that they have no idea when they will take part in the next contest.

Mr. and Mrs. Sprague will accompany their son to Toronto.

WHAT POLICY?

The power policy of the King Government, so far as Ottawa River is concerned, seems deeply wrapped in mist. The other day Mr. Charles Dunning, Minister of Railways, announced that the lease of the Carillon water power to the National Hydro-Electric Company of Montreal, which expired on April 30, would not be renewed. But Mr. Dunning's words were scarcely in print before Mr. Henry Miles, president of the National Hydro-Electric Company, arose to correct the Minister. The lease, according to Mr. Miles has not been permitted to expire; it has merely been delayed in order that the Government may have more time to examine the company's plans before approving of them. And Mr. Miles volunteered the additional interesting information that there is a misunderstanding about the company's original lease granted in 1911 by the Laurier Government. He asserts that this lease did not merely, as claimed, authorize the development of 250 horsepower, but "covered all the surplus water of the Ottawa River."

This (if true) is very interesting. In any event, whether true or false, the Government's duty is to come out and tell the public exactly what the power position is on the Ottawa. It should tell precisely what the situation is in regard to the Montreal Hydro-Electric whether its lease has expired, or been merely delayed, and, in the event of the lease having expired, just what rights the company has under the Laurier lease.

This matter is altogether too important to the country, and especially to the people of Ontario, to be left in secrecy and doubt.

ON TO OTTAWA

At the time for the Conservative Convention in Winnipeg grows closer it may be readily seen that the party in Ontario simply awaits the word to fall in solidly behind the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson. This spirit was made apparent at the Great Victory Dinner to the popular premier in Toronto about two weeks ago. Mr. Ferguson gave no hint then as to his intentions although it was noted that his address was concerned with Dominion rather than Provincial affairs.

This feeling of personal loyalty to Premier Ferguson and faith in his leadership is justified by his courageous and sane handling of Ontario's affairs since he was elected to his present high office. No leader in the province's history has given more uniformly good government and his fearlessness in handling knotty problems has excited the admiration of his political opponents as well as his party followers.

The matter seems to rest here: that if Mr. Ferguson will accept the Dominion leadership of the Conservative Party he can have the united support of the Ontario stalwarts and the delegates from the banner province of Canada will have a good deal to say as to the final disposition of the leadership. Added to this support, Mr. Ferguson will go to Winnipeg with the prestige of his sweeping victory of last December. Quebec too, has the warmest feeling of admiration for the Ontario leader as he has worked hard during the past five years to cement the good feeling growing between the two great central provinces.

Ontario does not want to lose Mr. Ferguson, but will be willing to spare him for the higher post of Dominion leader and shortly Dominion premier. If he goes, there is in his cabinet a man who, we believe, can step in his place and carry on the traditions of the Government which he has established. From the inception of the Ferguson Government, Hon. W. H. Price, now Attorney General, formerly Provincial Treasurer, has been the Premier's right hand man and has had no small part in building up the wonderful record of the present Government.

Mr. Price took over the Province's finances from the corrupt and inefficient Raney-Drury-Smith combination and year by year since 1923 he has straightened out the muddle and strengthened the province's position. His four budget statements will stand always as models, displaying courage and resourcefulness in their conception and a keen grasp of the problems facing the province.

When Mr. Nickle made his abortive attempt to disrupt the Ferguson Government and resigned his post as Attorney General, it was Mr. Price who Mr. Ferguson asked to fill the gap and his choice has been more than justified. Mr. Price is now handling one of the most difficult departments of the government at a time of a particularly stress. The inauguration and proper functioning of the new liquor control policy will rest largely in Mr. Price's hands and no man is better fitted to bear the responsibility.

We believe that the Conservative National Convention will call on Mr. Ferguson to go to Ottawa and in that case the party could make no better choice than Mr. Price for the Ontario Premiership.

PURPOSE

Down the row, down the row,
Grimly tearing earth apart,
Comes the steely jaw of ploughshare
Gnashing at each blade and flower—
Devastating ruthlessly.

But does it break
That, which seemingly it ends,
Since the soil, hereunto sealed,
Waits a breath of earth itself?
And all the stately, nodding mustard
That made fields golden, fragrant;
Look—it is gone!
But, gone to make more fragrant still
The purple grape for which this hill
Is planted.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

After reading Agnes Marshall's birth day letter to the school children, one cannot help but hope that it will be a good many years before she has another such event.

—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

The location of the government liquor stores is not important. Wherever they may be, the customers will manage to get there just the same.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Clerk (in music store): "How long Hollis work in your last place?"

Girl Pianist: "From 'All Alone' to 'Valencia'."

"Willie did you turn on the gas in the living room as I told you?"

"Yes, Mother, can't you smell it?"

A brass band once visited a village in the far South and the people were delighted with it, but they couldn't make head or tail of the trombone, so they sent for old Moses Jackson, who claimed that he understood music.

Old Moses watched the performance of the trombone player for some time. Then he said with a solemn finality:

"Yek no notice of him, gennulmen. Dere's a trick in it; he don't swaller it every time."

Already many Bellevillians have assured him of their interest in the club and are eager to promote the scheme.

CANADIAN DAY AT ROCHESTER
Belleville Kiwanis and Knights of Columbus Arrange Outing

Canadian Day will be celebrated in Rochester, N.Y., on June 15th, when Kiwanians and members of the Knights of Columbus and citizens from Belleville and vicinity will invade the American metropolis. The scheme which was first proposed some months ago will take the form of an excursion across the lake on the Cobourg Ferry several hours to disport themselves and the pleasure seekers will have after their arrival.
The Kiwanis and Knights of Columbus are sponsoring the venture and every citizen will be given the opportunity to make the trip at a small cost.
A special train will leave Belleville at 7 a.m. and the ferry will land in Rochester shortly after the noon hour. The return boat will push off at 7 p.m. and the special train will arrive back in Belleville at midnight. The rate for the round trip will be $3.5° with children half fare.
George Lee and George Griffin are a special committee in charge and any further information desired will be given by them. An orchestra on the boat will supply music for dancing and an extra charter and a special dinner and buffet luncheon will be served on the boat.
The Clubs have worked hard to secure the special rates and the people of Rochester should be behind them.
The Kiwanis Club will be met in Rochester and will exchange the Canadian Jack for the Stars and Stripes and a short parade through the streets is being arranged.
The Trenton K. of C. will send a number of representatives along and movies of the trip will be taken.

BRITISH PROTEST

the controversy was then regarded as a purely domestic United States affair. To the opinion expressed in the British note, that Mr. Mellon's letter was in some instances inaccurate and that some declaration seemed advisable "to remove an unfortunate impression that has been created", Secretary Mellon countered with a lengthy statement devoted to the defense of his Hibben commutation and the reiteration that cancellation of war debts would place an unjust burden upon the people of the United States.

Errors and Inaccuracies
The British note specifically declared that in no circumstances will Great Britain receive from reparations and interallied war debts, taken together, more than she pays to the United States. Indeed it was not the desire of the British Government to retain for its country anything out of receipts from reparations and interallied war debts.
Citing what the British Government regards as errors and in accuracies in Mr. Mellon's statement, the note expresses "trust that the United States Government will take steps to remove the unfortunate impression that has been created" by the issuance of Mr. Mellon's statement.
Stating that the British Government was preventing its considerations of the war-debt problem "in the contentious or controversial spirit," the note declares that, "on the contrary, their desire is to maintain and to promote a friendly understanding between the two great English-speaking nations on whose co-operation great issues for peace and progress of the world depend.

FLOODING THE HOME WITH WIFELY TEARS

"He was such a Wonderful Man! Every time Agnes cried he would gather her into his great strong arms and soothe her just as if she were a little baby.

And she cried quite often!

"For I've always been so sensitive," she writes. "All my family realize that. They know that the least little thing just about breaks my heart. I don't cry like some girls do, because they're angry. I am never angry. But I cry because I am sad. I feel things so acutely, particularly when I love anyone. Of course, I don't mean that I cry at like time, but I do quite often.

"Before we were married Dan seemed to understand all that. There never was a dearer, more considerate lover. Mother often said she felt so relieved because I was marrying Dan because at last she was sure that I would be in good hands. But, oh, she feels so different now.

"We have been married only seven months, but Dan has entirely changed. If he ever sees the tears rise to my eyes he gets perfectly furious. Then, of course, I simply lose control of myself because I am so nervous. Last night was the worst of all. We had a little argument at the dinner table. I guess I haven't been very prompt with the meals, but, he had no right to speak to me the way he did. And when I began to cry he got right up and put on his hat and went out and didn't come back until two in the morning.

"I was desperate, I cried until I was sick and then I phoned mother and she came over, and stayed with me. You had better believe she said some things to Dan Collins that he won't forget in a hurry. But instead of being sorry, he actually yelled at her and told her it was all her fault for raising me like that.

"I can hardly see to write this. If I had known marriage was going to be like this I certainly would never have married. Oh, Elsie, can't you advise me?"

Indeed, I can, my dear. . . . .

In fact, nothing would give me more satisfaction.

Go out at once and buy a nice thick bunch of blotting paper—about a dollar's worth. And as soon as you get it, sit right down and swallow it. Then maybe you'll be able to control your little tantrums.

Did I say tantrums? I did. And I meant tantrums. These crying jags of yours are no quivering reaction of a flower-like spirit. They're a regular hold-up game.

Some people chew the furniture and some people kick the cat and others take to drink when they want to beg the spotlight and get a lot of attention. But you just cry and cry—and CRY. And it surely did the trick until Mr. Dan came along.

I hate to break the sad news to you, but you're a spoiled girl. And now you're about to divest a perfectly good home into shreds and drown the love in a fine man's heart with your blubbering. Snap out of it! Wipe your eyes and brace up and be a woman.

You're out of the bainette now, and you're facing a great big world of reality. There's Real Trouble in that world—trouble that has like acid at brave hearts that never mean. There are women in that world who have just hurled their backs. There are homeless, jobless girls who haven't eaten a square meal for a week. There are frightened boys who are sleeping in packing boxes at night. There are men who are mustering their last strength to provide for their loved ones before incurable disease cuts them down. And there's your husband who has given up his carefree days and shouldered a big responsibility to make a home for you. All of these people are facing life with dry eyes and stiff lips.

And what are you doing?

You're crying all over the place. You make me tired.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of seventeen years. Everyone I can remember I have been very fond of acting, and now I would like to become an actress. Could you tell me how I might make my wish come true? I am willing to work my way up and suffer hardships, if I only knew how I could manage it.

I know you will help me but please do not tell me to change my views, for nothing will daunt me.

O. I. C.

O. I. C.: Indeed, I will not ask you to change your views. Acting as a profession stands just as high as writing and painting. However, I must caution you to be perfectly sure that your talent justifies the work and hard ships that you will have to endure. You can test your ability right there in your own town by joining the local dramatic club (organize one if none exists), and taking part in all of their activities. Perhaps there is a little Theatre there, which is a part of the Little Theatre movement, which is so popular now. You will find this tremendously helpful. Then there is the church. It always fosters a dramatic group, which plans entertainments and pageants throughout many times a year. The members of this group will appreciate your assistance and at the same time will give you an opportunity for acting. You will find their criticism very helpful. Then, too, there is always the local Y.W.C.A. which is always planning pageants and plays. So you see you can provide yourself with plenty of occasions for acting and testing your ability right there in your home town. If you have any certain talent, your friends and critics will soon realize it, and then it will be plenty of time for you to discuss with your family the next step in your dramatic career.

SINCLAIR'S

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN
By Mildred Barbour

It was Sunday night, the night of hospitality in the small town. Sybil could count on her fingers the hours up and down the street where groups of young people were gathered for sup per-parties. There would be victrolas going in those brightly lighted sitting rooms, and jokes and laughter—even a surreptitious dance, when the older folk had gone up-stairs to bed.

Sybil had never, in all her life, been asked to one of those parties. She knew that she never would be.

Rapid steps on the garden path caught her ear and, a moment later she heard the familiar slam. Almost immediately, the door to the sitting-room opened, and young Ted stood on the threshold. He breathed as if he had been running. His handsome face was rather white and there was a curiously reckless look in his bold eyes.

At sight of Sybil, he assumed a swagger which she knew was sheer bravado. He lit a cigarette, with an effort at ease of manner.

"Lo, kid. Where the mater?"

"Gone to bed," replied his sister staring at him.

He looked relieved.

"Good! I say, old girl, will you do something for me? Will you scuttle the old leather suitcase out of the attic?"

"Now? Tonight?"

He nodded. Puffing his cigarette into the fire, as if it did not taste good, and lighted another.

"I've got to beat it tonight—leave town."

"Why?"

"'Cause I'm in trouble. I say, hustle will you?"

CHAPTER 13

Fresh Food for Scandal

For a long moment, Sybil stared at her brother. Then she asked quietly:

"What do you mean by—in trouble?"

He turned away from her with a jerk, walked to the fire, and stood on the hearth-rug.

"You know that silly old idiot—Mrs. Diantha Fields?"

Sybil nodded. Mrs. Diantha Fields was by way of being a character in town. Widowed at the dangerous age and rich, she had set out to recapture her youth. Her hair was dyed, and rouge filled the wrinkles of her time-ravaged face. She had, moreover, assumed a sizeline, girlish air that made her big, matronly figure look both of her years and ridiculous.

"What about Mrs. Fields?" Sybil asked.

"Well, she's been pretty nice to me," Ted acknowledged. "Of course, I've kidded the old lady along a bit. One day she told me she had some extra money she'd like to invest in something that would bring her a big return, and she asked my advice. It just happened that I had a tip on a certain stock that looked like a sure thing. I thought I saw a way to make something good for us both, so I took her money. And, well, the market went blooey! That's all!"

"And you lost all her money?"

"All invested," he confessed. "Of course I little out, and when I saw I was cleaned, I blew the rest in a crap game down at Jake's place. I've been lucky shooting craps—made a couple of hundred one night." He shrugged and made a wry grimace. "There was sure a jinx on my trail with Fields's money. I lost every red cent."

"And now she's asking for it?"

"Asking for it! She's yelling for it! Swears I took it under false pretences. Says I gave her my word it was for investment in a legitimate business. If I don't come across with it, she'll tell the world tomorrow that I'm a thief, the old——"

Sybil didn't flinch before the ugly word. She had heard it before from Ted's lips. But the scorn and contempt in her young eyes stabbed him into a fierce defense.

"You know what she is!" he bolstered. "Silly, vain old goat. Did she think I was hanging around for her because was crazy about her dyed hair?"

MINING GOSSIP

It became definitely known today that McIntyre Porcupine Mines Limited, had acquired under options a consolidation of thirty claims in the Kamiskotia Cayer-Gold district comprising the groups known as the Grinston-Gilling property, the Mowat-Macaulay group and the Heffernan group. This territory lies adjacent to the Hipp-Lowe property which is under option to Noranda to the south, and the original Hollinger discovery group on which the Hollinger is conducting diamond drill operations to the north. The formation is said to be similar to that of the surrounding options McIntyre has now a total of forty-eight claims, or approximately two thousand acres of ground in the heart of Kamiskotia. Eighteen of these claims were of their own staking and it is understood the remaining thirty, composed of the recently-optioned groups, were acquired on favorable terms.

One of the properties in the Cadillac Township section of the Quebec mining field is to be operated this summer by a New Liskeard group under the name of the Pandora Syndicate. The claims are known in the district as the Meers properties. They comprise 880 acres about three miles directly east of the O'Brien Mines' operations in this field.

Chicago, May 5—Material fresh upturns in wheat resulted today further adverse weather northeast and southwest as well. Crop comment from Typical domestic, spring wheat territory was that the season is late and conditions must be favorable hereafter to make an average yield. Starting 3-8 cents to 3-4 to 7-8 cent higher wheat scored some additional gain. Corn, oats and provisions were relatively easy, corn opening 1-4 to 3-4 cent advance but later receding to below yesterday's finish.

A new Company will shortly take over the affairs of Tewagmac. It is a condition of the agreement between parties involved that the authorized capital of the new Company will be equal to at least 75 per cent. of the ore reserve in sight at the time of incorporation of the new Company. Fifty per cent. of the capital stock of the new company to remain in the treasury one third of the issued fifty per cent. to go to the Tewagmac shareholders, and two-thirds to N. A. Timmins Inc.

A factor of outstanding importance to shareholders of Tewagmac is that if the new company should require to sell treasury shares for purposes of development, the shareholders of Tewagmac have the rights to subscribe for shares as offered. This is a privilege which will probably be valuable to Tewagmac shareholders in that in such cases it is a recognized custom to sell treasury stock at a very attractive price when such is being sold to original shareholders who took the initial risk.

As mentioned a few days ago in this column Kirkland Lake Gold Mines are already benefitting from the new large ore-body of high-grade found quite recently. Now the information is given out that they plan to increase their production. Details are still lacking or, let us say indefinite so far. This new find adds years of production to the property with increasing profits to the shareholders. Unquestionably the stock will go higher and we recommend it as an outstanding speculative investment.

"Should be in every home" Says Mme. Villemaire

Three years of stomach and kidney disorders wrecked her health. Now fully recovered and feeling splendid, she thanks Tanlac

Mme. Eliza Villemaire lives at 632 St. Patrick Street, Ottawa. She is ruddy and robust, showing no sign of the distressed trouble she went through for three years. "No words can express what I suffered," she said recently. "At times I thought my body would break, and I could not even summon rest to set the table.

"My stomach was just as bad, for food would lie there like a lump of lead. I tried to bloat terribly, and at times could hardly catch my breath. Nervousness kept me awake half the night. I tried many remedies and treatments but though I spent a small fortune on them, nothing seemed to help me.

"I only wish I had taken Tanlac when my trouble first started for I certainly would have saved me a lot of suffering. The way my troubles disappeared after taking it was almost magical. It built me up and made me a new woman. Now my kidneys never bother me, I have free from all pain and my digestion is splendid. If I had my way I'd put Tanlac in every home in Canada. That's how much I think about it."

Don't neglect nature's warnings. At the first sign of trouble, take Tanlac, nature's own remedy, made from roots, herbs and barks. Your druggist has it—a bottle for today. Over 22 million bottles sold.

Ease and Convenience in Farm Work

The compact build of the Fordson enables it to be operated anywhere. The overall length is but 102 inches and the width 61¾ inches. It can be turned in a 21 foot circle. The controls are so easy and convenient to manage that a twelve year old boy can operate the tractor.

With all tanks full, the Fordson weighs only 2950 pounds. This light weight results in easier handling on every farm job. Soil packing is minimized, being actually less than one-fourth as much per square inch as when packed by the hoof of an average size work horse.

No other Tractor at any price has all the features of the Fordson.

THE MAKING OF THE DOMINION

The Dominion of Canada came into being on July 1st, 1867, but the site of the present city of Montreal was first visited by a white man, Jacques Cartier, on October 2nd, 1535.

This story of the intervening three hundred years is one of the most fascinating stories in the worlds history the story of New France and Acadia, the glory and romance of old Quebec the thrilling tales of the coureurs du bois and the brave deed and stubborn fights in defence of hardly-won possessions, the constant struggle for control of this new Land, culminating in the glorious victory of Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham, when the new empire finally passed for all time into British hands.

Many of the scenes of this wonderful story, in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, will be visited by the Kerr-Bryson Eastern Tour, which is to leave Toronto via Canadian National Railways on July 15th, 1927, a tour which will be replete with scenic romantic and historic interest. Descriptive leaflet will be promptly furnished on request to any agent of the Canadian National Railways, or to Mr Jas Kerr, B.A., 4 Beulah Ave., Hamilton, or A. E. Bryson, 44 Silverthorn Ave., Toronto.

BELL- THEATRE

Surely none of the older generation has forgotten "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl" It will lingers in their memory as one of the few of the better melodramas of a score of years ago. It had a real story and a logical plot and it was one of the outstanding successes of its day.

But who had thought to see it again and who would have thought it could prove an interesting entertainment to the sophisticated folk of our jazz age? But the miracle has been accomplished. Fox Films has taken this old melodrama, and brought it to life and up to date and under the masterly direction of Irving Cummings and a cast of stars including Madge Bellamy and Allan Simpson, have produced photodrama that is as replete with thrills and suspense as the old model, without any of its glaring inconsistencies.

"Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," as shown at the Belle Theatre at its first performance today, was a treat not soon to be forgotten. An absorbing story, a splendid cast and direction of a superlative kind held the audience breathless.

Coal - oil explosion caused the death of Charles Murray and three small children in his farmhouse near Swarth more, Sask.

GIANTS FINALLY DEFEAT ROBINS

St. Louis Lands On Pirate Pitchers Hard—Cubs Win

New York, May 5.—You may poke a Bengal tiger and still live to tell the tale. You may find a boa constrictor safe to play with. You may even arrange with a cop and yet retain your freedom, but anything can be carried too far. Even a worm will turn if mistakenly annoyed, and the Giants at last grew weary of being bested by those bar bandits from Brooklyn, known as the Robins.

They decided it was high time something should be done to keep the flying flock of Flatbush in its place. They came to that decision at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon and went about the business of doing it, but it took them ten innings to curb the Robin's arrogant winning ways.

St. Louis avenged Tuesday's defeat at the hands of Pittsburgh by hammering two Pirate hurlers on their home mound for an 8 to 3 victory. The win put the Cards at the head of the league.

It was a field day for Frankie Frisch. He collected two triples and two runs and took nine chances in the field with out a slip. L. Bell hit the only homer of the game.

Chicago blasted Pete Donahue and Jackie May off the Chicago hill in the third inning yesterday, scoring eight runs and easily defeating Cincinnati in a slugging match, 13 to 5. Kaufmann pitched his first game for the Cubs since being sent home from Cincinnati last week and was hit freely by the visitors and had to give way in the ninth inning when the Reds started a belated rally.

SENATORS TAKE THIRD FIXTURE

Washington Grabs Early Lead and Maintain it Throughout

Washington, May 5.—The more or less supine Senators arose with great dignity yesterday afternoon and knock ed the Yankees prostrate with one punch, winning the third game of the series, 7 to 4.

New York's representatives were off to a galloping start, but the Senators ran them dizzy in the same first inning, scoring 7 runs on nothing more substantial than six singles, one double, two triples and a hit batsman.

The Yanks were discouraged, but upheld and spent the remainder of the afternoon in spirited attempts to overhaul the for. The boys put on several sprints, but the closest they came to a rally was in the ninth when Robert Meusel faced E. Garland first on with the bases full, two out and three runs needed to tie.

At Detroit a grouping of hits by the Chicago White Sox with Gibson's wildness and one Detroit error resulted in the Tigers losing the third game of the series today, 11 to 5. Ted Blankenship, who started in the box for Chicago, was taken out in the seventh when the Tigers batted around. Connally, who relieved him, held the opposition safe for the remainder of the game.

The St. Louis Browns knocked Lewis and Shaute out of the box yesterday and won a home game from the Cleveland Indians, 13 to 3. The Browns garnered six of their runs in the sixth inning on five hits. Sisler also homed for them.

Rain today ended the Philadelphia game at Boston at the end of the third inning with the Athletics leading, 7 to 1.

TORONTO GRABS DOUBLE HEADER

Leafs Stretch String of Victories To Five—Sorrell Pitches

Toronto, May 5.—The Toronto Leafs stretched their winning streak to five straight games by winning both ends of the double-header from the Reading Keys to close the series here yesterday afternoon. Both contests were pitchers' battles, with the first going ten innings before the Leafs finally won out, 2 to 1, on Sorrell's hit, Spencer's sacrifice bunt, a walk to Lavoy and Bob Lamonte's corking single over second-base. The victory was Sorrell's fourth this season and his thirteenth consecutive since joining the Toronto club in June, 1926. He has yet to be beaten.

Lefty Faulkner and Jack Noble fought it out in the seven-inning affair, and the southpaw turned up winner by 3 to 1. Noble, a Toronto boy, pitching his first professional game in his home, got away badly in the opening inning, three singles and a hit-batsman giving the Leafs two runs. After that he twirled brilliantly and would not have been scored on again but for a passed-ball by V. Davis in the fifth, which enabled Spencer, who had doubled, to reach third. He later scored on an infield out.

Tight fielding featured both games with the veteran Goldie Rapp of the Keys playing in old-time form. Some of his stops were sensational. Andy Harrington was the Toronto star in a defensive way.

WOMAN SUFFERED TERRIBLY

Found Relief by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Remarkable Case

MRS. LEA DELORME
ST. ADOLPHE, MANITOBA

St. Adolphe, Manitoba. — "I was very weak and had great pains during my periods so that I could not sweep the floor. The pains were in the right side and extended to the left and then downwards. It seemed as if the body was heavy and upside down. It is for these troubles I took the Vegetable Compound. I saw about it in a paper and one woman prevailed on me to take it. It has helped me in every way, the pains are less, and I have more appetite. It is a pleasure to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to other women." —MRS. LEA DELORME, St. Adolphe, Manitoba.

Found Great Relief

Toronto, Ont. — "I am at the Change of Life with hot flashes, dizziness, weakness and nervousness. I had head noises and was short of breath. I was this way about six months when I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers. I have taken eight bottles so far and found great relief." —Mrs. H. J. Salmon, 161 Lauder Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Mrs. Carr Also Helped

Muncie, Indiana. — "I had inflammation and the doctor said I was in a very bad condition. My hips and back felt like knives cutting me. I suffered terribly and could not get around to do my work. I had indigestion and very bad headaches and could not sleep as I was so nervous. I took local treatments and they did me no good. I had always heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine and I thought it would be like all the others, but I found out after I took half a bottle as I have proved it wonderful. I am taking it yet and I can do all my work. I am feeling fine now, and it is your good medicines that have done it. I tell every woman of the good I get from taking the Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and from using the Sanative Wash. I don't intend to be without them." —Mrs. P. W. Carr, 720 West Jackson Street, Muncie, Indiana.

Such letters prove the great merit of the Vegetable Compound. These women know by experience the benefit they have received. Their letters show a sincere desire to help other women suffering from like ailments.

The Irony of Love
By Charles Garvice

Maude leaned against the stone railing of the terrace, her chin in her hand, her eyes fixed on the view before her, and in the silence between them, Hade was asking himself wheth er he had better tell her about Phenie He would have done so, openly and frankly enough, but for the fact that Phenie was so so speak, passing as his wife. He saw now, for the first time that the business was not altogether a joke, and that it had its serious side

But for this stupid misunderstanding and muddle the secrecy and concealment which Travers had insisted him to adopt it would not only have been quite easy, to tell Maude of Phenie's arrival, but to express a wish that Lady Maude should know her, and, indeed, ask her to come to the castle But now there would be so much to explain. And, besides, here, in the presence of Lady Maude, the whole incident assumed a different, even a sinister aspect. He drew the picture of Phenie from his mind and began to talk of her.

Maude told him how the child had arrived at the castle in her usual hasty and light-hearted frame of mind how delighted she had been to see Maude again, and how glad Maude was to have her.

"She was looking forward to your coming back to her to-day, Strantyre, Eva was not surprised that you were not here, she seemed to know that you were away at school, but in the innermost I got from her manner. But when I mentioned you to her, she became intrigued, as a matter it is Strantyre,' Strantyre' all day long With her she is very fond of you, thinks there is no one in the world like you."

"She is a kid, and doesn't know," said Rafe, with a sigh. "She'll know better when she grows up."

"She may," admitted Maude, with a not laugh, "but I don't think it's very likely. We women, even the youngest of us, are more constant, Strantyre, than you men give us credit for be ing."

He nodded and looked away, as he thought, with envy, of the man who would receive such constancy from her; and, after another silence, Maude left him.

The crisis arrived on the third day after Rafe's return and, acutely knowing where he was, he found himself pacing up and down the terrace, biting hard on his pipe, a pound in it, latticed and weak as he had felt after a certain big fight at Jimmie's club in which he had very nearly got the worst of it. Lord St. Ives came out to him, but neither spoke, and after a while, St. Ives, distressed and agitated by Rafe's terrible anxiety and suspense left the younger man alone.

The room in which Eva lay was too far off for Rafe to hear a sound in it, but he was listening for the opening of the door of the room before which he was pacing and presently he heard it, and he turned quickly to meet Maude. Her face was working, her eyes were full of tears, and she held out both her hands to him, her lips moving, but with no words coming from them. He gripped her hands and drew her a little nearer to him.

"Is—is it good news? Tell me!" he said hoarsely.

"It is all right, Strantyre," she said the words broken by a sob of relief and gratitude. She has pulled through she will get better, she is asleep, or exhausted from—"

"Thank God!" he groaned, in the gruff voice with which men strive to mask an almost overmastering emotion. "But look here," he said, after a pause, "you've always played out yourself; you're as white as a sheet, and trembling like a leaf—"

He still held her hands and he drew her a little nearer. In another moment his pity and his love would have been too much for him, and he would have clasped her to him! but, as he was fighting with the intense desire that racked him, he remembered Sunbarne, and, being a strong man as well as a gentleman, he released her hands and turned away.

"I came to tell you that the doctor thinks you may go up now," she said, nursing her hands against her eyes to force back the tears. "It would be well for her to see you when she wakes If she is worrying herself about you —"

"I'll come up with you," he said. "I bet she'll want to see you more than any of us."

To Be Continued

One hundred and thirteenth day of actual sittings concluded the freight probe by the Board of Railway Commissioners. Two and one-half tons of paper were used for written evidence, etc.

George White Mystery Remains Unsolved ---- Mississippi Floods Cover Five Million Acres

OVER 5 MILLION ACRES OF LAND NOW INUNDATED

Refugees Are Being Picked Off Tree Tops By Boats

TOWNS DISAPPEAR

Red Cross Camps Cut Off and Have to be Rescued

New Orleans, La., May 6.—The mildly terrible of the Mississippi still raced uncurbed over Northern Louisiana lowlands today after having overrun more than five hundred acres of farm and swamp lands on their mad rush for the Gulf of Mexico. The spread over eleven Louisiana parishes continued.

Bayville had disappeared and an urgent appeal was made for boats to remove residents from tree tops and the roofs of homes. Talulah and Hexhill-on were being invaded. Delta-Point stood on the levee, the tawny sheet. Dozens of smaller villages already had disappeared.

More than three hundred square miles had been covered by the Mississippi and its tributaries in Louisiana in the giant stream gathered its forces after their ravage over six other states.

Red Cross concentration camps were being cut off from their sources of supply and the expanding muddy flood threatened to envelop them. Rescued persons have refugees' train and are gradually they were removed from Delhi to Monroe. Seventeen thousand refugees had been assembled in Delhi from the flooded area between Macon Ridge, Sicily Island and Oak Ridge. The town of St. Joseph was slowly disappearing. Motor boats and skiffs replaced expensive limousines in the aristocratic river town.

Mr. C. M. Reid presided over the banquet and also offered his congratulations to Dr. Bishop upon the honor conferred upon him and intimated that on the college over which Dr. Bishop presides.

Principal C. W Stobbe

"I have a personal knowledge and familiarity with the work of Queen's, with the faculty, and the students, and consider it a great honor to be taken into the alumni of this great institution," said Dr. Bishop.

He said that the conferring of an honorary degree carries with it a "public compliment" in that it is said that the life of the recipient has, in some degree, reflected the ideals of the university.

In expressing his appreciation of the honor Dr. Bishop stated that such an honor was also some recognition of the Y.M.C.A. which he administered during the war, and was a recognition that the practical side of Christianity must take its place with the highest ideals of theological teaching.

"It is also a practical gesture towards a neighboring institution," said Dr. Bishop, who is the principal of Albert College, Belleville, "and in large part it is in that capacity that I have the greatest pleasure of accepting the degree you have conferred upon me.

BANCROFT CHAMBER COMMERCE ANNUAL BANQUET WELL ATTENDED

Belleville Speakers Stress Possibilities of the North Country

The banquet held at the Bancroft Hotel last evening under the auspices of the newly organized Chamber of Commerce for North Hastings, was attended by over seventy-five. Ex-Warden Walter E. Wiggins, president of the North Hastings Chamber of Commerce, acted as toastmaster and in the beginning of the banquet outlined the purpose of the banquet and announced that the new Chamber of Commerce already had a membership of sixty-four.

The first speaker was Mr. John Elliott, Manager of the Belleville Branch of the Standard Bank, who gave a splendid inspirational talk on the value of organization and how much this form of effort would be to the Community of Bancroft. He strongly advocated the patronizing of local business men by the citizens and expressed the opinion that community loyalty was one of the first essentials of progress. Mr. Elliott gave his hearers an instance of remarkable results obtained since these lines in Prince Edward Island. The speaker recommended that the newly formed Chamber of Commerce should link itself up with the Ontario Associated Board of Trade.

Mr. Elliott's address was listened to with deep attention and followed with an approving outburst of applause.

J. D. Hetty

Mr. J. D. Hetty, Manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, gave an address in which he endeavored to show that the principles of business methods applied to community development. He also made many personal suggestions to the new organization in regard to ways and means of organizing and promoting community effort. He strongly recommended the idea of a Chamber of Commerce to look well to the tourist trade as one of the most important sources of revenue and stated that, in his opinion, the magnificent scenic attractions of North Hastings needed "to be made known more generally by means of attractive advertising matter and similar lines of effort.

Short addresses were given by Warden of Hastings County, Harry Harpell, Ald. A. Th. Collins, Belleville, Mackenzie Robertson, President and Manager of the Belleville Cream eries Limited, Ex-Warden Charles Rollins of Coe Hill and Dr. A. T. Emory, M.P., who expressed his appreciation to those who had come from Belleville to contribute their efforts toward making the banquet a success.

CHARLIE THINKS A MILLION AND A QUARTER TOO MUCH

Los Angeles, Calif., May 6.—A fight to a finish between Charles Chaplin and his estranged wife with the comedian's millions pitted against Mrs. Chaplin's sensational divorce charges was presaged today after it had been made known that negotiations for a settlement involving $1,250,000 in cash had failed. The settlement offer was made by Mrs. Chaplin's attorneys, but it was learned yesterday that it had been rejected by the screen actor's lawyers as "unjust and unreasonable."

GRAY ADMITS HE HELPED IN PLAN

Cross Examination Brings Acknowledgement of His Active Part

New York, May 6.—Cross examination of Henry Judd Gray by counsel for his co-defendant Mrs. Ruth Snyder was concluded today without materially shaking his story of the murder of Albert Snyder. He was dry eyed and calm throughout, although he had wept freely during his examination by his own lawyer. The States cross examination of Gray was very brief.

"In answer to all district attorney Newcombe's questions Gray said he and Mrs. Snyder had joined in the attack that resulted in Mrs. Snyder's husband's death. "You have told happenings of that night in detail, Gray. Do you understand the consequences of your words?"

"I do and what I said is the truth," "That is all."

Gray left the stand after replying to several questions put by his counsel in re-direct examination.

In his cross examination of Gray, Dana Wallace, counsel for Mrs. Snyder brought out that it was Gray's own suggestion that he got the chloroform, wire and sash weight with which Snyder was killed.

"There was no domination there?" asked Gray.

"She suggested rope and you got her wire, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"You broke the domination there?" "Yes."

"She didn't suggest the waste you pickedup in Rochester, or gauze?"

"She suggested cotton and I got gauze."

"Oh, so again you ever rode this strange magnetic domination?"

"I suppose so."

Earlier in cross examination Gray had stated that Mrs. Snyder's "magnetic domination made him take part in crime.

COUNSEL STARTS DEFENSE PLEAS

Toronto, May 6.—"These two men have had to submit to that most unenviable thing—a frame-up," declared A. W. Roebuck, counsel for D. O. C. J. Withrow, in opening his address to the jury in defence of Withrow. Dr. Withrow, with Bartlett J. Brick, is charged with manslaughter and with procuring an illegal operation on the late Ruth Dennher.

Mr. Roebuck described the ordeal of publicity through which the two accused have passed. "They have been pilloried in the press and talked about all over the province," he said. Referring to the facts of the case, counsel said that the mother and sister of Miss Dennher had shown no antagonism to Dr. Withrow, but sent for him during her illness. But their evidence, he argued, was not unfavorable to him. They had testified to facts which indicated that the girl had not been in the condition of approaching motherhood and the evidently had not deemed herself in that condition.

GOYER BROS. RELEASED FROM CUSTODY AND ARE EN ROUTE HOME

THE FLOOD DISTRICT

City of New Orleans

Even granting that New Orleans will escape the ravages of the Mississippi flood, it is evident that the exchequer of the southern metropolis and the treasury of the State of Louisiana will be severely mulcted to pay the damage claims from property owners and industries located in the low area south of the city sacrificed in order to divert the river overflow by dynamiting of the protecting dykes at Poydras. The city and state agreed to pay the bill. The above map indicates the valuable nature of the territory deliberately doomed. Far from being waste land its disposition as an outlet indicates it is highly cultivated and dotted with industrial sites. Poydras, where the gap was blown, is also shown; also the location of New Orleans as the strategic, al railway terminus of the south nine

They were immediately released from custody and left Oswego presumably planning to return home. The bail was given before U.S. Commissioner, Charles N. PRIZES FOR WOMEN

Following as it does a Toronto girl's picture in the Atlantic Monthly's $10,000 for the best novel submitted in its recent prize competition, it is an interesting circumstance that Maclean's Magazine has given first prize to a woman in a national short story competition. Furthermore two of the four prize winners are women, and the only competitor outside of the four who is awarded special mention is a woman. We should not like to suggest that the future of Canadian literature lies with women more than with male writers, but certainly they have been conspicuously in the forefront of literary activity of late.

The best story out of 836 entered in the competition was written by Miss Lillian Beyton Thomas, of Winnipeg. Second prize went to Arthur Weaver, R. V. Cory, of North Battleford, and third and fourth, to Miss Mazo de la Roche—the Atlantic Monthly winner—and Leslie McFarlane, of Hailey bury. Honorary mention was given Miss Alberta C. Trimble, of Dauphin, Manitoba. Two of the five best stories therefore were sent from Manitoba, one from Saskatchewan, and two from Ontario.

Many Canadian writers are doing excellent work, and out of it all a national literature will evolve in due course. Our proximity to the overflowing presses of the United States is a handicap, perhaps, but there are not wanting signs that virile national consciousness will be attended by a literature worthy of our traditions.

MISSING THE POINT

The Toronto Star and the Toronto Telegram are engaging in a hectic battle over Canada's unfavorable balance of trade with the United States. One would hesitate to enter what is a purely private scuffle were it not for the fact that the Star, in trying to buttress its case, uses an argument that is frequently made by low tariffists, and which has no bearing on Canada's position whatever. The argument is that the United States sells more raw materials to Canada than Canada sells to the United States, the Star quoting the figures as follows:

Canada buys from U.S. $200,107,593
Canada sells U.S. $161,032,151

This says the Star disproves all the silly talk that is heard about Canada selling nothing but raw materials: the United States sells more raw materials than we do.

But that, of course, is not the point. The point is this: (1) What proportion of Canada's total production of raw material is manufactured in Canada and what proportion exported? and (2) what proportion of the U.S.A.'s total production of raw material is manufactured in the U.S.A. and what proportion exported?

We invite the Star to look up the figures.

It is not the quantity of a nation's raw materials exported that matters. What matters is the quantity that it refines and manufactures at home.

IMMIGRANT'S STORY

From Winnipeg comes word that H. A. Hoey has been taken into the Bracken Provincial Government as Minister of Education. To them who know the story of Hoey it is a most interesting announcement. Twenty years ago he came to Canada, a young Irish boy, penniless and friendless. Six years ago he entered the Parliament of Canada, one of the most able and promising members of the Parliament of 1921. In the course of a debate one night on immigration, when some of his Progressive colleagues were denouncing the trials and hardships of immigrants in the West, Hoey silenced them, and deeply moved the House with a bit of his own career. He did not say that it was his own life that he was describing, but many knew that it was his autobiography that he was giving to the members.

"We sometimes hear," he said, "of one passage ran, of men living on one meal a day. This particular immigrant lived for four days on one meal. I remember on one occasion he lived for five days on one meal, and in the last six weeks of the year in which he graduated he lived for ten cents a day.

"He was denied the privilege of writing home to his parents because he did not have the money for postage. He graduated and is today a member of the Dominion Parliament. He is still in his thirties, and by no means a physical wreck."

Now this young Irishman, who washed and stretched hides in Montreal for seven dollars a week, and who later worked in Fort Francis for $400 a year, saving enough out of his earnings to put himself through college, and finally entering Parliament, has become a minister of the Crown.

No better example could be offered of what courage and thrift and industry can do in this land of opportunity.

A meeting of the Bicycle Club will be held at Mr. Victor Wensley's on Monday next.

The barn, house and contents of Mr. James Boyd, William street, were destroyed by fire last evening. Mr. Archie Wallace made a great effort to save the lives of the 7 horses quartered in the barn.

While it is considered that the G. T. R. workshop in Belleville and Brockville will certainly be moved to Kingston the exact time the change will take place cannot be told at present on account of the fact that the G.T.R. second track has not been completed.—Kingston News.

THE BUSY MAN

If you want to get a favor done
By some obliging friend,
And want a promise, safe and sure,
On which you may depend,
Don't go to him who always has
Much leisure time to plan,
But if you want your favor done,
Just ask the busy man.

The man with leisure never has
A moment he can spare;
He's always "putting off" until
His friends are in despair,
But he whose waking hour
Is crowded full of work
Forgets the art of wasting time—
He cannot stop to shirk.

So, when you want a favor done,
And want it right away,
Go to the man who constantly
Works twenty hours a day.
He'll find a moment sure, somewhere
That has no other use,
And fix you up while the idle man
Is framing an excuse.

GETTING READY NOW FOR MID-SUMMER EXAMS.

Presiding Officers Are Appointed For Various Centres

The applications are now in for the various examinations, the last to be held at the usual examination centres beginning June 20th, and the indications are that more than usual are this year candidates.

There are five Departmental Examination Centres in South Hastings Inspectorate, namely Belleville High School, Albert College, Trenton High School, Deseronto High School and Frankford Continuation School.

At the Belleville High School Centre, which for lack of accommodation in the High School, will be held at King George Public School, the Presiding Officer will be Inspector C. B. Conon. For this centre there are 118 applications for Middle School Examinations and 39 for Upper School Examinations totally 987 papers.

At Albert College, the Presiding Officer will be Principal Robert Whyte of Trenton High School. There are 39 applications for Middle School Examinations and 17 for Upper School Examinations in Albert College totalling 308 papers.

At Trenton High School, Principal P. C. MacLaurin is Presiding Officer, and at that Centre there are 62 applications for Middle School and 28 for Upper School, a total of 515 papers.

At Deseronto High School, the Presiding Officer will be J. M. Bell, of Frankford Continuation School. Here there are 24 applications for Middle School, and 3 for Upper School, writing a total of 177 papers.

The Presiding Officer at Frankford is Principal A. D. Campbell of Descronto High School. There are 19 applicants for Middle School at Frankford writing on a total of 151 papers.

Since the adoption of the principle of acceptance on report for Lower School of candidates who have obtained the numbers writing on this examination is much reduced. Those candidates send in no formal application, but their teachers are required to notify the Presiding Examiner for the centre where they expect to write of their names, ages, subjects written etc., on form supplied by the Department of Education, before June 15th. As these candidates receive no time tables, I will state here the order of subjects: June 21st—a.m., Agriculture I; p.m., Agriculture II. June 27th—a. m. Physiography; p.m. Grammar (English and Latin). June 28th—a.m. History: p.m. Geography June 29th—a.m., Art; p.m., Botany. June 30th—a.m., Arithmetic; p.m., Zoology.

The numbers writing for Entrance to High School, are not larger than usual. From the Public and Separate Schools of the City, there are 200 applicants; from rural schools near Belleville there are 141 applications to write at Belleville; at Trenton there are 75 applicants; at Deseronto, 38 applicants; and at Frankford 13 applicants. Of course a large number of these will be admitted on the report of the Principals concerned, but there will be a large number left to take the final Departmental Examination. This examination will be held at the various centres on June 28th, 29th, and 30th.

WOMEN ACROSS HALL WHO SNARE HUSBANDS

Remember that last apartment house you lived in where the roaches met in the middle of the breakfast table and made faces at you, and the ants ate up the chocolate cake faster than you could bake it?

You thought you had learned all about apartment pests when you lived at that address, didn't you? But here's a new variety of nuisance that makes the roaches and ants look like a birth day party. Listen to Leah's lament:

DEAR ELSIE:

You spoke about the woman who parks her children on her neighbors. Well, I have another parking pest, but it's something much more troublesome than children. It's a grown woman and she lives in the same apartment house.

Shortly after we came here, this woman and her husband rented rooms next to ours, and from that day on she spent the biggest part of her time in our place. I'm not unsociable. I like company as much as anyone, but she isn't company. She's just a nuisance. She can't or won't say an interesting word. And besides, I don't like a perfect stranger marching into my rooms like that at all hours of the day or night. Sometimes I don't have a chance to get my rooms cleaned or my baby bathed before she is there. Sometimes I am getting ready to go out and I have to postpone a trip on her account.

Recently she moved into an apartment on the first floor, further away. I thought I would have a little peace. I did for three or four days and then my husband met her out front and asked her why she hadn't been up. He fastened the door more than once when she lived here because he didn't want her in. But I have proved without a doubt that she always comes when he is home. It's just another thing the way she makes up to him.

Tell me what to do. She won't take a hint. I have given her enough to knock a bull down. Elsie, isn't there something I can do.

LEAH.

Why hint, Leah? You wouldn't hint at a burglar or a bomber. You'd get right into action.

Then why be so squeamish about an equally pestiferous intruder in your home?

And now I'm speaking to more than you, Leah, dear. I'm addressing all those scores of women who write to me weekly, complaining about some 'Lady Friend,' who is hanging around the premises, busting up the domestic program and making eyes at hubby.

If you really believe that this woman has on mischief bent, why hesitate about sending her on her way? Tell her frankly that you're a busy woman and that you want she'd stay away. Will she get angry?, of course she will. But what of it? Isn't it better that you should have one honest understanding, even if it is a red-hot one, than that you should let a secret irritation poison your and your husband's happiness?

If a man's business was being threatened by a malicious loafer, he wouldn't hesitate for a second to give that loafer the air. Your home is your business, Leah, and it's up to you to protect it, and your own time, from dangerous annoyance. Then get on the job, sister, and make it snappy.

While on this subject it might be well to remark upon the complaint frequently heard regarding the slovenes of city flat dwellers. Many kindly disposed persons have suffered such humiliation as described by Leah and, no doubt, that is one reason why they are chary in accepting advances from new neighbors.

It would seem that a separate social code was needed to meet the emergencies of apartment house life. Or, perhaps a new adjustment of the old common-sense rules of conduct would do as well.

WHAT'S NEW.

When Food Fails -

Defective Digestion is the Cause and Misery Follows

There are thousands of people who do not get the proper nourishment from the food they eat, because their digestion is defective. Food that lies undigested in the stomach is not merely wasted, it will ferment and poison your system. Flatulence and sour risings in the throat follow and unless you are careful you will be come a chronic dyspeptic.

By toning up the stomach to do the work nature intended, you will remove the cause of the trouble. Nothing will more promptly restore the digestive organs than good new blood. Stomach, nerves and glands all depend on the blood, and when it gets thin and watery they are at once weakened. It is because of their action in building up and enriching the blood that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved successful in so many cases of indigestion where ordinary medicines have failed. The new rich blood quickly tones up the digestive organs; the appetite improves and you are able to eat with comfort and get full nourishment from your food.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

My girl friend and I usually go out together. Every young man I have told her about she has slammed. She doesn't even know some of them. A boy friend of mine speaks to me on the street when with a group of people, but when he is at any place of amusement he snubs me, and refuses to even say "Hello!" to me.

Do you think these are the right kind of friends to have, of both sexes?

POLLY.

POLLY: I wouldn't break friendship with this girl merely because she dislikes your friends, Polly. Let her "slam" them all she pleases, even if she has no cause. It may be that she is merely jealous of you and perhaps you can convince her that her attitude is all wrong.

As for the young man who is so rude to you—I would cross his name from my list of friends. Then he will understand that you are not at his beck and call, and that he cannot be cordial to you at one moment and ignore you at the next.

SINCLAIR'S

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

"But, of course, you made love to her," said Sybil, calmly. "You tricked her into believing that you intended to marry her."

"I never said 'marriage' once," flared Ted.

"Oh?" His sister raised her brows. "I rather fancy it is a word that some men avoid. But sometimes a woman may not learn that, until——too late."

"Don't be so cynical," growled Ted. "What do you know about it, anyway?"

"Nothing, thank Heaven! But I have eyes and ears."

"Well, stop using them now, and use your feet instead. I can't wait here all night for that suitcase. I've got to catch the midnight to Chicago."

"So it was as urgent as all that?" murmured Sybil, politely, not making a move.

"You bet your life it is. The infernal hussy is going to start raising the deuce all over town unless I stop her. That type of skirt'll stick at nothing. Any decent woman'd have pride enough to keep in dark that she'd made a fool of herself and lost a lot of money."

Again the contempt in his sister's eyes flicked him like a whip, but she made no comment. Very quietly she left the room and was back shortly, carrying an old suitcase.

Ted stepped his restless pacing up and down and grabbed it from her.

"Good girl!" He made an awkward gesture, as if he intended to pat her shoulder, but she shrank from his touch. She raised her head proudly; her black eyes scorned him.

It was as if she said, in so many words, that she repudiated him forever.

On the following morning, she sentimentally stood the difficult task of telling her mother of Ted's abrupt departure. She told the truth as gently as she could, knowing that the whole sordid affair would be all over town by noon and that her poor mother must hear it in its worst and cruelest form.

Jimmie, who, strange to relate, had gone out early, returned at noon, in usually placid face black as a thunder cloud.

"What's this about Ted?" he demanded angrily of his sister, who was preparing luncheon in the kitchen.

Sybil's face narrowed.

"Oh, so you've heard? I was going to speak of it this morning, but you left while I was in mother's room. Any way, I thought you knew."

"Knew? He flung himself down in an old kitchen chair and scowled at the glowing range.

Sybil looked at him speculatively.

"It doesn't help the family honor any—this midnight departure of Ted's."

Jimmie made a sound between a grunt and snort.

"We're sure getting a reputation for midnight get-aways. I wonder why Ted didn't shut up that darn woman as he should have."

"She is—er—talking?"

"Talking?" snorted Jimmie. 'Shriek ing, rather."

Sybil sighed and shrugged, her eyes bitter.

"We ought to be used to such happenings, by this time."

Jimmie suddenly popped out of his chair, his fists clenched.

"Hang it all—it's what it'll do to my chances that's bothering me."

"Your chances?" echoed Sybil, a trifle amused, wondering if the lazy, easy-going Jimmie were going to have a belated attack of family pride.

"Yes, my chances," he repeated. "I'm engaged to Janet Wayland. Her family was planning to announce it next week. I guess now they'll give me the gate."

Sybil starred at him long and silently. Then a little sardonic flicker crept into her lovely eyes.

"The Waylands are very rich, aren't they?"

"Sure they are. Janet has a fortune in her own right from her grandmother."

Sybil laughed suddenly, with a curious harshness.

There Has Never Been Anything Else Like Husky

Never before has any medicine received the praise that is now being heaped upon Husky, the herb preparation which relieves stomach, liver, kidney and bowel ailments and their accompanying ills. Husky receives this praise because it does all that is claimed for it and builds up the system as it gives relief—its help therefore being of a permanent nature. Husky helps in every case when it is taken regularly and over a reasonable length of time.

Interesting Case Cited

One of the many wonderful experiences with Husky in Ontario is that of Mrs. Bernard, 183 Caswell Ave., Toronto, who tells of her case and what Husky did for her as follows:

"For months I was weak and in a terrible run down condition. I lost 30 pounds in a short time from taking an imported rheumatic remedy. I grew worse and was so weak and emaciated that I was very worried about myself. I made a trip to England for my ailments, but I did not get any lasting relief. I could hardly get about and I couldn't think of exerting myself in the least.

"As my condition grew worse I heard of Husky and decided to try it. I have taken several bottles of this medicine and have received wonderful results. I am feeling much stronger and am able to get about without suffering for the first time in months. You do not know how this medicine has helped me. I have gained five pounds since I have started the Husky treatment, and before I was losing weight rapidly.

"I am feeling so much better in every way that I cannot praise Husky too highly. Naturally I am still taking Husky and will do so for sometime to come. I can recommend Husky to any one who is weak, tired or run down or suffering in any way that I did. It gave me help after other treatments, and a trip to England had failed."

At Good Drug Stores

Every person in this city suffering in any way Husky is recommended to relieve, is urged to give the Husky treatment a trial. Husky can be obtained at good drug stores everywhere, and when taken regularly and over a reasonable length of time it will help you just as it is helping thousands of others.

APPLY SAGE TEA TO DARKEN FADED HAIR

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added will turn gray streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients. It is known as Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur Compound and can be obtained at all drug stores for only 75 cents a bottle.

While gray faded hair is not sinful we desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You can dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark; glossy soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

'TROPHY NIGHT' AT 'Y' BUILDING

Winners of Athletic Contests Show Slides By National Chairman

"Trophy Night", an annual affair at the Y.M.C.A. was held in the association building. Campbell street last evening when the various winners in the past years sports activities received their prizes.

Those men and boys who were successful in basket ball, volunteering and bowling gathered round the banquet table and after ample justice had been done to the many good things provided, the program was commenced. Geo. Griffin acted as chairman and made a few opening remarks dealing with the value of athletics to the young people of today.

Mr. Griffin called on Miss Jessie Barnhart, who won the across-the-bay swim and the trophy was presented by Albert Armstrong. Below will be found a list of the other teams and individual winners.

J. H. Crocker

Following the presentations, Mr. J. H. Crocker, chairman of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A., and a most distinguished guest was introduced.

Mr. Crocker gave a series of lantern slides of the Olympic games showing the athletes from Canada and other countries in action. These were most interesting, especially the individual and group photos of the Canuck athletes.

Mr. Crocker has attended the Olympic games and is a close student of athletics and can readily talk upon such a subject.

Following are the winners:

The Y's Men, team winners of the City League Hockey Championship, and composed of V. Weir, S. Nurse, R. Grub, W. Harden, A. Armstrong, F. Symons, J. Andrews, Eq. Lally, Mel. Blanchard and J. Alexander, won all but one of their games and were tied with the Bell Telephone Co. at the conclusion of the series. As a result of the final play-off game they were declared winners of the Y.M.C.A. Cup which has been competed for since 1908.

Canadian Champions

The team which entered the Y.M.C.A. Bowling League were successful in bringing the Canadian Championship to Belleville. Team was composed of the following:—Capt. Bert Rutherford, O. Anderson, G. Gilbert and V. Weir. Their score totalled 3410 and gave them 700 points over their nearest competitor. In addition one of the members, O. Anderson, rolled the high single score of 311, a record for the championship last season.

Thanksgiving Road Race (Stroud Trophy), the annual three-mile road race, was won by Clifford Barker of Rosmore, who made it in 17 minutes.

Inter-School Relay (Deacon Trophy) This event took place on Thanksgiving Day morning, three teams entering—namely St. Michael's, Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra—won by St. Michael's team—Jack Murphy, Ray St. Dennis, Jas. Barriage, Leo Culhane

"Y" Handball Championship—won by A. W. Armstrong in an elimination tournament in which there were 20 entrants.

G.A.B.A. Basketball team (Central Ontario Champions)—The team was composed of Wesley Armstrong, Curry, Miles, Morrison, Alexander and Buckland. The team won from H.M.C., but lost to Elizabeth Playground in the Provincial semi-finals.

Bay of Quinte League Basketball—The High School boys won the B. of Q. League after a hard tussle. They were grouped with Napanee, Albert College and Trenton and at the finish had played off with Napanee and defeated them in overtime.

Across-the-Bay Swim—(Y's Men's Trophy)—Winner Jessie Barnhart, time 40 minutes, 14 secs.

Across-the-Bay Swim Shield—Donor R. Graham—winners names- in scribed—Ladies Miss Jessie Barnhart, Senior, E. Lahart. Junior Class, Youngest entry, K. Grills.

Senior Winner—Lahart had a close tussle with Smith.

Junior—L. Oliphant, time 27 min., 30 sec. Youngest entry (trophy given by Jones' Creep Campers) K. Grills

Senior Church League Basketball—John St.—J. Kerr, E. Buchanan, W. Christie, R. Miles, W. Davis, A. Armstrong. John St. won all games played. Trophy donated by "Y".

MRS. ELIZABETH CROSS

Wallaceburg, May 5.—Following an illness of some three years' duration, Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Cross, beloved wife of John Cross, died at the family residence, Victoria St., South Wallaceburg, on Wednesday night, April 27th. Mrs. Cross was 76 years of age, and for the last 39 years had been a resident of either the town itself or the surrounding district. A native of Ivan-hoe, Ontario, Mrs. Cross was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Emmerson, and 47 years ago was married to John Cross. Mr. and Mrs. Cross were farmers and about 20 years ago they came to this section residing on a farm near the town limits. Five years ago they retired to Wallaceburg. In addition to her husband, the deceased leaves to mourn her loss, one son, Frank Cross of Chatham Township; four daughters, Mrs. Frank Watson of Chatham Township, Mrs. William Stonebridge and Mrs. William Croft of Wallaceburg, and Mrs. Edgar Shorey, of Belleville, Ontario; two sisters, Mrs. Charles Wickens, of Wallaceburg and Mrs. Harold Pake, of Vancouver; five brothers, Thomas Emmerson, of Croakston; William Emmerson and Matthew Emmerson, of Holloway; Eddy of Chatham Township; and Frank, of Carson City, Nev. She was a member of Trinity Church and was a highly respected and well known resident of the community. Johnston conducted the obsequies and interment took place in Wallaceburg cemetery.

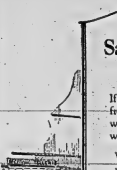

Feud between Royalists and Communists in France, always vital, while beset near May Day, resulted in bloodshed at Montmorency. Three on each side were wounded by revolver fire.

TWO NATIONAL PARKS

Jasper National Park, Alberta, is a magnificent natural playground, 4400 square miles in extent, located in the heart of the most scenic regions of the Canadian Rockies, and set aside by the Dominion Government in the enjoyment of the people for all time. Yoho National Park, Yoho, Cree, such as Mount Edith Cavell, magnificent mountain ranges, pierced by the beautiful valley of the Athabasca River, and in the centre of it all, Jasper Park Lodge, a wonderful hostelry with every comfort of a modern hotel—such is Jasper National Park.

Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming, U. S. A., which has been fittingly named "Nature's Show Window" is a park switch, in the variety of its attractions and diversity of natural phenomena, has no rival. Geysers, hot and boiling springs, prismatic pools, multi-colored pots, tinted terraces, and the awe-inspiring mighty canyon of the Yellowstone River—all have been described many times, but they must still be seen to be appreciated.

These two parks, and many other wonderful scenes, will be enjoyed by the members of the Kerr-Bryson West

HORNSBY'S CLOUT WINS FOR GIANTS

Grover Cleveland Alexander In Great Form Against Pirates

New York, May 6.—A lot of people haven't been able to figure out the difference between standard time, daylight time and railroad time yet. They don't know when it's time to do anything. But with all this confusion, the Giants still know when it's time to hit. The best time is when there are men on bases and Rogers Hornsby pick out a ball when there were two on, to hit a home run yesterday afternoon at the Polo Grounds.

It landed deep in the right centre field bleachers and decided the fifth and last game of the interborough series with Brooklyn, which has been going on, one place and another, since last Sunday. That homer gave the Giants the decision for the day, 4 to 1, but the Robins gained the edge on the series, three games to two. That's the first series the Giants have lost this year.

That "Evergreen" twirler, Grover Cleveland Alexander held the Pittsburgh Pirates to seven scattered hits yesterday and the St. Louis Cardinals made it two out of three games with a 4 to 2 victory.

The veteran round archer was complete master of the Pirate batsmen while his own sluggers got to Adolfo in the sixth to break a one-all tie with two runs and drive the Pirate pitcher to the showers. They got another in the seventh. Pittsburgh staged a rally in the eighth when Haley nailed Wright's fly and managed to push one run across. Alexander tightened and put an end to their aspirations.

Only two games were played in the National League today. Rain forced cancellation of the Philadelphia-Brooklyn game at Brooklyn and Chicago and Cincinnati were not scheduled

THINKS FUTURE OF STAGE IS IN LITTLE THEATRE

Bright Hope in Britain's Drama World is Little Theatre

London, May 4 (C.P.)—"I think the future of the English stage depends upon the Little Theatre," said Jerome K. Jerome in a speech at Bristol Little Theatre. "The big theatre must orient a big audience or go bankrupt," he declared. "A play to be successful in the West End of London must draw nearly £2,000 a week. When riches like that come pouring in through the box-office window, art flies out at the stage door."

The big manager,- Mr. Jerome exclaims, does not ask whether a play is good or bad. He asks: "Has it got a punch in it? Will it bring them in? By "them" he means the people who regard the theatre as a fashionable lecture-cum-dance — people who go to the theatre in the hope of being excited by sensationalism or by equality.

"The appetite grows by what it feeds on," he continued. "There is danger of the British stage becoming a sink of sexuality. But we occasionally have a new play has to go a bit further. The thing works in a vicious circle."

"In the provinces," he said, "there are not so many difficulties to contend with. There is a Little Theatre in almost every town of more than 40,000 people. And it can be done. The Little Theatre is needed to keep alive the English drama. Today half the theatres in London are controlled by three Americans. The other half soon will be. It is only a question of time."

"London is dull," Mr. Bugand—not yet thank God," he added.

LESS GARDENING NOW

Poets and philosophers tell of the satisfaction obtained from cultivation of flowers and vegetable garden, but the practice is not as general as it might be wished. In many places there is much less gardening than there was some years ago. People have too many things they want to do with their spare time, in many towns, however, the garden movement has been pushed as a community proposition. People have been urged in a systematic way to decorate their grounds with handsome shrubbery and flowers, and some of these communities have developed an amazing amount of this beautification. Such towns become noted, and every minute of time put in on those flower beds is no doubt paid for in higher value of real estate that is established in such a town.

BELLE THEATRE

"For those who enjoy a blending of comedy and drama, with suspense and action a predominating feature, "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," Fox Films' latest, is recommended as filling the bill in every particular. This old-time play, revivified and brought up to date, had its first showing at the Belle Theatre yesterday and received an enthusiastic reception from the audience.

This is a fine picture and splendid entertainment. The story is of hearth ing interest, interpreted by a cast of outstanding Madge Bellamy, Allan Simpson, Sally Phipps, J. Farrell McDonald, Paul Nicholson, Anita Garvin, Arthur Housman, Ethel Wales and Harry Bailey. It deals with the fortunes of a little East Side girl, played by Miss Bellamy, her dissatisfaction with her sordid surroundings and her upward climb to happiness.

CAPITOL THEATRE

That the offerings of the Imperial Players at the Capitol are a feature far above the ordinary has been well demonstrated every evening this week when capacity crowds have filled the house.

Last night was no exception and this excellent Company presented "Bought and Paid For," a playlet bristling with comedy, pathos and dramatic situations; an appreciative audience received the Company well, and deservedly so, for its offerings to date have been about the best in this line that Belleville theatre-goers have seen. Miss Myrle Bigelow and Mr. John Driscoll playing the leading roles are excellent in their parts, and the supporting members are all good.

The feature film "The Wrong Mr. Wright" a new Universal Jewel production, is a scream, that kept last nights audience roaring with laughter all the way through. It's a good comedy and a film well up to Capitol standard.

TILLIE THE TOILER—

TORONTO MOVES TO 2ND PLACE

Toronto, May 6.—Hitting Al. Mamaux hard and timely, the four innings he was on the mound, the Toronto Leafs defeated Newark, 6-2, in the first game of the series here yesterday. Mamaux was succeeded by Jack Washop, and the veteran held the Leafs to three hits and one run during the balance of the game.

Fisher was invincible until two were out in the ninth, when four hits succeeded for Newark's two runs. Spencer and Heath hit home runs inside the park in the Leafs' sixth consecutive victory.

The victory sent the Leafs into second place, Baltimore dropping to third when they were defeated by Buffalo, 11 to 5.

The Orioles were held in check by Mangum who allowed them but eight hits. He looked bad in the third when Baltimore managed to shove across three of their runs, but he tightened, while his teammates opened up to pound four Orioles twirlers.

At Rochester, the Colts scored five runs in the last inning to lose out the hapless Reading, 11 to 10. During most of the game it looked as if the Keys were going to win a ball game, but the last-minute rush of the Rochester batsmen changed the whole complexion of the game.

The Stars opened their series with Jersey City at Syracuse by making 21 hits for a total of 27 bases, and a 15 to 2 victory. Every player on the Syracuse line-up made at least one hit.

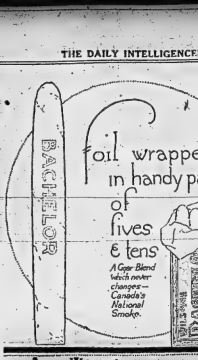

"Y" BOWLING

In the last game in the Church League the St. Michael's and the Bridge St. teams met at the Y alleys last night, the former winning one point and the latter three. This leaves two teams tied for first place in this league, namely Bridge St. and Tabernacle. In the first game the Bridge St. won by 81 pins and added another 3 to this. YANKEES REMAIN IN FIRST PLACE

Washington, May 6.—There is not much to say about the Yankees' desert yesterday except that they weren't hitting. Urban Shocker wasn't pitching and the boys, in spots, weren't fielding. Acshaut, the stylish twirling of Horace Lisenbee the champions chief stumbling block, had held onto first place when the Red Sox won a refreshing victory over the Athletics.

Mr. Lisenbee held the Yanks to six hits and fanned eight of them. He is only a young fellow, being of the same age as Stirling, but the resemblance ends there. His colleagues have nicknamed him "Lis", this being considered more euphonic and dignified than Horace, which is too classical for baseball.

The Philadelphia Athletics lost a chance to go into first place in the American League yesterday by losing to Boston, 3 to 2.

The lowly Red Sox accomplished their victory when Ira Flagstead, batting as a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning, hit a home run with one on. Grove twirled good ball for the Athletics, holding the Sox to six hits, while his fater were getting eight off Willoe and one off Welter. The Athletics however, failed to bunch their singles to good advantage. Ty Cobb, versatile veteran outfielder with the Athletics, hit a driver over the right-field foul-line in the eighth inning and, when the umpire ruled it foul, Ty was ejected from the game.

The Detroit Tigers went into undisputed possession of fifth place by scoring a 3 to 2 win over the Chicago run was made in the ninth inning at the expense of Cole, former Tiger pitcher.

The Cleveland-St. Louis game was postponed owing to rain.

"PEENY" MILLS IS NEW BALL PILOT

Enthusiastic Meeting of Local Intermediate Enthusiasts Start Practice Soon

Some important changes were made in the personell of the Canadian National Ball Club at a well attended organization meeting in the Y. M. C. A. last night. One of the chief of these was the appointment of William J. (Peeny) Mills to the management of the Club for this year. "Peeny" has been connected with the game in Belleville for many years past and his long experience and wide knowledge fits him as a man highly capable of handling the reins. "Peeny" has also been regarded as one of the leading backstops in the Province has served in that capacity since the old Grand Trunk Club was first formed and did the receiving when the team brought the Ontario championship to the city. He was offered a professional contract some years ago but decided to remain in the simon-pure ranks. He has acted as Captain every year and has served as an advisory coach. "Peeny" is known to every baseball fan in this part of the Country and his elevation to the position of manager will be warmly greeted in every quarter. "Peeny" has been partly responsible for the success attained on the diamond by Freddy Goyer and Jack Williams both of whom have hung up notable records. Besides being a star field general "W.J." is well-liked by every member of the club and is certainly the man for the job.

In vacating the managership is take up the duties of Umpiring the Club loses a clever baseball man in the person of Walter Gerow. "Walt" has been a real leader and during his reign the team has twice reached the finals for the Ontario Championship. A quiet and unassuming chap Walter's judgment has been a valued factor in placing the team on the pinnacle that it has held. Walter was offered the position of Umpire and after due consideration he decided to accept it and along with Ken Colling he will handle every game in the Bay of Quinte loop. Walter will undoubtedly make a capable official and his severing connections with the Canadian National Club will be regretted by a wide host of friends.

Newton Thompson was given the presidency and News is not new to Belleville baseball circles. He will handle the job with efficiency and, despaish and the Club made no mistake in selecting him.

The complete list of officers:—

Hon. Pres.—J. D. MacMillan, His Worship Mayor Wilmot, M. P. North.

Pres.—Newton Thompson.

Vice Pres.—D. Elliott.

Secy-Treas.—B. D. Adams.

Business Manager—R. Colling.

Executive—M. P. Duff and A. A. Cokers.

Manager—W. J. Mills.

Matters were discussed from every angle and the call for players for the opening practice will likely be issued next week. It was reported that the grounds are nearly ready and as the schedule will open on the 24th of May it is essential that no time should be lost in lining up the squad.

Great enthusiasm was manifested and the officers were assured of the whole hearted support of the general public. Certificates will be lined up and a delegation will meet the Public Board in order to make suitable arrangements for the playing grounds.

Reserved seat tickets will be available as usual but the price will be only one dollar for the season. Which they require now is the co-operation of the public for a very successful season.

Make your farm pay bigger profits this year

The big problem on the farm today is to produce more at less cost. Surveys in Canada show that the largest item in the cost of producing a field crop is the labor of man and horse, amounting in some cases to as high as 50%.

The most effective means of reducing labor costs to a minimum is the adoption of economical, light weight tractor power and modern machinery which will result in the doubling or trebling of present crop production—with greater ease and timeliness.

In Canada today, over 17,000 Fordson owners can plow 5 to 8 acres daily, double disc 15 to 25 acres, cultivate 15 to 25 acres, harrow up to 50 acres, cut 20 to 35 acres of grain and thresh 700 to 1100 bushels of wheat.

Reduce your labor costs the Fordson way and make your farm pay bigger profits this year.

DECISION GIVEN IN AN ODD CASE

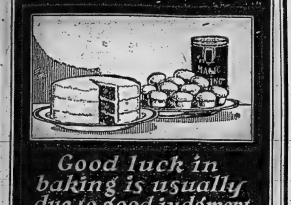

Defendant Has Established Right to Use Strip of Property

This was a County Court action tried by His Honour Judge Deroche without a jury on April 12th last judgment being reserved until yesterday. The Plaintiff Mrs. Charlotte Deline owned a house and lot immediately to the south of the defendant Sherwood Frost's property in Actinolite there being an alley way about four feet wide between the plaintiff's house and the defendant's work shop. About one foot of the alley way was south of the boundary line, there being no fence along the house, and belonged to the plaintiff.

In the month of November 1925 the plaintiff erected a bank along the north wall of her house and on the south border of the alleyway. This was removed by the Defendant who claimed that he owned the land up to the north wall of the plaintiff's house having had possession of the complete width of the alley for over 20 years. During the winter of 1925-26 the plaintiff lost a considerable amount of vegetables stored in her cellar through freezing and brought action for $200.00 damages for injury to her house, trespass and loss of vegetables.

His Honour found that the Defendant had established his right to the strip of the plaintiff's land along the alley and dismissed her claim holding however that she could either to rebuild the foundation wall which had suffered through exposure and allowing her an easement for her roof which would now project over Frost's property. Each party to pay his and her costs. T. Y. Wills of Porter, Payne & Wills for Plaintiff, F. G. Cushing of Collin & Cushing for Defendant.

Thanip asked Andrew Davidson, an aged farmer, near Ottawa, for a drink, then clubbed him and ransacked the house.

The Irony of Love By Charles Garvice

They stole into the room. The doctor and nurse were talking together in whispers with the air of relief and satisfaction which indicates that the patient has taken a turn for the better. Rafe seated him self on the bed, and, gently taking Enid's hand, waited the first awakening. Maude stood beside him, sharing in his escape from suspense and dread. The hours later the child stirred, moved her limbs easily, as if resting from a natural sleep; her eyes opened and she looked upward vacantly for a moment or two, then they turned toward Rafe, obeyed by anxiety, shone in them, and a curious expression of joy

"Blunderbore!" she murmured, almost inaudibly. "Oh, dear Blunderbore! Are you here? I'm so glad."

"Hello, Cinderella!" responded Rafe, trying to speak lightly and in a matter-of-fact voice, though the lump that rose in his throat rendered any kind of speech difficult. "How are you getting on?"

"I don't know," said poor Cinderella with plaintive wonder, "I don't remember— There's Aunty Maude! I've been ill, Auntie Maude, haven't I?"

"You haven't so," asserted Rafe; for Maude, who could not speak, could only press the wasted—but cold—little hand to her bosom. "You've been having a fine kickup. But you're all right, now!"

"How do you know?" she asked, with grave curiosity.

"By your left eyebrow; it's level with the other," replied Rafe, without a moment's hesitation, for his powers of invention moved quickly when he was dealing with children. "I can always tell by that."

"How very funny!" she said, in her feeble voice. She put up her hand to Maude's lips and looked from one to the other with that strange mysteriousness of the child; then, as if she remembered something, she turned to Rafe with her little brows drawn together, causing him anxiety.

"I want to whisper to you, Blunderbore—

Right you are! Whisper away. How, I'll hear you so."

He raised her in his arms as he had done so many times before, and, putting her parched lips to his ear, she whispered:

"I haven't told anyone, Strawface." "Sure you haven't!" said Rafe. "Wise of course, you wouldn't. That's all right. You and I can have our little secrets, eh, Cinderella?"

"Yes, yes," she said, restless, with a sigh of pride and satisfaction. "I'm sure I can keep a secret."

"You sure you can," he said, raising his eyebrows at Maude as if he did not understand but was honoring the child.

Almost as much tired in this moment of relief as he had been in the past hours of anxiety, Rafe suggested her face upon his for a moment, then, with a kiss, laid her in his aunt's arms, with a murmur of relief that made it difficult to find the door, went out.

Presently the doctor drove Maude from the room, and it was only natural that she should seek the consolation in her trouble and joy—happy home Lord St. Ives had gone off to carry the good news to the duke and duke with him; the lackey could not tell where Lord Strathyre had gone.

"I think his lordship went out on the terrace, after dinner, my lady, not that his lordship had any dinner excepting a little port. May I say, my lady, how glad we all are that Lady Enid is better? We've all been very anxious."

She is very susceptible to sympathy at such a moment. Maude could find no words, but she held out her hand and the butler, being a true man, forgot the difference between mistress and servant, and grasped her hand as soon as strongly as Rafe would have done.

NOT DECIDED WHICH WAY COLLEGIATE SHOULD FACE

Board Of Education Withholds The Awarding Of Contract For The New School Building

BOARD FAILS TO DECIDE WHICH IS THE FRONT OF NEW COLLEGIATE

Strenuous Meeting Leaves Question Again Wide Open for Discussion

JOINT CONFERENCE

Council and Trustees Will Gather to Settle Vexed Question

After an hour and three quarters of more or less pointless wrangling at a special meeting of the School Board last night, the question of where the new Collegiate Institute shall face, is still in the balance.

At a regular meeting of the School Board held some time ago it was decided that the new school should face on John Street. At the last regular meeting of the Board a resolution was passed that it should face on Church street.

The second resolution was passed without rescinding the first, so that as matters now stand this Board is on record as favoring the building facing both ways.

An attempt will be made to break the deadlock at a joint meeting of the Board of Education and the City Council to be held in the near future, when it is hoped that the third final decision will be rendered.

A delegation representing citizens from John Street and parts of Queen street headed by Mr. Charles Cameron, petitioned that the new building should face John Street, as if the back door on that street, the value of the property on that street will depreciate 50% if we make a back street of John" stated Mr Campbell. The delegation also wished to know how far from the sidewalk the school would be built, fearful of that neighbourhood eventually to be under the erroneous impression that the Collegiate would be pulled only twelve feet from the walk but Mr. McGie soon set their minds at rest on this matter by stating that it would be built twenty-seven feet from the inside of the sidewalk.

Some Arguments

Among objections advanced against the erection of the Collegiate with its back facing John street were the following:

Arthur Jones — Claimed that the Board was not building school for the view it would afford the tourists, but for the children.

Mr. Anderson claimed that it was a breach of faith with the public to change the plans for the facing of the new Collegiate.

Mr. Templeton claimed that he didn't know why the change was necessary. He said it was just as easy to change the plans back to the original idea, that of the School facing on John street. He stated that the boys playing ball would break the windows.

Mr. Fred Jackson said that the Council had never taken care of their buildings, so why should the city Board start to be feelings of the County by building the new Collegiate facing on Church street.

Dr. Chant—perhaps the person most affected by the new school facing on Church street asked why not have the rental entrance on John Street as well as on Church street?

Object to John St Entrance

In reading these remarks of the Board who were in favour of the Collegiate facing on Church, and they are in the majority, stated that it would be unwisely to have the Collegiate facing on John Street as the approach thereto to the building would not be able to be built directly facing Queen street, thus giving a poor appearance to the school. Mr. Jamieson done claimed that if the building were to face John street, it would be an architectural atrocity.

After considerable more discussion of this nature that didn't seem to arrive anywhere, it was decided to hold a joint meeting of the Board of Education and the City Council.

SOVIET OFFERS THE PALM OF PEACE

Geneva, May 7.—Soviet Russia today officially offered the Orient the palm of Peaceful economic collaboration to the capitalistic countries.

Addressing the International economic conference, Gregoire Sokolnikoff said the Soviet Union would welcome industrial agreements with foreign countries and capitalists and that there was no reason why the world could not have a pacific competition between the two economic systems represented by the Soviet and other countries.

ENFORCEMENT TO BE HELD UP FOR A CONFERENCE

Immigration Rules Affecting Canadians in Abeyance at Border

Washington, D.C., May 7.—Although no official announcement has been made there is strong belief that the new border immigration rulings affecting Canadian citizens employed in the United States who cross and recross the border daily, will not be enforced until representatives of Canadian and United States Governments have conferred on the whole immigration question. Should a conference materialize Canadian authorities are expected to urge that the United States immigration authorities define Canadian citizens for purpose of immigration.

The "new" law for admission by International conference of Canadian citizens particularly those of British birth, was emphasized by a delegation from the border Cities of Ontario which visited Hon. Wm. Mason Mackay at the Canadian legation yesterday.

An announcement from the State Department is expected when Secretary J. Davis, secretary of labor, returns to Washington next week. Meanwhile Frank C. Kellogg, secretary of State, is reviewing question.

BOTH GUILTY ON SECOND CHARGE

Dr. Withrow and Brooks Will Be Sentenced on May 16th

Toronto, May 7.—Dr. O. C. J. Withrow and Dartley J. Brooks, facing trial following the death of Mrs. Jean Dunlop were convicted late last night on the charge of attempting to procure an illegal operation.

The jury, after seven hours of deliberation, found that both of them not guilty on the major charge of manslaughter, but registered a conviction on the second count against them.

Sentence will be delivered by Mr. Justice Logie at 10 o'clock the latter part of next week of May 16, on a day yet to be set, Withrow and Brooks being held in custody in the jail in the meanwhile.

The jurors, who had retired at 2.45 p.m., did not report a decision until 9.45 and 9.30 to obtain more information, having been in their rooms at 10.47 p.m.

The court was silent with the hush of suspense as the two-scored were brought in to hear their fate in the jurors' box. Brooks fumbled with his hat and eyed the jurors coldly. Dr. Withrow looked straight ahead.

"Have you agreed on your verdict?" the Clerk's voice shattered the silence.

"Yes," replied the foreman, handing the written decision to the Judge.

"We, the jury, find Dr. Withrow not guilty on count No. 1, guilty on count No. 2; and Dartley Brooks not guilty on the first count, guilty on the second count," his lordship read.

SMILINGLY FACED DEATH'S SLOW BUT SURE APPROACH

Roanoke, Va., May 7.—Walter Boothe, a farmer lad who had been kept alive more than two weeks by artificial respiration, died early to-day.

The youth had been kept alive by his friends raising and lowering his lungs to force air into the lungs which collapsed April 21, when he was about to undergo an operation for dislocated vertebrae.

As death stalked before his eyes the boy smiled and encouraged his companions who stood tirelessly beside his bed as human pulmotors. Now and then he spoke to his family of the mysteries of life, after death which he felt were drawing their curtains about him.

Men Prominent In Belleville Life

REV. W. S. MacTAVISH

When interviewed by The Intelligencer the other day, the Reverend W. S. MacTavish, B.D. Ph.D., stated that he felt he did not deserve to have a place among the representative men of this city, but he finally gave in to the importunities of the newspaper so far as to tell where and how he spent his life.

The son of Archibald MacTavish the Reverend MacTavish first saw the light of day in Halton County, sixty-nine years ago and received his primary school education there. After finishing the first part of his learning he proceeded to Rockwood Academy and later to Georgetown Academy. Thereafter he studied in Toronto University and Knox College, graduating after he graduated from Knox College he was licensed by the Toronto Presbytery. The next year he spent in post graduate work in Union Seminary, City of New York. Upon his return to Canada he was called to Saint George where he spent ten years. Following this he served as pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, at Deseronto for ten years, where he endeared himself to his congregation. For more than period of Cooke's Church, Kingston, for six years and of St. Peter's Church, Madoc, for seven years.

Convenor Eight Years

For eight years the Reverend W. S. MacTavish was convenor of the General Assembly's Committee on Young People's Societies and during the greater portion of that time he prepared and distributed all the topic cards, booklets, manuals and other literature used by Presbyterian young people. During those years he also added to the honors already attached to his name by editing three text books, of about three hundred pages each, for use in the Mission Study classes.

The Doctor has always been busy with his pen. For eight years he

REFUSE TO TAKE ACTION ON THE SCHOOL TENDERS

Board of Education Decides to Withhold Contract For the Present.

PLANS NOT PASSED

Railway and Municipal Commission Have Not Yet Given Approval

A great deal of discussion was raised at last night's Board of Education meeting with regard to the awarding of the contract for the new Collegiate. It was suggested that the lowest tenderer be notified that his tender would probably be accepted, but this was considered unwise and no action was taken.

Mr. John Elliott put forward the following resolution for the Board's approval, but it was withdrawn altogether later in the evening.

Moved that the lowest tenders as submitted for the building of the New Collegiate Institute and Vocational School be accepted as soon as approved by the Ontario Railway Municipal Board and the Department of Education and that the Chairman be authorized to sign the contract agreement. So much objection was offered to the passing of the resolution that Mr. Elliott withdraw the motion.

Draw Up Contract

The following committee recommends:

1. That interest on the purchase price to Mrs. Niblock at the rate of 5 per cent from Sept. 1st, 1926 to May 1st, 1927 on the property on the west of John street be paid.

2. And to pay her interest at the rate of 5 per cent until the Board receives the money from the sale of debentures the whole property and interest be paid and that the Board authorize the Chairman of the Board and the Chairman of the Finance Committee to sign a letter guaranteeing the payment as aforesaid and permission to remove the building at once be given to Mrs. Niblock and Mrs. Stewart a tenderer resolution was moved by Mr. John McGie that a solicitor draw up a contract for signing when ready.

The Board also recommended that letters of congratulation be sent to Miss Harvey Rec. Allan Sprague and Mr. C. A. Sankey, for meritorious work completed during the scholastic year. Mr. Rees has been awarded a scholarship. Mr. Sprague won the provincial contest and Mr. C. A. Sankey carried off the medal for brilliancy in Applied Science at Toronto University.

DRUNKEN DRIVER CAUSES SMASH

Phil Foster Goes to Jail For Seven Days' Term

Phil Foster 31 Dundas St. driving towards Belleville at 11.30 last night on an intoxicated condition crashed into a motor owned and driven by Henry Cassidy of Trenton and sent it careening into the ditch on the Highway at a point opposite the residence of Mayor Evelby Wilmot. The result was that both cars were badly damaged the Gamble car suffering the most in this respect. Following the accident the police were called and Sergt. Harman and Officer Booth visited the scene and soon detected that Foster was in an intoxicated condition and brought him to the police station.

This morning he was arraigned before Magistrate Mikel, facing two charges, one of drunkness, and the other driving a car while under the influence of liquor. One the drunk charge he netted a $15 fine with $7 costs and on the other he was sentenced to spend a week in the County Jail

According to Gamble, Foster was passing down the road on the wrong side of the car was travelling in a reckless manner. The Gamble car when struck was driven sixty feet and into the ditch and turned turtle, the top of the car being crushed in. The windshield was broken and the fenders and body badly damaged together with a few minor bruises while his companion Cassidy escaped unscathed. Foster's car was damaged to some extent and he received several slight abrasions.

A doctor was called to the Police station upon Foster's arrival and he substantiated the evidence of the south orities in regard to Foster's condition. One police reading, very youthful.

YOUNG LAD HURT HIS LOWER LIP

Edward Pennetta, six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Pennetta and Mrs. Donnan, Hillcrest Avenue, while playing this morning in the orchard in the rear of his home tripped and cut his lower side of his left lip. The youngster was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where it was found necessary to put two stitches. Dr. J. J. Stobie was the attending physician.

TOMBSTONE IS PLAYFULLY PLACED IN A FLOWER BED

It must have been some disciples of Conan Doyle in passing the "spot" at spot of green on the upper bridge during the dark hours of last evening saw the spirits of red skinned warriors who are buried under this attractive plot of grass building communications from the "Great Beyond" and decided to fittingly mark the spot with the symbol of victory "The Cross", anyway they were inspired to mark the spot by placing a lofty stood a large grey Barrie granite, cross of about three feet in height, and this was the cause of much comment and serious curiosity.

The large grey cross which is standing at the northern most point of the piece of green was taken off a monument of cross design from the display grounds of E. S. Moore and Son, Monument Dealers, situated about forty feet from where it stood this morning. The weight of this cross would go well unto a ton and would take several men to carry across the road

CREST OF THE GREATEST FLOOD IN HISTORY OF MISSISSIPPI REACHED

SEARCH LAND AND SEA FOR AVIATORS

Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, May 7.—Brazilian authorities have ordered a combined land and sea search for Captain Romaar and Commander Mouzet, eyes on the strength of a rumor that the French aviators passed over Fernando Do Noronho Island, 125 miles off the Brazilian Coast at 11 o'clock Thursday night, flying in the direction of the mainland.

Four Hundred Miles From River's Mouth Crest Passes Vicksburg

330,000 HOMELESS

Waters Receding Now Gradually From the Outlying Districts

New Orleans, La., May 7.— With 330,000 persons north of the Red and Old Rivers already either driven from their homes or compelled to seek refuge on the upper floors on the logs of buildings, the beginning of the end of the greatest flood in the history of the Mississippi valley was felt below the mouths of those rivers today.

Climbing gauges, as the muddy current ebbed relentlessly toward levees tops, brought renewed efforts from thousands of levee workers who have been labouring three weeks to rear the embankments to sufficient height to withstand the predicted crest.

The gauge of New Orleans remained stationary, however the Crescent City and the Mouth of the Red River reported falls were shown indicative that the waters which have been running free over the lowlands were receding from the main stream.

The water was rising rapidly at the level of the Atchafalaya basin and engineers directed the activities of workers in the levee line along that stretch. The dikes along the south bank of Bayou Des Glaises and along Bayou Courtableau, however, will be seriously threatened as the inland sea lies to the crevasses in the main stream above, moved upon them to pass down the Mississippi.

Four different sources were sending torrents into this basin. Red River, from the west, was assisting the protecting embankment with the greatest flood in its history, the crest of which was approaching Alexandria. The Auachita from the north attacked with another huge crest, while Old River, overland pools were coming from the Arkansas River, with still others were stream ing from the northern bank of Mississippi.

Ten thousand nine hundred square miles of territory already have been flooded, driving 180,000 persons from their homes and 150,000 more to refuge in upper floors. Secretary Hoover estimated the watershed tossed in fury here as he returned to the water devastated district.

The first crest of the flood was just passing Vicksburg and had 90 miles to go before release relieved the power of destruction, Secretary Hoover said.

NEW VEGETABLES FLOODED MARKET

This morning's market was a real spring affair boasting the biggest assortment of this years green stuff that has been offered and consequential lowering in price heartened the buying public. Hothouse grown forced lettuce, green onions and, rhubarb at five cents a bunch, just half the price of last week.

Potatoes for some unknown reason took a jump from $1.75 of last week to $2.00 a bag this week but that's before 11 o'clock all were sold out. Hothouse cucumbers were offered and consequential lowering in price heartened the buying public. Hothouse grown forced lettuce, green onions and, rhubarb at five cents a bunch, just half the price of last week.

Potatoes for some unknown reason took a jump from $1.75 of last week to $2.00 a bag this week but that's before 11 o'clock all were sold out. Hothouse cucumbers were offered at two boxes of cauliflower sold at 25 cents, cabbage at 20 cents, raspberry cane at 3 for 25 cents and radishes at from 10 to 25 cents each. Apples, the last of this year, the variety unknown, sold at from 25 to 50 cents ap ple. Maple Syrup which sold at a much lower figure than previously brought 40 cents a quart, was rather plentiful.

On the inside market eggs took a drop selling anywhere from 25 to 28 cents a dozen and butter was easier bringing from 43 to 45 cents a pound and at 85c two-pound roll. Chickens were more plentiful than for some weeks past and sold at from $1 to $1.50 each. Cream sold at 30c a bottle.

The livestock offered consisted mostly of chicks which brought 20 cents each, pigs which sold at $5.00 each and puppies of a nondescript origin which sold at $2.00 each.

WHICH DIRECTION SHALL IT FACE?

When asked for his opinion upon which way the new Collegiate should face, C. McLaurin, Principal of the High School, said that as far as he could see it would be immaterial.

"At first thought I believed that John Street would be the proper frontage for the Collegiate to face, with the proper placing of the sidewalks, I think it would be immaterial which way it faces. One objection to the school facing Church street is that it would be placed too far back from Church, that it will lessen the appearance of a building erected on the back of a lot. However, after weighing the pros and cons of the matter in my mind I have come to the conclusion that it would be immaterial."

TODAY'S THOUGHT

If we keep the line of conduct straight, we need have no fear of the strike.

MOTHER'S DAY

Tomorrow the world pauses for a moment to honor Mother. It is a fine gesture and the play of it is that the emotions of love and respect can not be carried more universally throughout the year. It is good that for one day at least, every man, woman and child should pay tribute to perhaps the one completely unselfish feeling common to Humanity.

But in this sadly commercialized age even so holy a thing as the love of a mother for her child has been bent to the uses of business. One is important of to buy flowers, candy, perfume or electric washers and automobiles to demonstrate one's gratitude for the free-flowing never-failing, all-enveloping love which every mother pours out for her children, while what mother really craves is the warmth of her son's and daughter's affection.

Still it does not hurt to give material form to what is necessarily so ethereal. So may no mother anywhere lack recognition tomorrow—living or dead let us turn gratefully to our mothers—the one person in our lives who loves us, wholly and unselfishly and regardless of our condition, attainments or worth.

A WISE RULING

In excluding the public from the trial of two men for manslaughter in a somewhat unsavory case in Toronto, Justice Logie dealt a well-merited blow at the morbid sensation-seekers who crowded to the court room where the case was being tried. It is usually the case, when a trial of this kind is being held, that there are hundreds of people who seem to have nothing to do but haunt the court rooms in the hope of hearing morbid details of the crime. There is nothing healthy in their attitude, and the decision of the judge comes as a rebuke to this tendency. He is also to be commended on requesting the newspapers to refrain from publishing any of the unsavory details of the case, and to use discretion in their reports. For most newspapers, a warning of this kind would have been unnecessary, for the average newspaper realizes that it has a duty to its readers, and that duty is to publish a newspaper which can be read by every person in the home without fear of offence. Unfortunately, big city newspapers are at times apt to forget this duty, in the desire for sensationalism, and it was towards newspapers of this kind that the warning was particularly directed. It is well, however, to note that judges at times do show the greatest consideration for the interests of the public in connection with cases in which the evidence is of such a nature that no good purpose can be served by having it broadcast to any but those who are actually involved in the trials.

CUSTOMS STATIONS

One of the outcomes of the Customs probe is the focussing of attention on the extremely large number of customs collection stations in Canada. There are no fewer than 681 stations in Canada, whereas the United States has only 370.

Presiding a letter on the subject to the Parliamentary Committee, the Commercial Protective Association says:

"If 370 ports of entry are sufficient to take care of the needs of a population of one hundred and seventeen millions of people (the United States), surely that number of ports should be able to take care of the needs of Canada for a great many years to come, and if 370 are sufficient over 600 will have to be closed.

On the grounds of economy alone, many of these stations should be closed, since the customs dues collected in many of them nowhere near meets the cost of maintenance. The station at a place known as West Arichat in Nova Scotia collected $3.31 in 1925, and instances of other stations collecting amounts nearly as meagre are numerous.

The Commercial Protective Association, however, advances other reasons, besides those of economy. It maintains that many of the officers receive such small salaries that they have both the temptation and the opportunity to enter goods in collusion with those desiring to commit fraud, and that possibly the Government is losing much in revenue on this account.

THE U. S. TARIFF

Since the United States raised the tariff almost to prohibitive heights on farm products from Canada, the Canadian Government has made a practice of publishing in the Commercial Intelligence Journal, a resume of the exports of such products from Canada to the United States with comparative figures for the year previous to the new tariff coming into force.

A return just published shows that for the six months ended March this year the exports to the United States of products affected amounted to $35,610,738, as compared with $130,517,281 for the similar period in 1921 before the new tariff came into effect. Some of the chief items affected are horses which have fallen from $13,500,000 to 3,000,000; sheep from $1,100,000 to $155,000; oats from $1,100,000 to $380,000; wheat from $60,000,000 to $8,700,000 wheat flour from $11,000,000 to $34,000 butter from $1,500,000 to $370,000; condensed milk from $5,900,000 to $3,800,000; and wool from $1,333,000 to $823,000.

There are, however, a few increases Bacon and hams have increased from $76,839 to $227,542; cheese from $76,849 to $2,006,415; cream from $827,887 to $3,138,056; fresh milk from $101,607 to $474,795; potatoes from $1,446,150 to $4,183,176, and sugar beets from $103,175 to $285,966.

But the bald fact is that our total exports have fallen by approximately $100,000,000.

THE MYSTIC BORDERLAND

There is a mystic borderland that lies
Just past the limits of our work-day world.
And it is peopled with the friends we met
All loved a year, a month, a week or day,
And parted from with aching hearts yet knew
That through the distance we must loose the hold
Of hand with hand, and only clasp the thread
Of memory. But still so close we feel this land,
So sure we are that these same hearts are true,
That when in waking dreams there comes a call
That sets of thread of memory aglow:
We know that just by stretching out the hand
In written word of love, or book, or flower,
The waiting hand will clasp our own once more,
Across the silence, in the same old way.

Two costermongers visited the British Museum for the first time, and were looking at a statue of a Roman gladiator.

One of the arms was broken off at the shoulder, the left leg ended at the knee, the helmet was battered, and there were several deep scars on the face of the statue. Underneath was a brass plate with "Victory" inscribed on it.

The "Pearlies" gazed at the gladiator for a while, and then 'Arry asked:

"Wot I want ter know is, if this 'ere bloke won, wot did the cove wot lost look like?"

Edna Best tells a story of a baby who, meeting two little girls at a party, inquired their ages.

"Sister and I will be seven next Friday," one replied.

"Oh, then you are twins."

"No, we're not," was the puzzling reply.

"But," persisted the lady, "if you are both seven years old on the same day, you must be twins."

"But we're not," insisted the child. "There's another of us—we're triplets."

Members of the United Farmers of Canada, Saskatchewan section, are vastly perturbed because someone spoke of Arctic conditions in Hudson Straits. They hasten to explain that the region to be visited by the Hudson Straits survey expedition is not in the Arctic Circle. The answer must be that Arctic conditions being rather cramped for space in the Arctic Circle have migrated to Hudson Straits and Hudson Bay. It may be only fair, however, to wait for the report of the survey before reaching a definite conclusion. If a banana boil is encountered in the vicinity of the Straits, all may yet be well.

After a general discussion the envelope and group system was unanimously adopted as our plan of work for the coming year.

Y's MEN'S CLUB HOLD BUSINESS MEETING

ATTRACTIVE MOTHER'S DAY DISPLAY

Tomorrow, Sunday May.8th is Mother's Day. In connection with the event, many local merchants have arranged in their stores, and especially in their windows, appropriate and attractive displays conveying the sentiment of the day. An observer cannot but be struck, for example, by the artistically arranged display of "mailed" numbers dedicated to "Mother" which may be seen in the window of Gerhard Heintzman's Limited at 245 Front Street. Both in record and in sheet music is an array of all the old favorites—Mother" songs, which, no matter how old some of them may be, really never grow old, and their popularity remains undiminished. Musical numbers, and now adays especially records, are one of the most popular means of marking Mother's Day, for such gifts have the advantage of enduring and giving pleasure long after more perishable remembrances have been forgotten.

CLOSING MEETING OF B.H.S. 'LIT'

Students Present Plays By Prominent Canadian Authors

Had the young people taking part in the last stunt-night of the Belleville High School Literary Society, been pupils of a school of dramatic art instead of one of the highest rated seats of academic learning in the Province, they could scarcely have put on a more excellent programme, more excellently acted than that for which they were responsible in the City Hall last night. Two plays, each written by Canadians were splendidly presented by Fifth and Fourth forms and the young people taking part kept the attention of the large audience throughout the evening, resulting in a most interesting and delightful entertainment. In the first play a domestic muddle portraying the revolt of an over indulgent mother at her selfish children's wiles, the young people taking part were Miss Mildred Lloyd, Ivor via Whitney Leslie Pearsall, Miss Dorothy Robinson, Miss Gladys Parry and Miss Ruth Hinchliff and all were most clever, knew their parts perfectly and had real stage presence.

In the second play by Fourth Form a really delightful story of an ex-officer of the R.A.M.C. and his young wife roughing it in a Canadian lumber camp near Belleville was presented by Miss Alice McIntosh; Mr. Murray Honeywell, Jack Dewar and Arthur Clare. Then too were a lot small amateur productions and kept the audience in fits of laughter.

Commercial Forms put on a big hit with "Pinafore" and the happy throng with their really original interpretation of the Gilbert and Sullivan master piece made one the hits of the year. It would be hard to single out who was best in this but Evelyn Pitchett who played the part of the comical and pitchesh widow brought down the house by her clever interpretation. Hittie Howie and Grace Kennedy danced a harmpipe splendidly, Sadie Doran endeared herself to all as the niece and Jack Reppard made a convincing Sir Joseph Porter.

During the evening Alan Sprague winner of the upper school oratorical contest and Miss Pearl Webster winner of the junior contest were presented with a cup and medal respectively by Miss Dorothy Robinson and Miss Lorine Sprague the president and secretary of the Literary Society.

Two beautiful silver trophies will be given to the softball teams emerging first and second. The is a probability that Napanee, Picton, Belleville High School and Belleville Beavers will be the four aggregations making part and as these clubs are all evenly matched the series should be an interesting one. The Agricultural Society is working hard to provide an interesting day for Belleville sporting fellowes. The officers are: A. D. Clarke, President, H. B. Stock, treasurer and B. H. Ketcheson, secretary. The regular fall meet will hold a banquet in the Queen's Hotel on display night next, when the holiday attraction will be further discussed.

W. S. MACTAVISH

supplied one column per week on C. E. work for one of Toronto's biggest newspapers and in addition to this he has approximately one thousand articles to his credit in Canadian and United States newspapers. Dr. MacTavish also acted as ananuensis for he is a stenographer and typist of ability for Doctor O. L. MacKay the great Formosan missionary, when the book "From Far Formosa" was being prepared for publication.

Elected Moderator

Seven years ago he was selected Moderator of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, a synod which embraces about one-third of the membership of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. He is now the stated clerk of that body.

Five years ago the Doctor was retired from active church service and came to Belleville to live. In the year 1885 he married Miss Margaret MacKay, daughter of the famous Dr. G. L. MacKay, Formosan Missionary. Out of this union he was blessed with eight children, of which seven are still living. Major Archibald MacTavish was killed in the last great war. He entered the army as a private in 1914 and at the time of his death in 1916 held the rank of major. Another son of Dr. MacTavish who has made his name in the world is Mr. Wilfred L. MacTavish, editor of the Winnipeg "Evening Tribune" one of the greatest Conservative newspapers of the West.

The honored Dr. MacTavish is certainly known best in Belleville for the stubborn fight he displayed when the question of Church Union was first raised. He was also a strong opponent of Prohibition, fighting the good fight for Mr. H. W. Anderson before the struggle for Government Control. The Doctor is a steady contributor to the local newspapers.

MINING GOSSIP

A misunderstanding has apparently arisen over the announcement of Hon. Charles McCrea with regard to the establishment of a "Government" smelter at Sudbury. It would appear from information received from reliable sources that words have been attributed to the Minister of Mines which he did not use. According to one authority the cost of a "Government" smelter would be prohibitive, and it is also pointed out that it has never been the intention of the Government to go into the smelting business except where it would be in the interest of the country to do so. What the Minister had reference to evidently was the probability of the Bunker Hill and Sullivan interests erecting a smelter in the Cheimsford basin for the treatment of their own ores. It is a well-known fact that the Department of Mines has been in communication with these interests, and when such a smelter is built it will be available for treatment of custom ores.

Announcement is made of a meeting of the Kingston-McRae Mines, Ltd. The company owns a group of claims comprising 660 acres and has an option on a further 80 acres adjoining the Potter-Doan in the east Matheson district. The ground, it is claimed, is on the same strike as the Potter-Doan the most important operation in this section to date. Officers elected for the current year were as follows: Hon Jas' Lyons, president; George McMahara, vice-president; directors Dr. H. A. Clark, Frank Carew, James Kingston, Harvey Bone and O. W. Blair; Frank Carew the treasurer of the company and G. W. Staats the secretary.

CIACO HOSTS AT SPLENDID DANCE

The Ciaco Club were hosts last night of one of the most delightful dances of the season, given in the Moose Academy, and about eighty couples enjoyed the unusual event. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion in a color scheme of green and white which lent a charming back ground to the dizzying whirl of beautifully dressed dancers who found the music by the Bon Ton orchestra irresistible. During the evening some attractive special ties were introduced and in the birthday dance Mr. Frank Polwell and Miss Margaret Guyer took the prizes. During the souvenir dance the ladies were presented with tiny quaint perfume bottles or compacts and the gentlemen with cigarette holders, ash trays or fine lighters. The favors presented were unique and charming and highly prized by the happy recipients.

The patronesses were Mesdames C. H. Treverton, N. M. Coffey, H. Thrasher, G. W. Davis, C. T. Carson, W. Smith, J. O. Sword, P. C. Hyslop, F. L. Cavanaugh, J. C. Hoff and J. W. Lill. Greatest enthusiasm greeted Mr. Walter Turner, president of the Belleville Jack Miner League, and Mr. Wallace Havelock Robb, Belleville's bird poet, at a meeting called in Picton Wednesday night to organize a branch Jack Miner League for Picton, Bloomfield and Wellington.

Mr. G., S. Taylor, of Wellington, the lewly-elected—president of the League, heartily endorsed the project of buying a bird sanctuary between Picton and Wellington and plans were formulated for doing this at once. It is expected that the sanctuary will be one of the beauty spots of the Province.

AN ALIMONY MARTYR BOBS UP ONCE MORE

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Mr. Thompson has gone to jail. What did he do? Rob a bank, steal an automobile, peddle moonshine or grow reckless with a gun?

None of these things. Ed is one of our most exemplary citizens and there isn't a flaw in his civic record. Yet he has left his home, closed his office, and gone to jail for an indefinite stay. Why?

BECAUSE HE WON'T PAY SEPARATE MAINTENANCE.

Fourteen months ago Ed and his wife ceased to agree. They had been miserably unhappy for seven years. Ed's a slow-going, stubborn sort of a chap, good but exasperating. His wife is described as high-strung, loveable but easily upset. Life together became intolerable. There were no children.

"We'd better call it off," said Ed at last. "Get the divorce on any grounds you want, and I'll support you for a year or two. You're twenty-nine now. You ought to be able to get located in that time. Then I'm through."

"Oh, are you?" asked the wife. "We'll just see about that. We'll see if you can take my youth and break my heart and then throw me aside like an old shoe. You're not going to get rid of me as easily as that."

"Maybe you think I don't see through your cute little scheme. There's another woman in it! And if you think I'm going to clear out and let another woman have you, you've made the mistake of your life."

So the war was on, and presently they were in court, with Mrs. Thompson weeping piteously and looking the picture of frail, abused womanhood and the judge glowering at Ed. In vain did Ed's lawyer plead that there wasn't any other lady, and never had been one, and that Mrs. Ed was amply able to take care of herself. Mrs. Ed promptly fainted to show that she wasn't and, on the stand, confessed to as many ailments as a pup has fleas.

Ed didn't stand a chance from the first.

The judge gave Mrs. Thompson her separate maintenance decree, amidst applauding murmurs from the feminine audience. And Ed faced the years a married bachelor, separated from his wife, yet still legally tied-to her and forced to support her.

That's why Ed has gone to jail, and why other gentlemen are following his example. So we have been discussing these alimony and separate maintenance problems in this column.

Now comes Lydia who thinks that courts should do their weasons to all husbands, irrespective of breed, age or coloring.

DEAR ELSIE:

Can you honestly say that after a woman has given the best years of her life to caring for some man, bearing his children, economizing, scrimping and working, she should step out of the picture meekly, without malice and allow hubby's secretary to step in and enjoy the fruits of her labor? Of course, she would have the children on her hands. But why should the husband have no responsibility other than feeding and clothing them? Isn't he responsible for their existence?

Why shouldn't a woman demand separate maintenance? After all the years of domesticity, how can she expect to take her place in the world to earn her living? Surely you wouldn't advise her hiring out as a cook or a housekeeper.

You call the woman who accepts this support a "pernicious parasite"—what do you consider the viper who causes the situation? Can any man be happier with such a woman than he was with his wife?

Many a woman has given up a man she loves more than her husband for the sake of her children—wouldn't you recommend the same cure in the case of a man? Should he be aided and abetted in doing the weak and dishonorable thing, or should he be urged to shoulder the responsibilities of his own creation? Many a man has been thankful his wife refused to free him for then the other woman has revealed herself in her true colors.

Why should a woman be proud and honorable in her dealings with a man who is not proud and honorable? Pride and honor will not feed a woman and her children.

LYDIA.

Then, girl, girl—your brakes are smoking! No one's endorsing gentlemen who abandon minor children or aged, crippled wives. The problem under consideration is quite another matter.

Separate maintenance means that a man must support his wife for the term of his life while separated from her, yet remaining legally bound to her. and you at once jumped to the assumption that some "viper" has busted up the dear home-nest. Not necessarily. I've met a lot of wives who could bust up their own nests without the help of any outside ladies. Yes, they were "good" women, too. They worked hard, and they loved their children and they wouldn't have dreamed of being unfaithful. But they were so downright ornery that the Angel Gabriel couldn't have lived with them. Why conclude that such women are blameless martyrs if a separation occurs?

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

In the latest Worth collection the straight youthful silhouette with waist line at the hipstops continues in favor complicted by open necklines, often V-shaped, and some bolero movements are noted.

Outside waistcoats made of fur, and worn on top of the street coat instead of beneath it, are the latest garments to be adopted by English women to protect them against the bitterly cold winds prevalent in late winter and early spring and a typical example observed in the West End was of Persian and it had no sleeves, the neck of the wearer being protected by an upstanding collar, and it was worn over a slim brown velvet coat.

ANXIOUS ABOUT THE FATE OF AVIATOR

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

"You're lucky, Jimmie."

He grinned.

"Don't forget that Janet's face goes with it—and it's one that only a mother could love."

"So, you're marrying her for her money?"

Jimmie shrugged.

"If they don't lly a can to me, after this affair of Ted's. You certainly don't think I'd be marrying her for her beauty?"

"But has fair td Janet?" asked Sybil with dangerous smoothness.

"Why not?" demanded Jimmie, aggrieved. "She gets a man, doesn't she? It's more than the poor kid ever expected. And, as for me—well, I don't see myself slaving all my life. With her money, I can buy a good business, or—e—something."

Quite suddenly Sybil began to laugh. But her laughter was without mirth and not at all a pretty sound. It shook her slim body, and tears rolled from her eyes. Jimmie regarded her with an expression half-injured, half apprehensive.

"I don't see what's so funny," he remarked, with dignity.

"D—don't you?" gasped Sybil, between paroxysms. "I w-was just t-thinking what a b-beautiful family of rotters we are."

CHAPTER IX

A FLEDGLING OUT OF THE NEST

Fred Ross came home in time for supper one evening—back to the shabby little house from which he had departed one night ten years before, leaving his wife and children unprovided for.

He returned jauntily, for all his limp and his stick. In fact, at sight of his young daughter, he exaggerated the limp considerably. At least, so it seemed to Sybil as she watched him, with hard eyes, coming up the garden path.

There was no suggestion of defeat about him. It was not the prodigal father returning, but a jaunty, graceful, middle-aged man—the type which in former days, would have been called an "old beau"—clad in the most excellent clothes, his hat slightly tilted on his graying head. He was sure of himself, confident of his charm which had never failed him in wheedling others into his way of thinking. There was even a malicious twinkle in his eye, as he watched how Sybil had shut the door in his face, a very little while before.

He had triumphed, and his bearing showed it.

Sybil submitted stonily to his paternal embrace; yielded each smooth cheek to the light brush of the gray mustache. Her heart revolted, but she reminded herself to be docile for her mother's sake.

While she had opened and aired and made habitable the room which had been her father's and had remained unoccupied for ten years, since Ross had hovered anxiously in the doorway watching her.

"I—I really had to, Sybil," she said apologetically, referring to the advent of the erring father. "I had to take him back. You—you see, he has nothing, and he won't be able to work for a long time, on account of his injury. And I found out today that he's been living on credit, ever since he came back to town, and he's—beyond a great deal of money from old friends. It's—it's causing a lot of talk. Even the girls at Madame Irene's seem to think I—I've been rather hard. After all, he's your father, and he's ill and alone in the world, except for us."

When Sybil made no comment, but went on with her duties and entered the room to rights, her mother added pitifully:

"Maybe taking him back will end all the gossip. There won't be anything more to talk about."

Sybil flung down her dust-cloth and put her slim young arms around her mother's frail shoulders. She inquired suddenly, to the older woman's vast relief.

"Confess, dearest, that you've wanted to take him back all along, and you're secretly glad that his duty forced your hand," she commanded, with a twinkle in her eyes.

Mary Ross blushed painfully.

"After all, he's your father," he repeated. "You won't understand, until you've married and had children of your own, what a hold the man who is your husband and their father, has on a woman. No matter what he is, or what he does, he's become a part of your life, and you can't throw him out."

"Oh, couldn't I!" thought Sybil scornfully, but she only said:

"All right, dearest. I don't understand and I don't want to, but, if it makes you happy to have him back with us, why, back with us he comes and stays. Only," she alone with triumph, "now you have to let me go to work."

Mary Ross sighed.

"I'm afraid so." There are all these years to make up, and Dick Albert is sure to be difficult. But, Sybil, you don't know how I dread sending my little girl out into the world to earn a living."

"Nonsense!" scoffed Sybil. "I can take care of myself, and you don't even guess how well," she added, with a hard little laugh.

Over the supper table, Fred Ross learned upon his daughter, as he buttered a hot biscuit with a relish

"Your mother tells me you want to go to work—that you've learned short hand at night school. That's splendid my girl. I've always believed that a man should be brought up to be fin-ancially independent. It gives them poise and self-confidence, makes them less apt to be got around by some scoundrel."

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

When preparing breadcrumbs for croquettes and escalloped dishes, tie a bag over the mouth of the food chopper in order that the crumbs will fall into the bag and not be scattered all over the floor.

Whitewash does a threefold duty. It is a valuable disinfectant, preserves plaster and wood and, if properly prepared acts as a fire retardent. Use more of it.

It is economy to have your paring knives of good steel so they can be kept very sharp. A dull knife is very wasteful, as it hacks at the vegetables and wastes a great deal.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of twenty-eight, but look thirty-five. What can I do to improve my personality?

I met a young English chap a few weeks ago to whom I was attracted. What can I do to increase his interest in me?

MARGARET.

MARGARET: You should not permit yourself to look older than you are, my friend. In fact, with a little effort you should be able to look years younger. The way to wear your hair and the clothes you choose are very important considerations in your effort to change your appearance.

Arrange your hair in a youthful coiffure; bob it if you have not already done so. Shape it softly and naturally as a frame about your face. A discrete use of cosmetics will also help toward a youthful appearance. A touch of color in your cheeks will brighten your eyes. An inconspicuous powder will give clarity to your skin.

In the matter of clothing yourself choose frocks that are youthful in line but th good taste. Wear your skirts at the abbreviated length that is accepted today—but again without extreme. Wear a touch of becoming color when ever possible but keep in mind that simplicity is always smarter and more youthful than ornamentation. Incidentally, if you are inclined to over weight, I would suggest reducing by means of a safe and sane diet and exercise. But don't undermine your health with reducing pills or unhealthful diets of any sort.

But more than all of these material considerations, is your attitude toward yourself and toward the world. If you think of yourself as young, you cannot help but impress others with your buoyancy and youth. Throw yourself into some form of activity that will enjoy you. Become enthusiastic about it, enthusiasm is always a sign of youth.

Remember, too, that your desirability as a companion is dependent upon the variety of your interests and capabilities. Make yourself adept at sports—particularly those that interest the young Englishman. Learn to dance well. Read good books and learn to talk about them. All of these things will give you a more colorful personality.

Good luck, Margaret!

FEMALE MAJ. IN NEXT ELECTIONS

Giving Vote Women Over 21 Will Result in Majority

London, May 6 (C.P.)—The Government's promised bill giving women the vote at 21 years of age will give women a majority of more than 2,000,000 in the next General Election. At present men have a majority of three million, because women under 30 years of age are left enfranchised. The voting strength computed last winter was: Men 12,67,700; Women 9,50,222. The reduction in voting age will give the vote to an additional 5, 150,000 women. In addition, simplification of the voting qualifications for women voters will result in enfranchisement of a large number of women in private lodgings, to vote, although they are over 30 years of age.

It is believed that in 70 per cent of the constituencies, the women electors will outnumber the men. At present this is the case in five constituencies only, South Kensington, Shelton, Hastings, Glasgow Hillhead and South Edinburgh, though in a few other constituencies the women are in a majority.

The Labor Party will submit for second reading on Friday, May 20, a private member's Bill proposing to carry out the reform which the Government announced. The Government will certainly be pressed to accept the Bill in view of their decision, but it is understood that they are not likely to agree to any further action being taken before next session.

It is not likely that such a delay would prevent the younger women from voting in the next General Election, even if it is held next October.

A point which is said to have improved the Cabinet in arriving at its decision was that Andrew Bonar Law, Canadian who for a brief time was Premier, was known to favor an altern bill. Thursday the end of 1922 he declared: "I have been a consistent supporter of women's suffrage, and, even at the time the Franchise Bill of 1918 was passed, I felt that the discrimination in age between men and women could not be permanent. I think so still."

No question of redistribution arises. The Act of Representation of 1918 provided for redistribution on the basis of one member for each 70,000 population and naturally this position is unchanged by the government's bill. The Labor party agree with the decision that redistribution is not necessary on the ground that the vote is not given to a new class of electors, as was the case when women were enfranchised for the first time in 1918.

There are considerable differences of opinion as to the effect which the proposal will have upon the political fortunes of the parties, the Times remarks, although it is agreed that to one extent the change must be a leap in the dark. One result will be to produce abnormal majorities in a few constituencies held by each party. Labor will be particularly concerned by the accession of strength in the mill districts of any Lancashire, where the number of women workers under 30 is extremely large. The increased cost of a General Election is one consequence result of the bill. This is not merely in electoral machinery but in expenses of candidates.

DOG'S PEDIGREE START COURT ACTION

Magistrate Casement at Madoc, presided yesterday at the preliminary hearing of a case arising out of the sale of a dog. According to the evidence Mr. Walter Donnelly sold one of his Boston bull Terrier pups to Mr. Gray, of Belleville, for the sum of $15.00. The latter claims that he also received a bill of sale or transfer of the dog and also a copy of his pedigree. He claimed that he gave the papers back to Mr. Donnelly to have the dog registered and the latter failed to have the registration made or to return the papers. As a result a criminal charge was laid against Mr. Donnelly and the hearing was to determine whether there was sufficient evidence to commit him to stand his trial in Belleville. No evidence as taken for the defence. Mr. B. C. Donnan, Crown Attorney, pressed very strongly for a committment. The Magistrate stated that he did not consider that prima facie evidence of theft had been established, and reserved judgment. Mr. R. Fenton appeared for the accused.

CUSTOMS SEIZURE IS MAINTAINED

Ottawa, May 6.—Judge Audette of the Exchequer Court of Canada has rendered judgment maintaining the customs seizure of the schooner St. Clair Theriault and the United States steamer Seal, charged with liquor running. The Seal at the time of the seizure was carrying liquor to the value of $30,000. The St. Clair Theriault, liquor to the value of 100-000, with liquor ostensibly for Havana.

YOUNG ITALIANS FOLLOW RUDOLPH

Florence, Italy, May 3.—Agitations to follow the late Rudolph Valentino in to film fame has cost a number of young Italians several hundred thousand lire, according to police, who have arrested four directors of an allegedly fraudulent motion picture school. One of those arrested is said to be Count Montalbano.

One assistant, Luigi Malano, is said to have paid 67,000 lire before he discovered that the school was doing nothing to launch him in the film world. The police assert that the directors of the enterprise have practiced systematic frauds over a long period, victimizing students from rich families from whom they collected large sums supposedly for arranging trials

CARRIED WIFE TO BED

Suffered So She Could Not Walk. Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Minesing, Ontario.—"I am a practical nurse and I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to suffering women. For three months I was almost helpless and could not sit at the table long enough to drink a cup of tea. Many a time my husband carried me to bed, I would be so weak. Then he read in the paper of a woman suffering as I did who got better after taking the Vegetable Compound, so he went and got it for me. When I had taken three bottles I was just like a new woman and have had splendid health ever since. When I feel any bearing-down pains I always take it; sometimes a half bottle or whatever I need. It is my only medicine and I have told many a one about it. Any one wanting to know more about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I will gladly write to her. In all I can to recommend it for I feel I owe my life and strength to it."—Mrs. Neil Bowser, R.R. 1, Minesing, Ontario.

Do you feel broken-down, nervous, and weak sometimes? Do you have this horrid feeling of fear which sometimes comes to women when they are not well? Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is excellent to take at such a time. It always helps, and if taken regularly and persistently will relieve this condition.

BEST AMBITION TO BE SNAPPY GOOD REPORTER

Annapolis, Md., May 5.—One can have no higher ambition than to be a good reporter, Edward McKernan, Eastern Superintendent of The Associated Press, said in an address to the second Tri-State Interscholastic Press Conference at St. John's College. "If I may make bold to suggest anything to you who are contemplating journalism as a profession, it is that you condern yourselves first of all with your stock of mind. The important thing now is your conception of journalism.

"If by any chance you see in journalism only an opportunity to play upon the human emotions; to try to paint the lily of facts and with side and groups and shades make stable that which has no essential importance as news; then, I beg of you, renounce this 'journalism' and be content to make an honest living.

"Journalism is the profession of observing and reflecting the facts and is our mission. The future of society significance of current events. That is in our keeping. For as the million read, so will they think and act. The business of thinking has been taken over by the masses. If they don't think straight, we are lost. They can't think straight unless they get straight information, and by straight information, I mean through the news columns of the daily press a picture of things as they are.

"In this day when the influence of the newspaper is far beyond that of any other secular agency, one cannot have a higher ambition than to be a good reporter."

STUDEBAKER'S Jubilee Car for Canada's Diamond Jubilee

94 YEARS OLD

Captain John Yeit, Famous Mariner Maintains His Good Health

Conneaut, May 6.—Capt. John Yeit will celebrate his ninety-fourth birthday anniversary on Sunday, May 7th. He was born in Kingston in 1833. Capt. Yeit was the owner of a large farm on Wolfe Island where he lived for years and then moving to Belleville, where his children attended high school and college. Capt. Yeit, owned several sailing vessels plying between Canada and the United States and was responsible for the carrying of large quantities of grain and lumber across the lacker. He is still in good health and home quietly at his home in Prince Edward County. A. R. Yeit insurance agent, of Conneaut, is his son.

CANADA and Studebaker jointly celebrate their Diamond Jubilee during 1927. To mark its years of steady growth, Studebaker announced the new Erskine Six. Cities throughout Canada from Halifax to Vancouver have joined London and Paris and other Old World capitals in praising this new type car. Big car comfort—plus small car agility and economy!

Canadians have proved the Erskine Six has ample power and road clearance for rocky trails or rutted roads. Hills level out before this new car which climbs an 11½ grade in high! Old Quebec's narrow streets are easy for this car that turns in an 18-foot radius! Acceleration from 5 to 25 miles per hour in 8½ seconds in Toronto traffic or near the Windsor ferries!

Four-wheel brakes and a low-swung steel body insure utmost safety. Balloon tires smooth cobbled streets or rough roads.

The Dietrich-designed beauty of the new Erskine Six Custom Sedan reflects the newest mode in motoring. This quiet coupe-sedan displays unusual thriftiness. A few minutes behind the wheel will convince you that this car has Canadian sturdiness and the ability to carry on, whether your route leads across town or across country.

See—ride—and drive the Erskine Six—we will gladly place one at your disposal to test for yourself.

SPORE TRAPS TO BE SET IN WEST

Regina, Sask., May 1.—The study of the movement of air-borne spores of black stem rust of wheat and oats, is being made by the Dominion Laboratory of plant pathology University of Saskatchewan, and the Dominion rust station at Winnipeg.

With the object of securing more information on this subject, spore traps will be set at a number of strategic points throughout the west this spring. These traps are small affairs made of tin, mounted on poles, or otherwise suspended in the air.

They are filled with glass slides smeared with vaseline which catch the spores in the air. By examining the spots under a microscope, information can be gained of the number of spores in the air and of their nature, also the time when the spores arrived in this country.

They are filled with glass slides, which travel on from the south, working up the Mississippi Valley gradually as the crops mature and the disease develops. Coming up the Red river, the spores are believed to spread out fan-like, covering the whole of the west, providing conditions are favorable. It is thought that some of the spores appear in this country on certain plants.

BIG INCREASE IN EMIGRATION

London, May 1.—There has been a notable increase in emigration to Canada in the first three months of this year as compared with the corresponding quarter of 1926. The first quarter figures were 16,243 compared with 6,236 a year ago. Emigration does not reach its peak until May and it is expected that the movement to Canada this year will show an increase of at least 60 per cent. over the preceding year, and the figures for 1926 were 6 per cent. higher than those for 1925.

It is stated at the offices of the Canadian Government in London that a very good class of immigrant is being secured and that the desire to settle in Canada is shown by the fact

BELLE THEATRE

A story of the great open spaces with nary a cowboy, Indian or dirty-dog villain. A tale of Canada with hardly any snow and not a single Northwoods Mounted Policeman. If it were only for the absence of these two features Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount feature, "The Canadian," which arrives at the Belle Theatre Monday would be a fine picture! But add a stirring plot, core that won success on the stage as "Clarence" Meighan's "The Land of Promise."

Meighan enacts the part of a wheat harvester who works for his friend, Wyndham Standing, in an effort to finance a return to his own fields. While living with Standing, he meets the latter's sister, Mona Palma, a young English woman just arrived in the provinces after having lost all her money. The new mode of living comes hard and the soon embroils herself with Standing's wife, Dale Fuller. Knowing that Meighan is "looking for a wife who will work," she offers herself and he takes her to his little cabin, off in the center of a vast wilderness of wheat.

The Canadian's eternal struggle with the climate for a living, and the vast underlying drama in which a he-man

REDS WIN FROM BOSTON BRAVES

Kelly Poles Long Homer Over Left Field Wall

New York, May 7.—The start of the eastern invasion by the western clubs of the National League was set for yesterday, but only one game of four scheduled was played, rain interfering with the inter-sectional contests here and at Philadelphia and Brooklyn.

In the lone encounter, the Cincinnati Reds triumphed over the Braves at Boston by a 5 to 3 count, Carl Mays twirled for the invaders and chalked up his first victory of the year.

In the opening inning Kelly poled out a homer over the left-field wall, a feat that had been accomplished only twice before. Ethan Allen led the Cincinnati attack with a homer and two singles in four times at bat.

New York, May 7.—No games were played in the American League yesterday, rain interfering with the Cleveland-St. Louis contest, the only one scheduled. The invasion of the west by the eastern teams gets under way today.

HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP. FISHING IN CANADA

Montreal, May 7.—Gene Tunney, heavyweight boxing champion of the world, passed through the city yesterday morning en route to Five Finger Lake, in the Labelle district, where the title-holder will spend a few days in search of speckled trout. Tunney is accompanied on the jaunt by W. O. McGeehan, sports-editor of the New York Herald-Tribune, and W. A. Davenport, of Collier's Weekly.

The champion was only in town a few hours. He arrived at Windsor Station at 8.55 a.m. and, after a morning spent in preparation for the trip north, left Place Viger station for Macana from where he will motor to Five Pinger Lake. Among others, Tunney was introduced to President E. W. Beatty of the Canadian Pacific Railways. He will spend next Tuesday in Montreal, on the return trip to New York.

The conqueror of Jack Dempsey would divulge nothing concerning his future plans of activity in the ring other than that he would accept the challenge of the winner of Tex Rickard's heavyweight elimination series.

LEAFS SQUEEZE OUT 6-5 VICTORY

Cobb Strains Tendon In Exhibition Tilt With Bisons

Toronto, May 7.—The Toronto Leafs won their seventh straight game when they nosed out the Buffalo Bisons in the 2nd game of the series here yesterday. Howard was batted hard by the Leafs in the first two innings and gave way to Twombley in the second.

Errors behind Heath's good pitching accounted for the Maroons runs two scoring in the first when Hargrave dropped a pop over the pitcher's box, Andy Harrington also contributed two costly misplays.

The Bears threatened in the ninth but with one man on base Manager Fohl sent in Faulkner to do the pitching. Conlan went out stealing and Conroy, batting for Hawks, was called out on strikes to end the game.

By virtue of their victory, the Leafs gained half a game on the leading Buffalo Bisons, who were playing an exhibition game with the Philadelphia Americans. During the Buffalo Athletics contest, the veteran star Cobb, pulled a tendon in his left leg and will be out of the game for several days.

Syracuse and Rochester were the other International winners, the Stars trouncing Jersey City, 8 to 3, after getting away to a four-run lead in the first inning. Both teams made ter hits apiece, but the Jerseyites were held in check at crucial moments by Hallahan. Reading outbit Rochester 12 to 10, but the Cubs managed to bunch their singles to good advantage and score a 10 to 7 victory.

Ending Costly Maintenance Means MORE NEW MILEAGE

Permanent CONCRETE HIGHWAYS

CANADA CEMENT CONCRETE FOR PERMANENCE

You cannot spend large sums maintaining non-permanent roads and at the same time build the new mileage modern traffic demands.

The solution is, to end costly maintenance by embarking on a programme of permanent concrete highway building. Many communities took time by the forelock and built with concrete at the outset. Today, they are reaping such benefit from their foresight that other communities are hastening to fall in line to discontangle economically the snarl caused by inadequate roads and swiftly-growing traffic.

Concrete roads completely end costly upkeep. They withstand the heaviest traffic under all conditions, providing a safe, even driving surface for all types of vehicles.

They cut gas, tire and car repair bills twenty-five per cent and more, invite tourist traffic, aid industry and add to the joy of living. By all means advocate them.

"It's the little they cost to maintain that makes concrete the most economical."

REFUSED TO LET COMMISSION SEE INCOME RECORDS

Hon. N. W. Rowell Wanted to Examine Returns of Witness

REJECTS SUGGESTION

Freight Agent Got $1000 a Car For Bogus Bills of Lading

Windsor, Ont., May 6.—The Royal Customs Commission was refused written authorization this morning to examine the income tax returns of a witness. O. Paquette, Lissar executor at Lasalle, was asked by Hon. N. W. Rowell, K. C., commission counsel, for a letter which would permit the auditor to go into his income returns. He declined to give the letter. "All right" said Mr. Rowell briefly.

There was no inquiry into the income tax returns of S. J. Beck, former Camdian Mutual freight agent at Walkerville, who admitted taking money by signing dupe bills of lading which were not genuine. He said yesterday, that he was paid at the rate of about $1,000 a carload. Today, he told Mr. Rowell that he had made the payments in his income tax return a few weeks ago.

The payments, according to evidence, were made in 1923 and 1924 but he had not returned the mat the time made. The cash which he received and which Mr. Rowell, on the basis of 22 carloads, estimated at $22,000, he had kept in a safe deposit, he said. The commission expects to conclude the Windsor sittings today. Sittings in Hamilton will open on Monday.

WEAK AND NERVOUS

The Condition of a P. E. I. Lady Who Again Rejoices in Good Health.

"I can most heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all weak and nervous people," says Mrs. Augustin Arsenault, Wellington Station, P.E.I. "Before I began their use I was very weak and nervous. I had always worked hard, with no thought of my health, until suddenly my strength left me. I began to feel tired and depressed, and did not sleep well. Gradually I got so tired in the morning as when I went to bed at night. I began to feel discouraged when I would think of the work necessary for me to do. I got some medicine from the doctor whom I consulted, but it did not appear to meet my case as I showed no improvement while taking it. Then a neighbor advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got a supply of this medicine. I very soon found they were helping me, and I continued their use until I was well again, and I have been strong and well ever since."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do one thing—and do it well. They build up, purify and enrich the blood, and as the blood supplies the whole body, new life is given to the entire system. Better sleep, steady nerves, improved appetite, increased vigor—all these can be yours by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Begin to-day. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

JUST IN PASSING

The past is dead, yet echoes still remain;
Sweet memories of love, sad memories of pain.
Then let us learn of each, and day by day
Strive to retain the good and thrown the dross away.
The truth will live; we only need the real
To guide us onward to the Great Ideal."

A WONDERFUL PRAYER.

Give us work and safety and the quiet mind. Spare us to our friends and soften us to our enemies. Bless us if it may be. In all our innocent endeavors. If it may not give us the strength to encounter that which is to come. That we be brave in peril constant in tribulation, temperate in wrath and in all changes of fortune, and down to the gates of death loyal and true to one another.
ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

PAPER FIENDS.

Picnic weather will be with us soon and the paper fiend's hands will grow all the itchier. Why, oh why, will people throw seas of paper, orange rinds and banana skins, all decorated, and clutter up the landscape? Perhaps if they were to revisit the scene the next morning and view results, they might change their ways. I wonder! Sometimes I am convinced there is no cure for this curse. And yet it takes such a little bit of time and effort to dispose of picnic refuse properly and effectively.

WOODLAND PATHS.

The automobile is wooing us away from the woodland paths with their beauty and freshness. There is nothing like a wood path to bring healing to a weary heart. Birds are near and you will quickly find its charm. It wanders hither and thither, now up little hills, now down a hollow mossy with ferns and perhaps a little brook all the bottom with its mossy stones and gurgling ways. Then give yourself up to the charm of the woodland voices, voices never heard on the high ways. The breeze murmurs as it drifts idly through the tree tops. There is the incessant sound of insect life—insects and there is the exquisite music of birds, each with its own note. Then let us often leave the dusty streets and take time to follow a woodland trail. Let the Duke in "As You Like It," be our guide.

Plant tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in everything."

Answers to Correspondents

AUNTIE—I am glad to be able to finish your quotation. The verse in full runs:—

"Happy the man, and happy he alone
He who can call today his own;
He, who secure within himself, can say
Tomorrow, do thy worst, for I have lived today."

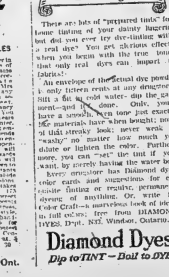

HOUSEWIFE—This is an excellent home recipe to remove the hatband. Put into a jar capable of holding 2 lbs. one handful each of soda, whiting and soft soap. Fill the jar with boiling water and stand it on the range. Stir contents until well mixed. When cold or used for use pour as much as you need in a saucer and with a flannel dipped into it, rub well on the hath. Then rinse thoroughly. This is an old English recipe. You will have to prepare it first in a dish that will stand the heat and then bottle it. You can prepare the soft soap from some farmer perhaps.

STRANGER—Thanks for your interesting letter. Have I point out that money produces many instances of men who became eminent late in life. Oliver Cromwell was a failure as a country gentleman until he was forty-three. Blake never stood on a quarter deck till he had entered his fiftieth year. William de Morgan was over sixty when his first book was published. Joseph Conrad was a middle-aged man when literary fame came to him. And probably the richest man in the world today Henry Ford, was keeping a small bicycle shop up to the age of forty. So please do not let that idea of "too old at forty" assume any more terrors for you. I do not know that quotation from Browning, nor does it sound a bit like him. May I draw your attention instead to his "Rabbi Ben Ezra" and to one quotation from "Andrea Del Sarto" I think:

"A man's reach should exceed his grasp,
Or what's a heaven for?"

LET ME TELL YOU

If a material is scorched fairly lightly, it should be let out in the sunshine, when most of the marks will disappear. For a whitening cream substitute mash well ripened bananas with a silver fork add the white of an egg and beat still. A "stain" of lemon juice will improve the flavor of a soup, but do not add it after the yolks of egg or milk or it will curdle it. Fish should be rubbed with salt and washed before use.

Cold-Water Tinting

These are lots of "prepared tints" for home tinting of your dainty lingerie, but did you ever try dye-tinting with a real dye? Such charming effects when you begin with the true tones that only real dyes can impart to fabrics!

An envelope of the original dye powder is only fifteen cents at any druggist. Sift a bit to cold water—use the garment—and be amazed at the quick, even tone you get exactly as you want it. Even tone just exactly like materials have when brand new, of that evenness you never seek or "wash" no matter how much you dilute or lighten the color. Further—you can "set" the tint if you want, by merely having the water boil a few minutes—but Diamond dyes' color cards and suggestions for exquisite tinting or tinting, permanent tinting for current garments, are worth their weight in gold. Write for them, free, from DIAMOND DYES, Dept. 321, Windsor, Ontario.

JUST IN PASSING

The past is dead, yet echoes still remain;
Sweet memories of love, sad memories of pain.
Then let us learn of each, and day by day
Strive to retain the good and thrown the dross away.
The truth will live; we only need the real
To guide us onward to the Great Ideal."

A WONDERFUL PRAYER.

Give us work and safety and the quiet mind. Spare us to our friends and soften us to our enemies. Bless us if it may be. In all our innocent endeavors. If it may not give us the strength to encounter that which is to come. That we be brave in peril constant in tribulation, temperate in wrath and in all changes of fortune, and down to the gates of death loyal and true to one another.
ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

PAPER FIENDS.

Picnic weather will be with us soon and the paper fiend's hands will grow all the itchier. Why, oh why, will people throw seas of paper, orange rinds and banana skins, all decorated, and clutter up the landscape? Perhaps if they were to revisit the scene the next morning and view results, they might change their ways. I wonder! Sometimes I am convinced there is no cure for this curse. And yet it takes such a little bit of time and effort to dispose of picnic refuse properly and effectively.

WOODLAND PATHS.

The automobile is wooing us away from the woodland paths with their beauty and freshness. There is nothing like a wood path to bring healing to a weary heart. Birds are near and you will quickly find its charm. It wanders hither and thither, now up little hills, now down a hollow mossy with ferns and perhaps a little brook all the bottom with its mossy stones and gurgling ways. Then give yourself up to the charm of the woodland voices, voices never heard on the high ways. The breeze murmurs as it drifts idly through the tree tops. There is the incessant sound of insect life—insects and there is the exquisite music of birds, each with its own note. Then let us often leave the dusty streets and take time to follow a woodland trail. Let the Duke in "As You Like It," be our guide.

Plant tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in everything."

THE SONG OF SPARROW

Sweet! Sweet! Sweet! See-sir-oh-see!
Canada is sweet to me!
So the sparrow sang returning,
Sings, his little glad heart burning.

Scarce a leaf or bud appears,
Still he sings and nothing fears—
April snow may yet be fallen;
Spite of all that raptured calling.

Sings he of long sunlit hours,
Greening grass, fruit waking flowers;
Love and joy his every line,
While those notes so ripples, rilling.

Softer grows the sky each day,
Winter's chill seems far away;
Summer birds are gathered singing,
Following that insistent singing.

Sweet! Sweet! Sweet! See-sir-oh-see!
Canada is sweet to me!
Of the happiest souls we weary:
To Canada come! Come, my dearie!

—Florence Westacott.

"WHEN."

When you can say, "As I have sowed,
I am content to reap."
When you have got to bed at night, and know full well you'll sleep.
When you can rise each morning with a sincere good will to clear,
When you can look in all men's eyes without a qualm or fear.
When you can say, "Forgive me all my trespasses, O God.
As I've forgiven others as I life's path have trod."
And fear not retribution can be meted out to you,
When you can say, "All that I've done
I once again would do."

You'll be a son I'm proud of, son o'mine.

When all God's ten commondments you can read and to each one
Say with a good clear conscience, "My God, I've broken none."
When you can say, "No woman can speak ill words of me."
When you can say, "There is no man
I am ashamed to see."
When you can look your father fairly squarely in the face,
When you can face your mother with no shadow of disgrace.
When you can to your Maker as you retire at night,
Say "God, I am contented, I've lived today aright."
You'll be a son I' proud of, son
o' mine.

When you can see your hopes and aims come tumbling with a crash
And still can hold your conscience above the price of cash.
When you can, face accusers and tell them straight they lie,
And still fight life's battle, though you're nearly fit to die.
When you can tell all proudly, "Myself
I live with, so
I want to feel I' worthy, fit for myself to know."
When lies and words, "It might have been," can bring you no regret,
And you face the future bravely with no past that you'd forget.
You'll be a son I'm proud of, son
o' mine.

The Irony of Love
By Charles Garvice

Rafe was not in sight, and she walked slowly along the terrace. The window of his den was open, and she looked in. Rafe was not there, but on one of the great chairs. His pipe had fallen from his lips on to the carpet. He was slumped the deep and heavy sleep of exhaustion. She stood for a moment, looking at him, unconsciously noting the grace and strength of his figure, the manliness, the dignity and yet the youthfulness of his face. The expression now relaxed by relief and slumber.

Then she was turning away her eyes fell on the pipe again; it might be a still smoldering and dangerous. She stepped over the threshold softly, crossed the room as noiselessly, and stooped to pick up the pipe. As she rose, she trod on the loose tea gown she had taken at dinner from Rafe's library, and though she touched him but lightly as she swayed, he woke for Rafe's sleep was always like that of the dog with one eye open, so to speak, and every sense ready to spring into alertness.

He looked at her for a moment, as he had looked at him on her return to consciousness; he had been dreaming of her, and memory of her was vividly in that the vision of sleep seemed absolute reality; and now it was real, for she stood with a long-drawn breath of a sigh, he rose slowly, and stretched out his arms.

"Maudie!" he said, in a low voice, the voice of a man still wandering in the land of dreams.

She did not move, but stood still, her eyes meeting his, her lips parted, her bowed breath coming almost painfully; for there was no mistaking the look in his eyes, the tone of that "Maudie!" In an instant the great arms had closed round her and he had drawn her to him in a close embrace.

"Maudie!" he breathed, his eyes looking into hers. "Oh, I have you here! I can't believe it—I must tell you! Say I love you, I love you!"

Telling His Love

As Rafe's arms closed round her, Maudie, very pale, almost breathless, looked up at him, and, as she saw his face, a kind of wonder overwhelmed all other sensations in her mind. Was this face was unlike Rafe's. It was transformed from a boy's to that of a man, intense and strained, almost fierce in the expression of his eyes, in the straight line of his lips. Somehow she had never seen Rafe in a moment of intensity; she had never seen him in a really commanding zone, when the issue of the fight hung in the balance; she had never seen him fighting for life with a genuine fire singeing his horse's heels. She had been accustomed to Rafe's smiling face, to his setter aspect; for even when he had thrashed the cruel driver the smile was still there, the smile of conscious strength of unruffled good humor.

At that moment, when she realized that there was another Strangtye, a man of dominant passions, capable of an intense agony, there slipped from her the last vestige of shame which had been raised against him by reason of his unconventional manners and his casual manners. She had loved him for some time, but now, as she looked, by this new strength in his face, by the power with her love, the awe of a woman who can worship as well as love, the man to whom she has given her heart.

Rafe was fully awake now and realized what he was doing. He expected her to shrink from him, to utter a note of indignation, to overwhelm him with her contempt and scorn. He was ready to bow before the storm—but not quite ready; for, even in spite of the passion of love which had carried him away, was the desire to do justice to himself, to lay his heart bare before her, so that, even if she could not forgive it, she would understand how it was with him. He thought that she was too startled, too horrified, to attempt to speak, and before she could do so, he meant to tell her—every thing.

"Don't speak," he said, in a low voice, stern and almost hard in its intensity. "I want to tell you—I must think me a brute, Maudie; you think me everything that's bad, I'm not; but I can't help myself—it's as if another man had got inside me and taken me over. I'd been drinking, I—you—you came suddenly, and the heart of me got strong lower. I was when you came into the room that day I turned up at the house. I'd never seen any one like you,—you took my senses away. Yes, Maudie, it was like that. It was as if something had gone out from me, some strength or something that would never come back

A Scotsman stood a Yorkshireman a drink and wished a very long time for the return.

The latter's pipe went out, and he drew a match slowly from his pocket and eyed the damp table morosely. Scotsman said a slight dry spot to strike my match on," he grumbled—"it's there on," put in the Scot, quick as thought, "whit about tryin' ma tongue?"

TO THE FRIGS AND SNOBS

Take a walk around the graveyard and realize your ultimate value.

Mrs. Brother Tree tells that in one of his productions there were two very beautiful ladies, one blind and one not so thin. They quarelled at rehearsal. "Please remember," said the thin one, "I am a blind." "Yes," said the other beautiful lady eyeing her long, slender form, "but you would look eighty shillins in nae business at all it's just charity!"

It wasn't because you were the most beautiful thing I'd ever seen; it wasn't because you were different from any girl, any woman, I'd ever known. You were, of course, but it wasn't any of that something in you, yourself. Maude, when I looked at you, I remembered—how shall I put it?—perhaps put I must tell you: I've got to tell you everything—I remembered a camp with a parson chap came down to Jumping Jane with some folks that were in the church he belonged to; they sang some hymns—Maude, I felt that day, as I looked at you as if I were listening to those hymns. You see, you were so far above me, so delicate—so—so—afraid to touch—I only wanted to look at you, to listen to you. I felt as if I were—a kind of rough an I felt as if I were a stand up before you, as if I ought to be lying at your feet. Something for a touch of your hand, just the kind of touch you lay on a dog's head.

SUBS WILL BE LARGEST YET IN USE IN NAVIES

London, May 2. (C. P.)—The two submarines for the Australian Navy, of which the first, H.M.A.S., Oxley, is now in commission, are with one exception the largest and most effective in the world. The only exception is the giant X-1 of the Royal Navy just constructed. Both the Australian vessels are larger than the Oberon, which was laid down with the X, 1 as the largest submarines of the British Navy.

Constructional details of the Australian craft are closely guarded. It is known however, that they have a surface displacement of 1,400 tons and underwater displacement of 1,800 tons. They are understood to be faster than anything under water except the X1. The increase in submerged speed is the chief aim of the submarine designer. While Italy is believed to have progressed most in equalizing the submerged and surface speeds, the Australian sub marines cannot be compared with the Italians because their speed is not disclosed; neither is their their arma ment.

The New and Finer PONTIAC SIX

Youthful, Rakish, Colorful

AT NEW LOW PRICES

EVER since the Pontiac Six flashed into the market, folks have been wondering, when will General Motors build a sport roadster on the Pontiac Six chassis? How soon will Pontiac Six power, speed, beauty and endurance be offered in a dashing, low-swung, two to four passenger type?"

Now . . . here it is! As lithe as a thoroughbred, as happy as a lark, as smart as a debutante just back from Paris.

Lucerne Blue is the prevailing color—Lucerne Blue Duco heightened by striping in Faerie Red. You never saw a sport roadster quite like this—quite as alert, as intimate, as refreshing to the eye. And if there's youth in your blood—or youth in years—you'll be wanting it one day soon—because it's a splendid quality car, through and through. PT-2520

Nerves on Edge

When the nerves go wrong everything is wrong.

The whole human body including each and every organ is dependent on the nervous system for energy and direction.

When nerve force becomes exhausted the organs fail in their functions and the result is discomfort and pain.

Headache, neuritis, sciatic-rheumatism are often developed. But there is also restlessness, nervousness, irritability, sleeplessness and depression and discouragement.

To regain health and vigor the nervous system must be restored by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

The use of narcotics and opiates only relieve pain at terrible expense to the nervous system. Lasting relief can only come by feeding the nerves. Your system has failed to do this and it is therefore necessary to employ Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to bring the nervous system back to normal.

COAST GUARDS A TERROR TO ALL LIQUOR RUNNERS

Rum Rows Have Practically Ceased To Exist Along Coast

New York, May 2.—To rum runners who know the Coast Guard radio code intercepted messages that "Sen Pat" is on their trail bring the shiver of fear and the inner conviction that they days as liquor smugglers are numbered, Lieutenant Commander S. S. Wearden, aide to Admiral Billard, revealed, after a trip along the seaboard from the Virginia capes to New York.

"Sen Pat is the sea-going boss of the Coast Guard districts," he said, "and the guardsmen under him are the ones really responsible for the fact that 100,000 square miles of water which formerly composed the various concentrated points of the liquor runners are now cleared of all but occasional smugglers."

He explained that "Sen Pat" is the code designation for Senior Patrol Officer, the man who stays at sea in each district in actual direct charge of all Coast Guard activities. These officers are all full commanders who have served between 25 and 30 years in Coast Guard uniform.

Because of the untiring work of the guardsmen under the various "Sen Pats" along the coast, he said, the dozen or so rum rows which used to be fixtures all the way from Maine to Florida above ceased to exist. The big syndicates have been broken up and now only the desperate 'independents' operating single boats, still hope to make a living in the pavement of officials.

"There have been no Coast Guard 'drives' against the rum runners," Commander Yearside said, "and there will be none. It's the steady, unexplaining plugging of the enlisted men through three winters that have caused hardship and considerable loss of life that has done the trick. Not that the navy is any the less efficient nor do we expect to make it so. But the boys have broken up the distributing centers over 100,000 square miles and they are patrolling that area constantly to keep it as clear as human perserverance can."

WOMEN IN IRELAND TAKE UP SMOKING WITH RARE SPIRIT

Dublin, Ireland, April. 25.—There is something wrong with the women of Ireland. The only people who didn't think so are apparently the young men. And they are asking as many girls to dance with them and flirt with them and get married to them as ever they did. In fact marriage is on the top grade here.

But the bishops are strong in their disapproval of the dress of the girls The minister of justice says nothing still ever make them the equals of men intellectually, and now 10,000nists have joined the chorus and say romen are doing most of the smoking in the Free State. Some woman her sex, smoke on an average of 100 igarettes a day and the average young wife and business girl smokes ten a lay. Certainly smoking is on the increase here. Women smoke in trains and offices, at committees, teas and lances, in fact everywhere. It's becoming to be a delicate point of decision as to whether they don't smoke more than men.

When the minister for posts and tels graphs said he wished he had none of them on his staff and, finally Sir James Craig, member for Trinity College, dramatically told the Dail, "God knows I don't think anything would please them. At all events, I have no desire to try to please them." That outburst was in consequence of women's societies demanding that women should give equal jury service with men. The Dail however, insists that only those women should be allowed the privilege who demanded it in writing.

NEW COINS MAY MARK JUBILEE

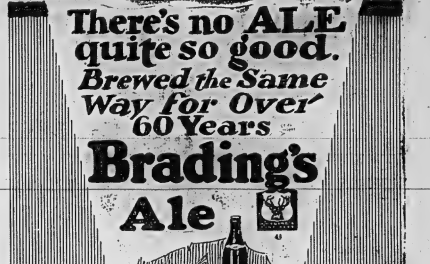

Canadian Artists Asked to Submit Designs to Committee

Ottawa, May 2—The National Committee for the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation has decided to invite Canadian artists to submit designs for the reverses of the following Canadian coins: Bronze, 1 cent; nickle, 5 cents; silver, 10 cents and 25 cents.

A committee of judges to be appointed by the National Committee, will report on the merits of the designs submitted, and a premium of $500 will be awarded to the best design for each coin mentioned, provided, however, such design is considered of sufficient merit to be recommended by the judges to the Minister of Finance for use in the Canadian coinage.

The competition, which will close on June 15, will be governed by certain conditions which may be secured by artists from the National Committee, the address of which is 106 Wellington Street, Ottawa. It is stated, however, that each design must include some reference, either symbolically or in its legend, to the inaugration of Confederation, or to its sixtieth anniversary, about to be celebrated. The winning designs will become the absolute property of the National Committee.

The proposed new coins are not simply to be commemorative, but will be permanent in their issue.

Body of Harry Tebo, 28, missing from Sutton since October, was found in Lake Simcoe near Snake Island.

RUSSIAN CITY IS FINE PLACE

Leningrad, May 4.—Leningrad is believed to have shattered all records, Russian or foreign, for drunkenness, suicides and murders. During one week recently the record figure of 5124 persons arrested for drunkenness, was reached.

At the newly-established government institute for the cure of inebriety and the drug habit, long lines of men, women and even children wait daily for treatment. The waiting list numbers many thousands and extends into June.

There are seldom less than three murders a day. Many of them are committed by jealous lovers and the motive often is petty robbery.

Scientifically Designed

Balloon Tire Tread

Low pressure conditions distribute most of the weight and wear toward the outer edges of the Balloon Tread, so that is where Firestone engineers place most of the rubber. At the direct center is a deep grove, between two narrow flexing rider strips and flanked by additional grooves, which nearly close up when the rubber spreads out as the tire is placed under load. Next come the wide outer rider strips with numerous sharp-edge projections for non-skid qualities. These projections are small to permit the tread to yield to irregularities and cling to the road. The carcass of the Balloon Tire must have the qualifications to withstand the extreme flexing which this tread permits. Firestone provides extra strength and endurance by dipping the cords of the carcass in a rubber solution, which completely saturates and insulates every fiber of every cord, insuring the highest degree of economy, safety and comfort.

HAVE TO FIGURE UPON EXCITED BIG SPECTATORS

Epsom, England, April 29.—Excited spectators at sports events weigh a great deal more than persons who are conchalant and sit still.

In the building of grandstands, such as the one just completed here for the recent opening of the spring racing meet, this fact had to be taken into consideration by the architects. The Epsom stand and similar structures are designed to bear not only the approximate weight of the spectators they will comfortably accomodate, but also the weight of their excitement, which at times more than doubles.

It has been calculated by British architects that if a grandstand is designed to hold a crowd expected to weigh normally 300 tons, a foundation and supports must be provided which will stand the weight of at least 1,000 tons.

They explain this by the fact that when people are excited they weigh considerably more than when sitting still. A crouching person adds 60 to 65 per cent to his weight in straightening himself up, and to rise from a sitting position adds fiearly 80 per cent to his weight. By rising with a sudden jerk, as spectators are apt to do at exciting moments, it has been estimated that it is possible to add momentarily more than 150 per cent to one's weight.

FARM WOMEN TO HAVE SAME VOTE?

Chesley, Ont., April. 26.—(Canadian Press)—The "Enterprise" denounces something which it describes as "old foeyism." If joint owners or tenants, the wives of property owners and tenants have voted at municipal elections. In townships, farmers' sons over 21 years have had municipal votes since away back in the seventies. A bill introduced by a Progressive member in the Legislature at last session to give farmers' daughters over 21 a municipal vote too did not receive favorable consideration and fell by the wayside. Farmers' daughters over 21 have a Parliamentary vote the same as farmers' sons and if the girls are qualified to pass judgment on who should represent the people in the Legislature and House of Commons why shouldn't they have the privilege of electing mayors and councillors? It's only a piece of old foeyism to keep the girls on the farm from having the same rights as their brothers.

Body of Mrs. M. A. Doak, wife of the comptroller of the B. E. Steel Corporation, was found in her garage at Sydney, N.S. It is believed she was overcome by carbon-monoxide gas.

THE NEWEST IN KITCHEN TOOLS MADE IN CITY

Belleville Electric & Stamping Begin Production of Handy Tool

At last! An invention which promises to make life for the housewife worth living around his kitchen. It's absolutely the newest device on the market, invented just a short time ago and what's more, will be manufactured right here in Belleville by the Belleville Electric and Stampings Limited, makers of the famous Redi-Heat Electric Appliances, Electric Irons, Heaters, etc.

The tool in question, production of which commenced this week, is known as the "10 in 1" Combination Tool. There are ten handy tools all in one. At the top is a tempered steel screw driver, a steel hammer and a hardened steel nail puller. Next comes a bottle opener and a high carbon knife sharpener, in the centre, a cork screw and below it a handy table of weights and measures; a six inch steel rule, a can opener and finally a 6 inch scale hook, weighing anything up to fifteen pounds.

And there you are—the ten of them all combined in one tool, throughout of high carbon steel and stout enough to serve well any and all of its many uses.

The new combination tool is the invention of Major Alderson, of Kingston, and was patented in Canada in 1926. Major Alderson is President of the Tool and Engineering Company of Kingston for which Belleville Ltd. and S. Ltd. are producing this handy invension. Mr. Charles Hanna of the Walker Hardware is a director of the Kingston Company, and the new tool will shortly be on display in that store.

Already close to 10,000 have been ordered with the special machinery necessary to install to produce the tool. Belleville E. and S. Ltd. are now in a position to turn out from 300 to 400 a day. The combination too, it is expected, will sell at about one dollar.

Production will not of course interfere in any way with the regular lines of this firm. The popular one and two burner electric plate burners are enjoying an excellent sale throughout present year bids fair to be an outstanding one in the history of Belleville Electric and Stampings Limited.

NOW IS TIME TO GET NEXT WINTER'S COAL

No sign yet of a coal strike this coming summer, and now more can tell just when one will appear. It seems to be more or less of a habit among the miners to strike about something—it doesn't matter much what—every year or so.

Coal prices are pretty low just now. They're a whole lot higher than we'd like to see them at that, but the fact remains that if the "black diamonds" alter in price in the near future, it will be an upward trend, not a downward one, so coal men predict.

So the safest way is to lay in your winter supply now, while coal is plentiful and prices are fairly reasonable. Then you'll have no fuss to worry over the other fellow, if strikes and resultant increased prices come along a little later.

The kind—you can't beat D.L. & W. Coal handled by Downey's at 30 Bridge street. It is better and will give you the utmost value for every dollar spent. Phone 149 for prompt service.

SECTIONAL GARAGES AVAILABLE CHEAP

Planning to erect a garage this spring? If you are, here's a suggestion—you may have a sectional pine garage built to your own specifications of first quality lumber and for considerably less than the price of a metal garage of similar size would be.

E. D. Mott's Retail Lumber Yard at 41 Station street, Phone 1853, is the local firm which can provide you with the type of garage, and on short notice The garages are constructed in sections at the plant and assembled on your property.

Get in touch with E. D. Mott and talk it over. Why waste money on an expensive garage when one such as the above can be secured for comparatively little.

LESS BAKING IN AVERAGE HOME WITH MOTOR ERA

Up-to-Date Bake Shop Provides Much Of "Home Cooking"

The increasing popularity of the auto mobile has brought with it many changes, and here's one of them. No longer will the modern housewife spend hours and hours in a hot kitchen baking cakes of every description for her family. She doesn't even consider such a thing for she no longer takes the effort and time for it, not for a minute will she do it with the perfect highways and her smooth running motor beckoning her to the great outdoors. Of course, there is another reason: for the modern bake shop can provide homemade cakes and pastry just as good as mother herself used to make; and right here you have the solution to the baking problem.

Instead of spending hours at it. Mad ame simply jumps in her car and in five minutes has picked out all she needs from a most bright up-to-date bake shop. Belleville has several of these, chief among them Tarlington's which specializes in quality cakes, pies and doughnuts, and, by its efforts to provide its customers with these quality goods, using only te purest of ingredients, the services of expert bakers, and a courteous efficient staff all in spotlessly clean surroundings, is a attractive and appetizing a shopping attractive and appetizing a shopping

Drop in to Tarlington's next time you're passing and look over their supply of tasty cakes. You'll like them and will readily understand why so many women let Tarlington do their baking nowadays.

PLUMBING TO BE REGAL POSITION?

London, May 3.—Plumbing as a career is recommended to members of the British aristocracy by Arthur Wellesley, noted Tapsterdom, who points to the new fad of having expensively fitted bathrooms even in the smallest houses. There is no better paying business today, he declares.

Wetzall was a former inspector general of antiquities to the Egyptian government, and keeps up with the times by following modern plumbing. Women in particular, he contends, appear to take free or six dinners many hours a week as they did a few years ago.

There is no limit to the decorative incrusties which might be injected in to the plumbing business, he believes.

Snow is again falling at Edmonton, causing another delay in spring farm work.

HOUSTON LUMBER CO. WILL OPEN IN CITY MAY 16

Belleville Will Eventually Be Made Head Office

On May 15th Belleville will add another progressive firm to its ever growing list, for on that date the Houston Company Limited of Tweed—Lumber Company—will open its Belleville branch in the former Steel Company plant, under the direction of Mr. F. E. Houston. Mr. Houston will shortly take up his residence in the city.

It is as yet not known definitely how many the local branch of the Houston Lumber Company Limited will employ, but an increasing number will be carried as the growth of the business warrants it. At the head office in Tweed as many as fifty men are employed by the company during the busy season and between thirty and forty during the slacker season of the year.

For the present the head office will remain in Tweed with the Belleville branch operated as a branch plant. Within a few months, however, Belleville will be made the head office of the company, and Tweed the branch.

Machinery has been ordered and will arrive in the near future. It was stated by the management the improvements to the local plant this year would not be very heavy; the stock would be increased and a new boiler will be installed in a fire proof cement building.

50 DUCO COLORS NOW AVAILABLE AT LOWER COST

Any Color Combination Wanted May Now Be Applied

Since bright car colors have become the order of the day, the comparatively new condition in one which has led to a new problem for the motor car re-finisher.

No further back than two years, the makers of the famous Duco Finish were turning out Duco in but six-teen standard shades. Cause the demand on the part of the public for variety in the color of new cars, and the makers in turn, in the motor field, prepared to satisfy that demand.

And with what result? Today no less than fifty shades are available to the motorist. Not only that, but those shades are available to local motorists, too, in having their car re-finished. In fact you may have your present car re-finished locally by the Authorized Duco Re-finished, Mr. Isaac Stephenson, in exactly the same color or color combinations as are used on the new cars turned out by any Canadian automobile maker today.

A visit to Mr. Stephenson's Shop in the Crouzsel Building will disclose an attractively gotten up book of samples and no matter what shade or combination of shades you would like, you will find exactly that shade available, and at no greater cost than the standard shades. In fact, for considerably less than the Duco prices of two years ago, you can have your car done. Ask the local Duco Re-finisher about your own particular wants.

BARONET DIES IN POOR HOUSE

London, May 4.—C.P.—After a vain struggle to make a living for his wife and eight children, a baronet and son of a former Lord Mayor of London has died in Brighton Poor Law Institution.

Only his wife and a few friends knew that the man was Sir James Herbert Renals, son of the late Sir Joseph Renals, who was Lord Mayor of London in 1894-5. Sir James found the struggle too much for him, and before the end had been forced to accept parish relief for himself and his family. After breaking with his family the baronet went to South Africa, where he held a responsible position in a gold mine. "I met him," said Lady Renals, "after his return from South Africa, twenty years ago, at the time of his father's death. He then had a considerable sum of money, but owing to bad investments it had all melted away. I have had a hard, very hard, struggle to keep my children's clothes. It is about them that I am worrying, for, I am quite willing to go on working in order to keep them. The best of it is little Herbert, aged seven years, is now under good treatment in a Brighton sanatorium."

NEW AND LARGER SITE FOR QUINTE ELECTRICIANS

Growing Electrical Firm Moves Into New Quarters

A rapidly increasing business bringing with it a demand for much greater space has brought about the expansion into bigger and more fitting surroundings of one of Belleville's newer businesses on Coleman street, the Quinte Electricians, and its affiliated business—Brooks Heating Station.

About two years ago Quinte Electricians entered the electric wiring field A competent staff backed by years of experience, quickly built up a good business, providing expert wiring service and high-class fixtures. Located in the Bills building, these premises were soon found inadequate for storage space, stock room, etc., and as a result the old Pringle factory adjacent and immediately to the south, was lately purchased.

Brooks Pilling Station, run in connection with Quinte Electricians, has been moved to one section of the new building, which is being entirely renovated and altered; and when completed will be a building which will greatly improve the appearance of Coleman street.

In the main display rooms and offices of Quinte Electricians will be placed a window eleven by six feet and the showroom itself will measure eighteen by twenty four feet, permitting proper display of fixtures, washing machines, etc., of which a large stock will be carried. The room will be attractively finished in cypress with a large stockroom immediately to the rear.

Accommodation in the building for car storage will be provided in connection with the service station and of the business and Shell and Marathon Gas Stations are being installed with wide drives in front and to the rear. Thus the motorists will find it a convenient and up-to-date Filling and Greasing Station. The exterior of the large building will be re-decorated and thus is another of Belleville's businesses expanding—indicating enough that "Business is Good."

Five magnificent charges from, poisen liquor dealer are laid against Phil Rouleau, a Levis, Que., bootlegger.

Otto Sargent Taken To Hospital With Badly Injured Side

MARRIED MAN

Unconscious When Picked Up—Vinol Emmerson Driver of Car

Otto Sargent, aged 30, an employee of the Akemlie Products Company, who resides at 223 Coleman street, is in the Belleville General Hospital suffering from a badly bruised right side and other minor injuries received when he was thrown from a bicycle when hit by a car at the corner of Bridge and Pinnacle streets today at noon.

The young man was proceeding south on Pinnacle street on the right hand side of the road when Vinol Emmerson, not a couple, was coming west on Bridge street. In making the turn north on Pinnacle street, not noticing Sargent in time to swing to the right he struck him with terrific force hurling him from the bicycle to the fender of his car. A crowd immediately assembled and Sargent was taken to the G.W.V.A. Express offices on Pinnacle street—in an innocuous condition. Dr. G. H. Noble was called and the man was taken to the hospital in the police ambulance by Chief Kidd and Detective Trualick. Sargent is a married man and has one child.

Inquiries at the hospital late this afternoon revealed that Sargent remains in much the same condition. He is suffering from the injuries and shock and will remain at the hospital for some time.

SIR HUGH MACDONALD INVITED TO KINGSTON

Kingston, May 9.—Mayor Price yesterday sent an invitation to Sir Hugh John Macdonald, of Winnipeg, son of Sir John A Macdonald and a native of Kingston, to attend the diamond jubilee celebration of Confederation in Kingston

LOCAL COUPLE MARRIED SAT.

Robert Bogle, Life-Long Resident, Weds Agnes Scrine

A romance of a few weeks in which one of Belleville's best known philanthropists is one of the chief figures culminated on Saturday afternoon in Toronto when Robert Bogle, well-known accountant, auditor and real estate broker and Agnes Mary Scrine, for fourteen years head milliner at Mrs. Harman's Millinery Store, were united in marriage.

The bride who came to Canada in Sargent, and Mrs. Harman from Brighton, England, was well-known in the city. Her marriage came as a surprise to her host of friends in Belleville who will wish her every happiness in the future.

Rev. Canon Cody officiated at the wedding which took place in St. Paul's Church, Toronto, in the presence of only immediate friends. After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the King Edward Hotel and will leave shortly for an extended trip to Ottawa, Quebec and Montreal, after which they will make their home in Belleville.

Mr. Bogle is one of the city's most ardent champions of the war veterans and has taken a helpful interest in the G.W.V.A. and on the occasion of its becoming merged with the Canadian Legion, generously announced his intention of bequeathing the newly formed Legion $10,000. He was one of the original prospectors into the Klondike and came to Canada at an early age from Scotland. He has resided in Belleville almost continuously for the past forty years and has taken a prominent part in many financial matters.

DIED ON SATURDAY

Hudson Maxim

Inventor of more deadly explosives than any other man of his time, who died on Saturday at his home at Lake Hopatcong, N.J., at the age of sixty-four. His death, due to anemia, ended his experiments to make naval torpedoes more destructive, a foe of the pacifist to the end he considered that the country was poorly equipped for the impending test of battles, in which he believed it would be involved.

ST. ANDREWS TO CELEBRATE THEIR 100 th ANNIVERSARY

It was announced in St. Andrew's Church yesterday by the pastor, Rev. R. G. Stewart, that arrangements have been completed for the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the Church. Mr. Stewart said that while it was considerably more than one hundred years since a Presbyterian service had been first held in Belleville, that as far as could be ascertained it was one hundred years since his first Church building was dedicated to the worship of God.

It was fitting said the Minister, that something more than an ordinary celebration should be held and to this end it had been arranged to have four Sundays of Anniversaries, namely October 30th, November 6th, 13th and 20th. Three distinguished preachers have been procured for the occasion, Rev. Stuart C. Parker of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, Rev. Dr. Joseph Hanley, of New York, and Rev. Charles H. Stewart, of Buffalo. BELLEVILLE MEN ARRESTED BY U.S. COAST OFFICERS

225 Bags of Ale Seized By Patrol Officials at Oswego, N. Y.

SECOND SEIZURE

William Moy Local Man On Rum-Running Vessel

(Special to The Intelligencer)

Oswego, N. Y., May 9.—Two more Belleville men, their boat and cargo of alleged Canadian ale, were seared by U. S. Coast Guard Picket Boat 2307, Captain George E. Jackson, commanding, in Lake Ontario, ten miles east of Oswego and two miles from shore, Saturday afternoon.

The Coast Guard brought their prizes to U. S. Customs dock, the boat and cargo of 225 bags of bottled ale over to Capt. Charles Jarvis, U. S. Deputy Customs Inspector.

The prisoners said they were Archie Goyer, 40, brother of the two men captured a week ago Saturday—Leonard, Gordon and William May, 25. They were taken to Oswego Jail and will be arraigned later today on charges of attempted smuggling. The brothers, Napoleon and Lawrence Goyer, are out on $1200 bail each, being set for the U. S. Grand Jury, May 16.

The boat captured Saturday was the Imp, formerly the Sonora of Canadian registry, and is a 40-foot cruiser. Capt. Jackson said that both men protested that it was their first attempt at rum running. Authorities believe the Imp may have been the boat that escaped when the first seizure was made a week ago.

It will be recalled that Archie Goyer's two brothers, "Gillie" and "Slap" Goyer, were arrested at the resat of Oswego on Sunday morning May 2nd, when a thirty-foot launch and a cargo of 200 cases of liquor confiscated by United States Coast Guard Officers and sent to Rochester, N. Y., where it will be sold.

"Gillie" and "Slap" Goyer only returned to this city the latter part of last week after being released on twelve hundred dollars bail each, pending trial which will be held later in New York State.

ROTARY LEARNS OF CHEMISTRY

Local Club Welcomes Back Two of Its Prominent Members

Prof. L. F. Goodwin, Chemical Engineer of Queen's University, told the local Rotarian's today something of what chemistry means in the industrial life of a nation. He based his talk on two outstanding examples; the wiping out of the Indigo growing in British India through the manufacture of chemical dyes in Germany and the crippling of Chile's national life by the discovery of the process of making synthetic ammonia.

The Club extended a great welcome to Rotarians C. A. Graham and Frank Wills, back from foreign travels. Rotarian Harold Legate was congratulated on securing a new small prospective member and Charles E. Bishop was fined for his little joke to write D. D. after his name.

The Rotarians are going on the great inter-club picnic to Rochester in the middle of June with the Kiwanians, Y. Men and K. of C.

PLEASE TAKE YOUR MAIL TO POST OFFICE NEXT TIME

The latest device which a newspaper office has been asked to fill is a secret. Hitherto it has been used as a matrimonial bureau, a buying and selling medium, the heralding of the birth of children into the world, the publication of marriage notices, "the saying of the final eulogy of the departed, the publishing of police court news, but just recently has a newspaper office been utilized for the mailing of letters.

During an afternoon a short time ago an addressed, stamped letter was deposited in the letter slot of the Intelligencer Office. According to the address of the letter, its destination was intended for outside of the city. This is the first time in the history of this paper that the office was taken for a post office; the only explanation that can be offered for this is that the sender had two letters, one for the newspaper and the other for mailing and got the two mixed up.

FRENCH AVIATORS ARE SIGHTED OFF CAPE RACE THIS MORNING

TO VISIT CANADA

French Liner Notes Fliers Near Newfoundland Coast

FIRST ADVICE

Captains Nungesser and Coli Expected In New York Soon

Navy Department reports Nungesser aeroplane passed Portland Maine.

New York, May 9.—Captains Nungesser and Coli were sighted passing Cape Race at 10 o'clock this morning according to a telegram received by the New York Times from its correspondent at Sydney N.S. The Times message, which was the first definite advices concerning the fliers received here, said the Marconi station at Glace Bay received French land off the coast of New Foundland and sighted the planes.

Earlier Reports

New York, May 1.—Thirty-seven and one half hours had elapsed at one thirty o'clock, eastern daylight time, this afternoon since captains Nungesser and Coli topped off the ground of the Lebourget flying field, near Paris, in their attempt to fly to this city and no substantial news had been come from any sources as to where about of the aviators. One report from St. Pierre, Miquelon, the two Nungesser ever Newfoundland this morning failed of confirmation. A dispatch to the New York Times from its correspondent at Sydney, N.S., that the "white bird" was reported as passing Cape stace, Newfoundland, at ten o'clock this morning also lacks confirmation. Wireless companies and steamships at sea have no information through navigation officers on all the big liners are scanning the skies for the fliers with out as yet report when sighted.

The "white bird" if she had maintained the schedule set for her, should have been off Cape Cod, Mass., about one o'clock this afternoon.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

One secret act of self-denial is worth all the mere good thoughts, warm feelings, passionate prayers, in which idle people indulge themselves.

DRUNKEN DRIVERS

When a man drives a car while under the influence of liquor he is a potential homicide and the law should not deal too tenderly with him. The seven day prison term which Magistrate Mikel has been dealing out errs on the side of leniency. If drunken drivers endangered only their own necks or even just the lives of those foolish enough to drive with them, the evil would not be so great; then we might hope that the process of elimination would rid the sane world of a menace. But the truth is that injuries and death are more likely to fall on innocent people who are using the highway in a legitimate manner.

Just last Saturday morning, in Belleville Police Court a man received a jail sentence for driving recklessly down the wrong side of the road and crashing into another car. It was nothing the drunken fool did that saved him from having to face a charge of manslaughter.

This question of intoxicated drivers is going to cause trouble this year. Liquor is to be readily procurable and there is a small percentage of people mentally unable to distinguish between liberty and license. If such subnormal intellects are permitted to fuddle their weak brains with liquor and then drive cars, the roads will not be safe for decent people. A seven day term in jail for the first offense is little enough.

And Magistrate Mikel should make it clear that the law is going to be enforced regardless of family, friends or political influence. Because a man is wealthy and can hire a clever lawyer, or has connections in high places is no reason why he should be permitted to get away with potential manslaughter.

INTELLIGENCE TEST

Lovely weather has again brought out the swarming motor cars and Saturday saw Front Street a moving mass of traffic. Each year the congestion grows denser as more and more cars are bought, until it seems almost as though every house in city and country possessed at least one automobile and drove it into Belleville's down town district at the end of the week.

We are glad to see the cars come to our city — we welcome gladly our country friends as often as they will come, but why, or why will they not learn to park? The city driver is just as bad—one of our traffic officers claims they are worse.

The parking space on Front and Bridge Streets is limited at the best. It is desirable that as many as possible find room there to leave their cars and transact their business. Then why should we be a "hog" and park a car in the space designed for two?

The police have marked out the street with lines drawn at the correct angle—even a moderately good driver should be able to park a car with the front and rear wheels on these lines. If that were done scores more cars could be accommodated and getting in and out would be an easy business.

The driver who runs a car in to the curb at any old angle regardless of the lines (and there seems to be hundreds of such incompetents) is inconveniencing the good drivers and making it harder to do business in Belleville on busy days.

A bachelor is a fellow who gets only half as much mileage as a married man out of a pair of socks.

THE EDITOR SAYS

We suspect a lot of the good citizens who interviewed the Board of Education regarding which way to face the new Collegiate are more interested in the view from their own street than in the appearance of the city generally.

It was thoughtful of the Ottawa Government to extend the period which United States tourists may spend in Canada without putting up a cash bond. They will have more time to do business at the new stores opening up in various Ontario centres and more cash to do it with.

Now is the time that the friendly stranger starts to make a "short-cut" path across the lawn of the citizen on the corner and raises thoughts of murder in his heart.

CLOUDS

Splendid and slow, the cruisers of the night
Swing silently along with low-hung prows,
And not a ripple in those depths arouse;
Their arctic masthends, hard and cold and bright
Far-shining from serene, unearthly height.
Unhurried, they through solemn star-ways browse.
With frozen waves upcurled against their bows.
While fathoms of still air sustain their might
Oh, majesty, to fevered earth a night-resting!
Turreted beauty, piloted by stars!
Oh, majesty, to fevered earth a boon!
You are to men solace and calm abiding,
Who watch for you beneath their window-bars
Shattering in foam against the sharpened moon!

An engineer, surveying the right of way for the proposed railroad, was talking to a farmer.

"Yes," he said, "the line will run right through your barnyard."

"Well," answered the farmer, "you can do it, if ye want, but I'll be staggered if I'll get up in the night just to open the gate every time a train comes through."

2-duty Ford Oil
for the 2-duty Ford job

THESE things happen from using the wrong kind of oil for your Ford. Excessive operating costs. Needless break-downs. Preventable repairs.

This is why—in the Ford, one oil has two distinct jobs: First, it must lubricate the motor. Second, it must lubricate the transmission. Each job requires entirely different characteristics in the same oil.

To solve this dual problem of Ford lubrication Tide Water engineers created Veedol Forzol—a different kind of oil. And the best proof that Veedol Forzol solves the problem is the fact that it is now giving over a million Ford owners these eight economies in operation:

"The 8 Economies of Veedol Forzol"

1. Eliminates costly chatter
2. 10 to 25% gasoline saving
3. 10 to 25% saving in oil
4. Reduces carbon 10 to 25%
5. Resists heat and friction
6. Resists fuel dilution
7. Increases ability to coast
8. Reduces repair bills

Have your crankcase drained and refilled with Veedol Forzol today by the dealer who displays the orange and black Veedol Forzol sign. At once, you will know the improvement. Be sure to ask for Veedol Forzol by name.

The WOLVERINES are coming!

North of the last frontier, north of the white man, you'll find him on the go—the wolverine.

Fearless, amazingly strong, the wolverine pushes his way across uncounted leagues of wilderness woods—a king of his domain by right of his ability to go where he pleases, to take what he wants when he wants it.

Nowhere in the woods is there an animal so strong for his size, so tireless in his travelings.

He gives his name now to something new in the smaller car field, a car that is thoroughly American in design and construction, a car made for the roads and conditions of the entire continent.

This new automobile is small enough for easy handling and for low operating cost, but no power nor brawn nor beauty were sacrificed in making it small. It is fast—fast on the getaway, fast on the open road, and quick to stop.

It is the Wolverine—strongest of its size.

FAVING OPERATIONS BEGUN

Legal Motorists driving west over the week end once again encountered the old familiar sign "Detour" and memories of last summer—were forced to abandon the Highway and wend their narrow way south along the Old Railway Road. Altogether there is a distance of but three miles to be paved—a mile and a half east and west, of Grafton—to complete the Highway between Belleville and Toronto. Operations began last week necessitate a detour of about two miles in length east of Grafton. The detour is in good shape however, and while a little narrow, permits the motorist to cover the short stretch with but little waste of time.

SHANNONVILLE W. M. S.

Shannonville W. M. S. held their regular monthly meeting on Thursday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Mills and an interesting session was enjoyed by the large representation present. Devotional exercises were in charge of Mrs. Sam Elliott, vice-president of the Society. Acting on the suggestion of the President, Miss Maud Wade read a paper on the subject of the special prayer of the Auxiliary. A full and interesting report of the Presbyterial held in Bridge Street United Church, in April was given by Mrs. M. D. Robertson. This was followed by a duet by Mrs. Ross Shelter and Mrs. Seymour which was thoroughly appreciated. Mrs. Seymour presented a synopsis of a chapter of the Mission Study Book on India after which questions were asked and answered by different members. The meeting was closed by a dainty repast of sandwiches, coffee and cake, and adjourned until June 2nd.

Police Court

Rubbing alcohol and a smart little light were the cause of William Pennyfather and Jack Wilson, appearing in Police Court on a drunk charge today.

Penny alleged he got the alcohol from Wilson who had purchased it in Schryver's Pharmacy. Explaining that rubbing alcohol must have some terrible potent effect for when the police arrived on the scene, Wilson was endeavoring to hammer Williams's features into a different design. The offenders received a fine of fifteen dollars and seven dollars costs.

When Penny was asked whether he was guilty or not guilty, he replied: "Why Honor, I'm sorry, but the charge is true." It's a short time between drinks as Penny was up in court just three weeks ago on the same charge.

GRADUATION DAY AT HOLLOWAY ST.

Annual Exercises Held Along With Mother's Day Services

The annual graduation exercises of the primary dept., of Holloway St., United Sunday School took place in the church yesterday morning at 11 a.m. o'clock, in connection with the Mothers Day service. Beautiful flowers and ferns decorated the pulpit, and front of the church and the white dresses of the girls and the smart manly appearance of the boys added greatly to the effectiveness of the service. The graduating class of the Primary department is one of the most important in the Sunday School and is under the leadership of Mrs. Bert Langabeer. It takes a complete year to train those who are ready to the Junior department of the school, each scholar committing to memory the following passages of scripture and special graduating exercises. The 23rd, Psalm, the books of the Old Testament, the Books of the New Testament, Apostles Creed, the Beatitudes 13 questions from the catechism and the Lords Prayer. This work was recited in a most effective manner which speaks well for the excellent training each child had received. The Graduating class members from the primary school rooms to the front of the church when they passed through two arches of evergreen and flowers, held by four of the smaller boys of the Primary class. After taking their places on the platform a welcome chorus was sung followed by a recitation after the reciting of the graduating exercises. Two small boys, Arthur Sumner and Jack Wesley gave recitations. It is customary to present to the members of the graduating class a Bible, from the Sunday School. Each member received also a nicely lead evergreen pencil from the teachers of the Primary Department. The Primary department is in charge of Mrs. J. Jones her assistants beside Mrs. Langabeer being Miss T. Hicks and Miss M. Woolley. Six of the boys of the graduation class took up the regular morning offering. Those who graduated were as follows: Jim Turnbull, Cecil Jordan, Billie Bailey, Edward Rosenzweig, Howard Fitzgerald, Gordon Carr, Clifford Bowler, Florence Redner, Anna Mae Mosley, Dorothy Bridgeridge, Eva Bowler and Gladys Ogden.

A very special Mother's Day program was carried out in the afternoon in the S. S. services before a very large school, there being over 250 in attendance. The special feature of the program was Mother's Day pageant entitled "The Coronation of Mother". This was exceptionally well rendered. Choir members on the programme were recitation, Don McMullen; recitation Jean Mayes; vocal duet, The Misses Colclough. Mr. J. Jordan had a full attendance of the S. S. orchestra there being 17 present. Excellent music in keeping with the day was rendered under the direction of Mr. G. Dobbs. The superintendent of the Sunday School, Mr. R. C. Woodley was in charge of the school.

TEST OF AFFECTIONS COMES WITH TIME

By ELSIE MARLOWE

"When I am with him I want him just as a friend, but when I'm with the other boys, I would give them all up for him." says Puzzled. Now she wants to know if she's really in love with him.

DEAR ELSIE:

Some time ago I met a young man whom I liked very much. One evening he told me that he loved me and asked me to give up all other young men friends for him. I did not promise to do this though he acted me everytime I saw him.

Well, I kept on going with other boys, but when I was with them I always thought of the other one and wished that it was him in place of the one I was with. Lately he has stopped coming to see me, though he still speaks and appears friendly when he meets me When I am with him I want him just as a dear friend. When I am with other boys, I feel that I would willingly give them all up for him. Would I be happy if I married him, and if so how shall I let him know that I do, willing to give up the rest, for him without letting him think I'm pursuing him?—PUZZLED.

Are you in love with him? I don't think so, Puzzled.

song we were humming not so long ago—"And I love love!"

That's what ails you, Puzzled. You're head over heels in love with love. And love just now represents a variety of which this boy is the hero when he's absent from you.

For instance, when you're not with him you clothe him with the pro-

You remember the chorus of that file of a John Barrymore and the love-making stunts of a Roman Nirvana. You think of him as an Elinor Glyn hero—pushing aside mountains for your dear sake—carrying you off after he's knocked down seven or eight other suitors—also for your dear sake. That's what always happens when one is in love.

But when the boy comes over in the evening, then you say to yourself—"Gosh, he's got awful skickpot ears—a) he's kind of dumb at times—and, oh, why did I ask him to come over for the evening?" That also happens when one is in love with love.

But, Puzzled, the day will come when even if HE has stick-out ears and freckles, you will almost swoon if he's thirty-seven seconds late with a telephone call or forgets to ring you up at noontime. The day when the world will suddenly seem empty and you'll feel cold and miserable just because he has gone off for a week-end. THEN Puzzled, you CAN be sure you're in love with him.

In the meantime, little girl, don't rush into anything. Wait a while, have your good times together. Don't give up your other friends. Love WILL come riding in to take possession of you when the right time and the right man comes. And, believe me, little girl, you won't be puzzled then, there'll be no maybe about it. YOU'LL KNOW HE'S COMING BEFORE HE HAS GOT STUCK HIS NOSE AROUND THE FIRST CORNER.

Marjorie and her Blendy Boy Friend are having trouble.

Blendy isn't as the name implies. In fact, he stabs about quite a bit—but he doesn't try to hide it from Marjorie.

"It's all right," says he. "We're both young yet. I like you better than any other girl, Marj, but that doesn't keep me from liking them a little bit too. There's nothing serious about asking a girl to a party so why get all smoked up about it? We can be just as good friends even if I do go out with another girl once in awhile. Why don't you do the same —go out with the other fellows now and then."

So Marjorie wants to know what she'll do. Shall she drop Jimmie or go out with him alone?

Neither, my dear, unless you are old enough to be seriously engaged—you had better steer clear of too "steady" attachments. The Jimmie's friendship and be glad for it, but remember that the years will hold many other friendships for you if you have the sense to wait for them. Don't let that friendship slide up the highway of Romance. Learn to be a good friend to different boys. No, I'm not advising you to be shallow or frivolous. But I am advising you to live and learn and grow into a wide, generous understanding of all men. And you can never do that if you tie yourself to Jimmie's company.

Lumber Camp Cook favors Magic

When sturdy men leave their cosy homes for the woods, they often find that the camp cook is just as firm a believer in Magic Baking Powder as are their wives.

Mrs. Ed. Marsh, Everard. P.O., writes:—

"I have been using Magic Baking Powder for many years, also my husband has lumbering camps and he always uses it. He would not have any other kind."

You can always rely on Magic Baking Powder. Its quality is always uniform. There is no other "just the same".

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

Sybil stared at him curiously. There was an ironical flicker in her dark eyes, but he hadn't even the grace to color under it.

"What will you do, while Mother and I are at work?" she asked, with dangerous meekness.

Her father made a weary gesture and sighed dramatically.

"Poor old man—wish will he do?" he repented. "Ah, Sybil it'll be many a year before you can understand what it is to look back upon your lost youth to watch Life's declining sun from a fireside. That's my fate, my children—to sit quietly the rest of my days and watch the world go by!"

"I had no idea you were invested inactivity," said Sybil wickedly.

"Sybil!" murmured Mary Ross reproachfully, but her father answered his daughter with calm, untroubled dignity:

"I was always very active. A remarkably good dancer—eh, Mary—ride horseback and took part in all sports. Rather too proficient, perhaps. Gave too much time to exercise." He sighed sadly. "Now my misfortune is to be idle and inactive. . . Ah, Sybil! It's always the things you like best that first deny them from you."

"Then the moral of the story is: don't like anything very well, and you'll never be unhappy!" said Sybil flippantly. "That's precisely the philosophy I intend to follow."

The next morning, after she had prepared breakfast, washed the dishes, set the house in order, waved her mother off to work, and dressed herself in her one best frock, she dutifully bade hood-bye to her father, who was comfortably stretched out in the easy chair in front of the sitting-room fire, and went to look for a job.

The second one, by chance, almost immediately. It was the post of personal secretary to Daniel Brady, the town's best-known and most-feared lawyer.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

Is it proper to give your picture to a man to whom you are not engaged? BROWN EYES

BROWN EYES: It is improper and really unwise for people who are not engaged to exchange personal or expensive gifts, or photographs." This is because when a friendship is suddenly broken, it is necessary to return these things, and that is always embarrassing.

Bell Grove, N. B.—"I became very weak and could not do my work. My nerves were very bad—in fact, I did not care if I lived or not. I also suffered with indigestion. Piles Disappear

No Cutting or Knives Needed

External treatments seldom banish Piles and for the very good reason that the cause is inside—constipation in affected parts veins are flabby and bowel walls thickened.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments don't give lasting relief.

J. S. Leonhardt, M.D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and it has proven successful in thousands of cases—so successful that now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists under a money back guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at J. S. McGowan's, who will promptly relieve the surface pain if you are distressed.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

A KICK FROM FOSTER WARD

A little war is being waged down in Foster Ward; it looks like another case of Wahhis vineyard. The city council make our bylaws but if a moneyed man comes along, the poor, hard working class has no show.

Mr. D. Bunnett bought a little home on South John street three years ago and has worked hard to pay for it. First along comes the Shell Co. Co. and buy within 100 yards of his house, and put up three tanks. Now along comes the City Service from Toronto and want to put up three tanks more within 80 yards of the house. The by law calls for 100 yards, but the City Service in asking for an amendment and of course Foster Ward don't amount to much only an election time.

Mr. Bunnett put in a protest as dangerous property and dangerous. The whole of Foster Ward is backing him up. He offered to sell at a fair price but they don't want to buy. Why not put these tanks up on the hill in front of some of these council men's homes. See what a kick there would be. Every resident on John street but two or three own their own homes. Do we want these tanks. We all say NO!

A LOOKERON.

PRIVY COUNCIL BLAMED

Tokio, May 8.—The Lower House of the Diet today adopted by a small majority, a resolution holding the Privy Council responsible for causing the Japanese financial crisis by revising the proposals of the late Government under Premier Wakatsuki on April 17 for the relief of the Bank of Taiwan (Formosa).

Such action against the Privy Council has never before been taken in the Diet.

Giving the Fire Dept. a Rest

NIGHT and day the fire department maintains vigilant watch over the homes and other buildings of your community. Night and day it is ready to protect your home and those possessions which you hold most dear—which you have given so much of your time and money to accumulate.

In spite of all the precautionary measures of our fire fighting systems, fire still exacts an appalling toll of lives and dollars—the economic loss in Canada amounting to more than $30,000,000 annually.

What a terrific waste! Yet practically all could be prevented if fire-resisting materials were used in the construction of homes and other buildings. And the surprising part is that the cost of building with fire-resisting materials—the roof, for instance—is frequently less than the cost of building with inflammable materials.

Brantford Asphalt Slates Resist Fire

Fire experts recognize fire retardent roofs as one of the prime essentials of modern building. Many of these experts use Brantford Asphalt Slates because Brantford Asphalt Slates have proven their fire-resisting qualities again and again. Sparks and flying embers from neighboring buildings die out harmlessly on the surface. The roof will not ignite because Brantford Asphalt Slates are coated with crushed slate embedded in the finest asphalt. You have the comforting assurance that your roof cannot be set ablaze by flying embers or burning wood shingles from a nearby fire. Brantford Asphalt Slates resist ignition until the embers burn out or are extinguished.

Protect Your Summer Cottage

From seven to nine months of the year summer homes are usually unoccupied. During this period fire may break out in nearby cottages and seriously threaten yours. Guard against this possibility by roofing your cottage with Brantford Asphalt Slates. Your cottage will then be protected all the year—the months you occupy it and the months you are away.

Eliminate the Conflagration Hazard

When a building is on fire, the flames, fanned by a strong wind, may reach out and set neighboring structures ablaze. Soon a great conflagration may develop. But this hazard is practically eliminated in buildings roofed with Brantford Asphalt Slates. The intense heat may even melt the asphalt—but the roof will neither catch fire nor give off dangerous sparks or embers which might ignite surrounding structures. Moreover, should a fire start inside the house Brantford Asphalt Slates will act as a blanket—smothering the flames, and confining the fire.

The Saving in Insurance

"Fire underwriters class Brantford Asphalt Slates as "non-combustible." On homes roofed with them a reduction in insurance rates of 10 to 20 per cent. is usually allowed. Over a period of years this one saving has, in many cases, paid back the entire cost of the roof.

Why Imperil Your Home?

Why, then, when these fire-resistant slates are available at small cost, should you not use them? Thin, dry wood shingles, far from affording protection, substantially increase the fire hazard. Brantford Asphalt Slates, on the other hand, not only give the protection which wood shingles lack, but also provide lasting charm and distinction. After the disastrous Haileybury fire of 1921 most of the new buildings in the town were roofed with Brantford Roofs—a fact which speaks volumes for the fire-resisting qualities, long life and sound value of Brantford products.

Roof Beauty and Permanence

But fire protection is only one of the many outstanding features of Brantford Asphalt Slates. They are also permanent and beautiful—an attractive and dependable covering for your home that resists the most violent attacks of wind, rain and storm. They are exceptionally economical, too. Once Brantford Asphalt Slates are properly laid you are done with all roof troubles. No repairs or upkeep expense. No leaking, curling or splitting. Made in Nature's fadeless tints, they grow more beautiful with the years, lending grace and dignity to the buildings they adorn.

Be Sure It's "Brantford"

"But how," you may ask, "Can I be sure of getting Brantford Asphalt Slates? What means have I of identifying them from other kinds of roofing?"

You can distinguish Brantford products by the name "Brantford" stamped indelibly on every package. "Brantford" stands for beauty and exceptional performance. It is your guarantee—a symbol of value which has earned Brantford Roofing products their nation-wide reputation for quality and unfailing satisfaction.

Our attractive booklet in colors, "Beauty with Fire Protection," will be mailed to you free. It is handsomely illustrated and contains roofing information which will prove very valuable to you in roofing or re-roofing your home. Write today.

YANKEES SHUT OUT CHI. TWICE 1ST JAUNT WEST

Philadelphia Loses Ground, Dropping Two To Cleveland Indians

Chicago, May 9.—The first Yankee tour through the provinces continues to be a parade though it probably will not be for long. As in the opening game against the White Sox yesterday the Yankees breezed through an another shutout this afternoon and piled up so many runs that there was never any reason to worry. Today's score was 9 to 0, or one run better than the Yanks did yesterday.

Waite the Harpers were romping along to success the score board was seldom to their general happiness with figures on the battle of Cleveland where the Indians were busily scalping their much-reverend Mackmen. So it was just a perfect day for the league leaders.

Cleveland made it two straight from Philadelphia, winning 4 to 2 in a pitchers battle between Ehmke and Burke. A fumble by Eddie Collins was the deciding factor. The veteran let the grounder roll between his feet in the fourth inning, giving Cleveland two runs.

Coach Gleason of the Athletics was put off the field by Empire Nallin for disputing a decision at first base.

COLTS GO INTO TIE FOR SECOND PLACE

New York, May 9.—The Colts went into a tie for second place with Buffalo and broke the tie with Baltimore for this place by winning two games from Reading at Rochester today, 12 to 11 and 8 to 4. The Tribe came from behind to score the first victory in a game that lasted two hours and 40 minutes, seven pitchers being used. Noble lost the first game as a relief hurler and also lost the second in which he was hit for 20 blows for a total of 23 bases.

COBB AND SIMMONS OUT

Chicago, May 9.—President Ban Johnson of the American League, today indefinitely suspended Ty Cobb and Al Simmons of the Athletics, for their row with Umpire Ormsby over the fairness of Cobb's home run in Philadelphia Sunday.

Cobb already is out of the game because of an injury sustained in sliding into second base in an exhibition at Buffalo yesterday.

Cobb hit a ball out of the park in the game against the Red Sox, close to the foul line. Umpire Ormsby called it foul. Cobb kicked so strenuously that he was banished from the game. Simmons also was chased in Cobb's wake, because he joined the Georgia Peach in protesting.

8½ Days—
Saskatoon to Toronto Cool Motor all the Way

Of the many interesting and remarkable records made by motorists using Marvelube Motor Oil during 1926, the 2,300 mile trip of Mr. E. F. Jones of Toronto, who drove from Saskatoon to Toronto in eight and a half days, offers substantial proof of the unusual lubricating qualities of this oil.

Mr. Jones left Saskatoon in his Chevrolet Coach at 8 a.m. July 1st, and arrived in Toronto at 11.30 a.m., July 9th. During this trip, he drove in two Provinces and seven States—Saskatchewan, North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ontario. Throughout the drive he maintained an average speed of 35 miles an hour to keep up to his schedule.

Before starting from Saskatoon, the crankcase of the car was flushed and filled with Marvelube and a supply of Marvelube was carried for use on the trip. "Throughout the entire trip the motor ran cool and smooth," reported Mr. Jones. "Indicating that Marvelube was performing its task of lubricating a high speed motor of the Chevrolet type perfectly."

"Upon my arrival in Toronto, the car was sent to a garage for a 'once over' and the bearings were found to be uninjured from the long grind, and practically no carbon was found in the engine."

Few motorists ever call on an oil to "make good" against such odds as those encountered on this 2,300-mile high speed grind, but Marvelube's sterling performance under the conditions is a true indication of its inherent quality.

Any motorist, regardless of the make or model of the car he drives, can be sure of satisfactory, care-free lubrication if he uses Marvelube in the right grade and changes oil regularly every 500 miles.

The impressive record made by Marvelube in this case, as well as in hundreds of others reported, is your guarantee that the oil which gave such phenomenal results under extraordinary conditions can be depended on to give full satisfaction in normal use.

The Irony of Love

By Charles Garvice

His voice broke, his arms relaxed slightly, but, though he did not notice it, she made no movement to escape from him; indeed, if she had wished to do so, she would not have forced the strength to move, for she was hypnotized—to use the only word one can think of—by the force of his passion and the compelling truth and sincerity that rang in every word.

"I expected you to treat me like a dog," he continued, in the same low voice, "but you were kind and gentle with me. I could read your, mind, Maude, and I knew, strangely enough, all that you were thinking of me, though you smiled and tried to hide you thoughts. You'd never seen any one like me before; you were wondering what I should say and do, and what kind of a mess I should make of the business. 'A pretty lord!' you thought; a rough miner, a cowboy. And yet you were kind to me, through it all and, day after day, you treated me as if I was the right and not of your own kind. Why, Maude, come to think of it, how could I help loving you? The meanest cur would have loved you. But, mind, while I'm telling you this, don't think that I had any hope you'd—you'd care for me. No, never; I knew how it was with you. But, since now, I wasn't unhappy. I have died for you for just a word, a thank you, a smile. And I'd die for you now, Maude."

The declaration was made with perfect simplicity, and the knew there was no exaggeration. The color stole into her pale face, and into her beautiful eyes came the innocent triumph the glory of a woman in the man who is willing to lay down his life for her.

"Yes, I was happy," he said. "It was rough for me to be near you, to listen to you, to watch you. I was put rough and drink to a starving man, Maude, and then—and then"—his voice grew almost inaudible; she saw his lips writhe—"then there came Sunborne. I never had thought of getting you for myself, but it was death to find that another man was going to win you. I felt as if the life had been cut out of me like a weak and helpless fool, like a man who's lost his nerve and his pluck, so I couldn't help myself, you see, I had to stand and look on. Maude, I felt on that if we three had been out here, at the mines, I should have made short work of Sunborne."

His words were broken by a kind of laugh, a touch of something like savage vigor for a moment in his eyes, but for a moment only, then they grew grave and solemn again.

"Out there we fight for things we want, but here it was different. I was tied hand and foot by your love. Sun was so different from myself; would only stand and look on, as I say, but it hurt, Maude, it hurt! I knew I was a fool for not going away and leaving you; sometimes I was sure it would go, would never see you again. But it was so hard a thing for me to do. You might as well ask a man dying of thirst to throw a tin of water away, because it was quite full! So I stayed on, to watch you slipping from me further and further every day, slipping away to another man. And my life I've tried to play the game, and I tried to play it here as I played it out there. But it was mighty rough. Think of the times you and I have been together in the car, waking over the moors, here in the house, and all the time I was trying to keep back; 'I love you! I love you!' You never guessed it; and I didn't let out, but every time your sleeve touched mine, or you turned to look at me, with a smile that awakened echoes in me—in my sleep, my mind felt as if they must go out to you and grip you, as they are gripping you now!"

He drew a long breath, and there was silence for a minute, as he looked back upon his sufferings; then he went on:

"You won't understand this, because you're not a man. But there it is. And and now I've broken down, the game's played out, I thought I could carry on to the end—but not till the wedding, Maude; I couldn't have gone through that! But—I've told you—it was my dreaming of you'd go on coming in on me suddenly tonight. And now you know." He paused for a moment, then he said: "And you think me a brute and a beast. Well, perhaps I am. But now I'll crawl away out of your sight. Try not to think too badly of me, Maude. It's been an uphill game, and I've just broken down. I won't see you again. I'll crawl this time, at any rate, till till after the wedding. I'll go back to Jump ing Jane, the life out there, the loneliness, but nothing will be of any use; I shan't be able to forget you, Maude; I'll never get back what you took from me that first day; what I've given—poor rascal; what I couldn't help giving. I'm sorry, Maude and that's all I can say—except, good-by."

His voice had broken, was indescribably horrible; his arms relaxed his arms fell to his sides; then they grew rigid; but there was no more misery imprinted on it. For an instant he did not realize that she had not realized herself of her chance of escape, that she had not moved from him; for another instant he was not conscious that she was still lying on his breast, that her eyes were full of tears. Her hands they were quivering—slid up, locked, to his shoulders; one warm, shaking hand touched his cheek.

"Oh, Strayfern! Strayfern!" she breathed, so softly that indeed it was little more than a breath. Her eyes were still fixed on him, a tear rolled down her cheek, her parted lips her eyes, were eloquent of an ineffable tenderness.

He stood as if transfixed; wonder, unbelief, stunned on him; he could feel his heart thumping, saw that he did not realize, that he was afraid lest he should be deceiving himself, on the white-eyed, "Strayfern!" again. Then gradually he understood. His face became transformed, his arms were passed her again, his head bent slowly, as reverently as if he was still at a distance, to his own joy.

"Maude! Maude!" he said hoarsely. "Is it true? Oh, I can't believe—just now I told her right out. You don't—love me, me?"

A smile of tenderness and of pride in her mastery flooded over her face, her arms rose round his neck and kept her there, rose round his neck and kept his head bent, and, with her lips to his, she answered:

"Yes, it's true. I love you, Strayfern. Oh, I love you very dearly!"

Their voices were silent, but the power was full of the music of the high est joy to which your human nature can attain. How long they stood, locking into each other's eyes, they will never know; it was he, who, at last, broke the silence, as he strained her to him, and with his great hand he smoothed lightly the head that lay up on his breast.

Nothing is left but ashes. Fuel is conserved, greater warmth is secured, money is saved.

Come in and let us show you how the Allcast burns any kind of fuel and especially low priced soft coal—how it burns smoke and gases that usually go up the chimney — how it provides perfect atmosphere in all rooms — how it draws the stale air from your rooms and sends it back heated and purified — how you can have more heat for less money. Write for complete details.

FIERY, ITCHY SKIN SOOTHED WITH SULPHUR

Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist.

The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or disfigurement. Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up.

A small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store.

226 Known Dead From Tornado---Border Cities Interview Premier Re U. S. Immigration Rule

DELEGATION TO MEET PREMIER ON IMMIGRATION

Border Cities Up In Arms Over New U. S. Legislation

CANADA RETALIATES

Deputation Interviews Canada's Representative At Washington

Ottawa, May 10.—A deputation from the border cities of Windsor and Walkerville is in Ottawa today seeking an interview with the Prime Minister on the subject of the new American immigration regulations. The deputation will also interview Tom Moore, president of the trades and labor congress to urge that Canadian labor organizations affiliated with the American federation of labor press their protests upon the American government through the Unions in the United States.

Would Bar 5,000

It is claimed that regulations of the United States department of labor would have effect of debarring 5,000 British-born Canadian workers from crossing the border daily. The deputations which are in Ottawa today spent two days in Washington conferring with the Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian Minister. Today they will request the Canadian department of immigration to enforce all its inspection regulations at border points. Canada has, it is claimed, inspection regulations quite as rigid as the United States though they are not all applied. The deputation is also interested in the amount of money being made by immigration department of American citizens who enter Canada daily as employees of Canadian firms. The city of Windsor has passed a resolution referring to "the deplorable and unsafe financial state of thousands of men, women and children" and "the appalling financial burden upon those municipalities" as a result of regulations which are to come into effect on June 1.

ROSLIN WOMAN SUING COUNTY

Directly following the decision handed down in the Smith vs Weese case in the case of Colden vs the County of Hastings was opened before the Hon. Mr. Justice Grant. By press time the case had not been completed.

This action was brought by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Colden, of Roslin, against the County of Hastings, claiming damages resulting, as alleged by the Plaintiffs, from the negligence of the municipal corporation for non-repair of the highway and narrow culvert at a spot on the County road, between the Townships of Hungerford and Tyendinaga. Mrs. Colden on December 3rd, 1926, in the afternoon was driving westerly towards Roslin, and she claims the road was in a bad state of repair, when approaching the culvert the wheels of the car jumped out of the ruts, and the car, without proper protection on the sides of the culvert, the car went over the embankment, causing serious damage to the car, and serious injuries to Mrs. Colden. The Defendants deny negligence. Ponton & Ponton for plaintiffs. Messrs. Johnston, Grand, Dods & MacDonald, Solicitors for Defendants.

Mrs. Ruth Snyder Taken To Hospital Following Her Sentence

New York, May 10.— Mrs. Ruth Snyder Queen's village housewife who was convicted last week of murdering Henry Judd Gray, must die in the electric chair for murder of her husband today was the word received in her cell. Iron nerve that supported her through her ordeal of the trial and when old nerve could not even fail her yesterday when she heard the jury's verdict, she reacted only when she reached her cell in room 2nd floor of the death house. Matrons who had worked over her for thirty minutes in an unsuccessful effort to revive her, collapsed and were taken to St. John's Hospital. Two physicians responded and found her unconscious, her jaws tightly set and her hands clenched. Consciousness was restored in an hour. Dr. Dodd said her symptoms resembled epilepsy.

WHOLE WORLD WAITING ANXIOUSLY FOR NEWS OF GALLANT AIRMEN

TORONTO VISITOR

Attending Anniversary

Right Rev. Thomas O'Donnell Bishop of Victoria, B.C., who is in Toronto this week in connection with the 75th anniversary of St. Michael's College at which he was ordained to the priesthood for the 75th anniversary of the De La Salle Institute, May 15-17.

FRANK SMITH IS AWARDED $350

Defendant Must Pay Court Costs As Well As Damages

Mr. Justice Grant awarded Frank Smith $350.00 and County Court costs in an action against Weese, heard in the County Court House today. The principal witnesses called were Provincial Police Officer Kenney, late of Belleville and Mr. Charles Campbell city engineer, who gave technical explanations. Mr. E. D. O'Flynn was the counsel for the plaintiff, while Mr. Charles Cameron appeared for the defendant.

In delivering his judgment, the Hon. Mr. Justice Grant stated that in his opinion the fault of the accident was practically divided fifty-fifty between the litigants, Smith and Weese.

"I wish to state that I accept the statements of Officer Kenney absolutely," stated the Justice. "He was a disinterested party and gave his judgment fairly and without prejudice."

Mr. Grant also thought that perhaps Mr. Weese was over to a certain extent upon Frank Smith's side of the road, which was the main bone of contention.

On the other hand, the Justice stated that he was convinced in his own mind that Smith was travelling at an excessive rate of speed under the existing conditions and that he should have applied brakes when he slowed his car down. As regarded the question of damages, as in the accident, both were at fault, damages for $1000 only received $350 and County Court costs.

ARREST FOLLOWS SUICIDE

North Bay, May 10.—Harry Lamothe aged 22, appeared in North Bay police court this morning facing a charge of perjury. His arrest follows the suicide about ten days ago of Miss Margaret Degnais, a young nurse, who took her own life by drinking carbolic acid. No reason was found for the suicide, the girl's last words being: "Tell Harry."

GARDENS BEING ROOTED UP BY MISCHIEVOUS CANINES

Just at the present moment when every loyal citizen is striving to bring their grounds to the height of perfection in preparation for the Diamond Jubilee Celebration, it is particularly disheartening for them to see the results of days labour torn up by stray dogs. Residents of Alexander street are complaining bitterly of the depredations of curs which in a larger city could certainly be kept under leash. One life long resident had viewed his garden last evening, remarked it had never looked better and awoke this morning to find the place so badly torn up that he hesitates to attempt to make it again. "I never envied Peter here before, he said, but now I know that they have a dog catcher there I realize they have a lot on us.

WIRELESS WAITING ANXIOUSLY FOR NEWS OF FLIERS

Wireless Searching Every Corner For Word of Their Safety

HAMPERED BY FOG

Hope That Fliers Are Safe On Small Sailing Vessel

Ottawa, May 10.—The Marine Department so far has received nothing to indicate the whereabouts of Nungesser and Coli, missing French fliers from patrol boats or wireless stations along the Atlantic coast which have been instructed to keep a lookout for them.

New York, May 10.—Heavy fog today hampered an intensive search for Captain Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli, the daring French airmen who dropped from sight a short distance off the French coast on their 3800 mile flight from Paris to New York. The death challenging biplane of the famous French war heroes, was long overdue as land, sea and air stations of the United States government were organized for a hunt through the area extending from Newfoundland to New York harbor. International apprehension over the safety of the aviators was increased hourly as only vague reports, all of which later proved to be unfounded, were reported received from ships and shore points all the coast to Cape Race, Mid.

Trans-Atlantic liners, the Westphalia of the Hamburg-American Lines, the Cunarder Cameronia and Transylvania, the Baltic Liner George Washington and freighter, Westminster voluntarily enlisted in the hunt as soon as they received radio messages from the independent wireless operators that the aviators had not been heard from since they left Europe.

World-Wide Search

London, May 10.—British Air Ministry has broadcast a request that any person who observed the passage of Capt. Nungesser's plane Sunday over the Southwestern England and Southern Ireland report to the Air Attache of the French Embassy. While it thought the fliers' position is seriously imperilled by weather it is not assumed that disaster has befallen them. It is hoped that if Nungesser and Coli were forced to descend on the ocean they may be rescued by a ship. Early editions of newspapers which opened with accounts of the safe crossing of the fliers as far as Newfoundland were quickly recast and later editions telegraphed from the Frenchmen in view of lack of definite news.

Papers Faked News

Paris, May 10.—Paris is in the grip of a fever of excitement over the fate of Captain Nungesser and Captain Coli and resentment against newspapers which on their optimistic reports of last night which went so far as to announce the arrival of the fliers in New York, one of the last papers even described the welcome which awaited them and how the crowds were "delirious" with enthusiasm. Police were stationed at some of the newspaper offices to prevent trouble.

Hope Despite Silence

Halifax, May 10.—Hope that Captains Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli are safe was kindled at an attempt to cross from Paris to New York in their aeroplane "White Bird" over the week end had been picked up by some steam or equipped with wireless faded today when it was learned that all ships along the north Atlantic seaboard brought back in each case the fateful reply "no word." But the belief still persisted that the intrepid airmen were safe aboard a sailing vessel or small coastal steamer. In the meantime a sharp lookout was being maintained all shipping.

The weather off the Nova Scotia coast today was clear with the visibility good.

Washington Will Help

—Washington, May 10.—The French Embassy today asked the Washington Government to lend its aid to search for the missing French fliers, Captains Chas. Nungesser and Francois Coli. The State Department assured the Embassy that every assistance would be given in the search.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

There is not a man however poor he may be, but has it in his power, to leave behind him the greatest thing on earth, character.

LEVYING TOLL

Testimony given at the customs probe in Windsor yesterday disclosed how party politicians have made use of their political affiliation to make money for themselves on the side by levying toll on liquor exported at the border. James Cooper, liquor exporter, of Walkerville, told of how he had been approached by A. P. Healy, former Liberal M.P., for North Essex, and advised to go and see Mr. Healy's campaign manager, W. M. Egan; that when Mr. Cooper saw Egan, that gentleman demanded money, and Cooper gave him $272. Egan took it, but explained that it was far from enough, and he advised Cooper to go back and "see Tim." Tim being Mr. Healy. Cooper saw Tim, and Tim instructed him to go and see "the big fellow." This personage proved to be one John O'Gorman, of Toronto, who just happened to be stopping at a Windsor hotel at that time. Cooper saw the big fellow, and the big fellow told him flatly that he would be expected to pay $2 on every case of hard liquor and 25 cents on every case of beer he exported. Cooper consulted his lawyer, who advised him that it was not necessary for him to submit to blackmail; so he didn't pay.

Harry Lowe, vice-president of the Carling Brewing Company and agent in Canada for American liquor importers, told a similar story. Egan, he testified, had demanded of him $3 a case on all liquor exported and 10 cents a case on beer exports. Lowe refused to be held up, and, he said, he and his assistants were subjected by Egan to "numerous annoyances" to the transaction of their business.

Here are two of the many liquor exporters who were blackmailed by party politicians. In their cases the grafters were not very successful, but it is not improbable that others were fleeced. Indeed there is evidence that one of the others paid graft to Egan to the amount of $12,000. The wonder is that any of them were weak enough to submit to being thus blackmailed, for in shipping to the States they were violating no Canadian law. They were threatened with trouble if they refused to pay, but the only way in which the blackmailing politicians could hamper them was by instigating petty annoyances. It is to be regretted that not one of liquor exporters had the courage to lay information against the grafters and bring them to trial.

BANNING FILTH

While Canadian news-stands continue to display a spectacular assortment of filth and lurid literature and our mails carry it by the carload without financial benefit to the treasuries, Ireland and Australia have taken steps to ban this yellow, perverting trash of alien origin. Our Government has been repeatedly requested to take cognizance of the situation in Canada and inaugurate a policy that will purge our news-stands and mails of literary filth. Our Government has been repeatedly requested to derive, in some way, a revenue from the enormous tonnage of magazines entering this country and carrying between their covers millions of pages of advertising that is drawing, like a magnet, millions of good Canadian dollars over to United States to the detriment of Canadian industry, Canadian laborers and Canadian farmers.

Our Government has not yet moved, in spite of the representations made by numerous organizations, and in spite of the innumerable protests made publicly from the platform and in the press.

The action of Ireland and Australia reveals the fact that Canada is not an isolated instance where public sentiment has rebelled against yellow journalism and a traffic in lurid stories of sex-crimes and divorce suits of the lowest order. Perhaps our Government will now awaken to the growing feeling of revolt against this indecent literary trash. When action is taken it should not stop at an embargo on such literature as is an offense to the moral standards and decency of this country, but an effort should be made to derive revenue from the overwhelming influx of foreign magazines that now enter Canada to the detriment of home markets, home industry and employment.

RAILROADING

A veteran railroader of fifty years service, recently retired was talking over old times for the press.

He drew when wood was the fuel and the huge smokestack looked like a hansom cab and there were no air brakes or any of the modern wonders.

The present day standard of the de luxe railway train is marvellous. The organization necessary makes one dizzy to think about it. Most of us take the railroads for granted as we do the post office and the milk delivery.

We fuss and fume if, on a freezing night the sleeper is not just the exact temperature. We raise a row if a thousand mile run our train is twenty minutes late. When a road bed over a mountainous region is a bit bumpy and wonder what is the matter with travel by that route again. When we read of a wreck we shake our heads and wonder what it the matter with that line anyhow.

We forget what a tremendously complicated thing the modern railway train is: we forget how many years of effort have gone into bringing it to its present standard. Not so long ago, for instance, applying the brakes to a train was not a simple matter of pulling a six-inch lever in the engine cab so that compressed air may do the work. The engineer threw his weight on a long lever; on top of every car a trainman likewise did. The hand brake blistered men's hands every day often right to the elbow. Railroading is an exacting calling. Rain or shine winter or summer, the trains must put out on time. This means hard work and careful planning by those responsible.

It is worth while for us to give a thought, occasionally, to the man in the cab—and to the other workers, on the train and along the line. Heavy responsibility sits on these men's shoulders. A slight mistake by any one of them could bring disaster. Theirs is a strenuous job. They deserve recognition.

TREES

(Bliss Carman)

In the garden of Eden, planted by God
There were goodly trees in the spring sod,—

Trees of beauty and height and grace
To stand in splendor before His face.

Apple and hickory, ash and pear,
Oak and beech, and the tulip rare.

The trembling aspen, the noble pine
The sweeping elm by the river line.

Trees for the birds to build and sing
And the lilac tree, a joy in spring;

Trees to turn at the frosty call.
And carpet the ground for their Lord's footfall;

Trees for fruitage and the fire and shade.
Trees for the camping builder's trade

Wood for the bow, the spear and flail
The keel and the mast of the daring sail;

He made them of every grain and girth
For the use of man in the Garden of earth.

Then lest the soul should not lift her eyes
From the gift to the Giver to Paradise,

On the crown of a hill, for all to see,
God planted a scarlet maple tree.

FIRST BASEBALL PRACTICE CALLED WEDNESDAY EVE

Spring Call For Candidates Is Issued By New Manager

The Canadian National Intermediates have issued the spring call for candidates with the first practice scheduled for tomorrow (Wednesday) evening at the Agricultural Grounds promptly at 6.30. The grounds are dry enough nicely and if the weather permits nightly practices will be held until the 24th of May, when the season will be opened with Deloro the visiting team.

The old guard have all promised to be on deck and "Penny" Mills, the newly-chosen manager, looks forward to a most successful season. The big problem lies in the pitching corps but from present indications it looks as though the job will rest on the shoulders of "Hoot" Gibson, "Grummy" Gerow and possibly "Chilly" Guyer with "Punch" Derry ready for action on July 1st, providing the O.B.A.A. grants him a card to play here. Besides this quartette there may be one or two other stalwarts who may show some ability.

Every player in the city will be welcomed by the management at the opening practice and a fair trial will be given them. Only the best results will be indulged in until the players get the old 'soup bone" in shape.

MRS. SNYDER AND GRAY CONVICTED

Justice Scudder Will Pronounce Sentence On Pair Next Week

New York, May 10.— Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder and her paramour, Henry Judd Gray, were last night convicted of first-degree murder for the slaying of Albert Snyder.

The defendants showed no emotion as the fatal words were pronounced by the jury foreman at 7.02 p.m. They walked from the court room with firm steps and their eyes were dry.

The defendants will be sentenced Monday morning at 10 o'clock and the death penalty is mandatory.

The case went to the jury at 4.59 p.m. after Justice Scudder had delivered a charge of more than one hour during which dozens of women fainted.

Defense summations lasted almost four hours. William Millard, for Henry Judd Gray, asked for a manslaughter verdict, while Dana Wallace, for Mrs. Ruth Snyder, pleaded for acquittal. Summation of the district attorney, who charges that the prisoners jointly conspired to murder Albert Snyder, the woman's husband, began after the luncheon recess.

A report is in circulation here of the possibility of amalgamation of the Marsana and Kirkland Lake Gold Mines. The story originated in Toronto where it is claimed conferences of the directorates of the two companies have been held. With the striking of rich ore also 2,475-foot level of the Kirkland Lake Gold Mines Marsana also advanced. Doubtless this was due to the enhancement in possibilities of Marsana in view of locating of ore at this great depth on the Kirkland Lake Gold. With the Marsana working on what it believes to be the westerly extension of the main break of the Kirkland Lake camp at the 500-foot level and this work on the verge of entering important territory, it is natural that favorable news at the Kirkland Lake Gold would be reflected in the property to the west.

The annual report of the Thorn Lake Northland Gold Mines Limited, for the fifteen months' period ending March 31, 1927, shows net revenue at $353,013.34 representing an increased value in production of $43,246.43 over the preceding fifteen months.

MINING GOSSIP

New York, May 10.—With many issues which glowed prosperity in profits on recent prices, realizing sales became more general in the stock market today and prices turned irregular after an earlier period of firmness. Spiritedly offered specialties had little effect on the price movement when the rate for call money was raised from the normal quotation of four percent to 4-1-2 in the early afternoon following the calling of about 3,000,000 loans. This selling was coincident with vigorous buying of selected stocks on the circulation of reports of excellent earnings, stock dividends and larger cash distributions to shareholders. Special buying was evident in railroad equipments, tobacco, farm implement and food issues. United Steel after selling as low as 168, rallied to 169 1-2, following the publication of the unfilled tonnage figures, showing loss of 27,000 tons, somewhat greater than had been expected in some quarters. Other pivotal shares, however, were on the downward trend and at one stage, good many issues relenquishing earlier advances.

The Long And Short Of One LoevMatch

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Friends, meet Roaring Sue! She's good for what ails most of us selfish, ailing humans. She loves a certain fellow and she's fighting to make up his shortcomings.

DEAR ELSIE:

I'm in love with a boy who is slightly shorter than I am. Now he is an athlete, quite a remarkable one, and in a little ecstatic as athletes usually are, but I love him so, and have always loved him from my early childhood. He lives me, but the fact that I have grown taller than he has hurt him. Is there anything I can say or do to relieve his feelings on the subject?

I wear low heels now and he notices them, and then I tell him how wonderful he is and remark on the marvelous way in which he caught Cousno's high-fly. And then I tell him how proud I felt when the people in the grandstand applauded him, etc. I love to praise him, because I love him. Do you think if I stopped telling him how I admire his baseball ability, etc., he would lose a little of his magnified ego?

ROAR-I want him to be proud of himself. Ah-you give advice I thought I would ask you how to cope with my herb and bring him up to my height by bring myself down to his level. Oh, how I wish I were shorter!

ROARING SUE.

I'm for you a million, Sue, and I wish I could make some of our Superchamp Mamas read that loyal little note of yours. Nancy a Hunsen Hein would pounce with glee on a chance to humiliate her mate—as witness the kind of Mr. and Mrs. talk you hear across the aisle/aft after the dance is over and Mama is doing a post-mortem of all of Dad's social errors. Just you're trying to shield your boy's consciousness to hinder your brand of love, little girl.

As to the H. F.'s swelled head—well, Honey, I can't tell without knowing him, whether he needs deflation or not. We all need a LITTLE conceit or we'd never get anywhere, but too much is far worse than none at all. As to that you must use your head, but there's one point I can give you. DON'T BE TOO ADORING. DON'T MAKE ADMIRATION TOO CHEAP OR HE WON'T WANT IT AT ALL. MEN DON'T VALUE A WOMAN THAT'S TOO EASY TO ATTAIN. PUT A VALUE ON YOURSELF—MAKE YOURSELF AS HARD TO WIN AS A GOOD STIFF GAME OF FOOTBALL AND HELL WANT YOU ALL THE HARDER.

Happily, there are not many daughters who need worry over their mothers' conduct, but in the infinite variety of womankind an occasional strange case pops to view. Here's one:

DEAR ELSIE:

My mother is in love with a man whom she has heard quoted as a public assembly at different times. He is much younger than she is and does not know who she is except that he has shaken hands with her once. She also has many of his books that he has not given them to here, and values them greatly. She has been separated from her husband for many years.

One day I came home and found her writing diligently. When I asked her to whom she was writing she wouldn't tell me. After much coaxing she let me see the letter. What do you think? She has written to "him" and called him her "Greek God," and asked him why he didn't answer her letters. She has written him twice before. The man does not live in this city, so we have no way of becoming acquainted with him, except when he comes here publicly.

What do you think about all this? My mother has never had much love in her life and says he is constantly in her thoughts.

WORRIED DAUGHTER.

What'll you do?
Nothing, my dear.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

One night I was to have gone to a show with—one of my boy friends. After starting, we decided to go to a neighboring town to spend the evening. I let my mother think we went to the show.

Now a neighbor who—we—in there has threatened to tell my mother if questioned. I would rather tell my mother myself than have her told by someone else, but it has been several days since that evening.

Would you confess or take a chance on the subject not being mentioned between my mother and the neighbor?

PEACHES AND CREAM.

PEACHES AND CREAM: It is never too late to tell the truth. By all means tell your mother if you think she would prefer knowing. It would certainly be quite unpleasant to have her hear about it from your neighbor. The evening you spent in the adjoining town would then assume a significance that it does not possess.

Yes, I appreciate your worry, and you have my heartfelt sympathy. But all adult human have inalienable rights, and there's no right more inalienable than that of MAKING A FOOL OF YOURSELF. Your mother is now indulging in that right. For the present she is stepping high, wide and pretty on top of the sunrise. But she'll snap out it.

SINCLAIR'S

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

"What? Another drink-bill?" Then Sybil heard him shout: "Hanged if I don't fire the whole lot of you and take on men! Women — always ailing—or going to feel weddings—"

Sybil approached Bradly's office. She agreed with him on the subject of wed dings. She felt that she was going to like him.

He glowered at her for a long moment, while he took the time to look to foot. But her charm won him, gradually.

"What's your name?" he grunted.

"Sybil Ross."

"Oh, you're——"

"Fred Ross's daughter? Yes," she nodded calmly, but a tinge of scarlet crept into the smooth ivory of her cheeks. It was the first time that she had made that admission publicly. But she had always known that the world have to do it some day, and she had steeled herself.

"Can you spell?" he demanded. "Can you write a decent letter without inserting it up with chocolates and gum?"

"Yes," said Sybil smiling.

"Have you a horde of relatives who'll be forever dying, or being ill, or getting married?"

Sybil shook her head.

"I have no one in the world—except my mother."

He looked at her sharply from under his bushy brows, then, quite suddenly he smiled. It was like the sun emerging from under the black thundercloud of a summer storm.

"You're a lucky girl," he commented dryly. It was well-known fact that Bradly had chafed under the superabundance of his wife's relatives and had, one time, ordered the whole pack of them from his house.

"Hang up your hat," he commanded. "There's a note-book in that desk. Take these letters——"

It was one o'clock before he stopped dictating. Sybil's agile fingers were stiff with weariness when he ceased.

"Lunch!" he announced abruptly. "Have three ready for me to sign by five o'clock."

She nodded. He watched her, as she took her small little leather-bound book and thrust it over her dark curls. Not once did she glance toward the great gilded mirror over the mantel of Bradly's scrumptuous private office. She didn't need to. Her beauty required no reassurance. If she had doubted it, a glance at her employer would have been sufficient. He possessed a connoisseur's eye for pretty women. Sybil knew that, too.

So she felt no surprise when, quite out of the building for lunch, she found a friendly hand on her elbow and the outer office trotting along beside her and saying, with a grin "Well, I see you handled the job. We girls had a bet on it, when we saw you come in. Everybody said there wasn't a chance of your getting turned down—everybody except Miss Dean. Her office manager, She likes to pretend that Mr. Bradly is all for business during business hours and can't see the girls. It's a scream," she chuckled. "He's always threatening, when he gets mad, to fire the whole staff and put in men. But you couldn't pay him to get rid of the girls—especially the pretty ones."

Sybil and the girl bustled together. She wondered, with righteous satisfaction, how Dad's would manage, when he had to forage for himself. The thought, and the unaccustomed and pleasant companionship of a girl her own age, gave zest to her sandwich and tea. The other girl was a newcomer to town, she told Sybil, liked her.

But, at five o'clock, she withdrew once more into her shell of reserve. Meeting her new acquaintance in the corridor, she was aware of an embarrassed flush on the girl's homely little face as she said a stiffly "good night" and hurried into the elevator. It was evident that she didn't want to wait for Sybil.

Some one had seen them together. Some one had "talked" to their newcomer. Fred Ross's daughter walked home, her pretty head high, a new bitterness in her heart.

CHAPTER II
"Cousin Agatha"

Not long after Fred Ross' return to his family, Jimmie's marriage to Janet Wayland took place. The Wayland's, rich and socially prominent, whose idol was the glamorous but homely Janet, had permitted their spoiled darling to override their prejudices and, in the very teeth of the scandal following young Teal's defection and his father's dramatic return, set the wedding-day.

Sybil always remembered it for two reasons. One was the fact that, out of her first month's salary as Mr. Bradly's secretary, she was able to purchase a gown for her mother to wear to the wedding. From the day she began to study shorthand, she resolved that, with the first money she earned she would buy a gift for her mother.

The second reason which made Jim Ross's wedding day stand out in her memory was that it marked the coming of Agatha Hildreth, a niece of the father's and her cousin, into her life as a definite personality. Cousin Agatha was a dry comatic spinster of great wealth, the daughter of Fred Ross' eldest sister, now deceased. She lived in Chicago and rarely visited the town of her birth.

At the time of her uncle's elopement with Daisy Vaughn, Cousin Agatha had written to Mary Ross. "I'd help you and the children, if you had any spunk. But I can't abide people who haven't spunk. And, since you were so weak as to carry that unsavory uncle of mine and so spineless as to live with him all these years, I think you deserve all that has happened to you."

Cousin Agatha didn't trouble herself to come to the wedding to which the Waylands—with grim, determined grace had made the entire Ross family but she sent an expensive gift to the bride and a message to Mrs. Ross that she was paying a brief visit to Uncle Albert.

Sybil didn't attend the wedding, either. When her handsome lazy brother was making the vows that gave unto him a rich bu. nomely bride, she was in Dan Brady's private office, making little pothooks in a stenographic note book to the accompaniment of Brady's rumbling voice.

Once he stopped dictating, looked at her for a moment, and said:

"Hear there's a wedding in your fam ily today."

"Yes," she nodded, without interest, not lifting her eyes.

"You didn't ask for time off to go," he accused her.

"I didn't want to go," she told Him.

"Hum! Pomp girl! Most women are mushy over weddings. You aren't interested in any but your own, eh?"

"That leaves me out," she answered, calmly.

He looked at her with increased interest. In the silence she raised her eyes. They met his steadily, with the little mocking devils in their dark depths.

"I detest men," she said quietly.

He roared with sudden laughter, but, when he looked at her again, there was a respectful light in his shrewd eyes. He seemed to see something new in her, something specially attractive.

"This letter to Mr. Brown—" Sybil reminded him courteously, and he swung once more into rapid dictation.

But, when he had finished and Sybil picked up her notebook, his gaze followed her to the door.

Cousin Agatha had arrived early in the winter for her first visit since Sybil had been a small girl. She stopped at Uncle Albert's gloomy old house.

Sybil and her mother called there the following Sunday afternoon. Hather hesitantly, Mary Ross had suggested that Dads accompany them, but he explained gracefully that his wife was troubling him, and he believed it was wiser to remain close to the warmth of the sitting-room fire.

"I'm right just being in a few more days, before you go," he suggested to his daughter, as he eased his leg, with an admirable wince of pain, on the fire rack. "And a pillow would help, too, pet."

Turning to his wife, he continued: "No. I don't believe it would be wise for me to run gong out today. Anyway, I never really cared for Agatha. She was an impertinent child, and had grown up to be a sharp-tongued woman such as any man wishes to avoid. Women," he declared, with a graceful wave of his hand, "should be everything that is sweet and soft and yielding."

Cousin Agatha had changed little with the years, as Sybil recalled her. She was one of those dark, wiry women, with straight, black hair that held curve gray, a swarthy skin, and cold, pale gray eyes. She dressed beautifully and expensively.

She led Sybil and her mother into the sun-parlor which overlooked Uncle Albert's garden. But there was no sun that winter afternoon, and Cousin Agatha, after laying a skeptical hand on the radiator, wrapped herself in a sumptuous fur coat.

"You'd better keep your wraps on," she advised her visitors crisply. "Albert's too stingy to have a fire going all day. I've felt as if I were in cold storage, ever since I arrived. Thank Heaven, I live in a hotel in Chicago, and there's plenty of heat."

Mary Ross murmured. She looked Mary Ross timidly. "You never feel the need of a real heart?"

"A ball and chain, you mean?" asked Cousin Agatha, with a humorous twinkle of her line. "By the way, I hear you've taken yours on again?"

Mary Ross looked pained but was silent, but Cousin Agatha continued:

"I rather thought you would. You're just that sort, Mary. I supposed he got around you with some pitiful tale. I never did have any use for Fred," she continued calmly. "He and I were sort of raised together, you know. My mother was the eldest, and Fred was born last, so he was eighteen years when I made my debut into this world. After my grandparents died, he was my mother a lot—and a more hateful young cuss it has never been my fate to know."

But, Agatha," protested Mary Ross weakly, "he's really ill now. That week when he was such a hero——"

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Needlework on hats is liked by some Paris milliners, and some intriguing style are shown in which a pattern is embroidered on the straw shape, with different straw, floss, crewels or metal thread, while this is done also on small hats of felt, grosgrain or satin, making a model which may be suitably worn with the sports ensemble of lighter weight goods and with more formal dress.

A New York authority remarks: "The latest accented crowd in smart costumes seen about town is one that has led to the construction of many mixture effects, finely conceived, of white and a dark color, in dress fabrics for fall. The Prince types, of course, continue, and fine worsteds also add a feeling of white in many instances, worked out in either patterned or plain version."

Paris notes the raggy fabric type of flower continues especially smart when placed in pairs in two shades, such as white with a black below it, or a light with a navy; and Chanel's more recent pique flower finds some adherents among smart women.

PRES. ASSEMBLY WILL HEAR OF GREAT PROGRESS

53rd General Assembly Meeting in Stratford—Programme

(Written for the Canadian Press by Frank Yeigh.)

Toronto, Ont., May 10. (C.P.)—There is one outstanding date in the calendar of a Presbyterian: that of the General Assembly.

The staff of this long-established Presbyterian Parliament—the fifty-third in the annals of the Presbyterian Church in Canada—marks the culmination of a year's work and the setting up of programme and policy for the coming year. Fifty-three bears an historic continuity from 1875 year, the different branches of the communion united as one church, which has gone from strength to strength, and which, even after a division of their ranks caused by the Church Union separation—thereupon some call it—has a commitment strength that exceeds the membership of 1875.

Those who regard the modern Church as merely an occasional gathering for a Sunday service or a mid-week prayer meeting are mistaken. A modern Church is a large and many-sided enterprise and when the programme of a thousand or more congregations is regarded then it becomes "big business". As the agenda of the General Assembly is an imposing document, that will take a week of intensive work on the part of its 300 or 400 commissioners to deal with and dispose of. The personnel of this "House" will be half clerical and half laymen. They will meet in Stratford, Ont., during the first week of June; and it is now Church, which has been newly designated for the notable gathering.

Programme of Wide Scope

The programme will, moreover, be not only Dominion-wide but almost world-wide in its scope, for this historic old denomination believes in and supports a great missionary enterprise; home and foreign in the old terminology; national and overseas in more phrases. One report will claim that; this Church is carrying on a home mission work greater, relative to its strength, than ever before, including an interest in many of the diverse human elements in our varied population from Sea to coast, both of English speech and of non-Anglo-Saxon alock. Ukrainians and Hungarians, Scandinavians and Italians, Chinese and Hindoos are among the different nationalities in which Presbyterians are vitally interested. Who shall say that this is not the best type of patriotism, that of helping to make a nation Christian?

Beyond the boundaries of our far-flung Dominion a world map of missions will indicate Presbyterian activity, in many distant lands in the mission fields allocated to this Church under an amicable division made by the Presbyterian and the United Churches. The former thus has a missionary responsibility for three million of a non-Christian population, in British Guiana, among the native black population of that British possession; in North Formosa, continuing the work inaugurated by George Mackay—the "Black-Bearded B arbarian" as this stalwart son of Zorra is known and in two areas of Central India—the Bhil field, still superintended by Rev. James Buchanan, and the Gwalior field, a monument to the life work of another grand old man of Missions in Rev. John Wilkie.

EMPIRE ARTISTS SHOW AT LONDON

Work of Overseas Painters Possesses Conspicuous Qualities

London, May 10 (Canadian Press).—The Daily News' art critic declares that the exhibition of paintings by artists of Great Britain and the Dominions is very successful, although it falls in one purpose. "It teaches us hardly anything about Dominion artists, whose contributions are few in number and not important in kind," he says. "The exhibition of which is being held at the Imperial Institute, is largely due to the initiative of Sir Joseph Duveen, famous British art dealer.

The News critic however, says that some of the work of overseas painters has conspicuous qualities. "Lifelong familiarity with effects of atmosphere unknown to European eyes leaves its mark on technique," he says. "The coloring of "Afterglow, Winter," by Percy F. Woodcock (Canada), is very attractive from this point of view, as is "A Cape Landscape—Aloes in Bloom," by J. E. A. Volschenk (South Africa), with its transparent atmosphere, and "Looking Towards Swaziland," by Bertha Everard has a fine sense of vast spaces.

"York Mills," by Fred N. Loverdi (Canada), is an excellent picture of half-melting snows. "Sunset on Inuikkonne," by the Sioilh Arlean artist John Williams, is a strong study of light and shade and Paul Nash's water-color "Rock Garden, and C. D. W. Nowland's rediculously drab "Any London Street" deserve special attention, as does the work of several artists from the Irish Free State—Paul Henry's "Potato-Diggers," John Keating's "Fishermen of the Coast," and Patrick Tuohy's Pencil Portrait of Sean O'Casey.

British pictures are declared to be an unusually interesting collection, representative of most of the leading tendencies of painting in Britain. W. Rothenstein's forth-right portrait of Col. Lawrence attracted attention, as did a characteristic landscape by John Nash and a strongly painted "Russian Peasant Girl" by Mark Gertler; "Penelope" by Glyn Philpot, "Misty Morning on the Severn" and "Knowledge and Life" by Vivian Forbes and a landscape by Stanley Spencer. Sir W. Orpen's "Night" is a fascinating study in practically black and white.

MILK HELD AT BORDER

U. S. Customs Not Informed Lifting of Embargo

St. Albans, Vt., May 9.—Many cans of milk shipped from points in the Province of Quebec, Saturday were held up by United States Customs authorities because of a misunderstanding of the date when the embargo on Quebec milk was to be lifted.

Advices reaching the producers from Washington announced that the Public Health Department had notified the Canadian legation that the embargo was off. A telephone call from here Friday night to Customs officials confirmed the report, brought denial of the lifting of the embargo.

Customs officials did not receive notice of the fact until late Saturday afternoon so that milk was refused entry all along the border during the day.

NEW ZEALAND TO TOUR ENGLAND, PLAY CRICKET

London, May 5. (C.P.)—Cricket comes back to its own again in England in the first week in May, when most of the Counties play their opening championships. The season will be better than average, although it will not reveal the impressiveness of last year, when the Australians toured the country and when the mythical "Ashes", the cricket championship between the Old Country and Australia, remained once more in England. This season a New Zealand team is a visitor. This is the first time a team from New Zealand has visited the Motherland. It will be under the captaincy of F. C. Lowry, the old Canada and brother-in-law of A. F. C. Chapman, also remained the English eleven which defeated Australia in the last test match. From a County point of view there will be a fine struggle. It is expected, on the part of Yorkshire to regain the supremacy it lost to Lancashire last season.

The newspaper experts are warning cricket officials that they should be on the look-out this year to find likely players for the next English team to visit Australia, in the winter of 1928-29. It is pointed out that England cannot rely for ever on Rhodes, Hobbs, Woolley and Hendren. It is known that the next English team for test matches in Australia will contain much new material.

On the theatrical side the coming season is of particular interest because a new and smaller ball is being tried out in an effort to increase the effectiveness of bowling, and thus reduce the complete mastery batsmen seem able to establish when they settle down to deliberate "stone-wall" tactics.

HUN AIRCRAFT DEVELOPES FAST

London, May 10 (Canadian Press).—The results of the removal last year of the restrictions on the construction of German aircraft are becoming more apparent, says the Times' Berlin correspondent. The Paris Agreement was not followed, as many people both in Germany and in other countries expected, by a rush of big multi-engined machines. Those German firms which had evaded the restrictions in a way by building and operating large commercial machines in foreign countries were able to import a few of the completed machines for service in Germany, but these were not many and it took time to transfer the construction of the large machines from foreign to home factories.

The first striking evidence of the removal of the restrictions was the construction of the Junkers G.32 all-metal triple-engined passenger and freight aeroplane, at present the largest aeroplane in Germany, which has, however, not yet finished all its trials. This machine has a cruising radius, with normal supply of fuel, of 621 miles at a speed of 116 miles an hour. It is equipped with three junkers engines developing 1,200 h. p. The average width of the cabins is 7 ft.

There are three passenger cabins, entirely separate from the freight and baggage compartments. They are equipped to carry 15 passengers in all, and are provided with sleeping bunks and armchairs, which are interchangeable, so that if necessary the whole machine can be used as a "sleeping car" or as an ambulance. There followed the twin-engined Dornier "Superwal," a large flying boat, which made a spectacular trial flight at Friedrichshafen in which 60 passengers were carried, although only 21 are to be carried normally when it takes its place in the Lufthansa service this summer. The "Superwal," equipped with two Rolls-Royce "Condor" engines developing 1,709 h.p., has a speed of 118-130 miles per hour.

In the meantime the Rohrbach Metall-Ingenieurbau, which, owing to the restrictions had been building its small machines in the works of an associated company of the same name in Copenhagen, produced the three-engined Ro. VIII. "Roland," smaller than the G.31 or the "Superwal," which rapidly proved its value as a 10-passenger commercial machine and was taken into the Lufthansa service in the autumn.

While building another "Roland," which later broke five world's records for flights with specified loads the Rohrbach Works in Berlin set to work on a flying boat to succeed the Ro. VII.—"Robbe," which distinguished itself in the seaworthiness tests at the conclusion of the Warnemunde seaplane competition last summer. The new flying boat, the "Roland," somewhat larger than the "Roland," has just been completed and shipped to Copenhagen for trials in the Sound, as the company has no flying-boat station in Germany as yet from which to test it. Like other Rohrbach flying boats, the "Roeco" will be provided with emergency sailing gear. Owing to the method of construction, by which all sections of the wings, in fact all externities, form self-contained box-like units, attached simply by a couple of bolts, the packing was not a difficult undertaking. Work has already been begun at the Rohrbach works on yet another flying boat, the "Romar," larger than the "Superwal" or the G.31 aeroplane, equipped with three 12.M.W.VI. engines, developing 1,380 h. p.; maximum speed, 138 miles an hour.

WILL UNDERTAKE STUDY OF GRIM MOUTH DISEASE

Philadelphia, May 2.—A competent and live study of pyorrhea to find a successful treatment for this disease of the teeth and gums is to be undertaken by the School of Dentistry of Temple University.

In making this announcement Dr. Norman Broomell, dean of the school, said the study would be part of an exhaustive scientific research to be started by the university. Other important problems included in the program are the possibility of influencing the quality of tooth structure by pre-natal influence, the application of motion pictures to the teaching of dental technique, and whether teeth from which the nerve has been extracted are devitalized or dead.

"Statistics show," said Dr. Broomell "that nine tenths of all systemic diseases for which the mouth is held accountable are directly traceable to poor, best teeth—teeth from which the nerve has been extracted. Hence the importance of establishing the scientific status of these teeth is apparent."

LEAGUE MAY USE RADIO TO END A CHANCE OF WAR

Geneva, April 23.—Radio may be used by the League of Nations in its fight against war.

It is hoped that eventually the League will have its own powerful radio station here. Technicians are to be asked whether it will be possible for a refractory government to "jam" the wave lengths in order to prevent the League's broadcasting reaching its subjects.

The League Council already has voted to use aeroplanes in anti-war demonstrations, possibly to drop League manifestos for citizens of rebellious states. Building of a League aerodrome here has been suggested.

ENGLISH CHANNEL WILL BE CALM

Dover, England, May 3.—The English Channel, usually lashed and churned all summer by distance swimmers, promises to be calm as the old millpond in September. The proposed $50,000 swish from Youngstown, N.Y., to Toronto, Ont., on Labor Day has attracted many Channel aspirants.

Norman Dexham, the Englishman that took Gertrude Ederle's time across the Channel, has been training since early in February for the Youngstown-Toronto event. Dexham won Lord Riddell's "cream of the world" prize of 1,000 pounds in lowering Ederle's time.

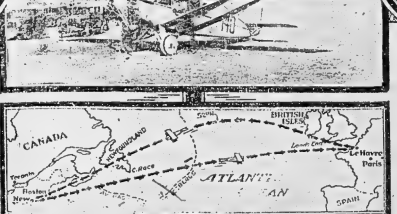

Dexham plans to swim from England to France and then alone to Canada, thus conquering the English Channel in both directions.

CANADA IS A NATION

Canada is a nation, some day in the near future she will be a great nation, and it is within the range of possibilities that she will be the greatest unit of the British Empire. It is a wonderful country, a country of unlimited resources and magnificent possibilities. As a nation she celebrates her sixtieth anniversary this year. What better way for you to celebrate it than by taking a trip "Across Canada and Back", and see for yourself the reason for this optimism about the future. Prof. Laird, of Macdonald College, Que., has arranged with the Canadian Pacific Railway for a special train of sleeping cars to leave Toronto on July 25th, cross the continent and get back to Toronto on August 11th, and in that space of 21 days to see all the principal cities, and the noted beauty spots of the West. After visiting Montreal, Calgary and the principal cities of the prairies, there is the magnificence of the Rockies, and those famous beauty spots, Banff, Lake Louise, Emerald Lake and the Yoho Valley. Then there are two wonderful motor drives, from Banff to Windermere 104 miles, and from Field to Lake Louise 40 miles. The hostelsy district of which Nelson is the capital, and Okanagan Valley fruit country in which is located Penticton will be visited and Vancouver and Victoria, those rapidly growing Pacific Coast cities will delight everyone.

An illustrated booklet describing all the tour is now ready, and can be had on application to W. Hanson, District Passenger Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Toronto, or to Prof. Sinclair Laird, Macdonald College, P.O., Que. 23, 26, nc1, 10, 18, 26.

The most popular moving pictures supplied into China are comedies and stories of child life.

In the annals of modern daring there is no more thrilling venture than the non-stop air crossing of the broad Atlantic, roughly 3,500 miles. Upper centre are Lloyd Bertaud and Clarence Chamberlain, navigator and pilot respectively of the Bellanca monoplane "Columbia", to start its endless shores. Upper Right is Captain Charles Nungesser. Upped Left is Captain Francois Coli. They are navigator and pilot respectively of the 450 horse-power Levasseur plane, the "White Bird," scheduled to start from France. Both are war aces. Nungesser, also known as the Left circle, is known as the handsomest officer in the far-flung French fighting army. His partner, a war disability, is the "one-eyed" devil. Men of high exploit, these, and fearless. In the Right circle is Nungesser's millionaire bride of 1923, Consuello Hathaker. They are now on their "honeymoon" though by no means a divorce. The plane shown is Pertuaux. The map illustrates how he proposes to miss the cold air iceberg area. He would follow the southern steamship lane. Nungesser, on the other hand, would follow an air-described route up to 52 degrees latitude. The two routes do not really differ greatly in length. The "flux" is said to doc the proposed feat. Already four other aviators have met their death in recent days preparing for it.

TO LIVE IN A SURREY VILLAGE

London, May 9 (C.P.)—Many a motorist and motor-cyclist, with a pot hays pardonable curiosity, has within the last week or two directed his Saturday or Sunday afternoon trip towards Ewhurst, the remote little Surrey village, where the Prince of Wales has leased from the Duke of Sutherland the house known as Summerfold. This will serve him as a place of retreat for three months from the end of May. The house is small, but stands on very high ground, with a magnificent outlook across the South Downs. On a clear day it is possible to espy the English Channel; in the foreground a well-nigh all Surrey is in front of the observer, with its rolling meadows, its ridgeroofed villages, and its dark woods. The estate consists of only 35 acres, but there is some good stabling—a matter which will no doubt appeal especially to the Prince. There is also a tennis court. But the great charm of the thing, low, white stone house, is the wonderful view to be gained from the terrace.

Here and There

Nineteen ex-service men's families, sent out to Canada by the British Empire Service League, arrived at Quebec recently on the Canadian Pacific liner "Montrose." These families, totalling in all about 100 persons, have been carefully selected and have been given training at the Ministry of Labor's Training Farm at Brandon, Suffolk, England. The men will carry on farming in the Western part of the Dominion.

A unique "Seeing—Canada" expedition will set out from Ottawa on August 4 this year to visit the principal points of interest in the provinces from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The party to make the tour will include a selected number of delegates to the World's Poultry Congress, to be held at Ottawa in July. Practically all the nations of the world will be represented, and the party will journey first to the eastern part of the Dominion over the Canadian Pacific lines.

Record wool clip and wheat output for the past year have placed Australia in a position of prosperity that was never so great as at present, according to J. M. Nyren, correspondent of the Australian "Daily Telegraph," when interviewed at the headquarters of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Montreal recently on his way from the Commonwealth to England. He estimated that the wheat crop for 1926-27 would probably reached a record figure.

The farthest north settlement in the world, Bache peninsula, is cheered by radio programmes. Situated in the Arctic Ocean, 750 miles above the Arctic circle, this far-flung outpost is situated ten and one-half degrees off the North Pole. Here there is a post of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the garrison consisting of Sergeant Joy, two constables, and a few Eskimos. From November to March the sun is not see sunlight. Their one great pleasure is in listening to radio programmes from the outside world.

A unique musical event will take place at the Capitol Theatre, Quebec, May 20 to 22, when a folk song and handicraft festival will be held. The songs will be sung by local singers, famous for their knowledge of traditional airs of Old Quebec. French-Canadian folk songs are gaining in popularity throughout the country since so many of them have been translated into English by John Murray Gibbon, of Montreal. Charles Marchand, one of the outstanding interpreters of these old-time songs, will figure prominently at the coming musical festival.

President Coolidge's natal State, Vermont, has been brought vividly to the attention of the Middle West, Ontario and Quebec by a special train known as the Vermont Maple Sugar Special, which has been touring the western states and which visited Ontario and Quebec in the latter part of April, carrying an exhibit of Vermont products and also a car of Canadian, Pacific exhibits. Governor John E. Weeks, Vermont's chief executive, and Mrs. Weeks, together with his staff, the United States Senator for Vermont, and many other State legislators and representatives of leading business interests, were aboard the train during its extended tour.

Sidelights on the Chinese situation were thrown by travellers from a trip around the world, who arrived at the Windsor street station in Montreal recently, on the last lap of their journey. They were Harrison Williams, well-known public utilities financier of New York; Paul Cravath, general counsel of the Missouri Pacific Railroad; and Colonel R. B. Morgan, of the Indian army, who had joined the trip at Bombay. Mr. Cravath was in Shanghai, his arrival corresponding with the capture of the city by the Nationalist forces.

News Of Movies

BELLE THEATRE

Thomas Meighen is authority for the statement that the filming of "The Canadian," his new Paramount picture at the Belle required more walking than any other picture he has ever made. Scenes were shot in the foothills of the Rockies in Alberta, Canada. Alberta begins at the northern bound ary of the United States. On the east, it starts where Saskatchewan leaves off and stops in the Rocky Mountains. Somebody once made a map and decided that it should have north, south east and west roads dotting each square mile. Most of them are purely imaginary. Others can be seen with the naked eye because no wheat grows on them, and still others are traversed by automobiles with daring drivers.

Locations for many scenes in "The Canadian" were forty-seven miles south of Calgary, a distance that required four hours of driving. Actual camera work took place on various parts of a ranch. Some days the harvesting machines would be seen on a distant hill. On others they would be down in a valley. Wherever they were, Mr. Meighan, Director William Beaudine, and other members of the company had to walk to them. And some of those walks were a day's work!

CAPITOL THEATRE

The Imperial Players Dramatic Stock Company scored another hit at the Capitol last night in the first presentation of the screamingly funny play let "The Love Test." The house was packed once more by an appreciative audience and in comedy, dramatic situations and genuine all round merit, the production was as good, if not better, than the previous offerings of the Imperial Players. "The Love Test" is genuinely funny and will appeal immensely to everyone who likes good clean humor.

Worth while, too, was the first class feature film offering, "The Temptress" starring Greta Garbo and Antonio Moreno. A story of Paris and the Argentine, "The Temptress" is filled with the adventures in love of a beautiful woman, who finally becomes infatuated with an engineer of the Argentine. The story of how she followed him back from Paris to the Argentine and the final triumph of her love inspiring him to complete an immense dam which in this instance means more than one replete with human interest, thrills and excitement, and one that shouldn't be missed.

Altogether the bill at the Capitol offers entertainment of a high class

RUTH IS GREAT DRAWING CARD

Worth Huge Salary Paid Him By Yankee Owners

New York, May 10.—The New York Yankees make a wise move when Babe Ruth was signed to a three-year contract calling for $70,000 per annum?

There seems to be considerable difference of opinion on this point.

Babe Ruth requested a one-year contract for one hundred thousand simoleons. He agreed to take $30,000 less on a three-year document.

Babe Ruth is one ball player who earns every cent he receives for his services, regardless of the size of his contract. Therefore, he is entitled to just as much money as he can get.

The worth of a ball player is determined by two things, value to his club, playing ability alone considered and his drawing powers at the gate.

As a player Ruth has been standard bearer of the Yankees ever since he broke into the limelight as the game's greatest slugger. When Ruth slips, the Yanks do likewise.

As a gate attraction, no star in the history of baseball, even slightly compares to the Bambino. He is outstanding as a money-getter for the magnates. When the club owners profit financially they are far generous in player and umpire salaries.

Thus, Ruth has been a great man for baseball from many different angles. He has fattened the bank roll of not only the owners but the slaves, players and umpires, as well.

Has Player Value

Getting back to the original subject of this discussion, the wisdom of signing Babe Ruth to a three-year contract at $70,000 per year.

A great many prominent men in baseball, among them several major league club owners, have expressed the opinion that Ruth would have been a better player for the Yankees under a one-year contract at $30,000 more for the season.

They point to Ruth's remarkable comeback of last season. Counted down and out by some of the experts, he had one of his greatest years.

It will be recalled that 1926 was Ruth's last of a three-year contract that compensated him to the extent of $52,000 or one thousand weekly over the entire year.

Ruth realized he had to show in order to get another (fat contract. There is no denying that he did an excellent job of baseballing in 1926.

One of the smartest Canadian-breds two-year-olds of the 1926 season was Listerine, the handsome chestnut filly by Rockville-Miss Jean, owned by J. P. White, Toronto. Her performances throughout the year were so good that when the final two-year-old test came along, the Clarendon Plate race at a mile at Thorncliffe, Ontario, on last day of the autumn meeting, she was top weight over all the other Ontario-bred horses. Despite this handicap, Listerine went out and set the pace and outfooted her field almost to the wire, when she was nipped out by half a length by Trout Jet. Listerine is the favorite for the King's Plate at the Woodbine meeting, Toronto, on May 21.

Do you know that the King's Plate was once raced in Picton many years ago? The great Canadian racing classic will be held at the Woodbine track on Sat. May 21 st. Other points where it has been run are—

West Toronto, Guelph, London, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Whitby, Kingston, Ottawa, Barrie, Woodstock, Preston.

Soft-ball among the girls in the City will flourish more than ever. With the flare of Golden League, High School League and Industrial League every girl who so desires will be given a place with one of these teams. The girls game first spon sored by Miss Merry, has made rapid strides until now it is regarded as one of the leading summer activities.

Tennis Clubs in the City will commence operations within the next two weeks. The Argyle, Christ Church and Hallway St. organizations are ready for the weather to dry up the courts to commence play

Both Golf Clubs are already going strong with the official opening on May 24th. Most of the "bugs" have already covered the course a few times and gained some early season prospects.

There is talk of a Men's soft-ball league here. In past years this game has been a dead issue but it is popular in other cities why not here

Little paraphernalia is required to play and old and young alike can take part. The sporting editor of the Intelligencer would like to hear from any parties who are interested in Men's soft-ball played outdoors during the summer months, and for a starter the Intelligencer would like to enter a team of their own in such a league.

A few seasons past a league was played on the High School grounds and a silver cup was donated by Mr. Herb Fish to be competed for annually. That year the Derby Club won the trophy and since then nothing has been heard of it, but it is thought that it could easily be located and that would be something in view to be played for.

YANKS' MISPLAY PROVES COSTLY

Detroit Hammered Boston Pitchers Hard and Gained Second Place

New York, May 10.—After taking two straight from the Chicago White Sox in their first western invasion of the year, the Yankees toiled away the third game when Wiley Moore's wild peg to first in the tenth inning allowed the Sox to score a 2 to 1 victory. Meixler opened the tenth with a two-bagger, Rannin was next to bat and when Moore tossed the opposing third baseman's bunt wildly toward first, Meixler scored from second.

Moore's pitching, however, was better than his fielding. He either started for the Yanks but got into trouble in the eighth when the Sox tied the score at one-all, and threatened to jump into the lead. Moore came to the rescue and checked the rally. The Yankees scored in the fifth on Gehrig's triple and Meusel's sacrifice fly.

Tony Lazzeri made his first error of the season today when he fumbled Matzler's grounder in the first inning.

At Cleveland, the Indians made it three straight from the Philadelphia Athletics. Shaute held the Mackmen to six hits to win his first game of the season.

The Tigers and Boston Red Sox staged a batting spree at Detroit, with the home team winning 11 to 11. It was an off-day for pitchers, but fan-ten, seven for Detroit, taking part in the fray. With the exception of part of the second inning, the hard-hitting Tigers were always in front. The lowly Sox made a gallant bid to keep up with their opponents, but eleven runs are a lot for the Red Sox. Harry Heilman, Detroit outfielder, hit two homers during the fray.

Point Anne have Bennett to do the flinging with "Soupy" Coyer on the receiving end, and possibly "Gilly" Coyer to take a turn on the mound. The Ballmasters will rely on silsan and possibly another starter of ability. "Punch" Berry, formerly of the Kingston Frontenacs, and Tuborg teams, will likely be available after July 1st. Berry is working on the Canadian National here. Besides there is Scott of the Kingston team and Lionel Harper formerly with Toronto Athletics, to augment the roster. Manager Elliott, of Belleva, has had Jack Shea his good right-hander, but Leal and Bill Ralph are still there. Both have needed to set them out into the National League fight. Up to date the team has been a great disappointment. The players are looking forward to better things in the east where the statement is made in Kingston, May 10.—The death occurred on Saturday of Capt. Robert Woodorth in his 82nd year. Deceased was one of the best-known marine captains and sailed many boats known to this port. He is survived by three sons, Joseph and Howard, this city, Stanley, of Rochester, and one sister, Mrs. J. WILSON'S BACHELOR

CINCINNATI REDS ARE DISAPPOINTED

With the Reds playing in and out ball it is hard to get a good idea on how Jack Hendricks is planning to fill Ed. Roush's place in centerfield. It looks at the moment as if Elliot Allen, the speedy outfielder who used to make home runs for the University of Cincinnati, as won the post from Christiansen, who is down with the "flu" and as well will the fans when the team is not winning.

Allen was informed last week that he had been selected as the young man who had won the berth made vacant by the departure of Ed. Roush to the Giants, and that day Allen came through with six putouts in centerfield and made a pair of hits. Allen is showing steady improvement, and is one of the fastest men on the team.

Allen may be the spark plug the Reds have needed to set them out into the National League fight. Up to date the team has been a great disappointment. The players are looking forward to better things in the east where the statement is made in Cincinnati, the Giants have been fattening up at the expense of the Braves, Phillies and Dodgers.

To Redland observers the race seems to afford the Cards a good chance of repeating despite the Giant's rush out in front. It is their opinion that, while the Pirates have an excellent team, only two pitchers loom up. They are Meadows and Kremer, and no team can hope to win with only two star pitchers. The Giants, too, are weak in the box and have to have the hitting Hornsby to lead them on.

The Irony of Love

By Charles Garvice

"I'm dazed, Maude," he said. "It's hard to believe that Im not dreaming still. If it weren't for the touch of you, that I'm holding you here, here against my breast, I'd swear that I was still asleep."

"You foolish Strandyre!" she said, with a touch of the maternal which ever lies in every true woman. "Why does it seem so wonderful? Why shouldn't I love you?

Did you think I had no heart? If you had taken me in your arms, as I as you say you wanted to do so often, you would have known long before this; for—oh, foolish boy!—I've wanted you to do it so many, many times!"

"Have you?" he said, with a strong man's simplicity. "I wish I'd known You never let on, Maude."

"How could I?" she reiorted, with a sudden blush. "It's not for the woman, Strandyre—"

"No, but you're not a woman," said Rafe. "You're an angel compared with a rough fellow like me, that's what I say. And angels always have to stoop."

"Why, I can't stoop even now; you're a head taller, you see."

He lifted her in his arms so that she could look down on him, and she laid her hands on his head with a caressing benediction.

"Put me down, Strandyre," she murmured. "I'll never be able to, leave you, afteed you; you're so strong, you could so easily kill me."

He laughed as he lowered her, a laugh of infinite joy in her beauty, her innocent witchery; then suddenly the laugh died on his lips, his face fell, and his brows drew together with a frown.

"Somebody!" he said., "I'd clean forgotten him!"

"I know," she said, to his amazement, smilingly, "and there is no need to remember him, unless you like."

"Why—what's now with him? What do you mean? Isn't he—aren't you—

"No, Ralph, dear. He—he has gone forever."

"You were not going to marry him? he demanded wonderingly, with a gasp of relief.

"No," she said, her eyes downcast. "He asked me—that morning—the morning you went away, and I said 'no.' How could I, when I loved you all the time, Strandyre?"

"Poor old Bunkerne!" said Rafe, who could find it easy to pity tremendously the man who could be unfortunate enough to lose Maude. Then he threw up his head, with pity and something like contempt for himself. "I see that there was something strange about you that morning, and I hadn't the pluck to ask you. I wish I had, Maude!"

"I wish you had," she echoed.

"It's a pity," said Rafe. "Look at the time we've lost. I'd give something, all I'm worth, to have that time back."

"We're both very young, dear," she murmured, with a smile.

"That's so," he admitted; "but all the same, I want every minute of you Maude, did I tell you that you are the loveliest thing on God's earth."

"I think you did," she said, against his cheek, "but id ise to hear you say it again, though it isn't true."

He said it and went on:

"And see here now, Maude, I'll take care of you"—he drew her close to him protectingly.

"I think you will, dear," she whispered. "He like to have a strong man to take care of one. And you are very strong, Strandyre. See the marks you've left on my arms, and once or twice I wondered whether one of my ribs wouldn't be broken. But I didn't mind."

"Oh, im a brute," he said penitently as he kissed the marks on the white arms. "Say, I'll have to be very gentle with you; I'll have to remember how delicate you are."

"You foolish, foolish boy," she whispered. "You'll never hurt me, Stran dyre. Love never hurts; it's the other thing, coldness, that breaks us women Dear, I must go up to Ena. How strick I am!—I'd forgotten her—but I'd forgotten everything," she said, with a sweetness that nearly drove Rafe frantic. "She'll be glad, when she's well enough to be told. How fond she is of you. Why, Strandyre, all the time you have been undervaluing your self, did it ever occur to you for a moment how fond people are of you, how easily you win their hearts? Everybody here sings your praises—it's been lovely to listen to them. But I shall spoil you, Strandyre."

"That's so," said Rafe, "but I can stand a lot of such spoiling. Must you really go? You'll come down again?"

"Just to say good night," she whispered. "Oh, it won't be so hard to leave you to-night; for dear, I want to be alone, to think, to plink, to try to realize that—that you love me, and that you belong to me; my very own!"

CHAPTER 26.

"A MARRIAGE HAS BEEN ARRANGED"

When she had gone, Rafe went out on to the terrace and stretched his arms above his head, and took in a long breath of the sweet night air. The earth was still reeling, gently round him; he had not yet regained his balance, but gradually he realized, the stupendous, wonderful fact that Maude loved him, that she was going to be his wife. For a time this was enough for Rafe's mind, but suddenly he remembered Pienie. Of course, he must tell Maude about Pienie. Pienie crossed his mind for the moment the desire that he had not concealed his rank and Pienie had not placed themselves off as man and wife. Now that Maude loved him, he felt as if the incident which was really so innocent and which had appeared trivial enough at the time, a joke, was a kind of sacrilege. With Maude in his mind, the word "wife" took to itself a holiness it had never yet had for him. Was it fair to Pienie to tell Maude of the "man-and-wife" manner? After all the matter concerned Pienie closely, more closely than it did him. Would it not be giving Pienie away? Unsophisticated as he was, he had learned enough about women to know that Pienie was, in a sense, in a miserly sense, jealous of what she called his "fine friends," and she would naturally resent his telling Maude.

'CLEAN-UP PAINT-UP' CAMPAIGN IS ANNOUNCED BY MAYOR WILMOT

Plan To Beautify Belleville —Citizens Are Asked To Co-operate

In the interests of a healthier, cleaner and more beautiful city, Belleville is to have a real "Clean Up and Paint Up" Campaign.

In today's issue will be found a civic proclamation issued by Mayor Wilmot, officially announcing Monday next, May 16th, as the Opening Day of the "Clean Up and Paint Up Drive."

To effect the purpose for which the campaign is launched, that is, to make Belleville Cleaner, thereby safeguarding health, and to make our city more attractive generally both to residents and to visitors—the aid of various organizations will be enlisted. The local M. O. H. Dr. Cronk, and his Department of Health will co-operate; the service Clubs will lend their aid, and the teachers in our schools can exert a powerful influence on the minds of their pupils by instructing them in the advantages that will be gained from a clean city.

Here are a few of the things which similar campaigns have accomplished in other centres—showing just what we may expect to do in Belleville. The campaign develops Community Spirit because all classes work together in the common good of the city. The city is not only cleaned up but its new condition inspires every one to keep it look ing that way.

Streets and alleys are cleaned up and fire hoses are reduced through removal of waste and rubbish.

Vacant lots are improved, mowed and cleared. Public buildings are renovated and trees planted.

Homes are cleaned and painted, fences and garages painted and repaired.

The Campaign saves human lives because breeding places of flies and mosquitoes are destroyed.

Property values are increased and the city advertised as a desirable place in which to live.

The Campaign helps business, for it creates a lively demand upon dealers, manufacturing needed to make the home beautiful and safe from fire, disease and the weather.

Finally such a Campaign develops good citizenship, and good character. In the Big Clean Up and Paint Campaign will be beneficial all round. Monday, May 16th is the opening day, so get in line and do your share to make your own home attractive and secure. Then if everyone is co-operative the desired result will be achieved and the city made a cleaner and better community.

MISSING MAN IS SEEN IN OSHAWA

George White, of Corbyville, who has been missing from his home since Easter Sunday, when he drove away in a Ford touring car, was seen on the streets of Oshawa last week by Everett Beare of Corbyville, who is now employed at that place. Beare and White carried on a conversation for a few minutes and the latter told him that he was employed by a farmer just outside of Oshawa.

This afternoon when The Intelligencer interviewed Mrs. White at her home, Corbyville, over the long distance phone, she stated that she was not personally talking to Beare, and in reply to the reporter's question if she intended to go to Oshawa to see her husband, Mrs. White stated that she was unable to make the journey and that her father-in-law and brother-in-law were also unable to make the journey. Mrs. White has recently undergone several critical operations and is now in a delicate condition.

After speaking with Mrs. White, The Intelligencer called Mr. George Beare's home, which is located near the White home. Mrs. Beare, mother of Everett Beare, who saw White in Oshawa last week, said her son saw the missing man and she heard him talking to other members of the Oshawa organization. He was to have home about the meeting in Oshawa However, Mrs. Beare was not in a position to throw much light on the movements of White.

COMBING OCEAN IN VAIN SEARCH FOR LOST FLIERS

Hope Dies As Radio Stations Keep Flashing "No News"

MIGHT FLOAT

Possible That Men Will Yet Be Picked Up By Searchers

New York, May 11.—Through the combined efforts of the Canadian Government, President Coolidge, the United States Navy Department French officials and the sailing masters of ocean passenger vessels the hunt extending from the North Atlantic coast to the French coast went on today for Captains Nungesser and Coli, the missing French aviators.

Fresh instructions were issued by the Canadian Government to radio stations, coast guards stations and patrol vessels along the Atlantic to search for the French trans-Atlantic fliers. The old adage that "no news is good news" in the search for Nungesser and coali grew more and more, as four hours' intensive search from ocean to ocean resulted failed to send word of any trace being found of the fliers.

Overnight there was an ominous silence as radio operators at the Boston navy yard listened for some message from the Ile Haute Wenk bank and Mohave, which sped north on their guest over the mercantile lanes, received from the tugs during the day yesterday indicated that they were covering a wide sweep of the north Atlantic. The Wandank was making its hunt well off shore while the Mohave kept much closer to the coast of the chance that the "White Bird" might have come down in some isolated inlet. Although aeroplanes at Boston were in readiness to aid in the continued search today the conditions were so bad that there was little prospect that any of them would attempt to go to sea. Shore points and radio stations in Nova Scotia, Miquelon and Newfoundland were on the watch.

Resentment Dies Down

Paris, May 11.—Parisian resentment against the false news of the arrival in Ninth America of Nungesser and Coli still lingers, however, toward the United States, apparently attributable to reports that the United States authorities had known of the fliers' oasis, is gradually subsiding in view of despatches describing the whole-hearted efforts by United States authorities to find the missing fliers.

The question on everybody's lips is "Where can the Nungesser-Coli "White Bird" remain afloat. If it descended gently it could float for a long time, owing to the empty gas tanks forming ideal floats. It would have had a small quantity of apparatus to distill sea water for drinking, flares and pyrotechnics, pressed food and fishing tackle.

THEATENED TO SHOOT BUT SHE FELT HE WAS "TALKING"

Montreal, May11.—Another chapter was added to the story of the shooting of Dr. J. F. Puddicombe at the Royal Hospital here Sunday night by Dr. Frank Brown and the latter's suicide when "the woman in the case" whose name is being withheld, yesterday told Coroner McMahon that for some months she had been the fiancee of Brown.

Last February, she said, the engagement was broken but they remained friends. At that time Brown told her he would be able to reconcile his losing her as a wife, but warned her that if she became attached to another man he would kill him. She did not take the remark seriously. Last Saturday she had gone for an auto ride with Brown and then confessed her love for Puddicombe. Brown felt badly over it and said: "I will kill him tomorrow." She still thought that he was only talking."

NINE - YEAR - OLD CANNIFTON LAD IS CRUSHED BENEATH MOTOR CAR

STILL MISSING

Ralph Demille Instantly Killed While Returning From School

INQUEST OPENED

Ross Downie, a Chum, Suffers Injuries To Head and Legs

Captain Saint Roman

Reports from Brasil indicate that Captain Saint Roman, French aviator, and his companions on a southern trans-Atlantic flight are still missing, although it is said they may have landed on a desert island. Their big plane was not equipped with pontoons and probably could not remain afloat long in the water. They left Senegal, West Africa, last Friday afternoon.

Ralph Demille, aged nine years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Demille, Cannifton, was almost instantly killed and Ross Dowaie, aged nine years, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Downie, seriously injured, when the two lads were struck by a car driven by John McCabe, of Montreal. In Cannifton near the School House at 4.15 yesterday afternoon.

The boys were returning from school along the roadside when Donald Williams, another pupil of the school, dropped a text book from his bicycle. At the same time a load of grist driven by George Demlee of the 4th Concession of Thurlow, was passing and the car driven by McCabe was following closely behind the grist on the right hand side of the road, going in a north easterly direction.

Darted Into Road

The boys darted out to pick up Donald Williams books and as they did so the driver of the car, not noticing the little fellows on the road turned out to pass the grist and in doing so struck the children, both at the same time. Young Downie was tossed by the fender of the car but not escaped completely ever young Demille's body crushing him beneath. One wheel of the car apparently passed over his head, for when the boy's chest, he was also taken to the Coe home was examined by Dr. Stobo and later taken to his home. Coroner Dr. Boyce was on the scene in a few minutes and ordered that an inquest be opened.

Mrs. Demille who had just alighted from the train at Belleville having returned from Kingston, was met by friends and informed of the fatality. She hastened to the scene but too late to see her son alive. Mr. Demille is employed at the Canada Northland Power Co. at the city and was just returning from work when he too was told of the accident

When Don Williams and Clayton Welch, both of whom were schoolmates of the unfortunate little fellows, carried them to their homes. Miss Cowan and Miss Furnoaske, the teachers at the school, gave immediate attention to some of the accidents and all that lay in their power to help unfortunate children who were injured.

Inquest Opened

An inquest into the accident was opened at the home of Mr. Wm. Cole at 8 o'clock last evening and the jurors empanelled were Reeve Bleecker, chairman; Charles Callery, Robert Dunning, William Gordon, Albert Thompson, Wm. Reynolds, Dr. Honeywell, Wm. Cole and Ernest Smith.

The evidence taken was identified by Jack Bush and Sergt. Clarke of the Provincial Police Department. The inquiry was adjourned until Tuesday, 17th of May at the Belleville Police Court.

Ross Downie who was unconscious all night, visited this morning, regained consciousness and is on the way to recovery today.

Mrs. McCabe who was in the car with her husband at the time of the accident is prostrated at this morning and under the doctor's care. She and Mr. McCabe had been guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Cavanagh, 70 Cannifton Road.

McCabe, who is a brakeman on the Canadian Northland Railway, running between Belleville and Montreal, will not be arrested as he exercised every judgment in endeavoring to avoid the accident. He is well known in Belleville, having married a Belleville girl, and spends a good deal of time visiting here. His wife accompanied him in the car at the time.

DR. WELBANKS IS BURNED ABOUT HEAD

Laden with an inflamable cargo for which the insurance papers had been secured, the 38 foot gasoline boat "Kaly Fy" owned by Dr. Welbanks took fire yesterday afternoon at 3.30 and but for the cool headedness of the owner would probably have been burned to ashes. flames in a few minutes.

The boat which was tied at the extreme east end of the government dock close to the freight sheds had a heavy cargo of inflammable material. Gasoline tanks are fixtures in the boat and by some mistake the gasoline in the tank in the bow was allowed to run down the boat. When the engine had fired the overflow became ignited and a deafening explosion resulted. Dr. Welbanks who was at the bow had all the hair burnt off the right side of his head and his eye brows completely burned off. "If" he told the people who hastily gathered at the dock "I had been wearing oil soaked clothes at the time I would undoubtedly have been burned to death."

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Be noble! and the nobleness that lies
In other men, sleeping, but never dead,
Will rise in majesty to meet thine own.

—LOWELL.

SYNTHETIC GAS

For two decades chemists the world over have been in pursuit of finding some substitute for gasoline, and from France it is reported that the synthetic fuel invented by French engineers has been sanctioned by the Government as a practicable scheme. Presumably the next step will be its manufacture under Government supervision and possibly with a Government subsidy to aid its distribution in the home market. The "prepared wood and charcoal mix ture" is deemed an invention of the highest economic importance to the nation, especially in time of war, since it will enable a supply of motor fuel independent of imports from the outside. Whether the French product is similar to the German commodity manufactured under the Bergius process is not stated. But there would seem no doubt that the chemical production of petrol, or something equal to petrol, is now an accomplished fact.

Friedrich Bergius lives in Berlin. He early began his studies in the physical science. Seventeen years ago he founded an experimental laboratory at Hanover at his own expense. He had for years pondered over the method whereby nature produces coal in the geologic process, and set about the task of reproducing in the chemical retorts the conditions of pressure and temperature coal-making involves. Within two years Bergius succeeded in producing out of cellulose a substance closely resembling the black substance. Later on he subjected coal and hydrogen with a mixture of oil to constant heat and pressure of high degree, and the result was a distillation of petrol from the "steel bomb" containers. If the data made be possible, Bergius costs ninety marks to produce a ton of these liquid coal products, fuel and oils, and the market value is estimated at one hundred and eighty marks. Bergius therefore argues that the Bergius therefore argues that the natural petrol, and proves inferior for motoring purposes. This remains to be seen. However, there are in Germany today two huge corporations back of the scheme, and immense plants are being erected for the manufacture of synthetic petrol. The coal barons of Ruhr are said to have invested large funds in this enterprise, which opens up possibilities of incalculable range, not the least among them being the economic revolution ensuing from the successful production and marketing of this long-sought source of available power.

NOT WORRYING

When man began to wear soft collars and purple pajamas, his downfall began, according to Dr. Charles Grey Shaw, professor of philosophy in New York University. He is wrong. Fortunately, while women, by taking a job outside the home and paying her own way in the theatre and the restaurant, is gradually usurping the masculine prerogative. And something has got to done about it.

We are not sure that clothes make the man. On the Biblical story, Adam, the perfect male, and Eve, the perfect female, sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves "aprons," and it is not evident that Adam's apron was fabricated or differed in any way from Eve's. Later, "Unto Adam also and to his wife did the Lord God make coats of skins." Those who draw conclusions from the philosophy of clothes will have to get around those statements as best they can.

In the days of Charles II. and Louis fourteenth, men dressed in silks and ruffles and wore their hair long and powdered. This fashion persisted for a couple of centuries with no serious results.

As for women taking men's jobs, history is full of such instances. When the men went to war, the women did the plowing. Joan of Arc led an army. Queen Elizabeth ruled a kingdom and swore. The list is too long to warrant the citing of numerous examples.

When women begin to go away on week-end fishing trips without taking along some men to put the worms on their hooks, we shall begin to worry but until then no professor can get us excited.

TOURIST TRAFFIC

This year is expected to mark a record in the volume of tourist traffic, of which Ontario will enjoy a very large share. There are several factors contributing to the increase, the principal being that it is the year of the Dominion's diamond jubilee, the festivities in connection with which will undoubtedly attract great throngs of sightseers and former citizens visiting their old home towns. The extension of the time limit during which tourists from the United States may stay in Canada, without the deposit of cash or bonds, from thirty to ninety days will result in more visitors and longer stays. The improvement in the various highways systems is another inducement. Canada has, in all provinces, an up-to-date system of motor roads of which the country may well be proud. With the building of a few links, declares the department of the interior, the chain of good roads will extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast. Along these highways, at convenient intervals, are ample facilities for travelers, in the way of car service and hotel and camping accommodation.

So far as Ontario is concerned, it is confidently anticipated that the bulk of the traffic this year will come our way. The capital of the Dominion, the headquarters for the approaching national celebrations, is in this province and the new liquor regulations will undoubtedly have their effect. Scenically and from the point of view of interest and comfort, Ontario has irresistible attractions to offer visitors this vicinity being one of the most favored from a tourist's, the tourist point of view. The first great advertisement for the Niagara district will be supplied in Blossom week, which is likely to attract an even larger pat ronage than usual this year. Those who come to view these early charms will want to return to see more of our beautiful country and to benefit from its health-giving climate. In connection with the great World's Poultry Congress, to be held in Ottawa, extended personally conducted motor trips from various points in this and other provinces have been arranged for the week's opening of scenic highways to and through the national parks will constitute another strong magnet. "The completion of connecting links in the Rocky mountains and on the Pacific coast," says National Resources, "will mean that from sea to sea there will not be a portion of Canada that will not witness greater motor tourist activity than ever before."

WASH- POISON FROM KIDNEYS

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, as a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness most folks call it because they can't control urination. While quite extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation.

KIWANIANS HEAR REV. L. S. WIGHT

Jack Deacon and Franklin Lang Assist In Musical Program

Local Kiwanians were on Tuesday treated to an address by one of their own members, when Kiwanian Lapie Wight gave the Club an inspiring talk dealing with the Kiwanis motto "We Build."

The speaker pointed out that the motto implied constructive effort, not only in things physical, but spiritual as well; it implied character building too, not alone on the part of those for whom such a club worked, but for the members themselves. And for this was necessary introspection, a thorough knowledge of one's weaknesses and strength and of the unlimited opportunities that present themselves in Canada today.

The musical end of today's meeting was of a high order, vocal solos by Messrs. Jack Deacon and Franklin Lang contributing to an excellent programme.

ACTION SETTLED IN BAKERY CASE

Plaintiff Alleged Misrepresentation of Value of Stirling Property

The case of Bates vs Jetty Thompson was settled out of Court. It was to have been tried before Justice Christie at the Court House this week.

The Plaintiff in this action brought suit against the Defendants, who were Bakers in the village of Stirling, claiming an order rescinding and setting aside a contract made between the parties, providing for the sale of the Defendants' bakery business and premises, and for damages, and for the return of $500.00, part of the purchase money paid by the Plaintiff on the grounds of alleged misrepresentation as to the value and conditions of the premises and machinery. The Defendants counter-claimed and asked for specific performance of the Agreement, and asked for damages for the non-fulfilment of the Contract by the Plaintiff. This action was settled by a third party, who desired to buy the bakery and business, entering into an Agreement to purchase the whole property outright. The Plaintiff to receive $1,000.00 and the Defendants to receive $1500.00, in addition to the $500.00 previously paid by the Plaintiff to the Defendants. Purdon & Purdon acted for the Defendants. H. D. Graham (Trenton) acted for Plaintiff.

Husky's Merit Is Best Proved In Local Homes

All Members of the Family Use This Great Remedy With Fine Results.

The merit of Husky, the reconstructive tonic and premier preparation for the relief of stomach, liver, kidneys and bowel ailments, is best known in the homes where it has been used. Instances it has been used with splendid results by every member in each family. Mothers and fathers have found it fine and they give it to their children because they know Husky is compounded from pure vegetable juices and contains no harmful drugs. Husky is popular in the home because it has proven to be of surpassing value in relieving stomach, liver, kidney and bowel ailments and such accompanying ills as headaches, dizzy spells, indigestion, gas and sour stomach, constipation, catarrhal affections, rheumatic pains, nervousness, unusual dizzy and weak, run down feelings.

Interesting Case Cited

An interesting case which proves the merit of Husky is that of Mrs. Edith Parfrey, 127 Kenwood Ave., Toronto, who tells of her experience with Husky as follows: "For six months I suffered badly from stomach trouble. My appetite dwindled away and the little food I did eat would not digest well. It seemed that gas would form on it so much as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this scouring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

JOHN O'GORMAN TALKS TO WOMEN'S LEAGUE

Mr. John O'Gorman, the speaker at the regular meeting of the Catholic Women's League last night at St. Michael's Academy, gave a brilliant address on "Co-operation" which was heard with great interest by the big gathering present. Mr. O'Gorman showed how co-operation is one of the vital factors in any society's success.

During the evening a solo by Miss Bawden was greatly enjoyed and Miss Hurley, and Mrs. J. P. Dolan were appointed delegates to the Montreal C.W.L. Convention (June 6-11) with Miss Margret Hayes and Mrs. Fitzgerald as alternates.

Mrs. Flagler, president of the League, occupied the chair.

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT OPENING OF W. A.

The largest attendance on record marks the first-day annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Diocese of Ontario being held this week in the parish of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston.

A junior conference was held on Tuesday afternoon followed by evensong in the cathedral. The girls' service was held in the Oddfellows' Hall near the cathedral at which Mrs. Gilbert Perrabee, Montreal, Dominion President, was the speaker. Miss Edith Van Shaubenzee, Girls' and Candidates' Secretary of the diocese, was presented with a diocesan life-membership and Mrs. A. N. Lee, the indefatigable secretary for Junior Work who leaves for her new home in London, Ontario, was given a handsome purse from the junior workers of the diocese.

At the evening the Junior session was continued. The banners for the study competition were awarded to Deseronto and Christ Church, Belleville. Prescott Juniors won a silver W. A. Cross.

Under the direction of Miss Alice Harris, a returned missionary from Uganda, India, living pictures of the Modern World were put on by the Kingston Juniors and Girls.

On Wednesday morning the Holy Communion was celebrated in St. George's Cathedral at 10 o'clock with a service by Rt. Rev. C. A. DESERONTO TEAM QUITS LADIES' I.G.

Bay of Quinte Circuit Opens July 6th With Three Clubs

A meeting of the Bay of Quinte Ladies' Softball League was held at Deseronto last evening when general business of the league was taken care of. Delegates from Belleville and Napanee learned with regret that Deseronto Ponies will be unable to compete as a team for this year. Vice-President of the League, James Whitton, also manager of the Ponies, stated that lack of material was the cause. A large percentage of the popular last year's team have either left Deseronto or will be leaving before the season opens.

It was decided to carry on with three teams, namely, Napanee Leafs, Belleville Beavers and Belleville Ontarios and to operate a double schedule with first and second teams playing off the championship. Opening game, Napanee Leafs vs Ontarios at Belleville July 6th.

Napanee are raring to go and will now be able to play residents of Deseronto who are available and who played last year. This will give them at least two fine acquisitions in Violet Whitton the peppy and clever short stop of the Ponies, also Lillian Wagar, the genial little pitcher who can make all and sundry take notice. Napanee also have one of the best receivers in the league, so with the additional strength added to an already good team the local clubs will reprize to watch their step or a championship will be sliding Napanee way.

A fourth team will not be sought but Napanee and district fans will be given some nice exhibition tilts to satisfy their appetite for softball, and many teams outside of the league will be accommodated.

Napanee have already secured permission to meet Desco and Ciaco Clubs and Kingston Treasurers.

Bay of Quinte teams will not be given permission to play in any tournaments unless sanctioned by the league, and it is well for outsiders to know this.

All in all it looks like a mighty big season and the class of ball to be served up should be of excellent quality.

Department of Marine and Fisheries will allow catching of herring in the Bay of Pundy close to the New Brunswick shore.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it over corrects three times as much acid in the stomach as soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. BALL PRACTICES START TONIGHT

Weather permitting the Canadian Nationals will indulge in their first practice at the Exhibition grounds tonight at 6.15 sharp. Manager "Penny" Mills said this morning that he looked for his team to grab the bunting in the Bay of Quinte League. A welcome to every ball tosser has been issued and there has been considerable some new material drifted into town since last season. There is several big holes to be plugged and these are sure to be taken care of.

Harry Mills, Wells, Hagerman et al have all signified their intention of again donning the uniform while there is a current rumor afloat that Jack Williams will be back at his old corner at 3rd base. Harry Blakely will arrive back from Queen's shortly and will join the squad. If the pitching staff can be sufficiently bolstered there is little ekc to worry about. Besides playing the managerial role "Penny" will take his regular turn behind the bat. No time can be lost in preparing for openingday here on the Queen's Birthday when R. A. Elliott and his smart Deseo Club will be the guests of the Railroaders.

CLOSED THEIR SEASON

The Palencia Club closed a season of greatest social success last night with a dance w hich will go on the records of the organization as one of the best ever given in the city. The Ball room at the Johnstone Academy in which the affair was held was beautifully decorated with Chinese lanterns and love ly floor lamps which cast a becoming glow on the dizzying whirl of the two hundred couples who throughout the evening joined the revelry to the Ben Ton orchestra irresistable. During the evening four dainty dances succeeded the general success and during the first dance hanson and horns were presented, during the second bats, and parasols, the third serpentine confetti, and the last, week-end vanity cases. The committee, Mr. and Mrs. C. Shorey, Mr. W. Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Graves and Mr. Jack Mullop receive no effort in making the affair the complete success it proved to be.

STILL RUNNING STRONG

"Pre O' My Heart", the Halloway Street Tennis Club drama is being presented in Plainfield tonight and in Brighton tomorrow night. This play has had a phenominal success and nearly $300 in clear profits have been realized from its production.

INTERRUPTED LESSONS

A welcome little diversion was supplied to the pupils of Form 2D at the High School today when some paper that had been stuffed down a small hole by the radiator pipe in some unknown manner caught on fire. With commendable haste one lad filled a pitcher full of water and cast the fluid upon the raging flames, immediately quenching them. The form at the time was in Study Period, under the supervision of Mrs. Lapham.

GETS GOOD APPOINTMENT

Mr. Charles Sankey, nephew of Col. Pruston and recent winner of a medal in Applied Science has been appointed to the Chemical Research staff of the Alitibi Power and Paper company of Iroquois Falls. This company is the largest of its kind in Canada.

NEARLY DEADLISHED

The Taylor house and the old stone school house, situated on the High School property, were razed to the ground today, with the workmen making short work of this bit of the work. All remains of the two buildings should be absolutely removed in a very few days now.

SOFTBALL GAMES

Daily attractions at the High School are the separate battles of softball between the various forms. The leagues are divided into two sections, upper school and middle school, and the two divisions play off at the end of the baseball year for the championship of the School. Honours are fairly well divided every year.

INDOOR BASEBALL

In the Industrial League last night the Optimist girls defeated the Curzon 14-2 and the Albert College boys won from the C.P.R. by a 26-4 score. A big crowd as on hand and both games were enjoyed. Knott, McKenna and Lloyd umpired.

CHICKEN THIEVES ARE WANTED HERE

Peterboro, April 11.—William Nichol son, of Drummer, township, pleaded guilty this morning in police court to a charge of stealing fourteen chickens from the farm of Robert Dixon in the township of Otonabee. He will come up for trial shortly with his brother Pearse, who is implicated in the same charge, on Friday before Magistrate O. A. Langley at County Police Court.

Pearse was arrested some weeks ago and has been held in the County jail until his brother was arrested as he was a material witness in the case. When this case is disposed of the provincial police in Belleville are wanting the two brothers on a similar charge as it is claimed they stole eighty-two chickens in one week between Belleville and Marmora and sold them in this city. It is understood that William has already acknowledged this latter theft.

ANGLINS TO DISPOSE OF BUS SERVICE

Negotiations are under way between Messrs. John Anglin and sons, owners of the Belleville-Kingston buses and a large motor transportation company for the sale of their bus line. If the new company takes over this motor line, it will operate between Prescott and Toronto and Mr. Anglin's two sons will be employed as drivers with a long contract.

MOWAT & MacGILLIVRAY

Even considering the rapid rise of Teck Hughes which carried it to $8.00, we consider it one of the very best buys on the market. With the planned increased production and the way the ore is increasing with depth, it has all the earmarks of being another Lake Shore.

Various rumors are in circulation on Lake Shore. Whether or not there will be a split in the shares, the actual worth of this property will carry the shares higher. An increase in dividends this year is not improbable.

No definite date has been announced for the issue of new shares of Wright Hargreaves. Since the announcement was made, the stock has had a rise of practically $1.00. We feel that people would be well advised to buy the present stock and take the split as the extensive plans of development, and the value of the ore bodies we see they are meeting with at depth over discounts the possibility of the new stock finding lower levels.

NEW ARRANGEMENT FOR HANDLING OF TOURISTS' AUTOMOBILES BETWEEN COBOURG AND ROCHESTER

The Ontario Car Ferry Company of the Canadian National Railways takes pleasure in announcing that arrangements have been completed for the handling of tourists' automobiles between Cobourg, Ont., and Rochester Dock, N.Y., via the steamers Ontario No. 1 and Ontario No. 2, connecting with the schedule and summer service on May 28th.

This new arrangement will undoubtedly prove of great convenience to automobile tourists who will be able to take full advantage of this short and pleasant direct route between Central Ontario and Central New York State. Only a limited number of cars may be handled on any one trip of the steamers, and in view of the anticipated heavy traffic, it will be necessary to make reservations advance through the Agent at Cobourg. The charge for each automobile will be $17.50 each way.

Tourists will also require to comply with the regulations of the Canadian and United States Customs respecting the export and entry of their cars.

The Irony of Love
By Charles Carvice

But all the time he was pondering the question, he knew that he could not conceal from Maude the object of his visit to Ainbourgh; he must at least tell her of Phenie's journey over here.

He heard the rustle, the soft frou-frou of Maude's robe, and he turned to her with his arms outstretched.

"She is still sleeping," said Maude, as she nestled up to him. "The nurse says that the dear child is traveling to recovery while she sleeps."

"Thank God!" said Rafe. "I'm looking forward to the time when I can tell her that you and I are going to be married. Say, Maude, how soon can that be? What about next week?"

She drew back her head and looked at him with smiling eyes, a blush on her face.

"My dear Strangyre! Oh, what is the use of talking to so fickle a boy? Next week! More likely next year."

"Good Lord, Maude!" he exclaimed, aghast, his face flushing. "Why, then, I couldn't wait as long as that. I couldn't live without you. Make it ten days, or a fortnight at the least. Why, what's the trouble? We've only got to go to Gretna Green, haven't we?"

"Oh!" she laughed, in despair, "I should never make you understand how many things there are to be done before you and I can be married, Stran fyre. There are clothes—"

"Now, you're playing it low-down on me, dearest," he said reproachfully. "You've got more clothes than you could ever wear, if you lived to be as old as some of those old fellows in the Bible."

"But one has everything new when one is married," she said, with an air of one instructing a little child.

"Now, that's funny," he remarked much impressed. "I'd marry you in the oldest clothes I've got, rather than wait a day. But never mind, we won't powwow over that. You can get all the clothes you want in a fortnight—"

Suddenly Maude took him upon him with a startled "Oh!" and made an effort to release herself, but Rafe held her too tightly and, looking over his shoulder saw that the cause of her start was Lord St. Ives, who had walked across the lawn and, literally, was in them. He came with his hands thrust in the pockets of his light dress overcoat, his cigar in the corner of his mouth, his eye-glass in place, and his brows nearly up to the roots of his hair.

"I say!" he cried, with a touch of indignation in his astonishment, for he's father likes to be taken by surprise in this way.

Rafe, his face all aglow with his marvelous, incredible happiness, he'd

DOCTORS THINK TOO MUCH OF A MONETARY GAIN

Chicago, Ills., May 11 (Canadian Press).—Preventive medicine is the crying need of civilization, but the goal will not be achieved so long as the medical profession thinks in terms of pecuniary profit, Sir James Barr, M.D., distinguished British physician, past president of the Royal Medical Society and Knight of Grace of the Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem, declares in an article in the current issue of the Journal of the American Electronic Research Association.

Sir James several years ago created a stir by advocating the payment of physicians by results, further contending that in case of death medical attendants should be required to pay the funeral expenses. "Albert Abrams and His Critics," is the article written by Sir James, in which he defends the pioneer of electronic medicine against charges of seeking personal gain.

"It is unfortunate but no less a fact that the so-called leaders of the medical profession in America as well as in England, have no use for any discovery which does not make money easily," Sir James charges. "There is no desire to seek for absolute truth, the only test of truth is, does it work and pay; all else must be discarded or virulently opposed until its practical benefits overwhelm opposition."

Abrams' methods are efficacious but they do not create millionaires, he says.

"I am more interested in the prevention of disease than in its treatment," Sir James asserts, "and my appreciation of Abrams' methods is due to the fact that disease can thus be often diagnosed and arrested before it has assumed serious proportions. I should like to see a healthy, virile, intellectual race who would be independent of doctors and undertakers to an advanced age.

"A diseased man is of no use to anybody but to his doctor and himself.

"Matters do not seem to be improving in America. According to the Medical Press and Circular, of the 20,000,000 children in the United States, 14,000,000 suffer from some physical defect. Of these some 2,000,000 are suffering from grave malnutrition; 10,000,000 have badly diseased teeth; 2,000,000 suffer from obstructed breathing due to adenoids or enlarged tonsils; a similar number have enlarged cervical glands; at least 10,000,000 are or have been infected with tuberculosis; 4,000,000 have defective vision; more than 1,000,000 have defective hearing; about 1,000,000 have spinal curvature or kindred deformities; nearly half a million have organic heart trouble, and at least 1,000,000 are predisposed to some serious form of nervous disorder.

"This vast army of diseases are nearly all preventable and does not reflect much credit on the medical profession; in fact it is a positive disgrace to medical teachers, medical journals, and leaders of medical thought, who, if they were all scrapped, would never be missed."

MANY CANADIAN PLANT AT RES. GOV. GEN. BYNG

London, May 11 (C.P.).—Over 1,500 different Canadian plants and shrubs have been planted at Thorpe Hall, near Clacton-on-Sea, by the ex-Governor-General of Canada, Viscount Byng, resides with Lady Byng. Since their return to Thorpe, Lady Byng has made wonderful changes in the grounds in front of the house. She is an enthusiastic gardener, and a "Daily News" representative found her busy in the grounds.

There is a large lake, where various Canadian waterfowl are rapidly making themselves at home. Not far away a noisy waterfall feeds two smaller lakes, and stepping-stones, little islands and natural haunts make up a beautiful picture. Everywhere there are strange and peculiar plants, some taken from the Canadian prairies and cropped into quiet knots and; some sent by Canadian friends, and many brought by Lady Byng herself from Canada.

The much-talked-about nymmp frogs have not arrived yet. They are coming from Ontario, and a nice swampy piece of ground awaits their arrival.

Walking among the trees are constantly seen nesting boxes conveniently placed.

EXCHANGE SEAT IS NOT 'SEAT'

New York, May 11—That auction is free of Wall Street furniture commonly called a "seat" on the stock exchange is a sad misconception to the weary broker.

It really is nothing more than a "spot" or series of them on the floor where 1,370 brokers may deal in stocks or bonds.

Seats on the exchange are but a name only. Their owners may buy and sell stocks and bonds at the posts just as the pretenders of the present mart first did in 1792 when that little men over on an average of ten miles per hour, and seldom have time to sit down.

"If Jack Dempsey wants to stage a comeback let him get in a week here in an active market and see if he can make the grade," said a floor member of a prominent stock exchange firm.

In the hot humid dog days a refrigerating system to cool the air in the exchange is in full swing and four gallons of water a minute are extracted from the atmosphere.

Seats on the stock exchange may soon exceed their recent high record price of $185,000. With the extension of the ticker service to the Pacific coast, members of the exchange say that interest in the rise and fall of securities has been enlivened in the far west and even better prices for seats are in prospect this year.

WHEN TWO GIRLS CLAIM HEART OF ONE MAN

TRUE STORY

By BLAIE MARLOWE

Two girls and a man—two men and a girl. There you have the makings of all the love stories that have ever been written. This time it's two girls and a man—and the whole department store is divided on the issue.

DEAR BLAE:

I'm in such a terrible mess just don't know what to do. I have thought and finally have decided to tell you all about it so that you can tell me whether I am right or wrong.

My girl friend and I have been working together in a large department store for two years. She is my chum. Before I came here to work one of the assistant managers, in another department, was going with her and finally they became engaged. One day we had him to dinner at our little two-room apartment. Helen had a long-distance call and was out in the entry for quite a while. Bob talked to me alone and looked at me as if he was very interested in me. It kind of fussed me.

Two weeks later he told Helen that he was in love with me and asked her to break their engagement. She made a terrible scene and accused us both of being unfair and flatly refused to give him his freedom. Of course that ended Helen and my living together. I got another room that night.

But after I left Helen, Bob kept calling on me and he said that he considered that we were engaged no matter what Helen said. By that time I knew that I really loved him and I felt too that we had a right to our own happiness.

Now all our friends in the store are taking sides.

Helen insists that she is still engaged to Bob and shows his ring everywhere and says perfectly dreadful things about me. Of course, I try to stand up for myself and show my ring, and all my friends sympathize with me. Bob himself doesn't say much of anything except that he's awful sick of the whole row.

Do you feel that I am a love thief, the way she says am? And has a woman the right to hold a man to his promise when he no longer loves her?

ROSELLE

No, I don't think that you're a "love thief," Roselle, although I realize that many will disagree with me in that verdict.

I don't believe that we ever "own" each other, even who we're married. And I can see no basis at all for this "ownership" theory when only an engagement exists.

An engagement isn't as hard and fast partnership. It is distinct from a marriage in that it is a time of preparation and adjustment—a getting acquainted time when each prospective partner studies and weighs the other. And his very experimental nature implies that one of the parties may possibly reject the other.

There is nothing base nor unfair in such rejection. It is indeed the most merciful deed which can be performed if love has died. And it will prevent a lifetime of misery for both parties.

Nor is there anything wrong or deceitful in a new love that comes as Roselle's love has come. Roselle didn't plan to "steal" her friend's sweetheart. Nor did Bob scheme to be disloyal. And they treated Helen honorably.

That's how it seems to me. And if I were Roselle I'd marry my Bob and done with unnecessary remorse.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my twenties and have been married about six months. For the first two months my husband was very attentive to me. But now when he comes home at night he acts as if he dreaded it—how he has very little to say to me—just sits in his chair and smokes his pipe.

I never go out. I always have his supper ready and do the best I can. What do you suppose has changed him?

EDITH.

EDITH: You are experiencing what many other young married women have gone through. Your husband is evidently having a relapse. He undoubtedly loves you as much as ever, and I would suggest that you pay no attention to his indifference. Try to make yourself a very definite and essential part of your household scheme. Do not give him too much attention. Try to make him realize that he has not married just a wife, but an individual who demands respect, and who is a definite unit in the scheme of a home.

The whole trouble lies in the fact that too many husbands take their wives for granted. If you can make him see that you are performing the many duties because you choose to and not because you are a servant—if you can make him realize that you are just as desirable and just as much an independent person now as before you were married, I think your difficulty will be solved.

Husbands sometimes need an awakening to the fact that they are not the only ones called in a marriage arrangement, and when they realize this they get a different slant on things and are consequently much happier. Make him see that you are not a part of the household furniture. Command his respect.

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Peasant embroideries are appearing at smart resorts and in similar collections.

Velvet-covered mellis are being shown on a group of crepe dresses recently imported by a Fifth avenue specialty shop.

Among the smart ombre effects seen in New York was a woolen frock with a bodice and skirt plaided in beige brown and red tones.

A velveteen jacket in greenish brown with skirt of pleated crepe shading from beige to the brown of the jacket was a smart spring model noted on Fifth avenue.

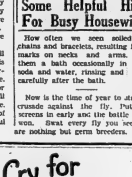

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

How often we seen soiled neck bands and bracelets, resulting in ugly marks on necks and arms. Give them a bath occasionally in baking soda and water, rinsing and drying carefully after the bath.

Now is the time of year to start the crusade against the fly. Put your screens in order and use the bottle of Swat every fly you see—they are nothing but germ breeders.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN
By Mildred Barbour

"Hero, fiddlesticks!" sniffed Cousin Agatha briskly. "I'll bet he made sure there were plenty of spectators before he risked an inch of his precious skin. And as for his being ill and helpless now—Pooh! He'll play invalid for a week, then he's only run a splinter in his fingers—if there was any work to be done around the place."

Sybil was chuckling inwardly, but her mother made an effort to change the subject.

"You're looking wonderfully well and happy, Agatha."

"Naturally I'm happy. Why should n't I be? There isn't the shadow of a man in my life."

There was an awkward pause, as then Sybil asked wistfully: "What do you do all the time, Cousin Agatha, when you're not traveling?"

"Study and learn something, 'was the crisp retort. "I'm president of several clubs, and I'm interested in politics. I go out campaigning before every election. I have my eye on a seat in congress some day," she added complacently.

Her cold eyes studied Sybil shrewdly.

"You pretty!" she aloud, so abruptly that both Sybil and her mother jumped.

Just then tea arrived, and Cousin Agatha served it briskly. But she was strangely silent—for her—and her gaze rested wistfully on Sybil.

She was a lover of beauty, and her own lack of it was largely responsible for the cold, hard manner she assumed. She surrounded herself with beautiful things; her apartment in a fashionable and expensive Chicago hotel was filled with rare and exquisite works of art picked up in odd corners of the globe. There were safe-deposite vaults filled with treasures for which there was no space in her elaborate quarters. She made pilgrimages to them for the sheer joy of holding lovely objects in her hands.

Quite abruptly, she left the tea table and went to a desk in the corner of the room, where she wrote busily for a moment.

A little later, when Sybil and her mother were taking their leave, she followed them to the door and, at the last moment, slipped something into the girl's hand.

"Spend it for some new clothes," she whispered, her eyes resting on Sybil's one best frock, with its simple, immaculate collar and cuffs which she laundered after work every night. "And get your mother something, if you like. But, if I hear that a penny of it has gone to Paris, I'll come and make you pay it back, every cent!"

When Sybil opened her shabbily gloved fingers, she found a check for a generous sum.

"Cousin Agatha's a peach!" she exclaimed.

"But so hard, Sybil!" sighed Mary Ross. "So pitifully hard!"

CHAPTER 17.

THE SECRET VOW

Sybil followed instructions and made several happy purchases in frocks for herself and her mother out of the money Cousin Agatha had given her.

She was looking ravishingly pretty and smart in a tailored suit and hat, with a frilled white silk blouse and immaculate pumps and gloves, when she happened to meet the donor of these luxuries on the street one day, just as she was hurrying out to luncheon.

"Lunch with me," commanded Cousin Agatha, who never in her life had brooked a refusal.

She took Sybil to the Hoffman House which seemed a great treat to the girl and made her inwardly thankful that she was clad in the glory of her new raiment. But Cousin Agatha turned up her nose at the brave crimson and silk of the dining-room and cast a supercilious eye at the menu.

"I suppose it's possible to feed here—one could scarcely term it dining," she remarked, ordering chops and peas and a salad for them both, without inquiring her guests.

Then she slipped out of her fur, vested her lean elbows on the table and looked Sybil over sprovingly.

"You've a flair for wearing clothes; I knew it—even in that dingy rag you had on last Sunday. I suppose you inherit from your mexican father, by Fred Ross could get away with overalls and a flannel shirt when all other men were wearing cutaways and pale gray trousers. Not that he ever did skimp on his own clothes.

"He'd pawn his grandmother's false teeth to buy clothes for his handsome body. Are you like him, Sybil? can't believe you are, for all your good looks."

"I hope I'm not," said Sybil sincerely. "Well, I'd rather have you resemble him than your mother little mother. In this world, people like him have it soft. They always land on their feet, no matter what happens. But your mother—poor, long-suffering woman! Cousin Agatha shook her head.

"I'm not a bit like Mother," declared Sybil. "I'm hard as nails."

Cousin Agatha pricked up her ears.

"Really? How?"

"About life—and men, in particular."

"You don't like men?"

Sybils lovely face flushed.

"I detest every one that was ever born—or ever will be born."

"How curious!" murmured Cousin Agatha, crumbling bread with nervous hands.

"But it isn't curious at all, really," protested Sybil. "Look at the examples I've had before me all my life—Linda and Daisy Vaughn; my two brothers—one cheating a silly old woman out of her money, and the other marrying a perfect scarecrow, just so he'd never have to work!"

"Well? What are you going to do about it?" asked Cousin Agatha.

dare say," she answered herself, when some young nincompoop comes along and asks you to marry him, you'll have traded the home dish-washing of your youth for a permanent and eternal slavery in some man's kitchen."

"Never!" flashed Sybil. "I'd kill myself first. Shall I tell you what I mean, by? What I really intend to do?"

Women's Hygienic Advice

New way discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND

THERE is now a way in woman's hygiene that ends most of the bothers and worries of old ways. A new way called Kotex. 8 in 10 better class women have adopted it.

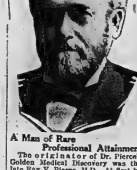

You dispose of it as easily as tissue. Thus no laundry or disposal problem.

You wear lightest, flimsiest gowns in safety and without fear. For Kotex protects absolutely under all conditions. Five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads.

You obtain it at any store, without embarrassment. Simply by saying Kotex. Many stores have it already wrapped for you to pick up, pay for, and take home without even asking.

Package of 12 costs only a few cents. Once you try it, you'll never risk the dangers of old ways again. Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

BRITWELL BOOKS BRING BIG PRICE

London, May 9. (C.P.)—The sale of the final portion of the great Britwell Library brought to an end the greatest book sale in history. The Britwell Library has been in process of distintegration nearly every season since 1916, and the 18 to 19 sessions, including two sold by private treaty, brought a vast total of £3,022,500—a total never approached at a book auction in this or any other country. Its sale has been a continuous story of high prices and large profits. The original expenditure was not more than £250,000. This was the amount spent by William Henry Miller (1762-1849) a native of Edinburgh, who founded the Library.

To English collectors and English libraries the Britwell sales have been almost continuous series of disasters. The Times' correspondent says. When George D. Smith of New York burst into the English sale room, he carried everything before him, with his utter disregard for prices; and he was followed by his compatriot Dr. Rosenbach. Between them therefore they have enriched American Libraries, public and private, to an extent and within a brief period without parallel in the last 100 years. The American claim for its share in the literary heritage of Great Britain is undeniable and unanswerable; and it is perhaps better for rare books to be in American libraries where they may be seen and examined than to remain almost unknown and quite inaccessible in private libraries in England. During the past quarter of a century or so American Bibliographers have done a vast amount of most valuable spade work in English bibliography, and the acquisition of the greater portion of the unexpected treasures of the Britwell Library will greatly tend to increase this activity.

HOPE TO STOP UGLY BUILDING

London, May 9.—(Canadian Press—Designed to do away with "quackery-builders," the bill sponsored by the Royal Institute of British Architects is now before a committee of the British House of Commons. With the expressed intention of stemming the flood of "unlovely and unattractive ugliness" poured out upon British streets by "men of untutored mind and inadequate professional education," the bill provides for imposition of a fine of £100 on any man describing himself as an architect, or even as an expert in architecture, unless he has been registered by the R.I.B.A., and has passed a stiff examination.

During the debate in the House of Commons when the bill came up for second reading, Sir Alfred Hopkinson, member for the English Universities, pointed out that some of England's most beautiful buildings were erected under the aegis of some of the most distinguished architects. Freedom, he pleaded, was essential to the life of art, and some of the greatest artists might have difficulty in passing an examination. The Home Secretary, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, strongly favored the idea advanced by Sir Alfred.

SCOTTISH WAR MEMORIAL IS FINE LOOKING

Edinburgh, May 9 (Canadian Press)—Although it is not to be dedicated until the end of the summer, the Scottish National War Memorial at Edinburgh Castle, designed by Sir Robert Lorimer, A.R.A., is now far enough advanced to allow its character and qualities to be appreciated, says The Times correspondent. The plan of the memorial is in the form of a letter E. It is long in the stem, with the heptagonal shrine projecting at the back in line with the middle limb, which forms a porch allowing a vista into the shrine.

The porch, which is approached by four semi-circular steps, is low and vaulted, with a paved parapeted walk on either side between it and the other limbs of the E. It opens into the stem, forming a Gallery of Honor, across which a lofty, round-headed arch gives access to the shrine, though the lower part of the arch is to be filled with a wrought iron grille, with gates, to give an effect of mystery. The barrel-vaulted gallery is divided into bays by octagonal columns, with stiffly foliated capitals; four Bays on each side of the shrine, with two in each of the limbs for the twelve Scottish regiments.

Each bay has a carved and inscribed panel devoted to the regiment concerned, with a sone shelf below, to support an enfabature, upon the frieze of which is carved, in bold Roman capitals, a list of the actions in which the regiments were concerned. The western limb of the E is dedicated to the women who took part in the war; the eastern to the artillery, engineering and yeomanry forces.

The shrine is, of course, the special feature of the building. Through the floor of grey-green granite there breaks a projection of the Castle Rock itself to support the casket containing records, which is to be presented by the King. Suspended like and purple.

from the fan-vaulted roof, directly over the table, is a large carved and colored figure of St. Michael in oak. The screen tall windows of the shrine are to be filled with stained glass, designed by Dr. Douglas Strahan, with the central subject of "War and Peace," mysterious element in the Destiny of mankind. The coloring being mainly

YANKEES WIN AS BABE RUTH GETS 7TH HOME RUN

Chicago Cubs Hammer Carlson Hard and Defeat Phillies

St. Louis, Mo., May 10.—The Yankees were all measured for defeat yesterday afternoon with two out in the ninth inning and the Browns leading by one run. The little detail that had to be attended to was the extinction of Lou Gehrig, Columbia's alumnus, and it simply couldn't be done. Lou slammed one of his snappiest angles down the centre of the infield, just a while as it slipped past Milton Gaston and over second base. On it the tying and winning runs rode over the plate and the Yanks won, 8 to 7.

That did not end the game. The Bronx had some more woes to register and they gave Miller Huggins an anxious ten minutes before they finally were set down runless and Gehrig's role as the hero was preserved.

Two other hard hits had kept the Yanks in the game up to the time that Gehrig delivered his finishy thump, but some terrible pitching had enabled the Browns to offset the advantage of the slugging. Babe Ruth connected in the first inning for his seventh circuit drive of the young season while two Yankees were hoping that he would do exactly that little thing. Later in the game Bob Meusel hit the to the right field seats following a sing le by the aforementioned Mr. Gehrig.

Philadelphia defeated Detroit, 6 to 2, in the opening game of the series at Detroit. Ty Cobb, making his first appearance here in the athletes' line-up, was given a rousing welcome by a capacity crowd. He played six and 1 half innings and got a double, a base on balls, fanned once and as robbed of another hit when Taveller made a great pick-up of a drive in the seventh. Timely hitting by Tommy Thomas, coupled with his own steady pitching after a wavering start, enabled Chicago to defeat Washington, 4 to 2, yesterday in the first game of the series at Chicago. In addition to aiding the Senators sale in the pinches, Thomas delivered two blows which accounted for three of Chicago's runs. Metzler's home-run in the first inning was the first exhale by a White Sox player in their remodeled park.

Boston dashed Cleveland's hopes of entering the first division yesterday by nosing out the Indians at Cleveland, 6 to 5. The Red Sox scored in five of their runs in the fifth when they bunched two doubles and two singles. Cleveland rallied in the eighth and had the tying run on third base with only one out, but Wilie steadied and prevented a tied score.

National League

New York, May 10.—Cincinnati opened up a home-run barrage on Hal Carlson and won the opening game of the series from the Phillies at Philadelphia, 8 to 3, in the only game played in the National League yesterday. Hack Wilson; Hartnett and Stephenson all hit for the circuit, the last-named connecting with two on bases in the eighth.

Blake was hit hard by the Phillies, but they could not bunch their hits when runs were needed. Carlson had better luck with his hitting than with his pitching, making two singles in three trips to the plate.

Rain caused postponement of three scheduled contests.

SUSPENSION LIFTED ON BALL PLAYERS

Chicago, May 10.—President Ban Johnson of the American league yesterday lifted suspension of Ty Cobb and Al Simmons, ranking stars of Philadelphia Athletics. Cobb was reinstated so he could appear in Detroit to-day, playing with the Athletics. It will be his first appearance in Detroit in the uniform of a visiting team.

A mammoth celebration was arranged in his honor.

AMATEUR GOLF TITLE TORONTO IN MONTH JULY

Toronto, May 4.—While the entries for the Canadian Amateur Golf championship tournament are not available so early in the season, indications are that the 29th annual contest will be from the standpoint of competition. one of the best in the long series. Ross Somerville, of London, Ont., will defend his title which he won last year from C. C. Fraser, of Kanawaki Montreal. The latter is a former title holder, and will again compete, while M. Scott, runner-up to Fraser in 1922 is another prominent contender.

The Ancaster Club course near Ham ilton on which the tournament will be played, from July 4 to 9, is one of the best in America. J. H. Evans, golf editor, writes in the Globe that the course is well but not severely bunkered, and is exceptionally clean. It is 6,709 yards in length, evenly divided The record of the course is 66.

The final will-be thrilling if it is anything like the last amateur title decided at Ancaster. That was in 1922, when Fraser went to the 37th hole to defeat Scott. Fraser was one down at the 32nd. The 34th was award ed Scott because Fraser drove his piece of paper from a bunker. Scott recovery, but the next two holes and the championship at the 37th.

An interprovincial team contest will probably be held before the amateur tournament, and this would bring together the best amateur golfers of Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The amateur title of Canada has been won on seven occasions by Geo. S. Lyon, who approaches three more and ten, has an undisputed position among members of the Canadian Seniors' Association. Mr. Lyon won his first championship in 1898 at Toronto Golf and his last in 1914 at Lambton. Frank Thompson won the championship in 1924 at Rosedale after his brother W. J. Thompson, had dropped the title early in the match play. Stonmerville was runner-up twice before he won the honor coveted by amateur golfers.

CHAMPION RETURNS FROM FISHING TRIP

Montreal, May 11.—Tanned and invigorated by a three-day rest in the Canadian North woods, Gene Tunney, heavyweight boxing champion of the world, spent a few hours in Montreal last night before leaving at ten o'clock from Windsor Station for his home in New York.

When interviewed in his suite in the Windsor Hotel, it took little prompting to draw from the titleholder an enthusiastic description of the country that has made Canada famous. Gene said that he had never seen its equal. The unspoiled exhilarating air of the Laurentians, forming as it did, such a marked contrast to the dust and dirt of big cities, had left him full of pep and eager to start training.

The champion when asked if he had seen any bears, replied with a laugh that he had and related how the French-Canadian guide had killed three with four shots after his Airedale had treed them. The party caught only enough speckled trout to provide food, the prime motive of the trip being to secure a rest. The three days were spent at Five Finger Lake, near Labelle.

COBB ENTERTAINED BY DETROIT FANS

Detroit, May 11.—Ty Cobb, of the Philadelphia Athletics, was welcomed yesterday to the city where he played baseball for 22 years. He was the guest of honor at a noonday luncheon at the Masonic Temple. A parade to the ball park where he was presented with an automobile, and a banquet at night were included in the programme His appearance was lifted today by President Ban Johnson, of the American League.

BRADING BREWING STOCK IS LISTED

The common stock of The Brading Breweries Limited has been listed on the Montreal Curb Market and will be called for public trading in the course of the next few days. It will be recalled that this company sold a block of its no-par-value common stock recently at $20 per share, and it is under stood that splendid distribution was obtained. Numerous enquiries for the stock since the sale was made, have induced the directors to apply for listing earlier than was their original intention, as what the general public would be enabled to trade in the stock.

The Brading Breweries is a very old concern, and their products are well known. The company have just completed additions to their plant which include new buildings, machinery and equipment, all of which are of the most modern design. The company's fol strength products include "Old Stock Ale" and "Brown Stout." To these shortly will be added a new ale called "Crystal Ale," on the development of which the brew master and his assistants have been working during the winter months.

Earnings of The Brading Breweries Limited, giving due account to seasonable fluctuations, have been running along at the rate of $3 per share per annum. These earnings are being made largely on the company's business in the Province of Quebec, but with the forthcoming change in the Province of Ontario it is expected that these earnings will be materially increased. When the company did its recent financing it will be recalled that the officials of the company estimated that under the changed conditions in Ontario annual earnings of $6 per share was a decided possibility. The company has arranged to have its products handled in all the principal cities of Ontario.

Several People Noticed Strange Airplane Passing Over Newfoundland

Halifax, N.S., May 12.—The belief that Captain Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli, had regained the North American Continent in their attempted non-stop flight from Paris to New York probably lodged down in the vicinity of Placentia Bay, Nfld., was strengthened here today with the receipt of further reports that an aeroplane had passed to the northwest of Harbor Grace between nine and ten o'clock, Atlantic Standard Time, Monday morning. Another report said the plane had been heard off Placentia and was being investigated this morning. If this report is confirmed it will help establish the fact that the aeroplane heard was following the approximate course mapped out by Coli for the White Bird's flight.

Harbor Grace is near the Isthmus connecting the Avalon and Burin Peninsulas—the southeastern end of Newfoundland. Conception and Trinity Bays are to the north of this Isthmus and Placentia Bay to the south. Apparently the aeroplane reported passed over the Isthmus in the north of the Harbor Grace and succeeded in making Placentia Bay. St. Pierre, the only dependency left to France on the North American continent, lies at the mouth of Placentia Bay and efforts were being made today to send a steam er from St. Pierre in search of the missing airmen.

Hope of Success Renewed

New York, May 12.—The search in air and on the sea for Captains Nungesser and Coli, was carried on today with renewed hope as a result of a report from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, that an aeroplane had been overhead on Monday about the time the "White Bird" was due. Instructions have been issued by the Newfoundland Government that any information relative to the fate of the fliers be promptly reported. Navy dirigible "Los Angeles" planning a cruise today from its hangar at Lake Hurst, N.J., was under orders to pursue the search "as far as feasible" since the fuel it has and coast and in territory not previously covered by ships and aeroplanes.

Virtually the entire coast guard in New England remained in the hunt, coastal radio stations kept their instruments open for word of missing airmen and hundreds of fishing fantastic vessels scanned their courses for traces of aeroplane.

Several Hear Planes

Halifax, N. S., May 12.—The manager of the Anglo-American cable company at Harbor Grace, Nfld., advised the Canadian Press today that Mr. Hinton, wife of the manager of the Imperial Cable Company also heard the roar of an aeroplane Monday morning. The message from the cable company manager read as follows: "Perkins other than Patrick O'Brien, Harbor Grace, who heard aeroplane are Hinton, wife of the manager of Imperial Cable Company, here, also John Stapleton, Janitor, in the Imperial Cable Company's employ. Both distinctly heard the noise of an aeroplane engine between nine and ten o'clock Monday morning. The sound appeared to be coming from the northwest."

Ready to Swear

St. John, Nfld., May 12.—Denis Mensary, railway agent at Harbor Grace in message today to Sir William Horwood, acting governor of Newfoundland said that the three persons who claim to have heard the roar of an aeroplane motor through the mist over Newfoundland Monday morning were prepared to make oath to that effect. He said he had told all the facts before the local magistrate.

If the gentleman they report having heard was that of Captains Nungesser and Coli there is a wide variety of possibilities as to what happened to the plane afterwards.

SIXTEEN YEAR OLD BELLEVILLE LAD CAPTURES THE SECOND PRIZE

Alan Sprague Distinguishes Himself in Province-Wide Contest

In an entry list of eleven, representing the winners of the District Oratorical contests held last week, to Alan Sprague, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Sprague, 247, Charles Street, fell the honor of being named as second at the Ontario Oratorical Contest, held in Convention Hall, Toronto, last night. Fred Hector, of Tahkoosh, was first place and was awarded $100.

Alan who is one of the most prominent pupils of the Belleville High School, has always taken a part in any oratorical contest and debates at the school. Recently on winning an interform debate he definately decided to study law on the completion of his academic course. His record at public and high school bespeaks a brilliant career at the bar. He is sixteen years of age, a pupil of the third form at High School and an ardent worker in the Literary Society of that institution.

At the Fathers and Sons banquet given at Bridge Street United Church, when Judge Coatsworth was speaker, Alan was honored by being asked to propose the toast to the fathers and in doing this his address reflected greatest credit upon the High School.

He has been prominently identified with amateur theatricals taking part most creditably in several productions recently numbering "The Minister's Wife's New Dress" in which he made a splendid impression.

Last week at Toronto following his address on Canada's Diamond Jubilee, "Her Accomplishments since Confederation" he was adjudged the best speaker among the nine entrants and was awarded a handsome silver cup.

BACK HOME AGAIN AFTER 4 YEARS SPENT IN CHINA

Miss Bessie Ketcheson daughter of Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, who has been labouring as a missionary in China for the past four years and who was ordered to relinquish her work there on account of illness, has arrived in Belleville this afternoon on the Canadian Pacific Railway at 4.30. Miss Ketcheson has spent the past three weeks visiting friends en route from Vancouver.

It is customary for United Church Missionaries to spend five years at their posts after which they are granted furlough but with the unsettled conditions in that country, it was deemed advisable for the missionaries to return to their homelands, this eighty per cent of them did.

Miss Ketcheson's career in China has been closely followed by her many friends in this city and particularly the Jubilee Mission Circle of Bridge Street Church of which she was a member. Previous to her leaving for China this society gave her a shower of linen and other supplied necessary to list during her five year's mission to China and on this occasion her birthday a "Bridal Shower Birthday" shower was held and articles sent by the Jubilee Mission Circle to her in China. This Mission-ary society partially maintained Miss Ketcheson in China.

When speaking with an officer of the Jubilee Mission Band this afternoon, she stated that a reception would likely be tendered Miss Ketcheson at the next meeting of the Mission Circle.

BREWERY BOOKS WERE BURNED AT O'KEEFE'S PLANT

Counsel Pleads For Re-Issuance of License to Make Beer

NOT TO BLAME

Present Management Had Nothing To Do With Loss of Books

Hamilton, Ont., May 12.—Furnaces at the O'Keefe Brewery in Toronto were used for burning old records of the Brewers' Association, according to evidence given to the Royal Customs Commission, this morning by Arthur L. Hodgson, head of the Pinkerton Agency in Toronto. Mr. Hodgson, however, declared that he was "practically certain" that the books of the O'Keefe Beverages Limited, which are required by the Royal Customs Commission, were not destroyed. He declared that he investigated the matter thoroughly.

Mr. McCarthy, K.C., of Toronto, declared to the Commission that the people who were suffering today for cause of cancellation of the O'Keefe license were quite innocent of the removal of the books. "We are not only ones who were singled out for this punishment," declared Mr. McCarthy. The Chief Commissioner informed him that his claims had not been "singled out." It has been agreed that the O'Keefe license expired at the time the books were not available and its renewal was withheld.

Mr. McCarthy made formal application to the commission to withdraw his recommendation which resulted in the license being withheld. The chief commissioner informed him that information had come to the commission that the O'Keefe Brewery continued to do business after the Government had declared the license in licence. "I think we ought to have the manager of the brewery here to assure us that the brewery was not run in defiance to the order of the Government and in contempt of the recommendation of the commission," the chief commissioner declared. "Yes, we are going here asking us for something and you had better come with clean hands."

Mr. McCarthy said it seemed rather hard on an innocent shareholder that he should suffer if anything which was not in order had taken place.

FINED FOR SELLING SMOKES TO MINORS

Charged with selling cigarettes to a minor, Elmer and Eugene Devault, storekeepers, appeared before Magistrate Mikel this morning and were sentenced to pay a fine of $10 each.

The Magistrate expressed his sympathy with the storekeepers in sentencing them and stated that in his opinion some penalty should be imposed on merchants under fourteen years of age who obtain the "fags." "It is often very difficult for a merchant to know the age of a customer who comes in or not," the Magistrate stated. "Some boys or girls of a very tender age are in appointments with the many duties is not always capable of telling. While convicting of forbidding cigarettes to the minors, I nevertheless believe that it is rather harsh on the merchants."

KELLOGG ASKED TO RELAX RULE

Plead Cause of Border City Workers Who Have Jobs In U. S.

Washington, May 12.—Canadian delegates to the immigration conference went to the State Department this morning to meet Hon. Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State, and other representatives of the United States, who will discuss a compromise on the new immigration law before calling which seeks to compel Canadian residents who work in this country, to comply before the end of this year with the letter of United States immigration laws.

Canadian delegates are Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian Minister, A. L. Jolliffe, Canadian Commissioner of Immigration, and Hume Wrong, of Canadian legation here. Canada seeks a continuation of the "gentleman's agreement" whereby any recognized Canadian, irrespective of his birthplace can cross and re-cross the border in his daily business. It has also drawn attention to the reciprocal nature of this agreement and the possibility of its withdrawal in consequence to citizens of the United States working in Canada, as well as to serious hardships to residents of the border communities or both sides, if the present agreement be abrogated terminated.

One assurance Canada received at the outset was that Canadians who have paid the head tax and immigration visa fees will be recognized as legal immigrants to the United States so long as their employment continues. Canada may point out that Uniged States negotiate a special treaty protecting Canadian naturalized citizens for border crossing purposes, irrespective of laws affecting other countries. In other words Canadian delegates may request that Canada be made a non-quota country for all citizens indead of for native Canadians only.

Alexander Porter told the police that it was his description which had been broadcast through the city. Mr. Porter was operating a baby, he admitted, but the child was Pansy Forbes, a grandchild.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Ah, how good it feels!
The hand of an old friend.
—LONGFELLOW.

TRENTON-FRANKFORD ROAD

Advantage was taken of the presence in Trenton yesterday of the Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Highways to point out to him the desirability of making the Trenton-Frankford road a provincial highway. The would be a wonderful improvement. The system of highways in and around Belleville is in really good shape, but the addition of this one stretch is needed.

The road which the Minister of Highways has been asked to take over is in bad condition and farmers depending upon it as a means of communication with their market are handicapped. If it were made into a permanent good road, it would be of great use to a large number of people and help in the development of the western part of the county.

A BETTER CITY

The Clean-Up Proclamation by Mayor Wilmot comes at a very fitting time. The ravages of winter have to be repaired every spring, and this spring a special effort should be made to justify the name of "Belleville the Beautiful."

No doubt some kind of celebration will be held here this year in honor of Canada's Jubilee and visitors will be invited to our city. Then too, the 1927 season is expected to be a record one for tourists and Belleville hopes to get her share of them. Let, then, every loyal citizen make an earnest effort to put his property in as good condition as possible so that when our visitors come they will carry away with them a favorable impression of the loveliest city in Eastern Ontario."

During the week of May 16th the merchants of Belleville will carry especially attractive stocks of all the necessary materials for painting, repairing and renovating property. The The Mayor is asking the co-operation of every person having the interest of the city at heart in making this a better place to live and a more attractive place to draw new people.

A SENSIBLE PLAN

Hon. George S. Henry, minister of public works and highways, announces a sensible new plan to curb irresponsible motorists. Ontario has entered into an agreement with the eastern conference of motor vehicle administrators, comprising 15 states and provinces, whereby members of the conference agree to suspend or revoke the licenses of residents who commit offenses in another state or province which, if committed at home, would result in such cancellation. United States tourists convicted in Ontario of any offense against our law will now be reported to their home state motor vehicles departments, and the same will apply to Ontario tourists in the American states that are parties to this agreement. Mr. Henry believes the new arrangement will act as a deterrent and be productive of good results. This is a reasonable assumption. There are a surprising number of persons who keep well within the motoring regulations at home but who when away on a trip, seem to think that they can get away with anything and do not hesitate to try. The new agreement should be effective in cramping the style of reckless visitors on both sides of the line.

DAYS OF YOUTH

Poor Eve! She hadn't the strength to resist
The cheek of the apple the sun-shine kissed.
It looked so alluring, she broke God's laws;
She bought it with Happiness and all because
It was sleek, it was round, and it gleamed bright red.
"But it was worth the price," I said,
At twenty-one.

So I picked my apple and crunched it up;
Tossed off my wine and shattered the cup;
I raveled my cloth; I smirched my gold;
Burned prodigal candles till day dawned cold:
I painted the city a gay flat red.
"But it hadn't worth the price," I said,
When life was done.

Canadian Farmer Tells His Experience

"Lez" Booth, widely known Ontario farmer, and a sick man for 20 years, suffered daily, only half alive. Now strong, robust, vigorous, credits new found health to Tanlac

Though popularly known as "Lez," Mr. Booth's correct first name is George. His home is at 271 Perth St., Brockville. For the past three years he has enjoyed vigorous health but what he endured before then is best told in his own words. "For twenty years my arms, shoulders, back and hips, ached with rheumatism," said Mr. Booth. "Often I had to quit work entirely and I remember one bad spell that kept me in bed for six months.

"My case got to be so chronic that the help run the farm. I was practically helpless. Even my wrists and hands would swell up so that I couldn't write my name. I dreaded bedtime, for I got no rest, but lay there in agony, waiting for morning. Nervous spells would seize me and I would tremble all over like a leaf. I couldn't get any benefit from my food and had to force myself to eat. My weight was far below normal.

"Three years ago I decided to give Tanlac a good trial, for nothing else had helped me. I could scarcely believe such results were possible as those Tanlac soon showed. The aching stopped, my appetite came back and I could eat heartily. My nights became more restful, too, and I slept soundly. I gained 16 pounds which I still retain, and I now work hard outdoors from 8 to 10 hours a day. I never have an ache. It's hardly believable! If folks want to know what Tanlac can do, tell them to write to Lez Booth, or to come and see me. I'll tell 'em."

If your health is broken from overwork or neglect, profit from Mr. Booth's experience. Try Tanlac, nature's own body builder, made from roots, herbs and barks. Your druggist has it. Over 63 million bottles sold.

TODAY'S MARKET

New York May 12.— Uneven price movements characterized today's stock market, with bullish tendencies again predominating. Oil responded to the efforts being made to regulate production of crude oil and the Van Sweringen rails were heavily bought on favorable reception created by the announcement of the new Chesapeake Corporation, "Nickel plate" common soaring 11 points. Motors had a temporary sinking spell in the early after noon when heavy profit taking in Hudson forced that stock down to 83 1-2 after having sold above 87 earlier in the session, but they rallied later under the leadership of General Motors, which was accumulated in anticipation of an extra cash dividend at to-days meeting.

Steels were mixed. Houston Oil soared to 125 3-8, the highest price since it was listed on the stock exchange and was followed into new high ground by Laclede Gas, Case Threshing Machine, Westinghouse Air Brake, Montana Power, Union Bag and Paper and Submarine Boat.

CANADIAN LEGION IS EXPLAINED TO LOCAL VETERANS

T. C. Lapp, Managing Editor of Legionary, Speaks Here

A small but enthusiastic audience of ex-service men turned out to hear Mr. T. C. Lapp, managing editor of the "Legionary" when he gave an extremely interesting address on the Canadian Legion, in the Veterans' Memorial Hall, last night. Colonel W. N. Ponton also gave a short address to the newly-formed Association.

Before the speaker of the evening proceeded with his address, Major Reginald Bumpstead, Secretary of the new organization, announced that in the near future plans would be discussed for the participation of the Veterans in the Diamond Jubilee Celebration. It was also moved and seconded that a letter of congratulation be forwarded to Comrade Robert Bogle on his recent marriage.

With a few brief introductory remarks, the Chairman of the meeting, W. Day, introduced the speaker to the assembled ex-service men.

Mr. Lapp, the speaker of the evening, explained the Whys and Wherefores of the Canadian Legion.

The Legion started when men who were suspicious of each other found that there was a place where they could get together and discuss matters common to them. Field Marshall Haig was invited to come to Canada and some of our highly paced people didn't like the idea of him coming. Ever since the war Marshall Haig has been trying to get the ex-service men together in a peace movement, not a war movement.

Branches Co-operated

When he came to Canada he got together representatives of the different service organizations. At the end of a four-days meeting he had four of the chief organizations pledged to form a new one. He toured Canada after this. He appointed Sir Richard Turner as his trustee. Sir Richard wrote to leading ex-service men to try and get the men together. In November, 1925, the present constitution and name was adopted at a meeting in Winnipeg. It was not until April of last year, however, that the Legion started active operations. Actual enrolement started on July 1st, 1926. Today we have throughout Canada 528 Branches, over 100 in Ontario.

The main reason of the Legion is to establish a Pension Act for every man disabled while in service for his country overseas.

The speaker went on to explain how the Legion had influenced legislation in favor of the ex-service men.

"The Legion does not ask anything that is unreasonable.

"In last parliament we had three separate attacks on the Civil Service Act. After some exertion on the part of the Legion, these attacks were killed."

The speaker told of other good work done by the Legion. Our biggest reason for combining is to protect our crippled comrades.

Another reason for the Legion is to build up Canada. We stand as an integrator of one class to another.

We are in a strong position to act as a tie. This is an ideal. Every branch of the Legion can do something to help build up Canada.

Mr. Lapp spoke of the different Veteran's Associations throughout the entire British Empire. He told of the affiliations between these sister organizations to the Canadian Legion.

The greatest thing of all, however, is the perpetuation of Comradeship that was prevalent in Flanders. We want to perpetuate the Comradeship of the trenches.

OTTAWA MAN IS GIVEN NEW POST

Son-in-Law of Mrs. Harry Corby Attends Trade Mission

The many Belleville friends of Mr. F. C. T. O'Hara, of Ottawa, son-in-law of Mrs. H. Corby, Coverdale Street, this city will be pleased to learn that he has been delegated to an important Canadian trade mission to Central and South American which will be undertaken this fall.

Mr. O'Hara is well known in this city, his wife being formerly Miss Jolen Corby, daughter of the late Senator H. Corby and Mrs. Corby. The new appointee to this important mission is a frequent visitor to Belleville.

Ottawa, May 11.— An important Canadian trade mission to Central and South America will be undertaken this fall, F. C. T. O'Hara, deputy minister of Trade and Commerce, will leave early in August to be absent until November.

During that period he will visit, as representative of Hon. James Malcolm, the minister, all the principal countries of Latin America and exchange ideas with them as to the best means of promoting mutually advantageous trade relations. He will interview the ministers and principal officials of such countries, as Mexico, Brazil, Argentina Chile, Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela. Mr. O'Hara himself possesses a sufficient working knowledge of the Spanish language to make himself understood in all matters relating to his departmental mission.

In its current monthly issue the Canadian-Spanish-American Commercial Review, the only periodical printed in Canada in Spanish, pays high tribute to Mr. O'Hara in an article dealing with his forthcoming visit to Latin America. Hon. Mr. Malcolm is strongly of the opinion that a greatly enlarged trade can be developed between Canada and the countries of Central and South America.

The total amount of principal repaid to date is $281,564,445 or less than three per cent. Great Britain alone has repaid, in addition to interest charges $227,171,641 which is more than four times as much as the other nineteen by the United States during and after the war to 20 countries—about ten billion dollars. These figures refer to money loaned

Mr. Tummon also made references to the Parliament Buildings at Toronto, which were finished since his side and out with sixfee obtained in building the new buildings." stated Mr. Tummon "are a credit both to the Minister of Public Works and the Prime Minister of Ontario".

M. S. Mayhee, M.P.

Mr. M. E. Mayhee, M.P., for North Cumberland also replied to the Toast of the Dominion of Canada and tendered the felicitations of himself and the riding he represented to the Minister of Public Works and Highways. Mr. Mayhee eulogized both Mr. Hill and Mr. Ireland, the Provincial representatives for East and West Hastings.

W. H. Ireland, M.P.P.

Mr. Ireland, M.P.P. for West Hastings was the first to respond to the Toast of the Ontario Legislature which was proposed by H. E. Graham, Vice-President of the Trenton Conservative Association, who spoke of the cabinet which made up the cabinet and legislature of the Provincial Parliament stating that the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson was a peerless statesman.

Mr. Ireland after paying tribute to the guest of the evening, the Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Public Works and Highways, immediately began speaking on the subject of which he was most deeply interested, the Trenton-Frankford highway, which he said he had been trying to interest the government in for the past three years and which he hoped after Mr. Henry's visit to that highway during the afternoon, the minister would see his way clear to acquiesce to his pleading.

"This road is one of the old natural roads which runs north between the Counties of Northumberland and Hastings". The Speaker stated that in the early days of road building it was customary to build roads along the side of rivers and other natural courses. The member for West Hastings stated that if this road between Trenton and Frankford were built it would be giving access to three counties, Hastings, Northumberland and Prince Edward.

Speaking of the greatness of the Province of Ontario, Mr. Ireland said that in population it represented one-third of that of the Dominion of Canada and that in mineral wealth, and natural power resources it is one of the pillows of Canada.

Mr. Ireland stated that during the last few years the Town of Trenton had spent over four hundred thousand dollars in good roads and that now the people would not want to revert to former conditions. Dealing with suburban pavements, the speaker said that Belleville came under a different classification than did Trenton, the former having to pay twenty per cent. or one third of the cost of the provincial highway for three miles outside of its limits and it also had to pay twenty per cent. of the maintenance of same. Mr. Ireland said that Belleville was paying more per capita than any other city in Ontario in this respect and he was trying at the present time to have this cost reduced. The speaker also said that the road between the City of Belleville and Corbyville cost approximately eighty-five thousand dollars and Belleville's share of this was about thirty thousand dollars and the annual portion of the upkeep amounted to about fifteen hundred dollars. The speaker then referred to the cost of the Bay Bridge and the portion which had to be borne by the City of Belleville.

J. F. Hill, M.P.P.

J. F. Hill, M.P.P., member for East Hastings made a snappy speech in responding to the toast to the Ontario Legislature. He spoke of the personal members of the Conservative party, commencing with Sir John A. Macdonald and the debt that party owed to him. Mr. Hill also spoke of the outstanding statesmanship of the Premier of Ontario, G. Howard Ferguson.

In referring to the Trenton-Frankford highway, Mr. Hill stated that he almost invariably did what he asked of Mr. Henry and felt sure that if the Minister of Highways was impressed with the necessity of this road, it would receive his immediate attention.

Hon. G. S. Henry, Minister of Highways

The Hon. G. S. Henry, Minister of Highways and Public Works was given a rousing welcome when he rose to speak. Mr. Henry prefaced the remarks of his address "Roads" by referring to the material condition of Canada at the present time, stating that it was making good progress inwardly normally and that there was now a feeling of assurance of its entry into a large development advancement. The speaker spoke for some length on the racial population of the Dominion of Canada, saying that there was a growing feeling of comradeship between its citizens regardless of nationality and he also emphasized the loyalty and confidence evidenced by Canada's population in the British Empire.

The Minister of Highways traced living conditions of the past when a journey was always made with the idea in mind of how long it would take to those of the present day when a trip can conveniently be spanned in a short time. "The result of the ease with which distance is covered is simply said the speaker" is that we live an entirely different life and we are develop ing ourselves and families more by these associations".

In dealing with the revenue derived from the people of Ontario by his department, Mr. Henry said that last year it amounted to about ten million dollars and this year, notwithstanding the reduced automobile license clause of five dollars per car he hoped to obtain the same revenue from that department. "Already" said he," for the same time this year, the revenue exceeds that of the corresponding period of last year by one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

The Minister of Highways stated that automobile drivers could assist traffic a lot if they would give proper attention to their headlights and advised car owners to try a twenty-five candle power on their right light and a six on the left. The use of proper resolution lenses was also advocated by Mr. Henry. "Another thing that will help to eliminate poor drivers is the personal licensing of drivers when a proper record of them will be obtained.

Mr. Henry stated that after October first next all vehicles including horse drawn ones, would be required to carry lights after dark".

Mr. Henry denied the latter part of his address to the different classes of roads stating which was the most suitable for different localities.

Before concluding his speech, the Minister of Highways spoke of the Trenton-Frankford Highway and promised to give the proposition fair consideration, but he did not definitely assure his audience that the recommendation on which Mr. Ireland has worked so diligently would become a fact.

Thousands of Letters Like These Establish the Fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Does Relieve the Suffering of Women

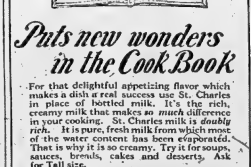

MRS. I. LAJOUNESSE
BOX 102, COMPTON, ONTARIO

Compton, Ontario.—"After a severe operation and a three weeks' stay in a hospital I returned home so weak that I was unable to move a chair. For four months I was almost frantic with pains and suffering until I thought sure there could not be any help for me. I had very severe pains in my left side and suffered agony every month. One day when I was not able to get up my mother begged me to try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of Vegetable Compound at once and I took it. I started a second bottle, and to my surprise and joy the pains in my side left me completely and I am able to do all my work without help. I am a farmer's wife, so you see I can't be idle long. In all I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, five boxes of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound Tablets, two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, and have also used the Sanative Wash."—Mrs. I. LAJOUNESSE, Box 103, Compton, Ontario.

Terrible Suffering Relieved

Blinesing, Ontario.—"I am a practical nurse and recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to suffering women, so for want and get it for me. When I had taken three bottles I was a new woman and to have had splendid health ever since. I also feel very grateful for what I always take it; sometimes a half bottle or whatever I need. It is my only medicine and I have told many a girl and woman to try it. Any one wanting to know more about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I will gladly write to her. I do all I can in recommending it for I feel I owe my life and strength to it."—Mrs. NEAL HOOVER, R. R. 1, Blinesing, Ontario.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

The Irony of Love
By Charles Garvice

"You're forgettin' that I'm no great shakes compared with the son of a duke," he said.

St. Ives stared at him. "Look here," he said, "you know too much for me. It seems to me that you're not half such an idiot as we all think."

"I'm an easy rube. I've got sense enough to get hold of the loveliest and the sweetest woman on earth," drawled Rafe, with a grin. "And now we're on the subject, I wish you'd come in and tell Maude here that it's her duty to marry me within the next fourteen days. We were just having a palaver about it when you came in."

St. Ives looked from one to the other and laughed in desperation. "Here you go to bed, man, and leave me to talk to this madman," he said, with mock sternness.

Maude went up to him, put her arms round his neck, and kissed him, while Rafe said: "Oh, father, that's no bad pay; so very, very happy—and isn't he dear?"

When she had gone, St. Ives lit another cigar. Rafe took out his pipe, and the two men sat opposite each other. Rafe with a certain absence of mind and a smile that he could not quell it would never come off, St. Ives with a gravity which belied the occasion.

"I suppose it's no use talking to you," he said. "No use telling you that you're too young to think of anything, that——"

"Nary a bit," said Rafe. "I wish I was younger, so that I might have longer to live with her."

"Oh, good Lord!" groaned St. Ives. "But look here, you're sure you know your own mind?"

"Sure as I am standing here," said Rafe, very quietly. "I've known it ever since—— But I've told that to Maude. About the marriage——"

"Well, that's talking infernal nonsense," said St. Ives, rubbing his chin and looking worried. "There's ever so much to do; there will be settlements—— Oh, yes, I've got to pay the father, you know; you'll have to settle a large sum of money on her, Strandyrew——" But what's the use of talking to you? I shall have to see Gurdon. There'll be a lot of a fuss with the lawyers."

"How's that?" said Rafe. "Give her every penny I've got."

"Oh, you'd better go to bed too," said St. Ives despairingly. "You don't understand what you're talking about. I'm your guardian, and I have got to look after you as well as Maude. A pretty state of things for an easygoing man, I don't think! Here, let us go and get a drink; you're made me as dry as the Sahara."

"Never heard of her," said Rafe. "But come along. Say, sir, doesn't it strike you as something wonderful that Maude should—should care for me?"

St. Ives paused on the threshold of the window and looked Rafe up and down; then, suppressing a laugh, he shrugged his shoulders—for at that moment the young man looked worthy of any woman—and went in.

It is to be feared that the worldly wisdom enunciated by Lord St. Ives in the course of the conversation which ensued between the two men, was to a great extent thrown away on Rafe, who, as a matter of fact, was not listening all the time; and at last, Lord St. Ives jumped up and laughed:

"What's the use of talking to you, Strandyre; you're paying no attention. Oh, well, I suppose it's only natural. I'll wire for Gurdon in the morning. Let's get to bed. Thank God that the middle upstairs is going on all night. That's some consolation, at any rate—to say your pardon, Strandyre. I don't mind admitting that I'd sooner Maude married you than Dunboro, decent chap though he is, but all the same, you must make allowance for a father placed in a fix like this."

"That's all right, sir," said Rafe. "I'm proud to hear you say that. Let's shake on it."

The two men grasped hands and Lord St. Ives trotted off to bed. But bed was not possible for Rafe just yet, and he returned to the terrace and that moonlight only lovers can fully appreciate.

The next morning Maude came down to tell him that Eva was awake and so changed for the better as to have received all visitors' approbation from the nurses' minds. Maude seemed to radiate happiness as she sat at the breakfast table, and St. Ives, calmed by a good night's rest, enjoyed himself for a little while chaffing of the girl, chaffing which Rafe took with perfect good nature. With a consideration arising from a remembrance of his own youth, St. Ives left them alone, the park. Now was the time to tell and soon they were wandering across ttesaide about Phenie; and, with his arm round her waist, he prepared to break the news.

"Maude, I want to tell you about that visit of mine to Edinburgh."

"Yes," she said, with just a touchlife interest and only a mild curiosity, for women of her class are not given to prying into the business of their menkind.

BELLE THEATRE

Directed by the man who made "Purlorn River," and "Born to the West," Paramount's current screen production, Zane Grey's "Man of the Forest," which comes to the Belle Theatre today and tomorrow, promises to be thrilling and satisfying entertainment.

Jack Holt, as Allen Dale, hero of the story, and Georgia Hale, leading woman, risked their lives in making the film as made under a heavy strain required. Miss Hale's first venture into the strenuous western type of picture made under a lucky star. People who have followed her work since she burst upon the film permanently in "The Gold Rush," and later in "The Rainmaker," are awaiting with keen interest with the greatest interest.

One of the play's big thrills is the kidnapping of a girl in the course of which Holt, on his speedy horse, overpowers a racing buckboard and drags the struggling woman into his saddle.

A punch scene of the same spine-tingling order is provided when a mountain lion, pet of the "man of the forest," fights a gang of outlaws and rescues his master.

Thrilling horsemanship, stirring hand-to-hand encounters and exhilarating comedy interlace the production. El Brendel, the screen's newest comedian, interprets the lighter moments.

CAPITOL THEATRE

Another splendid program at the Capitol tonight. The Imperial Players in "The Vulture, a mystery comedy by Neil Schaffner, and Jackie Coogan in his newest film, "Johnny Get Your Hair Cut," on the screen.

Jackie's film is a story of the race track, wherein Jackie struggles and fights his way to fame and glory as the jockey winner in the famous Kentucky classic. It is filled with all the exciting incidents which makes a thrilling horse race so fascinating and gripping.

The Imperial Players will be seen in different type of play, a mystery comedy. It is full of comedy, and like the popular company's previous offerings is clean and wholesome. Inasmuch as it is only on for tonight, it will be well to come early.

Next Monday the players will return and present "The Unloved Wife."

GRAY ASKS FOR HIS OLD FLAME

Wants To Speak To Mrs Snyder Before He Dies

New York, May 12.—Henry Judd Gray would like to bid farewell to his former sweetheart, Mrs. Ruth Snyder, before they both die in the electric chair for the murder of her husband. Their counsel are preparing an appeal. Twice since his conviction Monday, Gray, whose story of the tragedy as told from the witness stand directly involved Mrs. Snyder and contradicted her plea of innocence has expressed the desire to his lall attendants to be permitted to see his former mistress.

"I didn't want to hurt her," Gray told the under-sheriff, "and the least you can do is to let me see her and say goodbye. The State is doing what it wanted with her and me. I don't want her to suffer. I'm sorry the verdict went so hard against her. I just couldn't do anything else. I told the truth."

It is considered extremely unlikely, however, that Gray's wish will be granted. He and Mrs. Snyder will see each other in court on Monday when they appear for sentence. After that they will be conveyed in separate automobiles to Sing Sing where there will be no opportunity for communication. Gray is reported as apparently unconcerned by the prospect of death but Mrs. Snyder is said to be suffering from extreme nervousness.

RUTH'S BAT AIDS YANKEES TO WIN

Jack Quinn Outpitches Detroit Ace and Athletics Take Game

St. Louis, Mo., May 12.—If you read the papers last October you probably remember that O. Herman Ruth knocked a baseball into the centre field bleachers of the local sports arena—a feat performed by no other batter in the history of Sportsman's Park. Well, the big boy duplicated that resounding blow yesterday afternoon, or nearly so, and while festive wallop drove in the runs that beat the Browns, 4 to 2.

This made it four out of five for the Yanks in the west, and raised the way for Urban Shocker to pin a defeat on his old playmates.

Ruth's eighth homer of the season happened in the first inning with Koenig on first base. Ernie Nevers, who was once a star ball-back at Stanford, passed one to George in the well-known groove and George kicked a perfect field goal into the centre field seats.

The hit was higher than his world's series homer, but as hard nor as far. As a matter of fact, it got into the centre part of the pavilion only by the matter of a foot or two, landing a few feet on the yonder side of the wall and bounding up in the air like old faithful.

Jack Quinn outpitched Kenneth Holloway yesterday at Detroit, and the Athletics won their second straight victory over the Tigers, the score was 3 to 1. Ty Cobb, single-handed, scored one run against his former teammates. In the first inning with two out, Cobb doubled to centre-field fence. He stole third and home from when McManus threw to catch him at third was over Warner's head. Cobb also doubled in the fifth.

Chicago broke the winning streak of Horace Lisenbee, Washington's star pitcher, who had won three straight games, by the White Sox defeated the Senators at Chicago, 4 to 1. Aaron Ward's double with the bases filled in the sixth inning gave the White Sox the game. Ted Lyons held the Griffmen to four scattered hits, their lone tally being helped along by Kamm's error.

Cleveland at Boston was postponed on account of cold weather.

HOPE ABANDONED FOR SAINT ROMAN PLANE

Paris, May 11.—Mystery surrounding the fate of Captains Nungesser and Coli in their transocean flight ventures and of Capt. Saint Roman and his flight companion Commander Morinyres, is binding all Frenchmen in a common bond of anxiety. The anxiety for Nungesser and Coli is tempered by a strong hope that news of their safety will be forthcoming but the general opinion here today was there was little justification for optimism in the case of Saint Roman and Mouney eyres, of whom nothing has been heard since they left the coast of Africa last Thursday in an attempt to fly across to Brazil.

MACK FORTIFIED IN RESERVES

Cochrane and Perkins Considered Best Backstops In League

If the Philadelphia Athletics win the American League pennant, reserve power will have played an important part in the result.

A sport axiom is that no team is stronger than its substitutes. It has long been an accepted truth. That being the case, Connie Mack should have no reason to worry about ultimate success.

No team in the major leagues boasts more capable substitutes for every position than the Mackmen.

In a recent game with the Boston Red Sox the Athletics went into the sixth inning trailing 7-1, a mighty tough handicap even though playing against the ineffectives.

At this stage of the losing battle Manager Mack began rushing in his reserves any time it seemed there was an advantage to be gained by a substitution.

At the finish of the contest he had used 20 men and in so doing had pulled a game out of the fire, winning 9-8.

Every position on the Athletics has one or more capable substitutes should anything happen to the regulars. In many cases there is but little to choose between regular and sub.

At second base Mack has three men, Eddie Collins, Max Bishop and Jimmy Dykes. All are sure-enough big leaguers, able to win a berth on any major league club.

For shortstop there is Joe Boley also Chick Galloway, who for years until the coming of the Baltimore star had held down that position.

Jimmy Dykes plays third as well as second, and should anything happen to Sammy Hale, who has started, at that position, Dykes can step right into the picture and everything will move along smoothly.

At first base Mack has Jim Poole and "Doc" Branom, with Jimmy Fox, substitute catcher, also able to perform most acceptably around the initial sack.

No other club in the majors can offer such a variety of strength around the infield.

A fine assortment or right and left-hand batters is sprinkled around the various infield combinations that Mack can put in the field.

The outfield positions are just as well protected as the infield. Mack has a particular style outfielder for practically any emergency that may present itself.

He has started the season with Lamar in left, Simmons in centre and Cobb in right. It's a mighty hard combination to improve on.

However, should Mack desire a speed merchant at some critical stage of the game, he has Walker Prench, former West Point star, to fall back upon. Prench is one of the fastest men in the game.

If a heavy hitting left-hander is desired, the veteran Zach Wheat is sitting on the bench awaiting the call of Connie.

Back of the bat the Athletics have two of the best catchers in the game in Cochrane and Perkins, while Jimmy Fox is a great prospect.

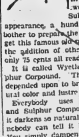

With a pitching staff that can serve most anything desired to the opposition, right and left-handed pitchers for varying occasions, Mack hasn't a worry as to his reserve power.

ITCHY ECZEMA IS HEALED BY THIS SULPHUR

Any breaking-out of the skin, even dirty, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance, a hundred-fold. Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old-recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for only 75 cents all ready for use.

It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and luster of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, and lustrous.

S. A. BILLS ARE RESULT OF NEW STUDY OF POINT

London, May 5. (C. P.)—New interest in the Union of South Africa in its native problem, rather than reactionary native policy, is evidenced in the four Bills introduced by Premier J. B. M. Hertzog and known collectively as the Native Administration Bill. Three after having been given first reading in the Union Assembly were referred to a select committee for consideration and evidence will be heard and full public discussion allowed before they are again placed before the Assembly, so that when they reappear they will doubtless be changed in some particulars. There are six million natives in the Union, a million and a half white, half a million Indians and 160,000 coloured inhabitants (Malay, etc.)

"It is quite clear that South Africa is embarking upon a tremendously important experiment affecting the relations between black and white, in the Union. It is an experiment which will have far-reaching consequences, not only in South Africa itself but on the territories to the north, for which Great Britain is directly responsible, and on color line problems all over the world," Philip Kerr, who has investigated the question, says in the Observer.

The four Bills now being threshed out represent the solution reached by the Nationalist-Labor Pact Government on the native problem, which still remains the dominant question in the Union. The Bills in effect are:

(1) The Native Franchise Bill proposes to take away from the natives in Cape Colony the right, which he now has if he possesses the necessary qualifications, to vote for members of parliament on the same terms as the white man. It substitutes seven constituencies for the whole Union in which the natives, on a restricted franchise, will elect Europeans to represent them in the Assembly. These representatives will have restricted powers of voting. All these restrictions are believed necessary by the white population, which fears that equal franchise might end in a majority of native voters, and which dislikes dragging the natives into all the political controversies of a country where the difference in civilization is still so wide.

(2)—The Native Councils Bill provides for a Union Native Council of 35 members elected by natives on a restricted franchise, through which the natives will be able to discuss their own affairs and voice their own opinions.

(3) The Native Lands Act purports to secure more land for exclusive native use—which is urgently needed—and at the same time to deal with natives working or "squatting" on white-owned farms.

(4) The fourth bill makes provision for the ultimate incorporation of the "Cape Colored" (half-caste and Malay) population, some 500,000 in number, among the enfranchised citizens of the Union.

WOMEN'S VOTE U. S. MOONSHINE MUST BE PATENT

Yeovil, Somerset, England, May 11.—Miss Ellen Wilkinson, the first woman member of parliament to bobber hair, has started a charter movement against saving the thatched roofed cottages of England, chiefly in Somerset and Suffolk.

Admitting the picturesqueness of the ancient houses, she contends they are dreary, uncomfortable and insanitary.

"The rose covered cottages with their attached roofs, are, full of romance so far as the eye is concerned," declared Miss Wilkinson, "but beneath the surface and in the thatch there are a lot of other things, silverfish, rats, mice and insects—and also the danger of fire.

"It is true the old fashioned cottages are rather cool in summer, but that's about all that may be said of them. There are too many dark corners to suit me. Women of these times must have plenty of light, air and space."

One of the champions of the proposal to save the cottages from the housewrecker is Stanley Baldwin, the prime minister. Mr. Baldwin has agreed to aid the Royal Society of Arts in its aim to preserve the countryside from further inroads by builders.

The society for the Preservation of Rural England has also taken up cudels against town planning schemes which would ruin beauty spots of the country. Sussex Downs, it has been pointed out, one of the most open spaces within automobile distance of London, has already been scarred by the erection of strings of bungalows. In the trail of the motorist there are filling stations at every cross roads, and the old time villages are being cluttered up with garages, tea shops and hotels for summer travelers.

Special appeals to architects and to lovers of country life have been issued by various organizations supporting the preservation movement.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO THE LADIES

Hamilton, Ont., May 11.—Canadian Press—The Women's Page Editor of the Herald says: "Mayor Treleaven, a barrister by profession, speaking at the Business Women's Club, paid a tribute to the girls with whom he had come in contact in the business world. He said that he had found them to be accurate, painstaking, capable, courteous and capable of greater concentration than the average man, than which nothing much more flattering or generous could have been said by one sex of the other, more especially when the one is invading territory formally sacred to the other. Mr. Bibby, a banker, from what he said appeared to be of the same mind. He had had women working with him, he said, whom he would not exchange for any man offered in their place and he seemed to discount sex altogether in business attributing the varying qualities, good and bad, solely to the individual. Dr. Holbrook, a physician, seems to have altogether passed the point where he compares the sexes in their value to either his own profession or to the business world in general.

"Such organizations as the Business Women's club have naturally been a strong factor in the development of a class consciousness and pride in the best sex girl. This has reflected favorably on her work, and in turn has enhanced her value in the eyes of the employer, and stabilized the position. Altogether, taking stock today, the women who are earning their livelihoods in Hamilton may well feel satisfied with the progress they have made collectively in the past 10 or 15 years, and the satisfaction is not all on their side. They have contributed to the progress and efficiency of other and factory life, they have enriched the professions and they have taken from the world a class of individuals who were once an object of either ridicule or pity, according to the disposition of the critic—the unattached and dependent women."

ANAESTHETIC IS TRIED BY HUNS

Berlin, April 11.—The German medical world is watching experiments with a new anaesthetic evolved in the laboratories of the German Dyestuffs federation, for which advantages over ether or chloroform are claimed.

The chemical composition of the preparation, known as E 107, is withheld for the time being. But its manner of working and effects upon the patient, both during the period of its potency and afterward, have been described by Professor Ernst Unger: who is with other prominent German physicians and surgeons has used it in numerous clinics after a series of experiments upon animals.

The anaesthetic introduced into the intestine, cause the patient to lose consciousness within five minutes and become fully under the influence after seven or eight minutes have elapsed. Prof. Unger asserted in a lecture. He declared that nervousness choking and reflexes were absent, and that absolute relaxation it attained, with a normal pulse, no alteration in blood pressure, and natural breathing.

The after effects, in a majority of cases are declared to be nil, there being no stomach sickness, while the system absorbs the anaesthetic so quickly that within an hour no traces are left. One of the corollary claims is that it is effective in introducing "twilight sleep" in childbirth.

SPRINGTIME, OF LOVE, YOUTHS' GREAT GLORY

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Do you remember those dreams you had when you were sixteen, Mary? The long sunny days when you lay out under the apple trees, watching the petals flutter and float against the blue sky, like little pink butterflies—listening to the thick contended hum of the bees that was like a gold syrup of sound—smelling the fresh, sharp sweetness of the grass—and dreaming. Dreaming sixteen-year-old girl dreams of the lover who was to come some day and the little house that should have white ruffled Swiss curtains in every window and a bright beaded rug before a singing hearth and—of something else, perhaps—a tiny, cuddling baby all your own.

How your hearts swung and quivered and then almost stopped with the sweet, unbearable wonder of it all as the dream flamed and glowed there under the apple tree.

So many things have happened since that flaring girlhood. Sad things, thrilling things, tiresome things —but nothing has ever been able to dull the first magic wonder of your girlish dreams, has it? Always they have remained sacred in your memory.

And now, today, you're reading of another young girl's dreams—or perhaps your own little daughter is reading them. And though some may laugh at such dreams and call them silly, you and she will know they are the most wonderful things in the world, won't you, Mary?

It's little Patricia Jane who is writing:

DEAR ELSIE:

I wonder if you'll think I am silly when you read my problem. There is nothing the matter with me. I am normal enough, except that I believe in a Prince Charming. I thought that I had met him a number of times, but I was found to be mistaken. Is it so strange that I should believe in such a personage? My friends laugh at me for being so foolish. They claim that there is no such thing in this day and age. Tell me, Elsie, just what is your opinion of "Prince Charming" in general?

I am not fearfully old. I will be able to vote in a few days. I am not a beauty by any means but I am able to pass in a crowd.

I did have an inferiority complex but I took care of that. I don't seem to make friends with the other sex. I don't seem to mix with the modern girl for I don't drink or smoke, nor do I believe in promiscuous petting.

The other girls think I am bold and daring for I do love good times and I am frank about it. I don't believe in beating around the bush but express my opinions in plain English. I don't know whether I will see this in print or not, but I will have something to look forward to.

I never fail to make a plea every evening for my Prince Charming so please let me know what you thing about it. This is my first attempt at expressing my feelings on paper so I am sure you will not judge me too harshly.

PATRICIA JANE.

What's my opinion of Prince Charming?

I believe in him, Patricia Jane, and I think that life is never complete unless he comes. Nothing can ever bring the happiness to a woman that love can bring—neither riches nor fame nor power. Her own man, her own home and her own babies—that's heaven for a woman.

So keep on believing, and keep praying and make yourself ready for him, little girl. AND DON'T ACCEPT ANY CHEAP SUBSTITUTE WHILE YOURE WAITING.

But also, on the other hand, don't build up for yourself an utterly impossible vision which no man can ever fit. Remember that Prince Charming though his spirit will seem that of a king to you, will wear a very human body and have very human attributes. Maybe his ears will stick out. Perhaps he'll stutter or use the wrong fork in think that the pictures and poems you love are "all wet." Most Prince Charmings do these very things, and much worse ones. So keep your sense of humor working on all six while you wait, little sister.

As for that lack of popularity—

Maybe in getting over your "inferiority complex" you have swung to the opposite extreme. Perhaps you're so anxious to so brave and frank that you overdo these things—people who "don't believe in beating around the bush and express their opinions in plain English." I don't know whether I will see this in print or not, but I will have something to look forward to.

I never fail to make a plea every evening for my Prince Charming so please let me know what you thing about it. This is my first attempt at expressing my feelings on paper so I am sure you will not judge me too harshly.

SYBIL TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Harbour

She felt suddenly that she could talk to Cousin Agatha, tell her what was in her heart, as she had never before seen able to talk to a soul. All the festering hurts of childhood, all the bitterness of her lonely girlhood, trembled on her lips. And she was to be a sympathetic listener. Never has she been able to discuss these things with her mother, because she realized the hurt it would give, if Mary Hoss suspected how Pate and circumstances had changed the name of her young daughter.

"Tell me," invited Cousin Agatha and Sybil did.

"I made up my mind, when I was very young—long before any one ever suspected that I thought of such things. I made up my mind that, as far as it was in my power, I'd pay men back for all the wrongs that had been done Mother and me and Daisy Vaughn, and, later, poor old Mrs Fields and Janet Wayland—though she doesn't realize it—Sybil. After Dads had left us and I grew up enough to know what had happened, I saw my own brothers going the same way, doing the same things, making love to girls and then tricking them and talking about them in a brazen fashion. Oh, you can't know what hatred and loathing took possession of my heart.' She stood, her slim clenched hand sharply on the table, and her young breast rose and fell under the white silk blouse. "I wanted to hurt and bite and kick. I longed for the power to destroy men. And, as because old er, I realized that Pate was giving me a weapon." Her eyes went to the strip of mirror in the column beside the table.

"I know that I am—pretty," she continued with naive pride. "You don't think it's vain of me to admit it, do you? Besides, I have heard other people say it often enough. Even Ted and Jimmie have told me so, and, if one's brothers think so, one must be rather good," she added, with a smile.

"You're exquisite," said Cousin Agatha blankly, "when I first saw you I wondered how you'd ever escaped matrimony this long. Now I begin to understand."

Sybil nodded, here was grave. "I made up my mind that, if I could I use my looks to make men fall in love with me, I'd ruin every one that came my way. I've sworn to avenge my mother and myself—and such other girls as I need to—and it's in my power. I want men to fall into my hands," she declared. "I want to crush them, strip them of everything they cherish."

"Why, the little Zampire!" exclaimed Cousin Agatha cheerfully.

"Yes," admitted Sybil. "But don't misunderstand me and my purpose, Cousin Agatha. I shall never take anything from any man, except his vanity. I'm not an adventuress or a gold digger. That's too cheap too common. The destiny to make fortune isn't enough for me. He could rebuild it, but the vanity is a man's vulnerable point. To hurt it is to give the telling blow. Of course," she continued musingly, "I can make him forget his profession in his infatuation for me, and he comes to grief that way, injures his business and his family and his reputation, so much the better But it'll be the colossal ego of the male that I'll strike at first."

Cousin Agatha was chuckling delightedly.

"Who would have thought it?" she demanded of herself, with sparkling eyes. "Who would have thought that such spunk was hidden under such a velvety exterior? Why, you're as dangerous as a young tiger cub—you anti kitten creature!"

Sybil laughed, to cover her embarrassment at the frankness of her confession. She had bared her soul for Cousin Agatha's gaze, and she wondered if the older woman were secretly laughing at her.

"I've no doubt I sound absurd," she said hesitantly. "Perhaps I'm hideously vain to think I'll ever have sufficient power to destroy any one. I may get destroyed myself first—but it won't be by a man," she added grimly.

Cousin Agatha surveyed her with lively admiration.

"Do you know, I believe you're going to do whatever you set out to do. You strike me like that sort of a young person. When I first saw you, I was afraid that you'd fall for the first young chap who made eyes at you. But I guess you're safe, Sybil—till you fall in love. And, oh Heavens, it'll be some splash, when it comes!"

"You can rest easy on that score," promised Sybil crisply. "It'll never come. If ever feel tempted, I'll go hang a stone around my neck and jump in the river."

Cousin Agatha shook her head slowly. She looked a trifle skeptical. But just then the chops arrived and the subject was dropped, while Cousin Agatha expressed, in no uncertain terms her opinion of the chef of the Hoffman House and his ideas of broiling lamb chops.

Sybil had to hurry through her meal as her time for luncheon was almost up. When she had bade Cousin Agatha good-bye and was hurrying back to the office, she remembered her confession, grimmed a little to herself, and thought ruefully: "It's all very well, but when and where am I going to find my first victim?"

Though she didn't suspect it, her first victim was at that moment loitering in his private office, awaiting the return of his pretty secretary.

John Lambert, picked up in Owen Sound with a bullet in his skull, regained consciousness and dispelled foul play theory. He said he had been worrying.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am eighteen and in love with a young man one year my senior. I have dated for him since childhood, and feel that I can't be mistaken in my love because I've been engaged to him for two years. He has been away several times, the last time for a year and two months. He returned in last March we have been going together again.

I love him more than anyone on earth, and would be contented with him always. When I tell him that, he agrees with me and says he feels the same way. Yet he intends leaving the city soon again because he is unable to find work.

It may mean a long separation, and many blue days and heartaches for me.

I am desolate because I've experienced his absence before. And I love him more than ever. I can see the loneliness in store for me. Please advise me what to do.

TRUE LOVE.

TRUE LOVE: Yours is not an easy problem. And I am somewhat handicapped in advising you, because you have not informed me of your status at home. If you are engaged in some occupation that makes you financially independent, why not join the young man you love after he has established himself and knows definitely that he will stay?

I rather think that your love has stood the test of time as well as separation. If you both think you can find lasting happiness with each other in these days of women's independence, there is no reason why two young people who are self-supporting should not marry. You can continue working for a year or two, until he is able to turn a little household without your financial assistance.

Generally I advise waiting in a situation such is yours. But if the fears of a shorter life together are to dictate to you then the terrors of separation, do not.

However, all of this advice is based upon the hypothesis that you are a self-supporting young woman. In the other contingency, if you are dependent upon your family, I can only tell you to wait until the young man you love has made his way in the world and is able to assume the responsibilities of marriage and a home. Perhaps he could find the work that he is seeking in a nearby town and you would be able to see each other now and again. After all, if your love has endured the many separations you speak of, it will surely survive another, and you are both young with all life before you.

Jumpers fashioned of crepe covered with sequin yarn embroideries also are shown with these suits are featured in the latest Paris models, and many of the afternoon and dinner dresses have yokes bordered with dagora embroidery especially in white or gray on black or navy.

Mayfair has a new fad for some society women have put away their jeweled barrets to harmonize with unusual ones painted on their wrists and above their elbows, and in most cases the conventional gem is depicted, especially the pearl because of its variety of colors, but it is invariably drawn several times larger than it would be possible to wear it if were real.

An easy way to bleach cheese is to stretch them on the line and each time the sunshine dries them turn the nose on them. This will save your taking them down each time to wet them.

OVER A MILLION ENJOY AMERICA'S PUBLIC GROUNDS

New York, May 2—An average of more than a million men, women and children found recreation daily on public play fields of Canada and the United States last summer, according to the 1926 Year Book of the Playground and Recreation Association of America just issued. The year's expenditure for public recreation in 75 cities was $19,202,132.

More than 40,000 teams of young men and boys played league games in the following sports: playground ball baseball, football, soccer, basketball, quoits, volley ball, bowling and mixed lacrosse games. There were 1,215 leagues, 673,350 players and 22,000,000 spectators. Teams in 1925 totalled only 37,000 and in 1924 33,000.

Seven hundred and ninety cities reported organized recreation, as compared with 748 the previous year. A total of 10,133 separate recreation areas was recorded, a gain of 1,515 over 1925. With an increase of public golf courses from 153 in 1925, to 194 in 1926, golf is steadily becoming less and less a rich man's game. Tennis courts totalled 6,254, a gain of more than one new court a day during the year.

To meet the threat against baseball in the rapid disappearance of city sand lots, 550 new playgrounds and 158 baseball fields were laid out in parks and outlying city districts during 1926 The tendency to use portions of city parks for active recreation, as opposed to just "breathing spaces" is to greater as to be practically universal, says the report. In 758 cities, 5,695 outdoor playgrounds were reported.

A comparison of records for a five year period shows growing faith in the importance of trained leadership. While 191 cities reported year round leadership in 1921 there were 343 last year. Including summer workers, 17,-000 persons were employed in 758 cities. Only 2,205 were on duty for the entire year. Five thousand and seventy-three employed workers were enrolled in training classes last year, as compared with 1,580 in 1921.

FORTUNE TELLER WAS NOT GUILTY

Edmonton, Alta., May 11. (Canadian Press)—In a recent case a woman charged with fortune telling was found not guilty. A certain husband whose wife came home "raving" after a visit to the fortune teller, laid the charge. The latter, in her own behalf denied any psychic powers and did not expect people to believe what she said, although "told in fun they sometimes come true." Asked if her callers paid she answered "Some don't." Her daughter, witness, said, "When folks leave money it is not thrown into the street after them." The judge trying the case admonished her in thiswise: "Don't tell fortunes lest people believe you."

THOMAS G. SHAUGHNESSY, K.C.V.O.
First Baron Shaughnessy
Retired Third President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, 1899
K.C.V.O., 1911
Elected Chairman of the Company, 1923
Died, 1923

Is it in the best interests of the road and the country?" That was the yardstick with which Thomas Shaughnessy measured every proposition. If the answer was "No," neither fear nor favor could move him. Before he succeeded Sir William Van Horne as President, Shaughnessy felt the reach of organization and supervising genius. Last and always, Shaughnessy set his path to easy riches, such a position as a legitimate policy to the Company. In that day, some men looked upon it and succeeded in the path of honest dealing and service. Duty first, himself. Not Shaughnessy. His set for himself. Lord Shaughnessy carried the same policy to the was the standard he carried as an intricate network of branch lines, organized traffic and feeder's chair. He collecting and fed-President work of the great main road, he inaugurated the ing it to Pacific Atlantic fleet, operated the Canadian Pacific Company's house flag and the Canadian ports of the seven seas. carried the Company's name of Canada to the ends of the earth. ers that But never a step was taken that had not some definite benefit to the road and to the country directly in view. Lord Shaughnessy would brook no privately-controlled subsidiaries, wasting fat at the parent organization's expense. Steamships, telegraphs, grain elevators, hotels and even sleeping and dining cars were integral parts of one system, pooling their earnings in one central treasury. Through this unbanding of the revenue sources, the financial power of organization and industrial promotion was assembled. Through this far-sighted management, the Company has paid its way, distributed well-earned profits to its thousands of shareholders, carried great plans to successful completion without call on the public funds of Canada. LAURIER WISHED Montreal, Que., May 11.—(Canadian Press)—Sir Wilfred Laurier once told me that he wanted the vote for all women in Canada," said Prof. Carrie Derick addressing a suffrage meeting.

The argument that women were mentally inferior to men, Prof. Derick answered from her vast biological knowledge. She showed that while there had been mere men geniuses than women geniuses, there was the same preponderance of men who were insane and feeble-minded over mentally unsound women. Since genius was an abnormality, this meant that there was a greater proportion of women with the normal qualities needed in the every-day work of running a country.

INDOOR LEAGUE HOLDS BANQUET

Pleasant Affair In Y.M.C.A. Winds Up Senior Association

The Senior City Indoor Softball League echoed their eighth successful season with a banquet in the Y.M.C.A. last evening when nearly a hundred players of both the mens and ladies' leagues and several honorary guests enjoyed the spread. The enthusiasm shown at last evening's get-together brought out the fact that sport is not dead by a long way in Belleville.

The reports presented were highly satisfactory and a considerable balance remains in the treasury. Besides giving $50.00 to charity and no amount to an injured players' fund there will be some money left over to start the season next year. Over one hundred players took part in the league during the season just past.

The Rhythm Kings Orchestra composed of R. Turney, M. Coyer, D. Turney and R. Weese, rendered several selections and played for the community singing.

Ken Collins, the hard-working President, acted as chairman and kept things moving along in fine style.

W. B. Deacon of the Desco Club, composed of the employees of the Deacon Shirt Co., presented several novelties in the form of subs by the members of the club. Mr. Deacon said that he felt assured that the banquet would be the means of promoting sport among the girls and young men of the city. He hoped that this summer would see more of such spirited contests.

Ken Collins felt that this past season had been the most successful in the history of indoor sport since the League's inauguration.

J. D. O'Flynn, Vice-President of the League, congratulated the winners as well as the losers and in a few remarks presented the beautiful silver trophy to the champion High School team.

The cup was received by Margaret Fairbairn, captain, and Vernon Weir, coach.

Miss F. F. Merry, secretary-treasurer of the High School team said that the most of the credit belonged to Walter Gerow and Vernon Weir who have coached the team since its organization.

In presenting the cup to Point Anne, who won the men's league, Mr. O'Flynn said that Point Anne always fielded a first-class team and had been good sports in each and every contest.

R. Redner, manager, and R. Caulin, captain, received the silverware.

Mr. McKay, President of the Club said the boys had all worked hard and had enjoyed the sport of taking part.

R. Redner of the Point Anne Club Vern Weir of the High School, W. H. Pinks of the Desco Club, J. Allen of the High Pressures, Albert Armstrong of the Y's Men, G. Anderson of the locals and S. Symons of the C. N. R. teams, all spoke briefly.

W. E. Scott of the Argyle Light Infantry, said the Regiment was pleased to allow the League to play their games in the armouries so long as supervision of the games was maintained. He suggested that one or two parties be appointed to arrange for the building for every team in the city.

"Twig" Woodley spoke on behalf of the umpires.

Secretary Sam Curry led community singing.

The banquet closed with the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and three lusty cheers for President Kenneth Collins.

The Lake Senior Baseball League has announced May 14th as the final day for passing of playing certificates. Efforts are being made to include Peterboro in the group. If arrangements can be made Peterboro will be given a bye, meeting the winner of the Goodyear-Oshawa Motors-New Toronto series in a final act of best three out of five games.

The decision of the Deseronto Peules to drop from the Bay of Quinte Ladies' League will be regretted by followers of the great summer game in Belleville. Jimmy Whitten and his clever aggregation were greeted by a large crowd at every appearance in Belleville last summer. The Peules played off with the High School in the finals but were beaten in two straight games. The closing of the glass factory where a number of the players were employed necessitates that several of them seek positions in other towns. However the three group league with the Ontarios and the Peules of Belleville and the Napanee Club complete the circuit.

When Jess Spring, former Hamilton M.-O. and N.H.L. player tried to find Shamokin of the New York-Pennsylvania league, in order to report his season, he couldn't locate the town, and while he was getting out a search warrant, he was suspended by that club for not reporting. Finally Spring located the burg on the map and wormed his way about its cross-roads until he landed, whereupon he was reinstated by the club, and is now being patrolled by the cowfield.

Only two weeks remain for "Peeney" Mills to get his C. N. R. Club in shape for the opening game with Picton. Should the locals begin home the bacon they should go a long way in the quest of the Ontario championship. The boys are all rarin' to go and the old spark is rapidly returning now that the ball and bat is relegated from the back stairs. "Stats" Kerr and K. P. North, Belleville's two loyal members of the "anvil chorus" are oiling up for the afternoon of the game's birthday. It is reported that the Peters Creek boys have been practising faithfully in anticipation of keens opposition than ever before.

Perhaps it was just as well that Ty Tyson, former Canadian league outfielder-pitcher, got a flock of bum hits at the start of the season. He hit like a fiend for the Giants in his first week or so in the big show this year, but of late he has fallen off terribly. He has gone 27 times in a row without a safety.

BOWLING

The last game in the Ladies' League was played last night at the Y alleys between the Bellevues and the Go-Getters, the former winning three points and the latter one. In the first game the Bellevues won by 37 pins and added another 38 to this in the second but in the last game the Go-Getters won by 21 pins but lost on the total by 58 pins. Miss Lynch of the Bellevues had the high single of the evening with 309 while Miss Rainbird of the same team had the three string with 496. For the Go-Getters Miss Benedict was high with 482.

Ladies' League

Bellevues	Miss	Total
Miss Rainbird 496;	Miss Lynch 482;
Miss Curry 474;	Hazeldine 75.	Total 1824.

Go-Getters	Miss	Benedict 482;

CARDS PASTED BY GIANTS 10-1

Cy Williams Drives In Two Runs and Phillies Defeat Cubs

New York, May 12.—There were, in round numbers, approximately two dozen reasons why the Giants beat the Cardinals at the Polo Grounds yesterday, leaped to the league leadership and made the highly anticipated battle royal merely a tame and tepid ball game. Hugh McQuillan's pitching per formance was one reason; the wildness of Jess Haines was another and the Giants' propensity to hit hardest at the most propitious moments was a third. The other twenty-one don't matter.

These three reasons alone were enough to give the boys from the Bronx the long end of the 10 to 1 odds, and make 18,000 cash customers wonder what all the shouting was about anyway. The coming-of the Cardinals to the Polo Grounds was widely heralded but it turned out to be hardly worth while from a St. Louis viewpoint.

At Philadelphia the Phillies defeated the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 2, by bunching four hits off Osborn, Cub pitcher, in the seventh inning. A timely two-bagger by Cy Williams in this inning scored two runs for the Phillies. Brilliant relieved Osborn in the eighth after the latter passed Thompson, and Friberg had singled. The fun in this inning was scored by Thompson after Grimm had singled to right field.

The Braves and the Pittsburg Pirates were clutched in a four to four tie at Boston yesterday when a down-pour of rain halted the battle. Two of Pitts runs, which gave them a lead came in the fifth inning on an error by Maranville.

Boston tied the score in the eighth by scoring two runs on singles by Pinch Hitter Fournier, Maranville and Jack Smith. There was one out when the rain halted the game.

Brooklyn pushed Cincinnati deeper into the cellar by smearing the opener of a three-game series by 7 to 5. The pitching of Rube Ehrhardt, who replaced Jess Petty, after the Reds had sent the latter to the showers and tied the score, featured the game.

TORONTO SPLITS WITH BALTIMORE

Syracuse Grabs Both Ends Of Double Bill From Keys

Toronto, May 12.—Toronto and Baltimore broke even in a double-header here yesterday, the Leafs taking a 7 to 11 three-inning verdict in the first contest, while the Orioles won the second, 9 to 5.

Lefty Faulkner outpitched George Earnshaw in the long game, and should have blanked the Orioles, 1 to 0, but the visitors tied the score in the ninth on two hits and a sacrifice fly by Lake. Faulkner held the Orioles to three hits to the ninth. Webb, with a single past third, drove in Heath with the decisive run, in the thirteenth after two men were out.

Courtney was wild and easy to hit in the seven-inning affair, while Church was easily held the Leafs until the last half of the seventh when they bunched hits for three runs.

The Stars took both ends of a double header from Reading at Syracuse today. Ira Miller registered his second shut-out with a 4 to 0 victory in the first game, while Bill Hallahan struck out nine in winning the second, 7 to 4.

COBB-SIMMONS FINED

Chicago, May 12.—President Ban Johnson of the American League today imposed fines of $200 each on Ty Cobb and Al Simmons, ranking stars of the Philadelphia Athletics, whose suspensions were lifted yesterday.

President Johnson notified Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, that the fines must be paid by personal cheques from the players within forty-eight hours or further suspension would follow.

BLAMES RUSSIANS FOR REVOLUTION AMONG CHINESE

Bessie Ketcheson Arrives Back Home After Hectic Period

PRICE ON HEAD

Dissenting Forces Gave Bristishers Four Days To Leave Country

Having come from the scene of one of the world's greatest crises, Miss Bessie Ketcheson, daughter of Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, returned from China yesterday, looking the picture of health and delighted to be back in a peaceful country.

The scene of Miss Ketcheson's last hours lay in Sinchwei, the farthest west province of China, only a few days journey form Thibet, and far from the protecting influence of British gunboats and soldiery.

"The Chinese were not so bad when I was stationed" said Miss Ketcheson in an interview with the Intelligencer today, "but we directly lay the blame for all the anti-British feeling in China to the Russian propagandists. When asked by the reporter whether her life was ever in real danger, she non-committally answered "They had a standing price of $50 on our heads and the Chinese crowds used to follow us when ever we went out on the streets shouting, "kill the foreigners", but outside of that we were never really faced with grim death. The Chinese were really just fighting among themselves.

"In November of 1926, the Russians engineered a strike and took away all our Chinese servants from us, and if it hadn't been for friendly Chinese students we would have been unable to get any food whatsoever.

"In the middle of January last we were given four days notice to leave the Province. We came down the river from the city of Chi-ktu, and from there took a small steamer to Shanghai. They took the craft out of the hold of the boat and put beds in it for us. The steamer was barricaded with trunks and the front of the ship had a steel covering. Of course we were fired at as we proceeded down the river, but, no one was killed. If we came out on deck we had to run to our details again as soon as the firing broke out."

To Shanghai

"All missionaries reported to Shanghai. There were about two hundred missionaries of all sects in my section of China, and they had to be taken out, at different times of course. It would be impossible to get down to Chentu now, unless a gunboat went up the river and brought the missionaries down as the stream is all blockaded."

Miss Ketcheson, with a twinkle in her eyes, said, "we didn't need any motion picture shows there to give us a thrill—we had plenty of them."

Miss Kerkpatrick was a teacher in the Canadian Normal School. The best China University was outside the walls of the city. "The Christian Chinese are still faithful to us," the missionary stated, "but if they were caught helping us they would lose their heads."

Going Back

"There is something about the East that seems to call you back," said Miss Ketcheson, "and I am going back as soon as it is possible. The real success of the Missionaries is the best thing possible that could have happened, when they go back, there will be a huge difference."

AWAIT MESSAGES OF LOST FLIERS

St. Johns, Nfld., May 13.—In response to numerous messages sent throughout Newfoundland asking for information of the French aviators, Captains Nungesser and Coli, the Minister of Posts, has received a report from Sound-ashland, Placentia Bay, stating that Fletcher Beck, of that place, heard sounds like that made by an aeroplane on Monday, about noon. A letter to be mailed at the time. There is nothing, however, to corroborate the report. An aeroplane was previously reported having been heard passing over the town of Placentia, but this was denied from Placentia yesterday.

THE WEATHER

Moderate winds unsettled with showers tonight and part of Saturday.

INTRODUCED TO NEW OFFSPRING

Sir Alan Cobham, hero of the recent airplane flight from London to Australia, and return, is shown with Lady Cobham, and the newest member of the Cobham family. The baby was born while the noted flyer was visiting in America and the photograph was made on the occasion of his homecoming and his first introduction to his new offspring.

TORONTO BABY FINALLY LOCATED BY AUTHORITIES IN KING ST. HOME

Charge of Kidnapping Child Laid Against Woman

Toronto, May 13.—Lloyd Daley, two months old child of Mr. and Mrs. James Daley, missing from the front of a departmental store since Tuesday afternoon last, was found by the police of town today with a woman in King Street East house. The child was quite well. He was identified by his mother who with the father had been summoned to the house by the police who had been notified by two men of the presence of the strange baby in the house of Mrs. Louis Le Page, 4 3 King Street East. Mrs. Le Page lay in bed off the hallway at the house when Mrs. Daley, the mother of the child entered. It was a dramatic moment when Mrs. Daley took the child to her breast and exclaimed: "It's my baby, it's my baby."

Admits Theft

Mrs. Daley's claim was freely endorsed by Mrs. Page, from her bed "No, it's my baby," she said plaintively. Later Mrs. Page broke down and admitted that the child was not her own, declaring "it was given to me by a man." She had previously told the police the child was her own and was born about a week ago. This afternoon a charge of kidnapping the Daley baby was laid against Mrs. Audrey Le Page and Mrs. Louis Harper was charged with harboring. Both women are under detention at the police station. Mrs. Daley came from Montreal five years ago. She is about 35 years of age.

After consultation with the doctor Crown Attorney Hamilton of Mrs. Le Page she was asked to get up and dress which she did with assistance of Mrs. Harper. The police then took her to detective headquarters for further questioning.

LIQUOR PERMITS ISSUED NEXT WEEK SAYS HANNA

Toronto, May 13.—"Permits for the purchase of liquor will be issued some time next week," said D. R. Hanna, Chairman of the Ontario liquor board today. "Just what day has not been decided, but it will be next week. They will be issued to residents only and there need be no congestion at any point where they are issued. The temporary permits to tourists and people of only temporary residence will not be issued until after the stores are opened, because they will not have an opportunity to use them." Permits will be issued in all parts of the province at the same time.

AMERICAN FLIERS START JOURNEY EARLY SATURDAY

Richard Byrd Postpones Flight Until His Broken Wrist Heals

FROM NEW YORK

American Planes Will Push Off Shortly After Midnight

New York, May 13.—Three United States planes which started for non-stop flights to Paris were berthed on Long Island flying fields today and indications were that two of them at least would take off tomorrow in a race to be the first to go.

At Curtiss field the Bellanca monoplane "Columbia" in which Clarence Chamberlin and Lloyd Bertaud hoped to take off early this morning until unfavorable weather reports caused them to decide on postponement until tomorrow morning.

Beside it was the Ryan single seat monoplane, "the Spirit of St. Louis", in which Captain Charles Lindbergh flew from Oregon, Ill., in two days preparatory to the flight to France which may now develop into the first race with Bertaud and Chamberlin.

The Fokker monoplane "American" under the command of Richard Byrd, was held in readiness.

This flight is to be postponed, however, until the fate of the missing French fliers, Nungesser and Coli is determined and until Byrd has recovered from a broken wrist injured during a test flight. The "America" will be carried on deck before it can be pronounced fit for service. Although Byrd was reported to be slowly gaining, Bellanca flier has not been able to get off this morning as he had expected. His temperature benefited a bit overnight when it was finally decided that none of the flights was to be begun on "Black Friday."

Chamberlain and Bertraud now plan to hop off at one o'clock tomorrow morning and it was generally believed that the school would be started at almost the same hour, although he was non-committal as to his plans. Shortly after this, 25 year old pilot who had flown all over the world, from Japan, then landed a perfect sleep in St. Louis and flown to New York, was asked whether it could be possible for him to start a nearly forty hours trans-Atlantic visit without further rest, and he replied, "All I need is a couple of hours sleep and I'll be ready to go."

ACCIDENT VICTIM BURIED AT CANNIFTON

Mr. Farnsworth assisted by the Rev. Mussey. Interment took place in the Elmwood Cemetery. The bearers were D. Dorland, J. Burch, D.

TODAY IS FRIDAY THE 13th BEWARE OF BLACK CATS

Take a peep at the calendar, and you will see that today is not only Friday but that it is the 13th, too, so it has been a case of "Watch Your Step."

Superstitious people think that such a date is doubly jinxed and twice unlucky. They will tell you to touch wood, run a black cat, and keep your fingers crossed during the day, also look north, east, south and west before you cross the street, or you may be knocked down by an auto.

MEETING IS CALLED TO ARRANGE FOR JUBILEE CELEBRATION HERE

Interested Citizens Urged To Attend To-night's Get-Together

60TH ANNIVERSARY

Parks Board and City Council Cooperate Jointly In Matter

Mayor Eardley Wilmot has called a joint meeting of the Parks Board, a special committee from the Council, and all citizens who are interested, in the Council Chamber, City Hall, tonight at eight thirty o'clock, for the purpose of discussing plans for the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation.

This is a matter in which every citizen should be vitally interested. Arrangements for a fit and proper observance of this important national event are nearing completion in all parts of the country and no time can be lost in outlining a programme to celebrate the event of Canada's sixtieth anniversary in Belleville. What form the celebration will take is not known but it has been proposed in some quarters that the school children of the city be mobilized in Victoria Park in the morning with a programme of community singing and flag raising together with speeches by the leading citizens. However, this has not been definitely decided and suggestions by the citizens will be welcomed at tonight's assembly.

Committee Chosen

A committee will likely be appointed to map out the most suitable programme possible. Among the most various steps taken by the Government to stimulate interest and to direct an organized opinion and action in this connection is an Act of Parliament creating a national committee has as its head their Excellencies the Governor-General of Canada and the Viscountess Willingdon. It is the general duty of the committee to encourage in every way possible the several provinces and with other bodies an effective celebration of the historic anniversary of the formation of the Dominion. The body will cooperate with the various municipalities in arranging a celebration that will impress upon the people Canada's national growth and her achievements since Confederation. It is especially desired that the minds of citizens and especially the younger generation may be better attuned to what should be the spirit of the day. A due appreciation of the great tradition and heritage committed to our charge.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

One who loves right cannot be indifferent to wrong or wrong doing. If he feels warmly he will speak warmly out of the fulness of his heart.

"TIM" WAS NEEDED

Some few years ago there was a famous by-election in North Essex. The Liberal candidate was Mr. "Tim" Healy. "Tim" always reminded one of the celebrated Tim Healy, partly because he was so different. Mr. Healy lost a hard election. Indeed, Mr. Healy probably have been defeated had it not been that one day there appeared in the riding a prodigious poster upon which was printed of this immortal legend:

VOTE FOR "TIM" AND A
$35,000 BREAKWATER
AT BELLE RIVER.
VOTE FOR THE TORY AND HOT AIR.
HINO NEEDS "TIM."
KING AND "TIM," THAT'S THE THING."

So the electors sent "Tim" on to King. Mr. King, on his part, sent on the $35,000—and more—to Belle River. There were, to be sure, no ships at Belle River. Ships don't go where there isn't much water. But that didn't matter. The thing that mattered was that "King needed Tim." Belle River got a breakwater; the "boys" got jobs on it; and, what was more important, it proved a blessing for the motor boats to tie up to, prior to their clearing for "Mexico" with cargoes of bootleggers' whiskey.

Now, after a lapse of years, "Tim" has come back into the picture. The same man that King needed. The other day in Windsor Mr. James Cooper, liquor exporter, was a witness before the Customs Commission. Mr. Cooper was very frank. A good witness. He told of how, on one occasion, he had been approached by Mr. A. P. Healy—"Tim"—and advised to go and see Mr. Healy's campaign manager, one W. M. Egan. Mr. Cooper did as he was advised, and Mr. Egan demanded money. Mr. Cooper handed Mr. Egan $375, and while Mr. Egan took the precaution of taking it he also took the precaution of telling Mr. Cooper to go back and "see Tim." Mr. Cooper went back and called upon "Tim," whereupon "Tim" advised him to go and see the "big fellow." The "big fellow" proved to be a Mr. John O'Gorman, of Toronto, who just happened to be stopping at a Windsor Hotel. Mr. Cooper saw the big fellow, and the big fellow told him that he would be expected to pay $3 on every case of hard liquor and 25 cents on every case of beer that he exported. Cooper was advised by his lawyer not to submit to blackmail—so he didn't pay.

It is all a lovely sidelight upon underground politics as played by certain politicians. Yet the exposure, we greatly fear, will do no good. A public that was merely amused by the story of the Barge Tremblay and the adventures of Moses Aziz, is not likely to be worried over the kind of gentle man that Mr. King needs—and got—in North Essex a few years ago.

FOOLISH EXTREMES

Extreme methods seldom bring results. Imagine United States two examples of such methods applied to crime prevention, have received considerable publicity. At the San Quentin Penitentiary in California a system of plastic surgery has been instituted by which cauliflower ears and low foreheads will be eliminated thus the authorities believe giving the inmates a better chance to make good in honest pursuits on their final release. It is sharp contrast to this humanitarian aim up north in Michigan is the introduction of the whipping post for certain crimes of violence is being seriously considered.

In this country neither of these schemes would receive much support. There is no doubt that a restricted use of the lash as permitted by Canadian law has acted as a partial deterrent for a certain type of lawbreaker, but it is generally felt that there is no need for its extension. As for the beauty parlor methods of San Quentin our belief is that the depraved face of the criminal is the inevitable legacy of the life he has lived and that no amount of face-lifting will give him any better chance in life unless there is a complete change of soul. This change of soul has been brought about in thousands of cases in Canadian penitentiaries not by plastic surgery but by wise instruction and constructive discipline.

Canada's vastly more fortunate situation as to crime rests mainly on the knowledge by all classes that justice is sure and swift and that evasion of real punishment is practically an impossibility. For such reasons the American beauty parlor and the whipping post must prove but feeble palliatives.

CANADA'S CLIMATE

Snow and sleet and late seeding in the West, with cool showers in the East have set the pessimists to croaking about "Canada's late spring." But in the meantime these headings are appearing in the press:

MISSISSIPPI FLOODS: THOUSANDS HOMELESS.
CYCLONE HITS SYDNEY: HEAVY DAMAGE.
DALLAS AT AIDEN.
CHILE VOLCANOES ACTIVE.
ILLINOIS CYCLONE.
MEDITERRANEAN STORM.
EARTHQUAKE IN THE PHILIPPINES.
TORNADO SWEEPS KANSAS.

So, after all, Canada is not so bad. Our winters may be rigorous, and our springs sometimes dubious, but taken all in all, and compared with other countries, our climate is as pleasant as perhaps any in the world.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Stockings, it is reported, were invented in the seventh century, but were not seen until the twentieth.

The sweet young thing entered the local stationer's and asked for a pound of wax.

"Wax, madam?" echoed the shop assistant.

"Yes, answered the girl, "wax for polishing the floor."

"Oh," replied the other, "we are stationers. The only wax we keep is sealing wax."

"Bother!" exclaimed the maiden sharply. "That's no use at all. We're having a dance and I want to wax the floor, not the ceiling."

SPRING DAYS

When spring days come and I have naught to do,
I love to rest beneath some spreading tree,
And gaze aloft into the heavens blue
And drink of all the wonders awe and free
A gracious Father hath prepare for me—
The earth all fair, upon whose verdant breast I lie at rest;
The freshness of the air; the songs o birds;
The crooning music of the distant herds;
The lovely mysteries
Of budding trees;
The dawning beauties of the garden close,
The violet, the daffodil and rose;
The misty hills now greening in the sun;
The twilight lengthening when day is done.
These things divine
All, all are mine,
Whatever may annoy,
To see, to use, and fully to enjoy—
Wherefore in spring I love to rest
And brood.
On gratitude!
—John Kendrick Bangs.

CHINESE WOMAN BRIGHT FIGURE

London, Eng., May 13 (C.P.)—Prof. Soothill, professor of Chinese at Oxford says: It is the Chinese woman who is the brightest spot on the landscape, the most promising spot in the national life. They have generally had the spirits with any education and with natural feet were the product of certain mission schools. They nearly half the population of the country, some 200 million of women and girls, had crippled feet. The effect on carriage, happiness and character is only made evident when that a new race "Shoolunzy a new race of women, it being evolved. If a sign can be sought of progress in China perhaps the most felicitous is the signboard of the "Women's Foot Store." Perfect values age in Chinese eyes, and now it is found in every city. Then every woman made her "three-inch golden lilies" to cover what remained of her maimed feet. Today the boot store supplies her with beautifully made shoes to wear over her flesh-colored silk stockings.

GIRL GUIDES IN AMATEUR PLAY

"Just Peg" Is Well Presented By Third Belleville Troop

"Just Peg" a charming four act play presented last night in the City Hall by the Third Troop Belleville Girl Guides delighted a large audience both by the pretty and interesting plot and the really excellent manner in which it was presented by the talented young ladies of the troops. The play was based on the principles of the scouts and brought out many ways in which a member of a troupe may take a hand and turn a fellow guide's misery to happiness and showed what a healthy normal life a real Guide leads.

Miss Muriel Bacon who played the title role was most delightful as a little orphan kept as a slavery in the home of Mrs. Bacon who was cleverly impersonated by Miss Grace Cook. Beulah Marie Bacon (Lorne Simpson) had not adopted all the principles of the Guides and was inclined to be a little intolerant of both Peg and Miss Molly who was charmingly impersonated by Miss Bernice Durham. However after a valiant act in saving two small children from burning, Peg discharged from Mrs. Bacon's service finds refuge in a gypsy camp as adopted daughter of Zingora, a wandering Gypsy which part was taken in a most convincing manner by Marjorie Hill, and later returning to her former home after six months wandering and dreaming, finds herself pensioned by the government for her former valiant act and taken in as a member of the Girl Guides, an honor Peg had always secretly coveted. In the gypsy camp scene which like the Indian camp scene was really lovely, Miss Rosie Wilson delighted the audience with a pretty dance. Miss Sprague as Beulah was bright and delightful.

The choruses were composed of Miss Lee, Patrol Leader; Joan Burgess, Hellen Mason, Mary Day, Phyllis Marvin, Violet Kelly, Melissa Hicks, Mary Roberts, Nan Lister, Ann Schuster, Marjorie Gilmore, Mary Blakely, Doris Gray, Elsie White, Betty Thurrical, Peggy Burke, Henrietta Dash, Mary Stevenson.

Husky Builds Health As It Gives Relief

Thousands of Cases Prove Reconstructive Qualities of This Preparation

Most of us seek relief when we are suffering or are in a weak, run down state, but few of us receive any lasting help—our troubles keep returning. Husky, the herb preparation, strengthens the organs of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and therefore it gives relief of a permanent nature for such ills as headaches, dizzy spells, indigestion, gas and sour stomach, constipation, catarrhal affections, rheumatic pains, nervousness and weak, tired feelings. Husky is not a one-dose, cure-all. It must be taken regularly and over a reasonable length of time, but then its help is lasting.

Mr. Lake Talks:

Mr. E. C. Lake, 44 King St., Toronto, tells of his case and how Husky helped as follows: "For five months my health had been run down. I suffered from stomach trouble. Indigestion would follow each meal. Gas would form on my stomach and cause a terrible bloated feeling. Constipation added to my misery and I also suffered greatly from headaches. I began taking Husky not long ago and I am no longer bothered with indigestion, gas or bloated feelings. Constipation is a thing of the past and headaches no longer affect me. I am certainly feeling much better and stronger in every way. I have had a mighty fine experience and I can recommend Husky to all who suffer in any way I did."

At Good Drug Stores

Every person in this city suffering in any way Husky is recommended to relieve, should begin the Husky treatment now. Husky can be obtained at good drug stores everywhere and when taken regularly and over a reasonable length of time it will help you just as it is helping thousands of others.

WOMEN WIN TWO LITERARY PRIZES

Ottawa, Ont., May 13.—(Canadian Press)—The Journal says editorially: "Following as it does a Toronto girl's capture of the Atlantic Monthly's $10,000 for the best story submitted in a recent prize competition, it is an interesting circumstance that Maclean's Magazine has given first prize to a woman in a national short story competition. Furthermore two of the four prize winners are women, and the only competitor outside of the Province who is awarded special mention of a woman. We should not like to suggest that the future of Canadian literature lies with women more than with male writers, but certainly they have been conspicuously in the forefront of literary activity of late."

On the same subject the Manitoba Free Press says:

"Miss de la Roche is a native-born Canadian and her prize-winning novel Jalna, has a Canadian setting. Jalna is her fourth novel, so that in one sense success has not come to her as a flash in the night. Her ancestry is typical of what is going into the Canadian race. She is of French, Irish and English origin and it is to be hoped that when the next census is taken in this country she will be permitted to list herself as a Canadian.

The city of Toronto honored the distinguished writer by the presentation of silver plate at a banquet given by Authors' Association on May 7.

The remains of the late Mrs. W. G. Brown who died in Watertown this week were laid at rest yesterday after noon in the Belleville cemetery. The body which arrived on the C.N.R. afternoon train was accompanied by an unusually large number of beautiful floral tributes, many from different organizations to which deceased belonged and of which she was a much beloved and valued member. The committal service was conducted by Rev. C. E. Clarke, rector of Christ Church.

MRS. WM. NICHOLSON

The funeral of the late Mrs. Wm. Nicholson took place on May 7th, at Cleveland, Ohio. The deceased who was a former resident of Belleville, had many friends here who will regret to learn of her demise. The Irony of Love
By Charles Gates

"I suppose it was very important business, or you wouldn't have rushed off so suddenly?"

"Well, it was," he said, with a certain hesitation. "Travers wired to me.

She stopped suddenly and, looking at him, said, with smiling gravity:

"You don't want to tell me, Stranfyre. Dear, I know by the way you speak! You will never be able to hide any of your thoughts from me; for I shall hear them in your voice, read them in your eyes. Love is very keen. This business was—private, wasn't it?"

Rafe looked uncertain for a moment. Was it private? Certainly, the "man-and-wife" business was private; but she would not like that to be told.

"Well, yes," he admitted, at last. It was just this, Maude: An old friend from out there, Jumping Jane, has come over to England; and, of course, directly I heard it, I had to go—I must——"

With a laugh, she put her hand over his mouth. "Not another word, Stranfyre," she commanded. "There is nothing I should hate more than for you to think you were bound to tell me everything, did it. I am sure that there's something about—well, I suppose this friend, that you don't want to tell me, and I will not have you on so. Ah no, you must let me have my way in this, Stranfyre."

"But there is nothing to conceal—I mean——" he was getting confused and tangled by this new phase of the affair.

She stopped him with a mock-imperious gesture. "Not another word, dear! Isn't it a lovely morning? And it is beautiful weather, and everybody ought to be happy in it. When I walk this morning I shall be expressing wonderful had happened to me, as to the whole of my life had changed—and that I suddenly knew what real happiness meant.

Rafe tried to tell her how, he felt when he woke, and in this interchange of lovers' confidences and revelations of self, they walked through the park and so home again.

"I wonder just what day when we we tell her," said Rafe.

"She will not need any telling," said Maude, with a smile. "Eva's eyes are very sharp and—and I'm afraid they——"

"We'll give ourselves away?" finished Rafe for her, ruefully. "Well," he drawled, "when you've just got the whole of the world in the hollow of your hand, you can't help looking pretty full."

Raised on her pillows, Eva was waiting for them when they came. She had fastened upon her necklace being put on and she had a choice selection of some of her more recent gifts of his arranged on the bed in front of her. She peered at him and then at Maude, with eyes narrowed.

"Why what is the matter with you, Stranfyre—and you, Maude? Why—why! You look as if—as if—Ah, auntie dear has he told you?"

"Told her what?" asked Rafe, while a blush began to rie to Maude's face and she dropped her eyes and stood before the child's sharp ones.

"Why, told her that you loved her, and asked her to marry you, of course How silly you are, Stranfyre, to pretend as if you didn't know what I meant!"

"This child is too clever to be allowed to live," said Rafe, with great seriousness, as Maude slipped down on her knees beside the bed and put her arm around her neck. "You little imp Do you mean to say you knew all the time?"

"Oh course I did," retorted Eva, indignant at this imputation of her lack of intelligence. "I've seen you looking at Auntie Maude— But I didn't know for certain certain until day when you picked up a flower she had worn and put in your pocket. You see, you wouldn't have carried about a dead flower unless——"

Rafe took her little head in both his hands. "I am now about to wring this kid's neck, Maude," he said, but she pinched up his pretty face and kissed it. "Well, I guess you're pretty clad," he observed.

"Well, yes," assented Eva, but a trifle reluctantly. "Of course, I should have liked to have married you myself but Auntie Maude is older than I am and the oldest always has the first choice. I never could tell why," she added, with a little sigh. "But, of course, it's very natural, because Auntie Maude is really quite a beautiful young lady——"

"My dear Eva!" murmured Maude. "Don't you know how I'm blushing."

"Oh, you needn't be shy any longer Eva assured her. "Engaged people are never shy; at least, married people never are."

"Eva," that's good, common sense, Eva," said Rafe, with emphatic approval, "and the fact being as you've stated it, you'll agree with me that the longer Auntie Maude and I are married the better."

"That isn't fair, Stranfyre, you know that she agrees with you in everything —for there anything you want, darling?"

BELLE THEATRE

A fascinating love story spun against the background of the far west, with one of the most spectacular scenic effects ever recorded by a camera. That's Man of the Forest", a Paramount picture from Zane Grey's novel with Jack Holt, George Bancroft and Ti Brendel in leading roles, which opened at the Belle Theatre yesterday.

This western narrative of adventure romance has been treated by the director, John Waters, who also made "Born to the West" and "Forlorn River," in refreshing fashion. Of absorbing interest, the production is not dependent on fresh horseman or marksmanship or an exaggerated theme of conflict, but instead, presents a plausible romance in which the wilderness back ground is only incidental.

Holt offers another splendid characterization in the title role. George Hale, making her first appearance in an outdoor picture, enacts the heroine. A fine vein of comedy, developed by Ti Brendel, who appeared only in "The Campus Flirt," is carried with deft directorial touch.

Made in the high mountains of California, the scenery is inspiringly beautiful and would make the picture stand out the average even if the praise-worthy effortf of an excellent cast were absent.

Follows Route of Empire Founders

1. View of the locks at the "Soo." 2. The S.S. Assiniboia locking through at Sault Ste. Marie. 3. Transferring from train to ship at Fort William after a journey of two at Port Arthur. 4. Mackenzie Bay, showing grain boats in the elevators in the background.

Centuries before the railways, the automobile, the trolley car, or the aeroplane, the Great Lakes were the highways, and canoes the popular vehicles of transportation, exploration and conquest. Leaving Montreal, Quebec and other points, the great La Salle, Marquette, Hennepin, Radisson and Mackenzie, a valiant crew of explorers and adventurers, passed through the Great Lakes on their way to found Illinois, Louisiana and other states of the Middle West. La Salle set the first foot on shore at the mouth of the Mississippi and paddled his way back, made the Great Lakes his highway. He and his dauntless companions found and won an empire.

The hardships of these early explorers have been done away with and the man is suffering from shock today and tomorrow of the 75th but glamour or their expenditions and the beauties of their route still remain. Aboard one of the Canadian Pacific lake steamers like the Assiniboia or the Keewatin in the heart of the continent, the fresh water sailor lures Pere Marquette aboard on the shores of the Georgian Bay, passes the entrance through Lake Huron and the famous "Soo" canal and lies headed in to Lake Superior. The journey requires only two days and a half through one of the most picturesque parts of the Dominion.

The Fort McNicholas, the second journey aboard the Manitoba is another delightful trip. The latter vessel is beautifully situated between two high walls of rock at the southern end of the waters of the Georgian Bay. This is one of the finest harbours on the Great Lakes. The journey from here to the "Soo" is beset with scenic beauty, along the rocky coast of the Bruce Peninsula that stretches away to the south towards Manitoulin Island. The great cliffs of this peninsula rise up over 100 feet from the deep clear waters of the Georgian Bay.

From Fort William, one of the greatest grain centres in the world, the traveller may proceed westward across the prairies. Few transcontinental journeys can offer such a delightful diversion in travel as the Great Lakes trip. The traveller can board the steamers at Port McNicoll, travel one fifth of the way across the continent and then resume his railjourney at the head of the Lakes.

WIVES WHO ARE AFRAID TO STAY HOME ALONE

By ELSIE MALLOWE

Scared stiff! Tread at the ears! There comes the boy man! and whimpered about staying alone for an hour in the evening, until she has whined and pouted and whimper ed hubby out of the front door!

He says he is tired of putting up with the tan-trums of a selfish, jealous woman—but Helen says:—

"Really, Im not jealous or selfish. I'm honestly afraid to be home alone. It wasn't because I thought that my husband was going to do anything wrong that I begged him to stay home at night. I was honestly afraid.

"About a month ago he left. He taken care of baby and me very well, but he went some home because he says he can't stand my nagging about being alone. But I can't help it. I let the baby stay up late now, just so I wont have to be alone so much. What "shall I do to overcome this fear? And how can I win my husband back again.

WHAT CAN YOU DO, HELEN? Grow up, my dear.

Just now you'd take that prize in a baby show. It's cute to hear little Betty sporal out when she's left alone—but it sounds like the dickens when a great big mama lady tunes up. And why should a big mama lady be afraid to be alone? Ask yourself that Helen Let's start excavating right now.

Is it fear of violence that you fear? you dread do be alone? Do you work up a lively chill waiting for a big, brawny escaped lunatic to break in the bath room window, bind and gag you and throw you down the light-well? But all this could happen if your husband were in the next room entertaining the whole police force. That is, if such things DO happen. But they don't Helen, outside of movie theatres are television magnifiers. So is fear fear of violence that gets you all gooseflesh, is it?

All right then, how about boredom? Isn't that perhaps the real root of the evil? Are you being bored and afraid, you cry. Sure it isn't, BUT BOREDOM CAN BE ROOLED UP TO LOOK LIKE FEAR. People can win over so much more sympathy through being "afraid" than they can by being bored. Don't forget that. And you sure that this "afraid to be alone" complex hasn't grown out of the restlessness that comes with solitude some times? Don't you really wish that your husband would stay home so that he could amuse you?

Yes, I know you are jealous. Helen, But how do you know you're not? Jealousy is a sort of mental sickness that grips us unawares and has often lived with us for months before we realize that it's there at all. Didn't you feel a tiny twinge of resentment the first time your husband left you alone? Isn't it possible that that first tiny seed has grown into that monster shrub of fear? And how about selfishness? Don't it prove you real to know that YOU couldn't make him stay home? Aren't you a little sore and sorry for yourself because YOU haven't been able to dominate HIM?

Think all this over, Helen. Find out what has caused this unhappiness and trouble and set about to cure it.

HOME! The first thing to do—IS TO MAKE UP YOUR MIND THAT YOU WILL STAY HOME! ALONE Then keep yourself busy while you are alone. Gradually you will become so interested in what you are doing that you won't be listening for muffled foot steps on the back stairs.

Sew, study, read, try to get Louise on the new radio. Do anything, BUT KEEP BUSY! You'll get accustomed to being alone without being afraid. You won't have time to think of fear, And when you get used to it—you'll begin to be grateful for the quiet hours by yourself when you can sit alone and relax.

As for nagging Friends Husband—you know what ails you—then STOP IT. Why insist on walking into a puddle when you know the puddle is there! EVEN IF YOU'RE SCARED SICK - BLUE WITH OLD - ROSE TRIMMINGS — DON'T NAG!

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

A chipset pin set in brilliants, the contrast in colors being the latest note in parisian jewelry is suggested as a bridal gift this season.

Hand-knotted fringes in tiers form the skirts of several gowns seen at Dior ritz and crystal fringes are very frequent, and Strass embroidery is less conspicuous on the dance frocks but it is incorporated in many of the formal dinner gowns.

Long hair in the evening and shingled hair in the daytime is the fashion for English society women this season and when necessary, an artificial chignon or band of hair is worn at the back of the head.

Paris reports that lace, moire, taffeta chiffon, and lame are the most seen fabrics for evening, and their coloring is invariably so delicate as to give them an air of fragility, while the vogue for dyed lace is strong and the most exquisite models are seen.

The newest place for a monogram on the English woman's sports jumper is on the upper part of the sleeve, and these garments are also frequently embroidered with representation of the favorite dog of the wearer, all types being represented, from the massive Alsatian to the tiny Pekinese.

Large tulle flowers in the color of the gown are worn in place of the velvet ones formerly exploited, and chiffon buds are gathered into bouquets for the shoulder or corsage, and glass flowers with green glass leaves are a new and favored trimming.

Gray is one of the big three in the color firmament in Paris this summer for tailored suits and dresses and the other two are black and beige, while light weight Kashas, reps and alpacas made into simple two-piece costumes or two-piece costumes in tones of gray are the usual selections of the well-dressed women in Paris, and at the race courses gray is seen in a noticeably large proportion over all other pale tints except beige.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

If a towel is folded into a small square and stuffed into the knee of your stockings you will be very glad by the time all the floors are scrubbed for housecleaning.

Your discarded toothbrush wired on a long stick will get the high fine cobwebs of your radiator quite as satisfactorily as a regular radiator brush and will save you that expense.

A spring clothespin fastened near the front door, is useful when the carrier arrives with the daily newspaper. He can snap it tight to keep the paper from blowing away.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

CHAPTER 13

The Elderly Gallant

When Sybil returned from lunch she found Brady lounging at ease in the comfortable leather chair behind his commodious desk, a cigar between his teeth.

His shrewd eyes followed her as she removed her hat and hung up her smart little jacket. There was distinct approval in his glance, as it wandered from the topmost curl on her dark head to her slim ankles, now clad in silk, and her pretty feet in their shining, high-heeled pumps.

"She's the best looker in town," was his thought. "Wonder where she got the class from?"

He knew what he paid her for taking his letters; he knew, as every one intown knew, that she and her mother were the sole support of the Ross menage. He knew, like all the rest of their small world, the innermost details of the Ross scandal—or scandals.

"She'll go the way of the old man and the boys," he thought, to himself, "if she hasn't already gone it," he added, looking at her speculatively through half-closed lids.

He was comparing her with his wife. Mrs. Brady had called at the office that morning for the housekeeping money which he had forgotten to give her. It was a well-known fact that he doled the dollars out to her grudgingly, and that she had to account for every penny. It was also common knowledge that he was lavish in his own expenditures.

Poor little Mrs. Brady, pretty still in her scared fashion, with her smooth gray hair and her dowdy clothes, had stood beside Sybil as the girl ushered her into the room.

Dan Brady's eyes had appraised her to the merciless light of midday. The girl, in her ruinously youth and flaming young beauty. The tired, sad, dis illusioned, middle-aged wife standing meek, attrighted, before her liege lord.

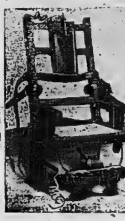

Dan Brady's lips had curled. A bully himself, nevertheless he hated cowardice in others. His wife's very submission challenged him to further outrages. He had tossed her a few bills, as one tosses a crust to a beggar

She went out, fluttering her thanks; and Sybil closed the door behind her and faced her employer. Her cheeks had crimsoned at the sight of the other woman's humiliation; her purple black eyes flashed. She bit her scarlet lip and picked up her notebook. Hot, rebellious words crowded against her lips, but she stilled them, realizing the folly of speech.

But another black mark was charged against the account of Man.

When she returned from lunch and was ready to continue the day's work Brady took his cigar from his mouth and said:

THE DEATH CHAIR

Above is a photograph of the death chair in Sing Sing prison, in which Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder and Henry Judd Gray will be sentenced to expiate their murder of the former's husband.

"I've given you a fairly good trial, Miss Ross. I think you've made good," Miss Fairchild will not be coming back. You can have the job permanently."

Sybil lifted surprised eyes.

"Miss Fairchild is not returning?"

"She's fired!" said Dan Brady, shortly. "Sickly old soul. There's only one thing worse than having women in this office—and that's having old women."

Sybil stared at him silently. There was scorn in her young eyes as they rested on his gray hair, on the network of wrinkles around his shrewd eyes. Dan Brady was not young, she thought.

But he, in his masculine conceit, admitted no such thing. He thought of himself and spoke of himself as "in his prime." He liked to surround him self with young people, particularly young girls. Their presence, their flattering attention over a good dinner, or at a dance at the country club seemed to reassure him that he was right in his opinion of himself. He resented his wife, because her appearance frankly proclaimed her age, and she used no artifice to hide it. Brady was beginning to speak as if she were much older; as if his marriage was one of those unfortunate unions in which a poor boy is caught by the spell of an older woman.

Sybil knew this. She felt additional contempt for him, when she recalled it.

"You will stay, Miss Ross?" he continued, a trifle anxiously, since she didn't reply.

"Oh, yes. I'll stay," smiled Sybil and added carelessly; "Thank you, Mr. Brady."

He lunched forward in his chair and rested his arms on his desk.

"You don't have much fun outside of office hours, do you? What do you say to driving to Bedgan some night for dinner and a show?"

BALL PRACTICES GET UNDER WAY

Work-outs Will Begin In Real Earnest On Monday Night

Several candidates for the intermediate ball team put in an appearance at the exhibition grounds last night and were sent through their paces by Manager "Percy" Mills. Only a light work-out was indulged in and the boys were chasing flies and gradually ironing out the kinks after a winter of inactivity.

Vern Weir and P.W. J." were the only members of the old brigade to join the squad although several more of them who were unable to be present last night will be out next week. Harry Mills and "Wicky" Ross are both anxious to play but are working nights and must miss the practice sessions. Scott and Harper, both of whom are already introduced through their activities with the soft ball teams during the past winter are well known as hard ball players in the former having pastimed with "Joe" Daly's Kingston Ponies and the latter with the Athenaeums of the Hampden Park League, Toronto. Cy Young, "Hoot" Gibson, "Chimney" Gerow and Alex Weir who will play with Point Anne, completed the squad.

Only a little over a week remains in which to get the certificates filed and the management must know who is going to try for a place. No one needs a special invitation as those in charge cannot interview every player personally, and on Monday evening every player should make a strong effort to be on deck.

SAVAGE KING IS NOW MODERNIST IN HIS THOUGHT

Syney, Aus., May 11.—Narakad, chief of a tribe of North Australian savages who until recently believed himself the only monarch in the world, has come to modern ideas kindly now that he has an idea "how the other half lives." The chief wants a white husband for his 16-year-old daughter.

Narakad has commissioned John McLaren, a British explorer, to find a real he-man, blonde or brunette, who is a good fellow and whom the ruler would be willing to take into his family fod as a son in law.

Mr. McLaren was the first man Narakad had ever seen and it was the explorer who disillusioned the chief who rules the Ellice group of islands in the South Pacific, that there were other big chiefs here and there. He also learned that he has better become a devoted member of John Bull's family. The chief thereupon framed peaceful greetings to King George which Mr. McLaren was commissioned to deliver, as well as the appeal for a husband for his daughter.

The women of the gem-like islands, lying near the Equator, are known for their beauty, their lengthy luxurious hair and their clear brown complexions. "Princess Kaia," as the chief's daughter, is considered the most beautiful by the missionaries.

Singing Tobacco-Grower to Feature Festival

1. Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, where Festival will be held. 2. Vincent Perrier de Repentigny. 3. Madame de Repentigny. 4. One of the handicrafts at the Festival.

For more than three-score years Vincent Perrier de Repentigny has been singing. He sings in the morning while he is dressing, he sings while he works, he sings in the evening when he is sitting in the rocking chair by the kitchen stove. In fact, Madame de Repentigny asserts that it is not unusual for her good man to sing in his sleep.

Vincent Perrier de Repentigny, by the way, is one of the best known interpreters of the French Canadian Folksong. He has the largest repertoire—387 songs, some dating back to the sixteenth and seventeenth century, when they were sung in the courts of France and by the fisher folk on the shores of Brittany. Most of these melodies de Repentigny learned from the lips of his mother, who remembered them herself as she sang them at the spinning wheel in the little farmhouse at St. Timothee where de Repentigny spent his youth. Other he learned from the shanty men during the winters he spent in the "woods"—good rollicking songs that were sung hundreds of years ago by the "voyageurs" who explored Canada's rivers and forests in the early days.

De Repentigny comes of a family which stood high at the Court of the French Kings in the 17th century and is a descendant of the famous Madame de Repentigny who was really responsible for the introduction of handicrafts into Canada. When in 1663 the French ship "La Reine" carrying the annual cargo of Paris fancy goods for the Ladies of Quebec was captured in the high seas by the British, and these ladies saw themselves faced by the prospect of isolation for an indefinite time from the supply of new clothes, Madame de Repentigny, the social leader of the time, set the farmers at once to the sowing of flax and the breeding of sheep, and the women to the spinning of thread and the weaving of cloth.

De Repentigny's skill as an entertainer is so well known as he well-known in the French population of the Province, and he is often in demand at social affairs as he will during the winters he spend in the his farm in Rigaud—a country long enough to take part in the Canadian Handicraft and Folksong Festival which is being held at the Chateau Frontenac in Quebec from May 20 to 22.

De Repentigny began life as a farmer and intends to spend the remainder of his days growing "Tabac Canadien"; but he has tried his hand at many things. He has spent several winters in the bush; for some time he was purser on a great lake freighter; he has been a tailor, and is still the owner of a restaurant in Rimouski. Yet he is a true "habitant" and there is nothing that appeals to him so much as a cosy little farm house somewhere in his native county, and a few good acres of healthy, tobacco.

This big-hearted jolly fellow who has a smile and a handshake for everyone carries his sixty-nine year lightly. His voice is as strong as it was when he was a young man; his step is light. De Repentigny's grandfather lived to the great age of 96, his father was hale and hearty at 90, and his Repentigny blood expects to live to at least a hundred many times longer, and give many pounds of good tabac before it dies.

ZAHAROFF BETS HIS DIGESTION CAN'T BE CURED

Monte Carlo, Monaco, May 3.—Sir Basil Zaharoff, once part owner of the Monte Carlo Casino, has the biggest gamble of his career on his hands.

He is betting $200 a day with medical specialists that they cannot bring his digestive organs back to normal so that he may eat caviage again.

Sir Basil, whom M. Clemenceau once described as the "ninth great European power," is living here on dry toast, milk and fruit juices. It is another strange chapter in the interesting life of the money-king who played a powerful role on the war.

Born in 1853 in the slums of Constantinople, his rise to fame and fortune has been one of the outstanding romances of the post-war Europe. It was because of his power, combined in stocks of arms and ammunitions, that Sir Basil is one of the few men on whose head, dead or alive, Germany set a price during the war.

In 1914 Sir Basil was the leading arms manufacturer in Europe and during the war played an important role as an adviser to Lloyd George, the prime minister of Great Britain, on many political questions.

It was Sir Basil who was credited with bringing Greece into the conflict against Germany.

Then, in 1919, the British government conferred knighthood upon him. Sir Basil now is a citizen of France, but his personal interests are all in Monte Carlo. Some time ago he sold his casino shares to Prince Michael Radziwill.

Sir Basil is under the constant care of nurses. The specialists have hopes, they tell him, that by a stringent diet, he may get back a suggestion of his old time vigor and digestion. But the dieting must be of the most careful order.

The story is told here that recently Sir Basil, his appetite sharpened by a ride along the coast, offered to send an aeroplane to Russia for a fresh supply of caviare, with a $100 bonus for every pound produced. The specialists informed their patient, bluntly, that a meal of rich food would be his last.

Robin Redbreast and the C.P.R.

"Robin Redbreast" evidently likes railways, for he has built his nest on the top of the C.P.R. Train Bulletin Board at Meadowvale station, a small village about twelve miles from Toronto. It is easily within reach of any passing traveller and not more than ten feet from passing trains, but Robin knows his home is not going to be molested and when his brood is reared there will be another family that will feel that Canadian Pacific is synonymous with safety and good treatment.

FUAD OF EGYPT TO PAY GEORGE ROMANTIC VISIT

London, May 4. (C.P.)—King Fuad, of Egypt will visit King George at Buckingham Palace in July, staying with his Majesty for three days after arriving on July 4. He will visit Bolton, Lancashire, for the celebrations of the centenary of the death of Samuel Crompton, and behind this visit is a real touch of romance. The Egyptian King is going to the real cotton manufacturing centre to honor the memory of a poor inventor, dead 100 years who revolutionized the cotton industry, made fortunes possible for countless other people, and helped the forward march of the Egyptia ncotton fields. Crompton's invention was the spinning mule.

Bolton is making plans for an impressive centenary, and King Fuad will attend the celebrations on behalf of Egypt.

Most of the cotton grown in Egypt finds its way to the Bolton mills, and when the International Cotton Congress was held in Cairo last January the King of Egypt was invited to visit the Lancashire town so vitally associated with Egyptian cotton. King Fuad was proclaimed king of Egypt in 1922, when the Protectorate terminated. Before that he was Sultan. At one time fear of the assasin's bullet kept him virtually a prisoner in his palace.

It is claimed that practically every pound of cotton now grown in Egypt finds its way into the Bolton mills. The production of those mills goes out to all parts of the world. It is estimated that the home market requirements can be satisfied by the running of all the Bolton mills for two days a week, the rest of the week's production being exported.

Apart from the 120 mills engaged in spinning—Swan-lane is the largest spinning mill in the world—some 70 firms are at work on the manufacture of cotton fabrics, including every class of weaving known to the trade.

COMMONS NEED TO BE SINGERS

London, May 3.—Members of the House of Commons who can't sing are at a disadvantage.

Politicians can no longer get by many of their constituents on lengthy speeches on the coal situation and the land problem. Crowds, which desert the cinema to hear a spellbinder, demand entertainment.

While the voters do not actually level guns at the feet of the spellbinders and shout "Sing, sing," they do almost as bad.

After the speaker has had a little fling on political problems the crowd at provincial gatherings begin to clamor for a song. It used to be that politicians took their wives or daughter or paid entertainers with them to sing. But that doesn't go anymore. The British like to hear politicians try to sing. They have learned this from the Welsh, whose politicians can all sing, and sing pretty well.

Even Lloyd George is not above breaking into song, and the Labor M. P.'s from Wales are many of them so good their octette has been offered professional engagements in the music halls.

Crowds even specify the song they want their parliamentarians to sing. "The Froth Blowers' Anthem" is now the reigning favorite.

Candidates and House members of all parties are taking singing lessons in an effort to meet extraordinary demand on the part of the voters.

Sir Austen Chamberlain has not yet broken into song, but Sir Harry Gritain, Conservative member for Acton, often sings "John Peel" to the delight of his political gatherings.

British political gatherings are not the sober, reserved affairs that Britishers might be expected to stage. Men and women of all parties join in the heckling. But there is good humor behind the confusion. The meetings usually end with a merry sing-around which puts even the Socialists into such good humor that they join in singing "God Save the King."

CREASES DOWN FRONT OF PANTS

London, May 3.—Canadian Press.—Some respectful curiosity has been aroused at the fact that King George, when appearing at ceremonial civic functions, maintains the custom which King Edward imitated of wearing the crease in his trousers at the side. This is really defiance of sartorial convention, but His Majesty has never attempted to lead the fashion in men's apparel, unlike Edward, especially when the latter was Prince of Wales. The present Prince of Wales has never attempted to give the lead to the dandies of London.

Her Majesty the Queen, too, is obviously unwilling for her own style of wear to be followed to any general extent. Her dress is never more than three inches from the ground, while any woman attempting to follow her Majesty's style of hat—for years, it has been a toque—would be considered hopelessly out of fashion.

THE FOURSOME SET

CANADIAN PRAISES TWO VOLUME BOOK

Montreal, Que., May 6.—W. D. Lighthall, the Canadian literateur, praises highly a book just issued in two volumes. It is an enlargement of "True Stories of New England Captives," the book published by the late Miss C. Alice Baker in 1897 in association with Miss Coleman, recording their researches in the archives of the province of Quebec and the state of New Zealand on the same subject. "The facts they relate are much more terrible and pathetic," he says, "than those of the expulsion of the Acadians, with which they have a certain connection. To take some typical examples: In Hertel's attack on Salmon Falls of 1689 Mrs. Menitabel Goodwin lost her father and was carried off to Canada by Abenakis. She had a cruel master, who was disturbed by the wailing of her young baby. To quiet the child she would sit for hours in the snow far from the fire but the Indian, impatient of her slow progress, snatched it from her arms and killed it.

"One mother was led for five weeks through the snow, during two of which the snowshoes were taken away from her, yet she must go every step of the way above the knee in the snow. At one place, with the snow beneath her and the heavens above, in a rainy season, she gave birth to her fourth child. She was then put to hard work and the savages would place themselves with ensnine hot embers into the mouth of the child, so that it starved and died.... after they gained the child's forehead with their knives. 'No wonder that after being redeemed she shot and killed the leader of the next war party who attacked her home. Many times the captives were roasted to death and eaten. In many cases, however, it is to the credit of the Indians that they respected women, having a superstition that they possessed mystic power.

YANKEES CLOUT SAM JONES HARD

Chisox Come From Behind To Stage Rally and Trim Senators

St. Louis, Mo., May 13.—The Yankees' happy little junket through the western ardent went on apace yesterday afternoon when the champions bore down on Sad Samuel Jones and beat the Browns, 4 to 3, making the tabulation five of a possible six in the west.

The alleged melancholy Samuel, who, presumably, is called Sad Sam because he is one of our most genial athletes, struck out eight of the foe, including Combs, Koenig and Herman Ruth in the first inning, but the Yanks crashed him for two runs in the fourth and the same dose in the fifth.

Mr. H. Pennock, being the pitcher that he is, four runs were just enough. The days when Herbert needs more than four tallies are as scarce as pennants in St. Louis, than which there is nothing scarcer. The stylish southpaw went along with a serene soul and a bland countenance, except in those few moments in the seventh and eighth when the Brown ampoy ed him considerably.

Batting Gray from the box in the fourth inning, the Tigers took the third game of the series from the Athletics at Detroit, 9 to 7. W. Collins who pitched for Detroit, was credited with his fourth victory in as many starts although he did not finish the game. He was removed in the ninth inning when the Athletics threatened to overcome his Tiger lead and Kenneth Holloway finished the game.

The White Sox ran their winning streak to four straight by taking the third in a row from Washington at Chicago, 8 to 4. After Judge's home run with two on in the first inning had given the visitors the lead, the White Sox played an uphill battle, bunching their hits and winning out in the eighth inning when Clancy drove Hunnefield home

The Boston-Cleveland game succumbed to rain.

DOUTHIT'S ERROR PROVES COSTLY

Vance Pitches Brilliantly and Dubins Defeat Cincinnati

New York, May 13.—The Giants struggled grimly to beat the Cardinals at the Polo Grounds yesterday. Through the normal nine innings they made sizzling stops and whistling throws to stop the St. Louis express as it rumbled on. Through two hours of baseball they hammered Grover Alexander for thirteen safe hits without success. In desperation Manager McGraw pulled Burleigh Grimes out of the box for a pinch-hitter while the mad man ct Minerva was pitching gallantly.

But it was just a lot of wasted energy. All the Giants needed was patience; the patience to sit back and wait, for in the eleventh inning, after twilight had cast its shadows over the field, the game was presented to New York mercifully and without ceremony.

That error gave the Giants a 3 to 2 victory and ended a battle worthy of the present pennant champions, and their most likely successors, if any. It was what the Giants would call "a nice game to win." But a nice game to win is always a tough game to lose for some one. One misplay made the difference.

Percy Lesueur, one of professional hockey's best-known veterans, has felt the urge to move again, being prompted, no doubt by a hankering after Percy has left the Windsor Hockey Club and his post as manager of the Windsor arena to take over the management of the Detroit Hockey club, and it appears that both the Detroit club and Percy will benefit greatly. Percy has demonstrated that he knows how to run any man's hockey team and Detroit may pick up considerable prestige when at the helm.

Considerable mention has been made of Hillcrests, one of Toronto's best-known amateur ball clubs jumping to the salaried ranks. Jack Dunn, former manager of the club, is back in the Queen city, and it is claimed the club could get Babe Dye, Lionel Conacher, Billy Burch, Roy worters, Duke Hennessey, Jess Spring, Harold Cotsir, Andy Kyle Uete Irwin and Joe Miller, of Ottawa. With such a squad, the club would be in a position to give battle to Oslers, their old rivals.

At Philadelphia, Chicago bunched hits off Scott in the second and fifth innings to win 4 to 1. A homer by Stephenson in the fifth inning gave the Cubs their fifth circuit clout in three days and scored two runs. Johnny Wilson, the captain of the Phillies, was put out of the game by Umpire Harrison for disputing a decision in the second inning.

Dazzy Vance was all-round star at Brooklyn yesterday as the Robins made it two straight over Cincinnati by 6 to 5. Vance fanned five batters, limited the reds to four hits and led the Brooklyn attack with three singles and a double in four trips to the plate.

Pittsburgh moved out the Braves at Boston, 8 to 7, a two-run rally in the eighth overcoming a nine-run margin piled up by Boston in their seventh inning. In the seventh the Braves made five runs knocking Aldridge out of the box. Bancroft and Wrenn, rival shortstops, had a brilliant day.

TORONTO DROPS TO 4TH PLACE

Rochester Steps Into Lead By Taking Double-Header

Toronto, May 13.—Baltimore defeated Toronto 3 to 2 here yesterday to take the four-game series three to one. Joe Maley and Henderson engaged in a brilliant pitching duel, the Toronto twirler being unfortunate to have the Orioles bunch a double by Porter, a single by Brower and Scott's homer for three runs in the fourth inning, after Heath had put the Leafs two up with a home run with Harrington on base in the second. Scott and Lamotte starred in the field.

The Colts went into first place in the International League by defeating Jersey City in both ends of a double-header at Rochester by scores of 12 to 8 and 4 to 1. The two wins made it seven straight for the Tribe. Herb Thormahlen won his first game of the season when he held Jersey City to four hits and one run in the second game, which was abbreviated to seven innings.

The Bisons toppled Al Mamaux, Newark pitching ace, from the mound, and won the first game at Buffalo from the Bears, 7 to 3, but lost a chance to tie for first place by dropping the second in a tight finish by a 3 to 2 count. The Bisons outhit the Bears almost two to one in the second, but could not bunch their blows off Howard, just acquired by Newark from the Milwaukee club.

The stars climbed into the .500 group in the percentage table today by winning their second consecutive double-header from the Reading Keys. Johnson scored his third victory of the year, winning the first game 7 to 1, and Allyn Stout achieved his second victory in the second which ended 4 to 1.

Pennsylvania has ninety-nine game leagues, and the state game commission hopes to increase the number to 200.

CELEBRATION PLANS ARE LEFT IN HANDS OF CIVIC BODIES

Court Official Opens Attack on Drunken Drivers --- Foggy Atlantic Hampers Start of Flight

JUBILEE PROGRAM IS UNDECIDED AT PUBLIC MEETING

Proposed Celebration Creates Little Enthusiasm Among Citizens

MEET NEXT THURSDAY

Seek Co-operation of Service Clubs and Civic Bodies

The Diamond Jubilee celebration will be left to the Board of Education, Rotary, Kiwanis, Council Canadian Legion and other similar civic organizations in the city. This was the decision reached after some short discussion on the subject at the banquet held by the Agricultural Society in the Queen's Hotel last evening.

The meeting was scheduled for the City Hall but only a mere handful turned up and it was held jointly with the Fair Board.

Ald. A. B. Collins was appointed as a committee to call the meeting for next week and he announced that on Thursday night next the problem will be solved in a get-together in the Council Chamber.

Very little enthusiasm has been shown thus far and should a celebration be arranged it fill lonly be on a small scale with the chief interest centering around a presentation of a historic the school children and a flag raising.

Magistrate Mikel was appointed temporary chairman of the meeting and T. J. P. Power outlined the program as proposed by the Government. It would consist of a parade of school children, presentation of medals and a flag-raising.

Literature has already been distributed in the schools touching chiefly on Canada's National life. A community dance and a night performance were other things suggested. The money to finance the celebration must be raised either by the Municipality, public subscriptions of the gate receipts.

Ald. A. B. Collins representing the city said that he was heartily in favor of a substantial grant as he felt that the city should had stood up well at the U. E. L. festivities should not fall down now.

Charles Hanna opined that the program should be arranged in connection with the Fall Fair as he felt the citizens were not sufficiently restored to the project to attempt anything on July 1st. Harry Cressman said he favored Mr. Hanna's proposal.

Chairman Mikel felt that a formal recognition should mark Dominion Day with possibly something bigger later on.

Mr. Collins.in making his motion to leaving it to those more closely in touch with the children to decide, stated that in his opinion the proposed affair should not include horse races or midways as these did not embrace the true spirit of the anniversary of Confederation.

Members of every civic organization are urged to reserve next Thursday as this is one of the most important events in Canada's history.

KIDDIES' CAMP COMM. CHOSEN

At an enthusiastic meeting of the Kiddies Camp Committee held in the Y. M. C. A. committee room on Tuesday afternoon, formal plans were completed for the construction of a camp on the bay shore at Redmersville four miles from this city. The site is a beautiful one containing about two acres in what is known as Bill's grove. The site, building and equipments required for this year will cost approximately $2300 or and this money will be raised by public subscription. The camp will be open to all under privileged children from 8 to 12 years of age. It is the intention to open the camp on Dominion Day and the name chosen is that of Jubilee Fresh Air Camp. Several names were added to the committee and it is now constituted as follows with power to add.

Mrs. A. C. McPee, Miss Harris, Messrs. W. H. Merry, T. D. Ruston, H. H. Ketcheson, H. W. Ketcheson, Chas. Hanna, Rev. Moncrief, Sam Curry, Andy Davy, Ald. A. B. Collins and the president of the Rotary, Kiwanis and Y's Men's Club. Another meeting to select officers and complete plans will be held next week.

WEATHER SPOILS FLIERS' CHANCES OF 'TAKING OFF'

Weather Bureau Reports No Possibility of Improved Conditions

BOTH WAITING

Commander Byrd in Charge of Wannamaker Plane "America"

New York, N.Y., May 14.—Poor and thick weather around up the latter part of the Atlantic Ocean last night and spoiled chances of any one of the three New York to Paris aeroplanes taking off today.

The weather bureau reported there were no signs of clearing and prediction at Curtiss and Roosevelt Fields that nobody would take the air in the 3,800 mile flight within forty-eight hours.

Captain Charles Lindbergh, of "Spirit of St. Louis" and Clarence Chamberlin and Lloyd Bertaud, of the Bellanca Plane "Columbia" are both ready to start when conditions are favorable. Their delay owing to weather conditions seems to be giving Commander Richard Byrd, North Pole flyer, an even start with the other two contenders for the great adventure. Byrd is in charge of the Wangamaker plane "America." United States army officers received assurance of aid from the shipping board and coast guard. Three coast guard planes have been asked to escort the fliers out of United States territory.

KING'S BIRTHDAY BIG DAY HERE

Agricultural Society Arranges For Horse Races and Soft Ball

The Agricultural Society is arranging a fine day of sport for the Third of June and preliminary plans were discussed at last night's banquet in the Queen's Hotel. Some of the finest race horses in this district will be here and the speed contests of which there will be four classes.

A soft-ball tournament embracing the three teams in the Bay of Quinte League and possibly a Kingston team will be one of the features. Two beautiful silver cups will be given to the clubs gaining top place in finals.

These games will be played with each club drawing lots and the losers in the last two contests dropping out and the winners, stacking up in the finals.

Other attraction has already been widely advertised throughout the country and indications point to a record breaking attendance. With these two main features and other smaller sports and events it is drawn up as a real King's Birthday celebration. The Argyle and Light Infantry band will be in attendance.

COLD WEATHER DETERS THE HATCHING OF TINY CHICKS

Eggs sold at 3 1-1 cents each 27 cents a dozen a newly hatched chick at 11 cents each while the finished product at 25 cents—these figures are total ready for the oven brought $1.25 at the market this morning. Facts as to the prices received by farmers advised their customers to get them back at right away as they are probably now the cheapest they will be. Hatched chicks are scarce as the cold weather has proved hard on the species of nothing, but few warm days will help but if it comes soon enough. Very few fowl are being killed for the market consequently the prices keep high.

While last week potatoes were very scarce this morning every other box seemed to be piled high with them and the price remained the same as last week $2 a bag. Apples are pretty well gone but a few still are to be found. Green stuff was plentiful and asparagus at the market this morning selling at 15 cents a bunch, 2 for 25 cents. Rhubarb sold at 5c and the 3 bunches and onions and lettuce at 5 cents a bunch. Fall vegetables sold at 30 cents a peck.

Home trunk loads of plants were brought in and Toronto plants brought 10 cents a dozen or boxes of nine, sold at 2 for 25 cents. Canterbery bells sold at 10 cents a root and raspberry

CROWN ATTORNEY WANTS DRUNKEN DRIVERS JAILED

Insists That All Offenders Be Treated In Equal Manner

LAID OVER AGAIN

Wm. Gilbert Case Arouses Ire of Prosecuting Counsel

William Gilbert, junior, once again was remanded in Police Court this morning, for one week, for the purpose of preparing a stated case. The whole case rests upon whether Magistrate Mikel had the power to suspend sentence or whether he has not.

"I want fairness in these cases," the Crown Attorney, Mr. Bryson Donnan, said, "Just last week, Phillip Foster, charged with exactly the same offense was sentenced to serve one week in jail, and is there now. Why should this man be treated differently? I submit that your worship has no power to suspend sentence whatsoever. The counsel for the defense is merely playing for time," continued the Crown Attorney. "He has had this case laid over again and again. Under the new law coming into force, there will be many cases of this nature appearing before the court and we may as well get to the bottom of the case right now. The conduct for the defence wants to delay the case."

"I say, your worship, that if this man is given a suspended sentence, then in every case of a similar nature, in which there are no mitigating circumstances, the Crown will request a suspended sentence."

Magistrate Willing

Mr. Payne, Gilbert's lawyer, claimed that Magistrate Mikel did have the power to suspend sentence under the act. He stated that Gilbert had no previous criminal convictions against him, saying that one drunk conviction was not a criminal offense, but an offense under the Ontario Temperance Act.

Magistrate Mikel said that he would like to give Gilbert a suspended sentence, but that he did not see his way clear to do same.

Mr. Donnan asked for further enlargements after Saturday next, as it the case was kept on being laid off, that Mr. Payne, counsel for the defence kept on delaying the case, he would place the entire matter in the hands of the Attorney-General's office.

"A case of a similar nature was laid over again and again for one year," stated the Crown Attorney, "but I am not going to have anything like that happen in this case."

HOPES DWINDLE DAILY FOR LOST FRENCH ACES

New York, N.Y., May 14.—Conflicting theories and vague reports today kept alive the rapidly dwindling hope for the safety of Captain's Nungesser and Coli.

The fifth day in which the famous French air aces were overdue in their 2000 mile flight from Paris to New York saw slight strengthening of the belief that the aviators may be lost in fore.

FINE PROSPECTS FOR LOCAL FAIR

Agricultural Society Meets In Glenn's Hotel To Discuss Problems

Jollity, and lots of it featured the annual Agricultural Banquet held in the Queen' Hotel last night. Nearly forty agriculturists and guests assembled around the festive board a few minutes after seven o'clock and from then on the affair was one continual gale of laughter and good time, with the Sergeant-at-arms funny members every few minutes for some infraction of the law, or for no infraction at all.

The main feature of the evening was tryung to decide which of two sides can explained by President George Ostrom the other by Vice President Charles Hanna, would get the most laughs, the loser being the side that sold the least tickets for membership in the Society. The best salesmen in this competition were Wesley Grey, 51; W. Vallins, 51, and Charlie Hanna 49. President Ostrom's side was declared the winner by a small margin, but Charlie claimed that some of his men had not yet reported and they would no doubt bring his total up to better than the President's.

Many Adresses

After the feature was finished many of the members were heard from. Ald. Anstey, Cecil Ostrom, Alderman A. H. Collins, representatives of the Sheriff, Charlie Hanna, Robert Caulfield, Mayor Inte Mikel, Mr. H. Stock, Mr. Dick Ketcheson and representatives from the counties of Sydney, Thurlow and Ameliasburg were all heard from. President George welcomed the newspapermen and replained the competition and what it was for. Charlie Hanna claimed that he was going to beat President George's side out of the banquet. The three representatives all gave short addresses and Magistrate Mikel gave a worthy address replete with humour and funny anecdotes.

The secretary, Mr. Dick Ketcheson had a few words to say to the agriculturists and Mr. Henry Stock, treasurer also spoke for a short time. Mr. A. B. Collins on behalf of the Mayor extended a hearty welcome to the delegates and stated that he believed that with the help of the Agricultural Society the Belleville Fair would be the best in Eastern Ontario. All speakers seemed inclined to believe that Belleville on one day will be able to boast one of the best fairs east of Toronto.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

The mind of the scholar, if you would have it large and liberal, should come in contact with other minds.

LONGFELLOW.

HOME-TOWN SPIRIT

It involves some expenditure of time and money to keep the outsides of our houses painted and in good repair and our gardens and back-lanes in neat and clean condition. But it also costs money not to paint and clean up, and in the long run it costs more than to do it. Which is the point that our annual clean-up campaign is endeavoring to drive home.

"The apparel," said Polonius "oft proclaims the man." So does the appearance of houses and gardens proclaim the existence or otherwise of civic pride and spirit. In a moment the visitor knows that where lanes are littered with rubbish, where gardens are uncared for and where the paint on houses is but a ghost of its former glory, that civic life in that community is also down at the heel.

When people begin to take pride in the appearance of their city the first step towards the development of the real home-town spirit has been made. It is not long before people begin to realize that it is a privilege to belong to such a community and have a share in its hopes and enterprises.

WHO WON THE WAR

"When the artillery started you could not get a Frenchman to stick his head out of the dugouts and underground tunnels,' a German officer told me; 'but as soon as the Americans arrived, they would crane their necks over the parapets and scan the field, ready to fight.'

"The first Americans who came as advance men, were put into French uniforms, but their eagerness betrayed them. The Germans knew they were not French; they were Americans straining toward battle."

The above from Liberty, published in Chicago, and which has nearly a million subscribers. One scarcely knows what to say about it, except that it perhaps helps to explain the Dayton 'monkey trial' and Aimee Semple McPherson.

COSTLY DRAIN

The export of Canada's raw materials, to be made up into finished products abroad, is felt to be one of the greatest grievances the country suffers from. Why should not this wonderful natural heritage of ours be developed within the country, it is asked, for the benefit of Canadian workers and the improvement of national revenues? Proper planning on an adequate scale would ensure this being done. There is another serious leakage which is closely connected with the matter and is, perhaps, an even more regrettable drain on our natural resources, and that is the migration of trained Canadian intellects—the specialists, the experts of all kinds, the university graduates, the men and women of outstanding knowledge and ability. If these could be retained in greater number for the service of Canada, instead of going elsewhere to increase the competition of powerful rivals, it would obviously be a most desirable thing. It would too, tend to stem the outflow of raw materials by bringing knowledge and skill to bear on the problem of their utilization. Greater opportunities for the exercise of the talents of young Canadians must be provided, and one way of providing them would through the increased encouragement of scientific research. There are numerous problems demanding attention and it is certain that it would prove to be an excellent investment to put these young graduates to work on their solution. Much money has been spent on educating Canadian citizens in the universities, and it is ironical that the result of such expenditure should be to enrich other lands. There is need of a follow-up process, which would retain the relatively few trained young men and women.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Teacher—"Why is it wrong if I say 'I have went?'"

Bright Boy—"Because you ain't went yet!"

"Pa, what is a rare volume?" asked Clarence.

"It is a book that comes back after you have loaned it," replied Pa.

"And if I give you a piece of pie you won't return, will you?"

"Well, madam, you know your pie better than I do."

"Say, what's the new maid's name?"

"Marcelle."

"Do you think she'll be permanent."

THE PLOWMAN

The delicate green trees stand up
There by the fenced ways;
One or two are crimson-tipped
And soon will start to blaze.

The plowman follows, as of yore,
Along the furrows cold,
Homeric shape against the boughs;
Sharp is the air with mold.

Oh, new days, yet long known and old!
Lo, as we look about,
This immemorial act of faith,
That takes the heart from doubt!

Kingdoms decay and creeds are not.
Yet still the plowman goes
Down the spring fields, as he may make
Ready for him that sows.

Drive the car that established 10 world records—

5000 miles in less than 5000 minutes!

The COMMANDER

A STUDEBAKER BIG SIX

Only by owning a Commander can you avoid taking Commander dust on hills and highways

FROM one Coast to the other, The Commander is smashing records of speed, records of hill climbing, and records of sales!

5000 Miles in Less Than 5000 Minutes

In a recent sensational test at Culver City, California, under the auspices of the American Automobile Association, Harry Hartz and three other noted pilots drove The Commander—a strictly stock, fully-equipped enclosed car—5000 miles in 4909 minutes, total elapsed time, establishing ten new world records!

This is better than mile-a-minute speed for 81 consecutive hours and 49 minutes—the fastest speed for the farthest distance ever attained by any stock car!

It is equivalent in stress and strain to 25,000 miles of ordinary driving. Yet in establishing this and nine intervening world records, the only mechanical repairs necessary on The Commander were three grease cups (damaged in hasty greasing), and one spark plug.

The Commander Out-climbs All Other Cars

In Toronto, on April 26th, a stock model Commander Sedan carried seven passengers up Pellatt's Hill in 30 seconds! Though the grade is 10% and the rough road surface was wet, this powerful Big Six motor carried 1219 pounds one-tenth of a mile to the top in high gear! Then from a standing start in high gear, The Commander carried two passengers, weighing 370 pounds, over the crest in exactly 26.7 seconds!

As an additional test of the abundant power of this quiet Studebaker, seven men were again carried up the hill at slow speed in high gear—the shifting lever was not touched nor the clutch slipped. Starting at the bottom at a speed of only 10 miles per hour, the stout-hearted engine hung on doggedly, going over the top at 9 miles per hour! This slow speed in high gear, up a 10% grade with 1219 pounds of passengers.

These tests were made with a strictly stock Studebaker Sedan under the observation and timing of W. B. Hastings, Manager of Tests and Contests, Ontario Motor League and Canadian Automobile Association.

In Montreal, Too

In Montreal, on April 19th, a Studebaker Commander Sedan climbed the mile-long Mount Pleasant Avenue and Belvedere Road in 2 minutes, 26½ seconds! While accomplishing this feat the car carried two passengers, weighing 358 pounds, up an elevation of 433 feet!

Another Montreal test was on a 17% grade up Clarke Avenue, Westmount, near the famous ski jump. Here The Commander started in high at 23 miles per hour and climbed to the top at a speed of 15 miles per hour. Gears were not shifted, nor was the clutch slipped on this strictly stock Commander—yet it conquered a 17% grade in high.

T. C. Kirby, General Manager Montreal Motorists League, timed and observed these strenuous tests.

Such performance on hills is merely a dramatic demonstration of the smooth flow of abundant power built into every Studebaker by Canadian workmen.

What These Records Mean to You

You probably will never need mile-a-minute speed for 5000 miles—you may never want to enter a hill-climbing contest. But these remarkable records are proof of what we have demonstrated time and again on Studebaker's 800-acre Proving Ground—that The Commander in every phase of every-day driving will outperform and outlive any other car, six or eight, selling for less than $3500.

Drive The Commander Yourself

The best evidence for you of the thrilling performance of The Commander is what the car will do in your own hands. Get behind the wheel of a Commander as our guest, without strings or obligation. Learn for yourself why the Studebaker Big Six now far out-sells the combined totals of all other cars in the world of equal or greater rated horsepower.

The Commander's ease of handling, comfort and custom beauty, are a revelation in motor car luxury at a One-Profit price. 'Phone us now and take command of The Commander today!

Harry Hartz wired after setting 10 world records in The Commander:

"Based on my experience driving my personal Studebaker Commander and in making the recent record run at Culver City, Speedway with a Studebaker Commander strictly stock model, it is my opinion that it will maintain any given speed, up to sixty-five miles per hour, longer, more smoothly, and at less expense per hour traveled, for gasoline, oil and repairs, than any other stock automobile now being built."

Prices of The Studebaker Commander:

Commander Sedan, 5000; Commander Victoria, 5000; Brougham, 5180; Coupe, 5195; Commander Coupe, 5200; Custom-built sedan, 5000.

Other Studebaker models from 1070 to 3000. Explosive for models, 1800 and 2000.

ENTERTAINED AT PICTON

One hundred members of Christ Church A. Y. P. A. and sixty from St. Thomas' were guests of the A. Y. P. A. at St. Mary Magdalene Church, Picton, last night and a very happy and successful evening was spent by all present. The young people motored to Picton early in the evening and the members from Christ Church put on the programme which was very clever and well received. In this Helen Simmons, Kate Bearr, Jennie Adams, Fred Croft, Marion Mouck, Lillian Parry, Robina Montague and Ruth Twining presented a charming one act play. Miss Eleanor Osa gave a clever recitation and ten boys of the Church presented "The Review of 1927" which proved a great success. Rev. John Lyons, Rev. C. R. Clarke and Rev. Mr. Winters, rector of St. Mary Magdalene Church, each gave brief addresses commenting upon the asset the A. Y. P. A. is to the Church. Dainty refreshments served by the Picton Young People concluded the happy evening.

SMALL PERCENTAGE FOUND TUBERCULAR

The squad of veterinary surgeons are still busily engaged in completing a test of the cattle in Prince Edward County to weed out the tubercular species.

On the average embracing the whole County, only two and one-half percent have been lost, according to one prominent farmer. The Dominion Abattoir at Ameliasburg where Dr Wallace of Norwich is conducting the Government test, approximately 4 per cent. of the cattle have been declared to be of tubercular breed. These will be shipped to Toronto for the abbatoir where the meat is inspected and declared unfit or fit for human consumption.

The farmers suffering the loss in this respect are reimbursed by the Government to the extent of approximately two-thirds of the value of the animals.

Dr. Reid of this city is the Government supervisor for this district.

The test will continue for some days.

Mistakes Mothers Make In Care Of Little Ones

Many mothers give their children solid foods at too early an age and say proudly that their babies "eat everything that grown-up people do." There is scarce a single error to bring on indigestion and lay the foundation of much illhealth for the little one.

Other mothers administer harsh, nauseating purgatives which in reality irritate and injure the delicate stomach and bowels and at the same time cause the children to dread all medicine.

Absolutely no meat should be given to a child until it reaches the age of 18 months, and then only if approved by the doctor. For medicine, all strong, disagreeable oils and purgatives should be abandoned and Baby's Own Tablets given instead.

Baby's Own Tablets are especially made, for little ones. They are pleasant to take and can be given with absolute safety to even the new-born babe. They quickly banish constipation and indigestion, break up colds and simple fevers and make the cutting of teeth easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MISSION CLOSES WITH EXHIBITION

With the building crowded and happy little spectators lining the walls intent on hearing every word of every recitation and song by small brothers and sisters, the City Mission, Dundas Street, Sewing Circle closed for the season after the exhibition of really splendidly made little garments, in which all the children proved most interesting to all who attended.

Miss Tweedale, superintendent of the Circle, Miss Reeves, Mrs. Merry, Mrs. Yondale, Miss Mason, Miss Maitland and Mrs. Bensmoore who have painstakingly taught the little people were just pleased to exhibit the hand work of the little ones ranging from neatly stitched handkerchiefs to sweet dresses for dolls and pastel dresses. The children whose mothers are all interested in sewing, too busy in many cases to spare time to teach the children the art of sewing, had been taught by the kindly ladies in charge to thread a needle, take the first stitch, which is here usually gradually progressive until the more advanced are not quite equipped to do any plain sewing for themselves, while some of them can now embroider daisy little designs in colored silk.

REV. D.C. RAMSAY TALKS TO Y'S MEN

Local Club Will Present Charter To Peterboro Next Thursday

Rev. D. C. Ramsay gave a fine talk to the members of the Y's Men's Club at their weekly luncheon last evening on "Canadian Citizenship."

"Patriotism is an old sort of thing," he said" Stevenson said it is the most inevitable of human feelings and if you have noticed you will find that people in different parts of Canada are often somewhat estranged to each other."

He spoke of the somewhat distant feeling between the French and English speaking elements in the Dominion.

"People in the separate parts of Canada have their own ideas, their own customs but that feeling of loyalty must be cultivated because it is the basis of all great national life." The speaker referred to Canada's many great national resources and said these are only units which may be used in building up our great nation."

Continuing Mr. Ramsay observed that it is easier to be patriotic to an old country than a young one and Canada is merely a baby compared to some of the other great nations which have been flourishing for hundreds of years.

"We owe a great real to the sacrifice of our forefathers but at the same time the success of Canada lies in the future and not in the past. He spoke of the diversities of the races in Canada with approximately 62 per cent. Anglo-Saxons, 26 per cent. French-Canadians with the remaining 12 per cent. the foreign element that has settled in.

Mr. Ramsay made mention of Canada's vast territory with many mils. unpopulated and the great possibilities for extension.

"The Maritimes, especially, Nova Scotia, has not been entirely satisfied since Confederation and in more ways than one they have been justified in their contention and it is only fair that the other Provinces should do all in their power to make the people there satisfied." Mr. Ramsay declared that the builders of the transportation system should be listed as among the real upbuilders of the Dominion. "Loyalty to the nation and to the Empire should take by side and our debt to Britain can never be estimated." The speaker stated that it is not the protection it has given us but the ideals and traditions that have been handed down as a heritage. "We will be her true children only in the way in which we treat those existing the common ideals that unites great countries."

In closing Mr. Ramsay defined patriotism not as wanting to attain our own ends but for the Mother Country and for Canada and true citizens of the world." He said that Kipling in his "recessional" had caught the real spirit of patriotism. Dr. Bastedo rendered two solos in his usual fine manner.

The Trip to Peterboro

Newton Thompson outlined the trip to Peterboro next Thursday when the local Y's Men's Club will present the charter to the Peterboro Club. The party will leave Belleville by bus at 3.30. The local organization are sponsoring the Peterboro Club. An orchestra will be taken along and several members will contribute to the entertainment. Y's Men's Officers from Toronto and the district will be present that night and Colonel Sherlock Hoofchester of which the Y's Men's Club is one of the sponsors.

Ralph Mordecai as Sergeant-at-Arms and Art Grose presided at the piano.

CLUBS ARRANGE

A special train will leave Belleville at 7 a.m. and on arrival at Colonsay the pioneers will be transferred to the Lake Ferry which has been chartered, which will dock at Rochester at noon where the Kiwanis and other clubs of the American metropolis will be on hand to entertain the visitors. Flags will be exchanged and after a brief ceremony the pioneers will be taken to wires wherever they please. The special train is scheduled to arrive back in Belleville at midnight. The round trip is $3.35 and the rate is exceedingly low.

For those who wish, lunches will be provided on the boat, and parties may take their lunch baskets along if they desire.

An orchestra will be taken along and dancing may be enjoyed on the boat.

The clubs are working hard for the success of the venture and deserve the co-operation of the citizens generally.

Tickets will be placed on sale at downtown business places a few days previously. Watch for further announcements. It will be known as "Canadian Day" in Rochester.

POOR TRACK FOR KENTUCKY DERBY

Louisville, Ky., May 14.—Promise of fair weather and a fast track for the tens of thousands of spectators and the eighteen racers in the 53rd Kentucky Derby today was marred late yesterday by a heavy rain.

Weather bureau experts had scanned their maps and said there would be some showers yesterday in this part of Kentucky, but that it would be "generally fair" today. Those who remembered the deluge of two years ago—just as the weather bureau had forecast that year—said that the outlook was all that was needed to make today perfect.

Then came the "afternoon showers" preceded by a darkened sky and downpour. Rainfall here high winds and rain. Prior to the rain the track had been declared fast.

Should the rain make the track muddy today chances for one of the Western horses to win the Derby would be considerably improved. Royal Julian is a superior mudder, while Hydrotorl, Rolled Stocking and Fred Jr. have a liking for heavy going.

Kiev, of the eastern horses, seems to crave a muddy track as on his two outs this spring here he has not shown any real class on a fast track. Bostonian of the Whitney stable, and Capa Flow are the other "eastern muddlers." The Derby at a mile and one-quarter will be worth $52,525 net to the winner, if all eighteen start. The second horses will win $5,000, the third $3,000, and the fourth $1,000. The winner also will take down a $5,000 gold cup.

IVANHOE RIDES AGAIN IN DEFENSE OF HIS LADY

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Page the Police! Blondy's all fuss ed up. He's about to buy himself a machine-gun, some brass knuckles, three swords, a sling-shot and other hardware.

His girl's former boy friend actually punched her in the eye. She has just told Blondy all about it. Watch the smoke!

DEAR ELSIE:

I am a young fellow going with a girl who has been going with another young man for a long time. She no longer cares for him and has told him so, but that doesn't keep him from coming to her house and starting an argument with her. He has gone so far as to knock her down. She told me all about it. If he ever does such a thing in my presence I'll fight him, I know, for I couldn't stand for it.

Another thing—the girl has told this fellow to stay out of her house but he does do it. He comes in just like he owned the place. It makes me so mad I see red every time I hear about it, which is most of the time.

I'm nineteen and she is eighteen and I certainly feel that there isn't a thing I wouldn't do for her.

BLONDY.

Yes, Blondy, that's heavy tragedy, all right. And I know you're just bursting to do a fearless hero stunt and grind Former Boy Friend to beefhash. BUT—it's my unconverted opinion, boy, that such heroism is entirely unwarranted. Because it is also my unconsored opinion that the Girl Friend is "stringing" you along with miles of twine.

Ever since Cleopatra rolled an eye at a Roman and gave yards of yarn anent the roughness of her other boy friends, Cleo's sex has had a corner on the string market. That "stringing a fellow" method is one way of getting heavy attention from the Boy Friend.

You know how it is, Blondy. Every time since Adam has had a secret yen to protect his shy violet from the violence of his fellow men, and incidentally prove what a Great Big Wonderful Guy he is himself. Your girl-friend is stimulating this yen because it makes her the leading lady in a darn good show. And you've fallen for her line hard. Pick yourself up, kid, shake off the dust and come up on your feet.

Barnum said there was one born every minute, but gosh son, you don't have to be that ONE.

Grandma didn't, but that's no sign she wouldn't have if she could. If you want to know what we're talking about —read Grandma's letter.

DEAR ELSIE:

I'm a grandmother; have four-teen grandchildren. But I want to tell the world that I think Sir Thomas said a mouthful. Why, shouldn't girls show their silk hosiery? Show as much of it as they want.

Now most of the ladies of my era in history will purse up their wrinkled noses and tell anybody that will give them eye that their granddaughters are going straight to the heated regions just because they show so much stocking.

How shocking to show so much stocking," they sigh.

But you know what really ails them. It's just a case of sour grapes. Believe this grandma when she says that every bustle-totin' one of us would have swapped for joy if we could have done it when we were seventeen. Oh, the baggage I've lugged in my day with my ankles locked in lower my legs, and the streets I've swept clean with long dresses to cover my feet—AND THE TIMES I'VE PATTED MY PRETTY LACE STOCKINGS OR MY PRETTY LEGS AND ALMOST WEPT BECAUSE NOBODY COULD SEE THEM!

GRANDMA.

"Why do I deposit in two Banks?"

"It's just straight business, that's all. Part of my savings I put in the bank around the corner. This account we use freely to get enjoyment out of life, and to meet the payments on our home.

"But it's the other account that puts the backbone into my estate. Immediately I opened this account my 'banker' placed a $10,000 cash bond in a safety vault for me.

"According to the agreement my deposits amount to only 2½% per year but cover interest, principal and all. Should I become totally laid up the 'Bank' pays me $100.00 a month. And when I die my wife gets the whole $10,000 bond in cash just the same.

"I learned of this plan through some of my successful business friends, who finance this way. Some people call it life insurance."

The above illustration simply shows how your plans for yourself and family can be made effective by insurance. Let one of our trained representatives "diagnose" your needs for you.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am asking you for advice before it is too late. I am a pretty girl of eighteen. For three years I have wanted to be a stage or a film actress. I can act and do stage dancing. I am not happy at home. Please advise me. I want to leave home and get a job in the films.

SALLY BLUE EYES.

SALLY BLUE EYES: I must advise you against leaving your home on a slim chance of getting a job in the moving pictures. Many a stage-struck girl has gone to New York or Hollywood, only to find bitter disappointment and starvation at the end of the journey.

Stay at home a little longer. Learn some occupation that will bring you independence and the respect of your family. When you have reached that goal you will be in a better position to face life on your own.

Street tubing is now cast in centrifugal machines, the metal adhering to the whirling mold and thus, assuming the tubiar shape. Lately the plan has been extended to the production of bars.

"Rosamond" is the name of the Nova Scotia champion cow who lately produced 392 pounds of milk in one week which, after deducting 12 quarts of milk and 1-2 of cream for home consumption, churned 20 1-4 pounds of butter.

Twelve years Colchester County Nova Scotia, had no prisoners in its jail. Now the building will be put up for auction.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Biarritz reports a vogue for gold or silver embroidery on white frocks.

London notes that skirts with cuffs are the latest invention of the fashion ful dress designer for tired of pleats, tassels, uneven hems, and the rest of the many ways of finishing off a skirt the very latest idea is to have a turned back cuff, three or four inches wide, and slightly stiffened and lined like a coat cuff, it may even be adorned with buttons and button-holes to match those on the sleeves.

The bridal gown of all lace is one of the most attractive wedding mods.e of the London season, for there are such lovely English laces that this vog ue is definitely approved by the fashionable dress designers of both Paris and London, where tulle is used to con trast the lacy design in some of the new models, and medeival gown with long sleeves, always a favored bridal mode, can be extremely lovely in lace.

Though Paris dressmakers are pushing greys, a fashion authority there writes: "All the soft pastel greys are lovely, but they are chiefly suitable for women who go in for powdered hair, and then grey has always been associated with half-mourning, side by side with mauve, but if you think over this subject for a moment you will realize that heliotrope is much more popular with smart women than mauve, just as pale beige is more popular than grey—in any shade!"

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

"With you?" she asked, coolly.

"Yes."

She shook her head.

"Come," he urged. "It'll be all right. Put that silly mind of my taking a pretty girl out for the evening. There will be no trouble for you in that quarter."

"Then why do you ask me to drive with you? Why don't you take me when there are restaurants and a theatre here in town?" she asked surely.

He had the grace to look a trifle uncomfortable.

"Well——it's——"

She cut across his sentence neatly. "It's nicer for you—isn't that what you mean to say, Mr. Brady? A man of your prominence doesn't permit himself to be seen with Fred Ross daughter in his own town."

"Nonsense!" He strove to hide his dismay at her accurate statement of the circumstances. "You're foolishly sensitive. You're as good as anybody in town."

"I know that quite well, Mr. Brady," she answered calmly. "But other people don't. And I rather think you're one of them."

"Think it over," he urged uncomfortably. "There'll be some good plays in Benham this winter. You'll miss a lot, if you're going to be proud—or fool ish."

"Perhaps I shall be both," she acknowledged, with a smile, and picked up her note-book as a silent hint that she was ready to resume work.

But that evening, thinking over Brady's invitation, she changed her attitude. Not that she had any intention of accepting the gallantries of her middle-aged employer. But she remembered further the confession she had made to Cousin Agatha that after noon; reminded herself of her determination to lure every man she could to his destruction.

"Your first chance—and you're muffing it!" she told herself ruefully. "Lead the old idiot on and see how many different kinds of a fool he can make of himself! It'll do him good to get a wallop in his conceit."

So, after that, she smiled bewitchingly on Dan Brady. Invitations to ride and that fell into her lap. He even began to have roses in his private office. He also took to wearing every day the dignified costume—morning coat, striped trousers, and white waist coat—which as impressed the Court when he had a case to argue. He sport ed a red carnation in his lapel.

Sybil's dark eyes sparkled with mischief, as she noted the gradual transformation. She declined all and sun dry invitations to dine, to sup, to drive, to attend the theatre. But she did do it with such a perfect assumption of reluctance, with such a lingering regret, and such a subtle promise in her eyes that "the next time" might bring better luck, that Dan Brady rushed fatuously on to his doom.

The showdown came one unseasonably warm afternoon in late March, an afternoon which carried more than a hint of spring and was, for that reason most unfortunate for Dan Brady.

CHAPTER 12

A BLOT ON THE SCUTCHEON

The premature hint of spring in the March air stirred Brady, as he drove to his office from his big house on the edge of town. When he had parked his car, he walked jauntily across the square, glad of the balmy air that made an overcoat unnecessary. He was proud of his immaculate raiment, and he fancied that several women glanced admiringly at him.

He felt that he was a young man still, years and years younger than the gray little woman who had presided over his table that morning, asking worriedly if the eggs were "just right" if he was quite sure the bacon "wasn't overdone;" if the coffee was "hot enough."

At his office he saw that the weather had its spell on his pretty secretary. Sybil wore a jonquil tucked in the front of her white silk blouse. It lent a creaminess to her smooth skin and made her black hair seem all the blacker. He thought her mood was softened, too. Her eyes actually looked dreamy.

When he had finished dictating, he fumbled with his papers, while she picked up her note-book.

"How would you like a week in Chicago, Miss Ross?" he asked suddenly.

Sybil lifted surprised eyes.

"In Chicago?"

He nodded.

"The DeWitt case is coming up there. I'll have to go, and I'll need a—er—secretary."

A little danger signal flashed in Sybil's eyes. She knew quite well that he would need nothing of the sort.

He leaned forward in his chair, smiling fatuously.

"I know a quiet little hotel where we could stay. Nobody would be the wiser."

His meaning was unmistakable. Pury gripped Sybil, she began to tremble with anger, but he misunderstood her emotion.

"What do you say?" he asked.

Crimson flared in Sybil's cheeks. Lightning flashed in her dark eyes.

"What do I say?" she repeated, controlling her voice with difficulty. "This!"

Her hand closed on a heavy bronze ink-well on Brady's desk.

The next moment, without warning, it had landed squarely on his chest.

He grunted inhuman surprise at the impact. The dark fluid spread like a gigantic flower in the centre of his immaculate waistcoat. It dripped down over his striped trousers. It trickled over his gray spats and stained the Turkish rug. He could feel the horrid wetness of it soaking through to his skin.

Sybil stared at him for a long moment. Then anger gave place to amusement. He was a sight!

THE MAKING OF THE DOMINION

The Dominion of Canada came into being on July 1st, 1867, but the site of the present city of Montreal was first visited by a white man, Jacques Cartier, on October 2nd, 1535.

The story of the intervening three hundred years is one of the most fascinating stories in the worlds history. The story of New France and Acadia, the glory and romance of old Quebec, the thrilling tales of the coureurs de bois and the brave deeds and stubborn fights in defense of hardly-won possessions, the constant struggle for control of this new land, culminating in the glorious victory of Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham, when the new empire flin was passed for all time into British hands.

Many of the scenes of this wonderful story, in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, will be visited by the Kerr-Bryson Eastern Tour, which is to leave Toronto via Canadian National Railways on July 15th, 1927, a tour which will be replete with scenic wonders and historic interest. Descriptive leaflets will be promptly furnished on request to any agent of the Canadian National Railways, or to Passenger Agent A. J. Reddish Ave., Toronto, or F. Bryson, 44 Silverthorn Ave., Toronto. m3-1d

A bacterial disease which is deadly to the prickly pear cactus is to be introduced into Australia to combat the cactus pest.

One-day shopping excursions from London to Paris by air are soon to be started.

TWO MANY CATS

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 14—The township of Korah complains that, as a result of Sault Ste. Marie residents dumping unwanted cats from autos in the township, it has a plague of felines, which are destroying partridge and all birds in the area.

The authorities say that scores of cats and kittens from the city, which have been taken out in bags and dumped along the road or in the bush, are roaming all over the country.

News Of Movies

CAPITOL THEATRE

On Monday, The Imperial Players begin their third week in Belleville, offering for their first play, "The Unloved Wife," a sensational success of the season ago.

Miss Myrtle Bigden, the popular leading lady, will be seen as Mrs. Courtenay, the gay butterfly mother, a part which she originated. This play also gives Miss Bigden an opportunity to display some of her clabarate wardrobe. The play is very refreshingly running novel comedy, and just enough dramatic situations to keep the suspense.

Mac Murray, in her latest film "Valencia" will be seen on the screen—and Let Miss Murray's admirers will wish to see her in this—her latest, and according to the critics, her best film.

Don't forget the popular priced matinee on Wednesday, when the film and play will be presented. The film program is given on other days.

BELLE THEATRE

There are only two sects of people in the realm—brunette blondes—gentlemen and the blondes themselves. Ask a blonde hair to name history's greatest heroes. Ten to one, she'll mention those lads who manufacture lotions which guarantee to turn the hair blonde in six applications. Ask a gentleman why he likes blondes, he'll reply—but why not listen to the story of a man who married a blonde in fiction. Not particular as to where he went, he merely wanted to leave Paris far behind. Then, the conductor had escorted him to the platform and told him that this was his destination.

YANKS TAKE 4TH STRAIGHT GAME

St. Louis, May 14.—The lavish hospitality so characteristic of the real St. Louis was again in abounding evidence yesterday afternoon, with the result that the Yanks won their fourth straight from the Browns, 3 to 1, and made their record in the week six won out of seven. This is not considered so bad as records go.

The fact that it was Friday the thirteenth did not deter the Yanks from annoying Ernest Wingard with enough long distance hits to wreck the pastime. The Yanks were unlucky, ten to nine, but it again becomes necessary to point out to the Browns that under the new rules adopted last winter, it is runs and not hits that determine the ultimate victor.

The reckless extravagance with which the Brownies squandered their hard-earned hits was indeed, distressing and called for critical comment from the local customers. The Browns wasted as many as three single in one inning alone, and Waite Hoyt was constantly looking up to find one or more runners on the base lines.

Boston made it two straight from the Indians, winning 7 to 0, at Cleveland. Lundgren, who won his first start at Detroit last week, held the Indians to three hits with the help of Flagstead's spectacular work in center.

BOWLING

It was Friday the 13th for the Wolves last night when they played the Ponies a senior league game at the Recreation Alleys, the Wolves starting a lead of 261 pins in the first game and losing this lead in the second game and also losing the final game, the Ponies taking three points and the Wolves one. J. Legault rolled 684 for the highest score on the Ponies side while Bryant was high for the Wolves with 632.

The Cisco took a fall out of the Mus caleds in a Junior league game, the Muscaleds starting out by taking the first game by 12 pins but losing the next two and total. Barriage and Morrell were the highest bowlers for their respective teams.

GIANTS TURN IN WRETCHED GAME

New York, May 14.—The Giants must have paraded to the Polo Grounds yesterday under an arch-way of baddies, for they left their honors and led by a regiment of black cats. Just the fact that it was Friday, the thirteenth isn't enough to account for the way they misplayed the last game of the St. Louis series.

They made only seven hits off Willis Hudlin, they committed five flagrant errors, Hafey and out of four pitchers they hired, only one could curb the Cardinals' cyclone. The result the Cardinals won just about as they pleased, and it pleased them to have the score 11 to 1. The only consolation is that they couldn't win more than one game at a time.

At least they were thoughtful enough to get the misery over with in a hurry. At ten minutes of four, any one who felt so inclined, and no doubt many did, could have left the park and never have wondered how it ended. Twenty minutes after the game started everybody in the Cardinal line-up had been at bat, five of them had hit safely, two more had walked, the Giants had made three errors, seven runs were in and nobody was out except Freddy Fitzsimmons.

All Philadelphia three home-run drives, the first by Cy Williams and the others by Leach and Jimmy Wilson gave Philadelphia a 4 to 1 victory over Chicago. Hub Pruett missed a shut-out victory when Tony Kaufmann, the rival hurler, hit for the circuit in the fifth inning. Pruett only allowed three hits and struck out ten Chicago batters.

The Robins swept the three-game series with Cincinnati by coming out in front in yesterday's fray at Brooklyn by 5 to 4. After being held in complete subjection by Carl Mays for seven innings, Brooklyn turned a barrage of base-hits upon the veteran underhand pitcher in the eighth, forcing him to retire. Jake May was rushed to the rescue.

Pittsburgh at Boston postponed, cold weather.

ORIOLES HELD TO FOUR HITS

New York, May 14.—Joe Zubrik, youthful pitcher on the Bears, hurled one of the greatest games of his career at Newark when he held the Baltimore Orioles to four hits, two infield rollers that the runners just beat to first. The Newark club won easily by the score of 8 to 0. Quelch in the ninth was the only batter more player to get as far as third base. Zubrik fanned nine men.

The Bears climbed into a tie for third place with Baltimore by sinking Buffalo, 6 to 4, under a barrage in the second and Hurst's four-bagger in the fifth accounted for all Syracuse's runs.

Sir Oliver Mowat was once forced to seek lodging in a small and ill-kept hotel. He found the bed unbearable and complained.

"There is nothing the matter with that bed—why Sir Wilfred Laurier slept in it only a few nights ago," was the lorded-the landlord.

"That may be so," replied Sir Oliver "but I do object to sleeping in the same bed with the whole Grit party."

An envied crowd of Aberdonians had gathered at the railway reception-room, and were discussing a rumor that the London-Aberdeen express had been involved in a serious accident.

"Dear me," exclaimed a man standing near by, "this is a verra bad business. My wife was in that train."

As he turned away a newsboy delivered the room, selling a special edition containing the news.

"Here," cried someone to the man whose wife was in the train, "aren't ye goin' tae buy a paper and get the details?"

"Na, na," replied the other. "I'll wait for the final edition and get the football results as well."

"No," replied Eva. "Uncle St. Ives has been up to see me, and so's the cook. "You shall have every blessed thing you want, for being such a good girl," said Rafe. "I mean, because you've been so good in getting well."

"Oh!" she said, as if she were relieved and yet a little disappointed by his reply.

As he went downstairs, Rafe thought of Frenda. Now that Eva was out of danger, he was free to leave the castle and he ought to go to Frenda and look after her being such a good girl," of his great, good luck. He was not altogether unconscious of the fact that Frenda would not be overjoyed by the news of engagement; an old pal, roper

How to Tint

Any woman can do perfectly gorgeous tinting of dainty lingerie, etc., if she knows this single rule use real dye A tint is a color and true colors require a true dye. You can dilute it to any degree you like; no matter how delicate the shade, dye-tinting is always even—never weak or "washy."

Diamond dyes are used in cold water for all tinting unless you want the tint to be permanent, in which case you merely have the water hot. So it isn't nigger trouble to tint the right way —it is really less-trouble. And what a difference in have the finished product! WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Men who dislike their first names always can hide them under an initial. Motor laws that permitted one to use initials on a license were quite popular. But Connecticut recently changed the regulation on this matter and the result was confusion among hundreds of motor owners, we are told. One owner finally decided to give his first name, declaring he would rather go without a license!

MOST IMPORTANT THAN BATTLES

A century ago men were following with bated breath the march of Napoleon and waiting with feverish impatience for the latest news of the wars. And all the while in their own homes, babies were being born. But who could think about babies? Everybody was thinking about battles. In one year, there stole into the world a baby girl. During that same year, 1809, Mr. Gladstone was born in Liverpool and Alfred Tennyson was born at Somersby rectory. In the same year Charles Darwin made his entry into the country and Abraham Lincoln drew his first breath in old Kentucky. Also was enrolled the first patient of Chopin at Warsaw and of Mendelssohn at Hamburg. Within months of each other Sir Morley was born, also Elizabeth Barrett Browning and Felicia Hemans. But history thought of babies. Everybody was thinking of battles.

Mr. Bull would can only manage His world by big battalions abroad when all the while the doing is by small babies at home. When a wrong wants righting or a cruelty wants ending, or a continent wants opening. God sends a baby into the world to do it. That is why, long, long ago, a babe was born in Bethlehem.

THE MIRROR OF A HEART

The following letter was written by John Keats to Fanny Brawne in November, 1820:

"My dearest Girl.

"I have been a walk this morning with a book in my hand, but as usual I have been occupied with nothing but you; I wish I could say in an agreeable manner. I am tormented day and night. They talk of my going to Italy. 'Tis certain I shall never recover if I am to be so long separate from you; yet with all this devotion to you I cannot persuade myself into any confidence of you.

"I am literally worn to death which seems my only recourse. Sanctel Regret what has passed. What? Nothing with a man of the world, but to me dreadful. I will get rid of this as much as possible. When you were in the habit of flirting with Brown you would have left off, could your own heart have felt one-half of the pangs mine did. Brown is a good sort of man—he did not know he was doing me to death by inches. I feel the effect of every one of those hours in my side now; and for that cause, though he has done me many services, though I know his love and friendship for me, though at this moment I should be without your were it not for his assistance, I will never see or speak to him until we are both old men, if we are to be.

"I will resent my heart having been made a football. You will say I am mad. I have heard you say that it was not unpleasant to walk a few yards; you have somewhere—your mind is away—you have not brooded over one idea as I have—you should you? You are to me an object intensely desirable—the air I breathe in a room empty of you is unbearable; I am not the same to you—no—you can wait—you have a thousand acquaintances—you can be happy without me. Any party, anything to fill up the day prevents the want.

"How have you passed this month? Who have you smiled with? All this should be seen anew in me. You say feel as I do, you do not know what it is to love; one day you may. Your time is not come. Ask yourself how many unhappy hours Keats has cost you in hoechinee. For myself I have been a martyr the whole time and for this reason, because the connection is forced from me by the torture, I appeal to you by the blood that Christ you would not for me. I write to me if you have done anything this month which you would not have pained me to have seen. You may have altered—if you have not—if you still behave in the same manner and other societies as I have seen you —I do not want to break—if you have done so I will think the coming night may be my last.

"I cannot live without you; and not only you, but chaste you—virtuous you. The sun rises and sets, the day passes and you follow the bent of your inclination to a certain extent; you have no conception of the continuity of miserable feeling that passes through me in a day.

"Je serious! Love is not a play-thing—and again do not write unless you can do it in a manner conscience. I would sooner die for want of you than....

Yours for ever.

explained to you, Stranfyre."

"Very likely," said Rafe, with a hope less calm, "but if you can get me to understand it, you can drive a pair of broncbos tandem; and I've never seen any man able to do it yet. However, it's your deal," he concluded, and, with a nonchalance that was a great aid to skill, he dropped into a chair and circled out his legs as St. Ives had done.

"By the way, Lord Strafyre," remarked Mr. Gurdon, "before we enter on the subject of the marriage settlement, will you allow me to remark on the fact that your account at the bank is very badly overdrawn?"

"That so?" said Rafe coolly; "Well, I suppose the bank won't break."

"No," asserted Mr. Gurdon grimly but respectfully, "but with your Lord Stranfyre, but, really, your expenditure has been very large of late."

"I dessay," said Rafe as easily as before, "but if neither the bank nor I am going to be broken, what's the odds? Let's get to the other business I want to — well, I don't know why I want to know, but that it would be a durned sight pleasanter outside than it is in here, bothering over these durned papers. It makes me sick!"

But, sick as he might, Rafe was compelled by the other two to bother over papers for several days.

Phense sat at the table in the little sitting room, with her head resting on her hands. She was very pale, with high haggard; there was a brooding look in her gray eyes, and the thin lips were compressed tightly. Since Rafe's sudden and unexplained depar ture she had sat like this most of the day, and only at intervals went out to walk rapidly, aimlessly, until she had tired herself out. This morning she had just received a short note from Rafe, and, like all the others that had come from him, it was as unsatisfactory as it was short. It was "business" that was now detaining him at the castle, he said; and women with more experience than Phense are always suspicious of "business" when it is put forward as an excuse for a lover's or a husband's absence. Presently she rose suddenly and took up her hat, with the intention of starting on one of the exhausting walks; but while she was at the glass, the door opened, and Travers entered. She started at the sight of him, and turned, half-fearfully, half defiantly.

Poems Old And New

Anne Hastings

AT THE PLAY

I weep at the play
When the villain pursues the fair maid,
Or honour is lost or betrayed.
I weep at the play
At life's mighty heartbreaks I stand
Dry-eyed, nerves stretching like tightening bands.
Teeth shut, muscles set, with interlocked hands
And breath that comes gasping.
Death, love, loss and failure,
Small cares that are petty and rasping
All find me distraught, busy.
Yet I weep at the play.
—Edith Willis Linn.

THE FISHER MAN'S HYMN

The osprey sails above the sound,
The gorse are polar, the gulls are flying;
The herring shoals swarm thick around,
The nets are launched, the boats are plying
Yo ho, my hearts! Lets seek the deep,
Raise high the song, and cheerily wish her.
Yet I weep at the play.
—Edith Willis Linn.

THE FISHER MAN'S HYMN

The osprey sails above the sound,
The gorse are polar, the gulls are flying;
The herring shoals swarm thick around,
The nets are launched, the boats are plying
Yo ho, my hearts! Lets seek the deep,
Raise high the song, and cheerily wish her,
While the slow bending net we sweep,
"God bless the fish-hawk and the fisher!"
She rears her young on yonder tree,
She leaves her fainiful mate to mind 'em;
Like us, for fish, she sails to sea,
And plunging, shows us where to find 'em.
Yo ho, my hearts! Lets seek the deep,
Fly every oar, and cheerily wish her,
While the slow bending net we sweep,
"God bless the fish-hawk and the fisher!"
We hardly find any persons of good sense save those who agree with us.
—La Rochefoucauld.

When he whom everybody else flatters, flatters me, I then am truly happy.
—Ben Johnson.

As ye rae up by yon hillside,

There's few sae bonnie, nane sae guid,

—Burns.

Why may not a goose say thus: "All the land of the universe I have an interest in—the earth serves me to walk upon; the sun to light me; the stars have their influence upon me; I have such an advantage by the winds and such by the waters; there is nothing that yon heavenly roof looks upon so favorably as me. I am the darling of Nature! Is it not man that keeps and serves me?"
—Montaigne.

Clam chowder, tomato puree, timbales, celery, lettuce, sandwiches, canned fruit and fudge cake.

Stuffed Spanish onions, baked potatoes, tomato salad and prune cottage pudding.

Italian spaghetti, bran muffins, lettuce with chutney dressing and steamed apples with cream sauce.

Ham croquettes, tomato sauce, water cress and olive sandwiches and warm gingerbread with chocolate sauce.

Use apples whenever possible. They are healthy, cheap and, more than these, they are a home-grown product.

BIG GRANT WILL AID EMIGRATION

L. F. Davidson Disburses Another $100,000 to Assist Agencies

London, May 13 (Canadian Press).—Another $100,000 to aid Empire settlement has been given to Sir Robert Horne, M.P., by Leybourne F. Davidson, whose previous grant of a similar amount has, it is understood, been practically all distributed. Sir Robert, with the approval of the donor took the view that the money should be used for the assistance of organizations already training emigrants for Canada and the other dominions. Where practicable he made it a condition that the agency receiving help should raise an equivalent amount locally, and that a similar sum should be given by the Government.

Sir Robert Horne decided to allot $60,000 to aid of the Salvation Army schemes administered by Commissioner Lamb, including its training farm in Essex. The scheme at Craigielea, near Paisley, which owes its existence to the enthusiasm of Dr. Conner, a local doctor received $10,000 with a further $2,000 for its farm in Canada, on which settlers supplement their training before being sent to their places of employment. The Church of Scotland settlement at Bridge of Allan was enabled by a grant to resume its emigration activities, which had been suspended owing to lack of funds, and the other Scottish Churches are now cooperating in the scheme. Its work is supplemented in Canada by the Y.M.C.A., which under Major Bavin, charges itself with the care of immigrants who may be in difficulties, and the Red Cross Society of Canada received a grant in aid of its work of assisting immigrants who, through illness or other causes, are in danger of becoming derelict.

After inquiry as to the most effective means of helping women, Sir Robert Horne decided to make a grant to the Scottish Council for Women's Trades, which, under Miss Margaret Irwin, trains women not only in domestic service but in poultry-keeping, dairying and other crafts ancillary to farm work. He gave assistance also to the scheme for settling families from the Western Highlands on partially equipped holdings in Canada. Help was given to Australia by a sum of £20,000 to the Kingsley Fairbridge Memorial Scheme. The 1820 Memorial Settlers Association (South Africa) was given £20,000. All the schemes have one feature in common—that the persons who receive the benefit of them are thoroughly trained before being sent overseas.

OSHAWA BOOMING

General Motors of Canada were now planning to erect further buildings next year to cost in the neighbourhood of $500,000. The new building, it was also said, would include an office building in a more central location than the present offices. A few years ago the present office building was practically in the centre of the company's operations, but it is now several blocks distant from the new buildings now under construction.

According to the latest count there are more than 17,000 elk in the northern herd of Yellowstone National Park.

Here and There

Reports received by the Provincial Department of Agriculture indicate that the crop acreage this year will be much larger than last year. Some of the estimates show an area as much as 500,000 acres in advance of 1926.

Roger Babson, noted statistician, in addressing the Canadian Club of Toronto, said that in 25 years time Vancouver would be the greatest port on the American Pacific coast and that it was only a matter of time before the trade across the Pacific Ocean would equal, if not exceed, that of the Atlantic.

It is announced by the Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, that a contract has been entered into with the Nova Scotia Public Fish Cold Storage Terminals, Limited, at Halifax, respecting the construction and equipment of a modern cold storage plant at Halifax, to be completed about November 1st, 1928.

It has been officially announced that the Canadian Pacific Railway will operate the Hereford Railway which extends in Quebec from Lime Ridge to the United States boundary, passing through several Eastern Townships, including Gookshire, Sawyerville, Malvina and down to Paquette. This line has not been operated since November, 1925.

Heirs to the thrones of Great Britain and Spain will vie with each other at the World's Poultry Congress to be held at Ottawa July 27 to August 4. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will exhibit some live birds from his farm in Cornwall, England, Now word is received that H.R.H. the Prince of Asturias, heir to the Spanish throne, will exhibit some fowl from his own poultry farm.

Over 1,000 members of the parish of St. Aidan's Church, New Jersey, journeyed to Montreal over the Canadian Pacific lines on Easter Monday to visit the famous Oratory of St. Joseph. The visit was in the nature of an act of thanksgiving for the miraculous cure last year of their pastor, Rev. Father Roger McGinley. Father McGinley had been suffering from heart trouble for some years preventing his entering the pulpit. Following a visit to Brother André, however, in Montreal, his condition improved almost instantaneously. Within a few days he was able to address his flock.

Passengers on the Canadian Pacific flagship "Empress of Scotland," now completing a world cruise, visited the ruins of the site of the old city of Panamá destroyed in 1671 by Sir Henry Morgan, the famous English pirate. The ruins have come into the limelight recently on account of the fact that treasures valued at over $50,000 have been discovered by a young English fortune hunter, Lieutenant George Williams. The discovery, which was made by means of a delicate violet ray detecting instrument of his own invention, consisted of gold Church ornaments, gold dust and jewels. The delicate instrument still indicates that larger treasures exist at this site.

Completing a journey of over 30,000 miles during which the entire globe was circled, the Canadian Pacific flagship "Empress of Scotland" docked at New York recently. Over 400 passengers disembarked laden with every imaginable kind of souvenir from every country. The ship carried back the first refugees to America from the war zones of China in the persons of Mrs. Melvin Southwick and her young baby, who were forced, through Chinese disorders, to leave a tramp steamer for Kobe, where they were picked up by the "Empress of Scotland." Mrs. Southwick's husband is an official of the Standard Oil Company at Hankow. During the great cruise of the "Empress of Scotland" she visited about 20 countries and anchored in over 25 world ports.

CAN. ENTERPRISE HAS INCREASED THE NAT. WEALTH

Charlottetown, P. E. I., May 13 (C.P.)—Writing in the Charlottetown Guardian, J. E. B. McCready, who is the sole surviving member of the original press gallery at Ottawa at Confederation, reviews the progress of the past 60 years, in part as follows:

"Canadian enterprise during this period in combination with the vast forest of the Dominion's natural resources, has rapidly increased the national wealth until its per capita amount Canada is exceeded only by the United States and Great Britain. The comparative figures of national wealth per capita as compiled by the League of Nations are, United States, $2,918; Great Britain, $2,459; Canada $2,406; France $1,570; Germany $1,085; and Japan $544. To what high place among the Nations of the world may not a United Canadian Dominion yet advance? And how much depends upon that patriotic spirit and purpose which should inspire every true Canadian in this Jubilee Year of our great Confederation. It was well interpreted in the words of one of the eloquent Fathers when he cited a myth of the classic ages of antiquity. A sculptor had chiseled a figure of such faultless and perfect mould that he fell in love with the work of his own hands and knelt before it, but when he rose and embraced it the marble grew hard and an icy chill. There was no life, no warmth there. Thus it will be with our fair Dominion if our people are not possessed of a national spirit, a fraternal life and a national ideal.

"Fortunately the signs of the times are now auspicious. The spirit of unity, concord and equality is abroad in the land as it has not been in the years that are past. The disappointed and discontented people of the Maritimes are becoming satisfied by measures of justice and equity too long delayed, but welcome and the coming celebration of the National Birthday anniversary promises to be joyfully honored from ocean to ocean."

GEORGE V. WILL NOT MAKE ANY LONG VOYAGES

London, May 13.—King George, the most widely travelled royal personage in history has made his last long voyage.

Since the king and queen were unable to accept an invitation of the Canadian Government to visit that country in July, it has been whispered about in authoritative court circles that their majesties had concluded not to contemplate any ventures so far from home again.

The report is that both the king and queen, considering their ages, feel the king will be 62 on June 3), have deemed it wise that any further voyages, such as crossing the Atlantic may be considered out of the question, partly because of the fatigue the nervous strain imposed by state functions and other social affairs.

Hereafter, it seems, any trips their majesties may take to other lands will be merely to the continent, enroute to the Riviera, perhaps, during the winter months, when, as sometimes the case, the king is bothered with a tender throat, aggravated by the English damp weather.

The king before his coronation visited Canada on six different occasions and made numerous voyages to India, Australia and other parts of the world, having begun his travels as a boy of 16.

Since the war the travels of the king and queen have been limited to a visit to Belfast in 1921 to inaugurate the new parliament of northern Ireland, a state visit to Belgium in 1922 and a similar visit to France and Italy two years ago.

The king is fond of the sea, but Queen Mary is a land sailor—and admits it.

Lord Lister was the first physician to be raised to the British peerage for his medical achievements.

VALUE is not a matter of price alone. The cheapest article is not necessarily the greatest value. In fact, where cheapness has been made the prime consideration, value is usually lacking. Instance value is simply what you get for the price you pay.

Chevrolet is low in price—but not at the expense of quality. It is economical—because it is not cheaply built. It is supreme in value because it gives more of the things you want for the price you pay. First and always, quality counts with Chevrolet. There is quality in the distinctive Fisher bodies; in the long, low lines; in the rich, lustrous Duco colors; in the smooth, powerful valve-in-head engine; in the scores of refinements, such as air cleaner, oil filter, gas strainer; in the luxury of its appointments and upholstery; in the long, resilient springs; in the easy, three-speed transmission.

And, because Chevrolet is the world's most outstanding example of quality in a low-priced car manufactured by the product of General Motors, the world's largest builders of gear-shift automobiles—because it has won a position of leadership in volume of sales—the Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History is now selling at new, lower prices, the lowest for which Chevrolet has ever been sold in Canada.

N. Y. PROMINENT BUSINESS MEN TO WILD AFRICA

New York, N. Y., May 14.—One hundred New York bankers and business men will transfer temporarily their hunt for gold from prosaic Wall Street to the wilds of South America.

An expedition headed by former Judge Alexander Woll, will leave New York June 1 to investigate possibilities of finding gold and precious metals in Venezuela and the Guinas.

Valuable concessions have been obtained, said Mr. Woll. A hunt will be made for gold, precious wood, cinnabar and bauxite, the respective basic minerals of quicksilver and aluminum.

Engineers who have just returned from the country report the presence of valuable resources there, Mr. Woll said, and investigation of the stories will be the purpose of the expedition. If the information is substantiated the syndicate will be formed into a corporation and the concessions will be exploited.

CEMETERY OVERCROWDED

Trenton, May 13.—On Sunday after noon a meeting of the members of St. Peter-in-Chains Church was held for the purpose of discussing the advisability of purchasing land for a new cemetery. The present burial ground, also sited i orth of the old Grand Trunk station is becoming overcrowded. Options have been taken on properties south and east of the St. George's cemetery on the York Road.

Roy, the president of the Napanee Iron Works. The act was committed by the prisoner in 1925 and at that time he left for the United States.

CHARWOMAN IS INSTITUTION IN CAN. CAPITAL

Ottawa, Ont., May 11. — (Canadian Press)—The charwoman who cleans the Government Building every day is an "institution" in Ottawa. There are 320 of her. She is a force in the community both numerically and sanitarily. She is respected by all who know her. The charwoman works under the aegis of the Public Works Department and her duty is to sweep, scrub and dust the Government offices where her they enter, and have them clean when the clerks arrive. She has to do her work between the hours of six a.m., and 8.45 a.m. As a matter of fact she is often on the job at 5.30 a.m. and sometimes earlier. She goes early because as a rule she is a widow dependent on her own efforts and has to do other jobs in the day to keep herself going. For her daily cleaning service the charwoman draws $1.25 per

CANADIAN PRESS IS GOOD ORGAN

Only sixteen years old The Canadian Press, which is this week holding its annual meeting, at Toronto, is perhaps the fastest infant in the newspaper field of this continent, and its effect on news publication in Canada has been both striking and beneficial.

The Canadian Press was organized by the newspapers of Canada on a co-operative basis, as an instrument by which international, national, and domestic news events might be brought to the newspaper readers of the Dominion, at a reasonable cost and free of political partisanship, bias or prejudice.

Organized on the soundest basis it has enjoyed notable success and has established in Canada a high reputation for efficient service and for truth It has made possible the publication in Canada of all news of national interest promptly and reliably. It has spanned the great distances of this country and brought the most widely separated communities door to door. Through its affiliations with great foreign news collecting agencies it brings to the Canadian homes the news of the World just as efficiently as readers of newspapers in Great Britain or in the United States are served by their own news agencies.

The Canadian Press was organized non-political in nature and if it were otherwise it could not continue to exist. It was at one time, owing to the peculiar difficulties in so large and sparsely populated a country, controlled by the government. When conditions permitted this subsidy was no longer accepted and The Canadian Press wished to be independent of any government support.

The organization has survived financial difficulties of a peculiarly keen nature. It includes in its membership the majority of the large and small daily newspapers of Canada and through its leased wire services provides the news of the world and of the Dominion to each of its members for publication daily. It is a non-profit-making enterprise.

Since The Canadian Press was organized there has been a notable improvement in the character of news published by the press of the Dominion. Today, while party organs still remain, they are comparatively few, and their policies are no longer expressed in the bitter one-sided manner of the past. When, through the medium of The Canadian Press, impartial and strictly reliable reports of events of political and national importance are available, the people of this country have every opportunity to base their opinions and judgement concerning the questions of the day, on accurate and reliable information.—Sarnia, Ont., Canadian Observer, May 3, 1927.

U. S. MOONSHINE MUST BE POTENT

Toronto, Ont., May 13.—(Canadian Press)—"During my stay in the United States I must have met a hundred people who see the fairies and are able to describe them quite distinctly" to said E. L. Gardner, secretary of the English Theosophical Society in an address given here. "He told the story of how he had investigated the photographs of the fairies submitted to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and had satisfied himself that they were not faked. As described in course of time by the child who photographed them, their most common colors were rose, lavender and apple green. The gnome, or brownie, in one of the photographs, wore a reddish-brown jacket and black knickers. The girls said they had never felt the fairies. Neither had they heard a tune from their fairy pipers, except when the wind wasn't blowing and the leaves were fluttles, there might have been a slight tinkle

The two Port Arthur young men last Saturday night left for Port Coldwell, in a small gasoline boat, which has not since been heard of. Gales of the ensuing few days were very severe and various inquiries along the shore have failed to bring any information.

ENGLAND WISHES 'HOLLYWOOD' IN THAT COUNTRY

London, May 13.—England is determined to have a Hollywood of its own.

A 1,000,000 pound empire-wide organization has been formed to put Great Britain on the film map and to break the American hold on the British film trade. An attempt to support the new organization by protective legislation aimed at imported films is being made.

Prominent authors, producers, actors and artists are associated with the project and five-year options on film rights of stories by 14 noted English novelists have been obtained. The authors are Arnold Bennett, Stacy Aumonier, Thomas Burke, Sir Hall Caine, Ridgewell Cullum, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Miss May Edington, John Galesworthy, Sir Philip Gibbs, Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, Eden Phillpotts, Miss Kathlyn Rhodes, Rafael Sabatini and Mrs. A. M. Williamson.

Also associated with the enterprise are Madame Karsavina, the ballerina, Sir Charles Oman, the historian, Phyllis Neilson-Terry, British actress, Sybil Thorndike, Sir Gerald du Maurier, Oscar Asche, Gordon Craig, son of Ellen Terry, and Isidore de Lara.

A "British Hollywood" is to be erected near London and the first films of the studios are expected to be completed before the end of the year.

In addition to British Incorporated Pictures, Limited, the name of the organization, affiliated companies will operate in Canada, Australia, South Africa and India.

Contracts for the sale of the world rights of the first three productions have been made to an American organization.

"The organization is to make productions agreeable to the ideals and true to the history and life of the nations of the British commonwealth," authors, actors and officials will be entirely British.

MAPLE SYRUP IS GOOD CUISINE

Ottawa, Ont., May 13. (C.P.)—Maple Syrup, properly considered, is more than an incident; it marks a distinct era in seasonable cuisine, says the Journal editorially. It is the first of the new and home-grown products. It is the purest and most natural of manufactured products, because the process of manufacture adds nothing and merely takes away the superfluous bulk. It has about it a tang of the woods and the open places, and somehow makes one think of spring flowers and the soft rains which rejuvenate the earth. Art cannot match its flavor nor all the skill of the confectioner reproduce its delectable distinctiveness. And by the very contrast of its inimitable sweetness it paves the way for the rhubarb pie era which follows so shortly. The rhubarb season in turn is succeeded by strawberries and cream, but that is another story altogether. Of course, we are speaking of the rich, genuine, thickened syrup, boiled from clean sap freshly gathered and eaten in the appropriate springtime. The connoisseur does not sanction the inevitable adulteration of maple syrup with pancakes. He finds in the syrup itself a satisfying quality and a degree of perfection which needs no support from an intimate association with other foods.

Hamilton's air port comes into operation May 15th. The property used is four hundred acres in extent. A large hangar is being constructed and the old homestead on the property will be remodelled as an aviation boarding school.

Driven by over-population to eating bark of trees and seaweed from the ocean, the wild goats of Guadaloupe Island are changing their habits and, in some respects, their form. They are learning to climb leaning trees in search of foliage.

According to recent game regulations in the Province of Alberta, prairie chicken, grouse, partridge, greater and lesser yellow legs, black breasted and golden plover, are now on the protected list, while the ban on Hungarian partridge, north of the North Saskatchewan River, has been lifted.

It has been announced by Premier Ferguson, of Ontario, that the Government proposes to foster the creation of an industrial research institution with an endowment of $2,000,000 for the purpose of solving scientific problems of production and process for Canadian industries.

While on a tour of the Maritimes recently, Dr. F. T. Walsh, chief of the seed branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, was of the opinion that a great deal more of the seed used in these provinces should be grown on their own farms. The seed is very hardy, he declared, and, with proper care, a market could be established in the northern states of the Union, and the crop profitably disposed of.

The versatility of the aeroplane was ably demonstrated recently. C. F. Tenefson, a Swedish sea captain, with urgent business in Shanghai, was taken from the Canadian Pacific Toronto Express at Mission City, B.C., and rushed by aeroplane to the outer wharf at Vancouver, where he caught the flagship of the Canadian Pacific fleet, the "Empress of Canada" for the Orient. The seaplane was landed on the Fraser River within easy reach of the depot.

The season for bass fishing in Ontario, with the exception of the St. Lawrence and the Ottawa Rivers, has been shortened this year by about a fortnight, opening July 1 and ending November 20, according to information given out by the Game Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway. This action was taken by the Ontario Provincial Government when it was found out that bass had not finished spawning when the season opened June 16 in previous years. The same ruling applies to muscalunge fishing in Ontario this year.

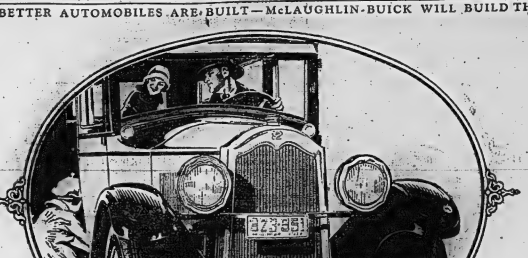

Canada is sending increasing supplies of apples to the West of England, according to the Trade Commissioner at Bristol. One organization has built a factory in Ontario, have their own buyers, and are packing the leaf, Canadian Burley, to suit the English trade. Consumers in England are getting used to Canadian tobacco and with the Empire preferential duty, which amounts to 48 cents per pound less than the duty on foreign tobacco, increased quantities of Canadian Burley will find their way to the United Kingdom.

In token of the fact that this year is the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation in Canada, E. W. Beatty, Chairman and President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has extended a personal invitation to Miss Hortense Cartier, only surviving daughter of Sir George Etienne Cartier, one of the Fathers of Confederation, to take part in the trip across Canada, organized by the University of Montreal under the auspices of the Canadian Pacific, to start in July. Miss Cartier, who is in her 78th year, has accepted, and it is expected that she will meet Sir Hugh MacDonald, son of Sir John A. MacDonald, another Confederation Father, who is police magistrate in Winnipeg.

TIME NOT YET FOR CAN. DRAMA

Saint John, N.B.—(Canadian Press)—The time is not yet come for a national drama in Canada. When it does come, Canadian art and drama will be all the better for having grown naturally. This is the reply in an editorial of the Saint John Times-Globe to the complaint that Canadian dramatic critics have not succeeded in arousing a desire for a national theatre voiced by the Dean of the University of Montreal, speaking before the Paris Sorbonne. The desire for a national theatre, the Times-Globe points out, "must grow naturally and nationally, else it will not be national. And first there must be a clearly defined national spirit."

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT—McLAUGHLIN-BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

Not in a PRICE Class but in a VALUE Class

McLAUGHLIN-BUICK stands alone—not in its price, which it shares with others—but in its VALUE, which it shares with none.

Today in Canada—in the United States—in practically every civilized country of the world—McLaughlin-Buick is accepted as the Standard of Comparison among fine cars of every price.

During the past nine years the public of this continent has invested more of its automobile dollars in McLaughlin-Buick than in any other make of gear-shift car.

And McLaughlin-Buick, true to its purpose and promise, has constantly striven to improve its quality—to better its value. The economies effected through McLaughlin-Buick's volume of sales have been utilized to enrich still further the quality of the car—by such improvements as the Sealed Chassis, the Torque Tube Drive, Mechanical Four-Wheel Brakes, an Engine Vibrationless Beyond Belief and the increased luxury and refinement of McLaughlin-Buick Fisher Bodies.

McLaughlin-Buick leadership is founded upon value—and value upon progress. Hence McLaughlin-Buick constantly advances, constantly searches for better things, constantly improves its quality and increases its value.

McLaughlin-Buick is today, as always the ONLY car in its value-class. B-1217

"In point of fact Canadian drama possesses more distinctively Canadian characterissus than Canadian art or literature,' the Times-Globe says. "One might say that thefoundations of a national Canadian drama have risen above the ground level. The interpreters are available, Canadian and exiles, since the actor is he who sinks his personal and national identity in his part. But a national audience is lacking. An audience in Montreal cannot to be taken as representative by Canadian any more than can one in Saint John, Toronto, Winnipeg or Victoria. If the final critics be not intrinsically national, how then can there be a National Theatre? Nationalism will come. Bold must grow naturally will come. Bold must grow naturally

Meanwhile institutions such as the Hart House have in them the germ of home of national drama."

KIWANIS TO AID DRIVE TO HAVE CITY CLEANED

Local Club To Back Movement Started By the Mayor

In the interests of a healthier, cleaner and more attractive city, the local Kiwanis club is planning to sponsor in the very near future the slogan "Clean - Up and Paint - Up" campaign which starts Monday. The idea is a laudable one and presents unlimited possibilities towards the improvements of our city. In many other localities such a campaign is an annual affair at this time of the year, this with variations, of course. In some instances the campaign is conducted over a period of two weeks and again over an unlimited time being carried along throughout the whole season with extraordinarily good results.

In New York is an organization known as the "Minimal Clean - Up and Paint Up Campaign Bureau" which is prepared any time to co-operate to the full with any city in putting across a successful campaign. It's not a money making concern either, and a money making concern either, and made it well worthwhile, and can provide publicity matter with "a punch" to help things along—and all this service simply for the asking.

Here are a few ways in which a city can make the campaign successful: 1. The campaign creates community spirit because all classes work together for the good of the city. 2. The city is not only cleaned up but the new condition will inspire everyone to keep it looking that way and so the effect will be permanent. 3. Streets and alleys are cleaned up; fire losses are reduced through removal of waste and rubbish; fire traps are razed. 4. Vacant grounds are improved, mowed and cleared; public buildings are renovated and trees planted. 5. Homes are cleaned and beautified; fences and garages painted and repaired. 6. The campaign saves human lives for breeding places or disease are destroyed, flies, mosquitoes and rats are eliminated. 7. Property values are insured or increased. 8. It advertises the city as a desirable place in which to live; tourists too are favorably impressed. 9. The campaign helps business; it creates a lively demand upon dealers handling anything needed to homes clean and safe from fire, disease and the weather.

Finally it develops good citizenship and good character. Just to show how it works out in a business way, here are a few: The Houston Company Limited can supply all kinds of building material; Graham's can provide pure groceries; E. D. Mott, up-to-date garages and repairs. The A-1 Sign Studio new business signs; Stephenson, fine paints for your furniture. O. Ward and Son valuable advice on the layout of your garden, Sprague's, thorough Cleaning of your garments at a lower rate. Don Bleeker Guaranteed paint and varnish; D. L. and W. Coal the Cleanest and best. And so on.

So the Clean Up and Paint Up Campaign will be beneficial all round and a Belleville Civic Spirit carry through the idea.

PRODUCTION OF NEW KITCHEN TOOL BEGINS

Production of the above recently invented "18 in 1" combination kitchen tool commenced this week at the Belleville Electric and Stamping Limited.

Designed for use handy uses, as may be seen in the illustration, the tool is the first of its kind on the market. It was invented and patented in Canada in 1926 by Major Aberdon of the Tool and Machine Company of Kingston the firm for which Belleville Electric is now manufacturing it.

Already orders for some 10,000 have been received. The device will shortly be on sale locally.

SNUBBERS ADD MUCH TO MOTOR COMFORT TODAY

Gabriels — Best Known — Are Standard Equipment On Forty Makes

When forty great motor car manufacturers adopt a product as Standard Equipment for their automobiles, that product must be a good one and something to be desired.

Such is the case with Gabriel Snubbers. The majority of the greatest motor firms on this continent and in Europe have Gabriels Standard Equipments, for the Gabriel Snubber permits unique riding comfort, more so than was ever before possible. Twenty-five other manufacturers drill their car frames for Gabriels.

Through constant owner satisfaction and steady advertising, Gabriels have for twenty years been the dominant Spring control device on the markets permitting any road to be travelled in comfort and safety.

This snubber on your car will prevent dis-comfort and protect passengers; it will minimize spring breakage and save energy; it will prevent squeaks and rattles; it will save tires, gas and brakes and will reduce wear and tear on the car.

The New Anti-Pre-Loading Brake prevents any restraint being placed on the car springs through their capacity to absorb slight in-qualities of road surfaces, while Gabriel's powerful brake action lies in waiting instantly to dampen the violent spring recoil that occurs whenever a severe bump is struck, ensuring riding comfort.

When the rebound of the car wheel starts, the coils immediately tighten creating friction on the multiple coils gradually increasing brake action and allowing the car springs to return to normal without a jerk.

Gabriels aren't expensive either. Have R. E. Smith of the City Battery Service at 301 Coleman Street examined their merits to you and put a set on your car.

MOVIES DO NOT HURT EYES AS IS OFTEN SAID

But They Reveal Defects the Eyes May Have

It is now a generally recognized fact that the movies do not so often cause le trouble as they reveal the existence of defects already present. But as the average weekly movie attendance in this country runs into enormous figures, it is important that moving pictures be viewed under the very best conditions.

Watching motion pictures is nothing more or less than distance vision and differs from ordinary distance vision only in the prolonged concentration of visual attention. If the movies cause eye discomfort, it is more than likely that something is wrong with the eyes; the best condition for the eyes of the movie patrons obtain.

When the film is fresh and new and free from cracks, breaks and jumbled or worn films are hard on the eyes.

When the pictures were taken with a firmly placed camera and are projected with a rigid machine, or that there is no swaying or flickering of the picture.

When the operator is thoroughly trained to see to it that pictures are always in sharp focus and the undimmed light of the projector is never permitted to strike the bare screen pictures out of focus, strain the eyes and it is found of brilliant light at the usual dimness, hurts them.

When no one has to sit closer than twenty feet from the screen, raise the eyes more than 35 degrees above the horizontal or turn them more than 35 degrees to one side or the other.

When the theatre is not kept too dark, when all sorts of glare or reflections are eliminated by having the walls and decorations finished in dull flat colors, and all lights are carefully shaded, and when there are no sudden changes of light.

It should be remembered that headache, dullness and discomfort are not always due to eye strain, but may be caused by poor ventilation.

So if you have reason to believe that your eye strain is caused by defective vision, consult Edwards, Eyesight Specialists at 288 Front Street and have a proper examination.

NEW MOTOR CAR TO APPEAR HERE VERY SOON NOW

The Wolverine—tireless traveler of northern snows—has long been noted for his remarkable endurance. And now the Wolverine gives you name to an American automobile, a long-distance car of great power, to be announced soon.

Sure-footed hunter of the Arctic wastes, the Wolverine is famous for its ability to cover distance. North of the far-flung outposts of civilization, the Wolverine reigns alone by virtue of his energy ni searching for food over boundless territory.

Stories of the Wolverine's journeys across great stretches of northern wilderness have been treasured for centuries by the Indians. Long, bitter winters hold no fright for the Wolverine that the only way to survive is to travel swiftly and unceasingly.

No other animal is more suggestive of sturdiness and hardihood than the Wolverine, as he appears through distant openings in low, dark northern forests, where pointed spruce trees thin out, and the dull winter sky hangs close over the endless snow beneath.

Wolverine qualities of endurance over long distances, unlimited energy and silent travel are said to be characteristic of the new Wolverine automobiles, which will be publicly announced within the next few days.

PURE ICE CREAM RECOGNIZED AS VALUABLE FOOD

Moores Producing Quality Ice Cream at a Lower Price

Ice Cream time again, or rather ice cream weather, for nowadays there is no particular time of the year when ice cream is not eaten. The value of pure ice cream as a food for every member of the family—and one that everyone of them is always ready and anxious to eat makes it an ideal all year round desert.

Nowadays, too, together with superior quality of ice cream available is the fact that it can be had for less than ever before. Moores in the American-American Ice Cream, a purer of ice cream, made of only pure cream and rifle fruit flavors, at only twenty-five cents per brick, so who wouldn't be without it.

Moores' ice cream has a reputation and justly so, for being about the best obtainable in the city. Made on the premises under careful supervision, it has quality similar to that of Moores' well known homemade Sundies you've eaten so often.

Take home a brick of Moores' Ice Cream next time you're down street. You'll like it.

BUSINESS GOOD IN SHOE REPAIR LINE

"Builders is good," reports Bert Adams, proprietor of the Post-Bridge Adams, proprietor of the Post-Bridge Shoe Repair at the Gangway. Although established just a little more than a year ago, Bert's business has increased by leaps and bounds, and for this reason, that the public does appreciate high class work in the shoe repair line, plus prompt service and this Bert provides.

This firm makes a specialty of children's footwear. Mothers realize that it's a whole lot cheaper too have Willie's shoes resoled and made good as new than to invest in a new pair every few weeks. And when repairs are properly done, renewed soles will very often outlast the original ones.

Again, a handy location of a business means a whole lot to the average customer and the Footbridge Gangway Shoe Repair is just off Front Street, convenient for everyone. And, by the way, if you need polish, insoles, laces, or any other footwear necessary, you can get it all line on display in this shop.

Call in and see Bert Adams next time those shoes need some service. If you don't go back a second time, then we miss our guess.

TRIBUTE TO THE YANKS IN THE CANADIAN ARMY

Washington, D.C., May 13.—(Canadian Press)—Somewhere on the grassy slopes of the Arlington National Cemetery Canada's memorial to Americans who died in the service of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces will be erected within the next 12 months. It will take the form of a cross of sacrifice similar to those already put up in France and Flanders. The Canadian Parliament has approved the proposal and authorized the appropriation. President Coolidge, too, years ago saved his quartermaster-general his grant. Outside the necessary plot of ground amid the monument to American's great men and the graves of the thousands of men who lost their lives in several wars. Premier Mackenzie King recently announced in the House of Commons that the order for the memorial would be put in before long. Parliament authorized for the purpose an expenditure of $10,000.

The choice of a site probably will be left to Canada. A number of desirable spots are available in the great cemetery park. In the centre of the park is a little valley at the foot of the bank which is crowned by the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in its great ratio of wastian trees. Beyond the valley and beyond the several acres of tiny headstones which mark the resting place of the heroes of the Great War, where bodies were brought to Arlington after the war. A number of Canadian who served in the American Expeditionary Force are amongst them.

If a site on the higher ground is chosen, it will probably be on the fringe of the park near the Potomac River, on the other side of which the Lincoln Memorial gleams white through the trees and the gigantic needle of the George Washington obelisk tower over all. Wandering over towards Georgetown, the James atlong valley in which are the graves of a foreign legion in Italy.

LOSS OF LIMB NO HANDICAP

Vancouver, B. C., May 13.—(Canadian Press)—Edward Hall Imagine, a councillor of the National Cinaper, I.O.D.E., was buried here last year. She was educational secretary of the Provincial Chapter, where she carried on valuable work. Born in Devonshire, Eng., Lillian A. John, the earlier years of her life were devoted to music and of Toronto and California she was a vocalist of note.

An outstanding example of overcoming a physical handicap was exemplified in Mrs. Boynton, who, when a child of ten years of age, was run over by a vehicle and lost her right arm. This did not prevent her from being an expert needle-worker and during the war she knitted many garments. She was a beautiful hand and in music many of her accompaniments which she played were composition for the left hand only.

First Aiders Put on Great Show

An audience of seven thousand people worked up to a high state of enthusiasm by five brass bands, choruses of rooters, and loud speakers announcing each problem as it occurred, witnessed the First Aid contest for the Bauer and Black Challenge Cup at Chicago recently, at which the Canadian Pacific Railway entered the team from the Investigation Department of the company, the only Canadian team among the eleven to compete, and which emerged in first place with 489 points out of a possible 500, only five points behind the winner.

The C.P.R. team showed great merit, having regard to the fact that their training had been under the rules of the St. John Ambulance Association, while the contest was held under those of the American Red Cross, which are quite different and for which the team had only a couple of months to prepare. Again, there was no privacy about the contest, all teams working against one another on the floor of the Armory and having their various spaces roped off for each of the five problems set them. All were agreed that the contest was conducted in a fair and impartial manner.

A dramatic moment occurred just before the contest opened. Inspector Willfid Mansell, Instructor to the C.P.R. team, had died on the train going to Chicago. This was announced from the platform and the whole audience rose and stood at attention for a minute while a bugler sounded taps.

The illustration shows the C.P.R. Ecorse squad in one of the most difficult of the tests, that of "Man with a Fractured Leg." Left to right there are shown Constable F. J. Perris, Acting Sergeant Curtis Croxton of the team, and Constable A. H. Hurr. The patient is Constable Jesse Holmes. Other members of the team were Constables Thomas O'Neill and Leon Sharpe.

BIG FIELD RACE FOR KING'S PLATE

Toronto, Ont., May 12.—Canadian Press Despatch—One of the finest fields of thoroughbreds ever seen in the Province of Ontario will race in the 64th renewal of the King's Plate, historic feature of the Spring meet at the Ontario Jockey Club at Woodbine Park. The race as usual is run on opening day, which this year is May 21. The King's Plate is the oldest fixture on the continent and one of the most popular, and the substantial increase in value—there is $15,000 added this year — makes it more than ever a greater interest to owners and turfgoers.

Seven or eight among the 40 nominees appear to share popular approval J. P. White's Listener, filly by Rockville-Miss Jean, earned brackets four times as a two-year-old. Quarterly, the Seagram Stable's four-year-old, is eligible because he did not have a win last year. Other prominent candidates are R. H. Nov's Trendtel and Taurus, the latter a four-year-old S.agram's Guy Parisian; J. S. Fletcher's Lanthorn; W. Allan's Matchmaker and Mrs. E. Gilmour's Capitol.

The King's Plate and Toronto Cup Handicaps, which also carries $15,000 added, are the richest races of the meeting. The value of each was increased when the provincial tax on tickets was reduced from $7.500 to $5.000 daily. The C. J. connected by adding $5,000 to each event. The King's late, which is 1 1-8 miles, was won last year by Seagram Stable's Hapilie. The race is always restrict ed to province - breds that have not won except as two-year-olds, allowing the club's policy of encouraging the breeding of thoroughbreds.

The Toronto Cup in its different class ranks with the King's Plate as one of the most popular fixtures on the continent, and is second only to the Plate in interest as the meet. The best handicap horses of eastern America are entered in the Toronto Cup, a mile and a furlong, run on the last day May 28. It is 35 years old.

Steeplechasing is a great feature at Woodbine Park, and the third class of important races during the Spring Meet are the daily features for three-year-olds or upward. Feature races for two-year-olds have been moved on to the Fall Meet, thus removing the tendency to encourage over-speedy development of juveniles that the rich prizes in May might have. In this record, as in most others, the O. J. C. follows the established practice of the English Jockey Club.

The best class of steeplechase horses is represented in the Woodbine and Aintree steeplechases, most important of the jumble events, and run respectively on May 21 and 28. The Woodbine is 2 1-2 miles with $7,500 added, and is 40 years old. Three previous winners are again entered: Dunlo's Green (1925), Guinness's Bright Day (Lowtenay Beau (1922). Guinness also was the Aintree Steeplechase in 1923, and like most of the Woodbine chase aspirants is nominated in the shorter steeplechase.

Other important races which go to make the Woodbine spring meet the other outstanding events of the turf are the Woodstock Plate, $5.00 added 1-6 miles, for 3-year-olds; Dundern Stake for Canadian-bred 3-year-olds with $5,000 added; 1 1-6 miles; King Edward Gold Cup, value $5,000 added 1 1-6 miles, 3-year-olds and up., and the Connaught Cup handicap, $5,000 added, 1 1-8 miles.

There died recently in a London England, hospital the only man also struck matches for a living. For thirty-six years he had been employed to test ordinary and safety matches in one of the great match factories in England.

McGRAW WAITING FOR WARM DAYS

Says Pitchers Will Round Into Shape Later In Season

New York, May 12.—Some real dope on the pennant chances of the outstanding clubs in the major leagues may be obtained from the first intersectional battles of the season.

The strong eastern American league clubs were to open to-day in the west and the powerful western National League clubs were to play in the east.

So far the New York Giants have been playing around with the Boston Braves, the Philadelphia Phillies and the Brooklyn Robins, while the western clubs have been knocking each other off.

The Braves, Phillies and Robins may not be pushovers, but they certainly do not compare in class with the St. Louis Cardinals, the Pittsburgh Pirates the Chicago Cubs and the Cincinnati Reds.

The Reds, of course, are at present the last-place club, but they have enough pitching to better any club in the league, and it is a cinch they will get going eventually.

John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, disputes the contention that the weakest link in his club such a big early season advantage.

He insists the strength of the three weak sisters of the league has been underestimated, and he predicts that the Giants have been forced to club their way, as the pitching staff is not in condition and will not be until warmer weather comes. McGraw and a lot of eastern householders who are looking at the coal pile are wondering when the warmer weather is coming.

Amber is very inflammable.

The City of Buffalo, N.Y., is rising about half a foot a century.

SICK ABED EIGHT MONTHS

After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did Us All Her Work and Gained in Weight

Melfort, Saskatchewan. — "I had inward trouble, headaches and severe pains in my back and sides. Pains in my back generally hurt. I could not get up and I was in bed most of the time for eight months. An aunt came to visit and help me as I was unable to attend to my baby and household work. She told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking two bottles I could get up and dress myself. I also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine. When I first took the medicine I only weighed seventy-eight pounds. Now I weigh twice as much. If I get out of sorts or weary and can't sleep I always take another bottle of the Vegetable Compound. I find it wonderful good for female troubles, and have recommended it to my neighbors. It will be only too glad to answer any letters I receive asking about it."—Mrs. William Ritchie, Box 486, Melfort, Saskatchewan.

Now an Even Greater Car Scoring an even Greater Success

YOU know how all the resources of General Motors were used to make the original Pontiac Six the finest car ever introduced into the field of low priced cars. You know the wildfire success that resulted.

But do you know that the present day Pontiac—in its new low prices, its new and finer six—is an even greater car that is scoring an even greater success?

It offers the added appeal of new Fisher bodies—longer, lower, roomier and finished in new and striking combinations of enduring Duco.

It embodies important mechanical refinements—tilting beam headlights with foot control, new type ventilation and brake levers, oil-tight universal joints and a clutch even smoother in action.

It provides in full measure those basic Pontiac qualities that took all America by storm—those qualities of smartness, economy and long life which were developed by over three years' testing on the great General Motors Proving Ground!

Small wonder that the tide of public preference is turning to the Pontiac Six—as never before to another six in the low-priced field!

ROLLING WATERS THREATEN LAND OF EVANGELINE

Work on Protection Levees Abandoned as Flood Crest Rises

RICH COUNTRY

Two Parishes in Path of Stream Prepare to Evacuate

New Orleans, May 16—Rolling relentlessly down the brittle west side of the Atchafalya basin, flood water from ten major crevasses in the Bayou Des Graises levees to-day drew closer to St. Mary and St. Martin parishes spreading devastation on its way to the Gulf of Mexico. The treasured section is in the centre of the "Evangeline" country made famous by Longfellow.

The Bayou Des Glaises crevasses are approximately 150 miles northwest of New Orleans on the west side of the Atchafalaya river. Avoyelles and St. Landry parishes with their green crops of corn and sugar cane, already have been submerged by the torrents tearing through the Bayou Des Glaises levees and thousands of persons have been driven from their homes. Other thousands are preparing to seek safety.

Work on the protection levee between Port Barre and Butte La Rose in St Martin parish was abandoned last night when it became apparent that the flood rushing down the basin through the Bayou Des Glaises levees would be from two to three feet higher than the dyke.

VANDALS TEAR UP FLOWER GARDENS

Vandals have been removing tulips from the tulip beds of the King Grange school and $10 reward is offered for their apprehension. Some flowers were taken just before Mother's Day and some over the last week-end. The caretaker is very much incensed over the matter and it will go ill with the culprits if they are apprehended as this is vandalism.

FORMER CONVICT IS IDENTIFIED

Toronto, May 16.—Judgment by consent in favor of the plaintiff for $1,100 and costs was entered in the assize court by Mr. Justice Smith in the $10,000 suit brought by William E. Basteda against Dr. C. B. Farrar, of the Toronto Psychiatric hospital. The plaintiff, solicitor from Peterboro, claimed that on January 13, 1927, while visiting the home of his relatives in Toronto, "without his consent, forcibly and illegally apprehended and removed by the defendant and two persons unknown, he was taken to the Toronto Psychiatric hospital and there kept for three days." He claimed also that he was treated as an insane person and was forced to perform menial tasks.

GOVERNMENT CONDUCTS ENDLESS SEARCH FOR TWO FRENCH AIRMEN

Scout Hope That Fishing Villages May Have Tidings

Ottawa, May 16.—"No trace or information regarding trans-Atlantic fliers" reads a wireless report received by the Dominion department of Marine and Fisheries this morning, from Captain Hearn of the Government patrol boat "Minaki" crossing the waters between Canada and Newfoundland for the missing French airmen, Nungesser and Coli. The government ice patrol boat, Montcalm, engaged in similar quest in the inner area also reported that it had obtained no trace of the fliers. Government radio stations along the Atlantic coast have likewise been unable to obtain any information. The belief is expressed here that if the French airmen landed in Newfoundland their whereabouts would likely have been discovered, as they are now a week over due in their Paris-New York jaunt. It is stated, the fliers landed in Labrador, they could hardly be located for a period of three weeks at least, as no mail or other source is due to leave Canada or Newfoundland before June 1, or thereabouts.

A Last Nope

St. Johns Nfld. May 16.—Fortune Bay, a stocky finger of water poking into the south shore of Newfoundland, was the hope of authorities to-day in their tireless search for "White Bird" and Captains Nungesser and Coli, the missing French fliers.

A report from ocean pond, less than 100 miles east of the bay, that the plane apparently experiencing motor trouble, had passed over that town last Monday led the authorities to ask the French Premier Ancenay at St. Pierre, Miquelon, to go to the bay and make thorough search.

Should this mission prove futile Ancenay will then revise new plans, south coast, where there are number of small fishing settlements, one of which may hold the secret of French aviators.

HONESTY IS VINDICATED BY LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Geneva, May 16.—An example of the financial integrity of the League of Nations developed when the treasurer discovered that the Rockefeller contribution toward the publication of the international handbook was overpaid by 3 francs 15 centimes, or about 60 cents.

Following a conference or administrative officials, the treasurer was instructed to send to Mr. Rockefeller, one of the world's richest man, a cheque with the explanation that the League's original estimate for the job was 4,500 gold francs, but that the interest on the contributions from Mr. Rockefeller brought 8 francs, leaving the above surplus, which the League was returning with thanks.

William C. Warren Carrying Large Cargo of Grain Released

The William C. Warren, giant steel boat belonging to the Eastern Steamship Company, ran ashore on a rock during a fog at Salmon Point across from the Sandbanks on Saturday night at 11 o'clock.

The boat which carried a cargo of ninety-one thousand bushels of wheat was bound from Duluth to Montreal in charge of Captain Jordan, of Colborne, when she was overtaken by the dense fog which settled in the district. She cast struck the rocks which are known as Weskeag Point which stand in 1-2 feet of water, she sprang a leak and the Donnelly Wrecking Company immediately sent the "Cobourg" on which the grain was unloaded. The crew of 21 under William C. Wearherhead out and by five o'clock yesterday afternoon the boat was in the lake again.

The pumps of the vessel had been kept working all night to prevent the boat from sinking.

QUEBEC VOTING GOES ON TODAY

Both Parties Are Confident Of Results In Provincial Election

Montreal, Que., May 16.—Voting is taking place today in 78 of Quebec's 90 constituencies in a Provincial general election. The remaining 11 of the 85 seats are also to look on as members were elected by acclamation on nomination day.

Yesterday saw political meetings being held in all ridings with leaders of both sides in action. Sunday brought to a close a week of intense activity which followed rather a quiet period following the dissolution a month ago.

At the headquarters of both the Liberal and the Conservative parties here today confidence was expressed in the outcome of last night's voting, although throughout the province were reported dull and the roads heavy.

PLANE IS SENT TO AID SEARCH

Quebec, Que., May 16.—A hydroplane has been sent by the government of the province of Quebec to conduct an aerial search for the missing fliers in the north shore of the St. Lawrence River and Gulf for the missing Nungesser and Coli. Premier Taschereau made this announcement today.

MODERN ARK REFUSES TO FLOAT IN TIME OF FLOOD

Memphis, Tenn., May 16.—Exhorted by their parson, a community of negroes in the lowlands near Parkin, Ark., emulated the example of Noah when they heard the flood was approaching and hastily built an "Ark." Into the crude vessel they crowded themselves including chickens, dogs, cats and mules. While they waited for the flood, they prayed and rejoiced.

The flood came, but the ark refused to float. Water poured in from a hundred leaks in the uncaulked hull, and with the flood a foot and a half deep on the floor of the flat-bottomed craft its occupants fled to a railway embankment.

News of the "Ark" was received at Red Cross headquarters from relief workers.

TOURISTS MEAN WEALTH TO ONT.

Merrill Dennison Tells Rotary Club of Possibilities of North

Mr. Merrill Dennison, of Toronto, and proprietor of a popular summer resort at Bon Echo Lake spoke to the Rotary Club at noon today on the beauties and possibilities of the north part of Old Ontario. He declares that in the very near future that over two hundred million dollars a year would be brought into the province by United States tourists and urged the wisdom of protecting and enhancing the beautiful scenery and the fish and game possibilities of our great play grounds to the North. The profits from the tourist is much greater, Mr. Dennison claimed, than from either our mines or forests.

Alan Sprague and his father Mr. Merrill Sprague were guests of the Club at luncheon today. Dr. E. N. Baker expressed the pride that all citizens feel in oratory contest last week.

The members of the Rotary Club are to be the guests on an inter-community visit to the Victoria Church district on Wednesday evening next where they will be the guests of the Community Club of that section.

FRANKFORD PEOPLE INJURED WHEN CAR ROLLS OVER AN EMBANKMENT

Occupants Have Narrow Escape From Death On Highway

COMPLETE WRECK

W. E. Moynes, Driver, Is Blinded By Glaring Headlights

Plunging down a forty foot drop on the Brighton-Campbellford road early Sunday morning, a car owned and driven by M. E. Moynes, a taxi driver of Frankford, left the road when Moynes turned to avoid another car and turned turtle twice, landing with a sickening crash at the bottom of the embankment. Moynes was driving towards Brighton at an early hour on Sunday morning, returning from a dance, and had four passengers in the car with him. About one mile this side of Brighton, nearly opposite a sawmill, another car was coming in Moynes direction and while crowding over on his own side of the road to avoid a crash, and forgetting about the terrible drop on the right hand side of the road, the front wheels of the last slipped over the edge of the highway, and with a lurch the car careened down the precipice, turning over twice in its mad journey to the bottom.

Mr. Dan Snider, a young man of about twenty-two years of age, Mrs. R. Lawrence, Miss Meachan, daughter of the manager of the Standard Paper Mills and Miss L. Smith were the other passengers with Moynes when the accident occurred

Moynes Badly Hurt

Speaking to Mrs. E. Moynes, wife of the driver of the ill-fated car, this morning, The Intelligencer learned that Mr. Moynes suffered more than a shock to the car. He is a mixture that nobody will kilted," said Mrs. Moynes. "The headlights must have blinded my husband so that he couldn't see the edge of the road and he evidently thought all about the big drop on the right hand side."

Mr. Moynes suffered a deep, dangerous cut on the right hand, a painful gash on the forehead, his limbs badly cut in several places and was extremely severe bruising. At present he is under the care of Dr. D. W. McMullen, a physician of Frankford and is doing quite well.

Miss Meachan received a broken shoulder, Mrs. Lawrence a dislocated hip, and Snider a badly wrenched back. The wonder of the whole accident is that no one was killed outright. The car is a total wreck, smashed beyond recognition, and was still at the bottom of the drop this morning.

The Campbellford-Brighton road is quite narrow and is of gravel construction which may account for a part of the accident, as it is right on the edge of the road. Add to this the fact that a pair of blinding headlights glaring in the driver's eyes will totally blind for a moment and there is reason enough for an accident.

FLIERS SETTLE SALARY DISPUTE

Levine, Backer of Flight Issues New Contract to Aces

New York, May 16.—Three monoplanes today waited favorable weather to start on the first non-stop flights to Paris although last minute differences threatened for a time to wreck the plans of one of the contenders. The possibility that Clarence Chamberlin and Charles Bertaud might not navigate the plane "Columbia" in its race with Commander Richard Byrd's "America" and Capt. Charles Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis" arose as a result of a difference between the fliers and Charles Levine, backer of their flight, over contract terms.

The dissention was finally settled, however, by an arrangement of new contract that appeared a complete victory for aviators. They sought and received protection for their wives in case of mishap and guarantee of all money rewards, said to total upwards of $100,000 offered if they negotiate the New York-Paris flight.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

It is sweeter to learn from the experience of others, than that others should learn from thee.

PLAUTUS.

BLIND OR ASLEEP

Justice is blindfolded. She must not recognize the person, the rank or the condition of those who come under her judgments. To be respected Justice must be as impartial and as immutable as the Laws of Nature.

In the Belleville Police Court there is unfortunately a widespread impression that, on certain rare occasions, the bandage slips a little. Just at present there is a feeling of curiosity, perhaps slightly tinged with resentment, as to why one man goes promptly to jail for driving his car while under the influence of liquor while another convicted of the same offence is remanded from week to week, while clever lawyers under the benignant eye of an acquiescent magistrate search for a precedent to let him off on suspended sentence.

Has Justice nodded just a little as well as being blind?

EMPIRE GROWTH

The inauguration by the Duke of York of the new capital of Australia, Canberra, on Monday last is an event of supreme interest to the whole Empire. It was exactly twenty-six years before, to the day, when his majesty the King, who was then the Duke of Cornwall and York, opened the first parliament of Australia, after the confederation of the commonwealth. On the present occasion the Duke of York was able to review the progress which has been made since his royal father's visit. The Empire has advanced, as he says, "to a new conception of harmony and freedom, to the idea of a system of British nations, each freely ordering its own individual life, but bound together in unity by allegiance to one crown and by co-operation with one another in all that concerns the common weal."

What progress will the next quarter century see? As it is at this time Canberra is in an unfinished condition; its population is small and its greatness lies all in the future. Yet there is nothing far-fetched in the duke's prediction of growth, nor in Premier Bruce's anticipation that "millions of the British race will people the land in numbers surpassing the Motherland." Australia is carrying on a very aggressive campaign for British immigrants, and her dream of remaining a white man's country will be realized if the vigorous policies of its premier, seconded by the enthusiastic co-operation of the people, are any indication. If all dominions followed the strong leadership set in this matter by the commonwealth, there could be no doubt about the brilliant destiny in store for the Empire. Canada felicitates the commonwealth on this memorable epoch in her history. The greetings conveyed by Canada's minister of finance sincerely interpret the general sentiment of the Canadian people.

CREDITABLE WORK

"Sixty years of Canadian Progress," a booklet issued by Mr. R. H. Coats, Dominion Statistician, in connection with the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation, can only be accurately described as a veritable encyclopaedia of facts about Canada. Free from the dullness that too often makes official publications impossible, it tells everything about Canada's past and present in a manner and with a completeness that makes the book invaluable to the general reader as well as to the specialist and the student. It is a little work, indeed, that should be in the hands of every school teacher in Canada, and it would be well if it could find a place in every home in Canada. If all that is done in connection with the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee is done as well as this book has been done, then the celebration will not be a failure.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Mrs. Newrich, (looking over house plan)—What's this thing here going to be?

Architect—That is an Italian staircase.

Mrs. Newrich—Just a waste of money. We probably won't ever have any Italians coming to see us.

"I tell you I won't have this room," protested the lady from the country to the bellboy. "I ain't going to pay my good money for such a small room. You think just because I'm from a small town—"

The boy interrupted "Step in, madam. This ain't your room. This is the elevator.

Mrs. Naggs—Now, George, are you quite sure everything's shut up for the night?"

George—"All that I can shut up, is my dear."

Teacher (who has given his class an hour in which to write a composition on any subject they choose): "What have you written, Johnny?"

Johnny (reading): "The football match last Saturday. On account of unfavorable weather, the match was postponed.

Mrs. Green: "And whom does this statue represent?"

Mrs. Hills: "That is Diana, executed in terra cotta."

Mrs. Green: "Oh, the poor thing! How cruel they are in those outlandish countries!"

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Another way to realize that life might be worse is to visit a friend's house during the yearly housecleaning period.—Ottawa Journal.

The local Oriental, charged with having narcotics concealed in the heels of his shoes, may plead that he was stamping out the traffic.—Vancouver Province.

Premier Ferguson has suggested that unnamed parks or places in various communities be this year named "Canada Square," or "Canada Place." Any citizen who would care to donate to posterity the use of such a property can be assured that, if he so desires, the suggestion of the premier will be followed.—St. Catharines Standard.

Among with 'Up, guards, and at 'em!' "Don't shoot till you see the whites of their eyes." "You may fire, Gridley when you are ready." "I'll fight it out on this line if it takes all summer," and other historic sayings, now may be ranked Mrs. Snyder's "Let the old crab die."—Border Cities Star.

THOUGHTS OF MOTHER

And kings have often gained renown
On land and sea by conquest,
Yet who shall dare usurp the crown
That woos the brow of mother?

And queens who tempt the eyes of all
From gems shall borrow glory,
But who shall wear the aureole
That emanates from mother?

Unbending kings and queens review
Bejewelled mobs acclaiming,
Yet all bow low their homage due
And reverence to mother.

Words, unrestrained, may overwrite
The storied men of statecraft,
But when shall their most eager flight
Tell all that's love in mother?

And we who would life's candles burn
That service equal service—
How proud we'd be could we return
A mother's love as love of mother.

—I. B. Henry.

WHEN CHILDREN LOSE RESPECT FOR FATHER

Dad's the Desperate Villain in this deep, dark, despotic plot. Listen while Son Bill tells the tale.

DEAR ELSIE:

Imagine if you can the following condition: My mother is one of those old-fashioned women who wash, cook and scrub for years and years for a selfish man. You know the kind of a man I mean. The kind who, if they don't get supper on time, or don't get what pleases their palates, will rave and storm while poor mother says: "I'm sorry!" And now Ma is terribly unhappy. She has raised seven child ren, of whom I am one. But we all go our own ways. Of course we all try to make mother happy, but most of the kids are around and selfish and just like practically all children are.

The big trouble is DAD. He never takes Ma to church or for a visit with the neighbors or with friends who live a few miles away. He supposedly works like every night, and one would think he was married to his job. And the worst of it is that we suspect that he doesn't work every night, but goes his own way for a good time, with his hair-weather friend. When poor Ma wants to go somewhere he hasn't got the time to go, or says he can't afford it.

But when Ma worried herself sick and into the hospital he did all he could. Now that she is out again, he is back to his same old tricks living his own selfish life.

I earn my own living and don't depend on anybody in any way, and for thermore I have very little respect for my father and, the worst of it is, my younger brother and sisters are beginning to feel the same way. What's a fellow to do?

BILL R.

Yes, Bill, that's a sad story; and undoubtedly Dad has his full share of human cussedness. But why lay all the blame on him? Why not let poor, dear Ma shoulder her share of the responsibility?

You say she's an "old-fashioned woman." That may be, son. But old-fashioned women had sense and spunk and they knew how to use both assets.

What if Dad does wear? It doesn't necessarily follow that Mama has to act like a badly-dested fishworm. Hasn't she lungs and a windpipe? Then how about staging a little snap-py repartee herself?

And why conclude that Dad is a dis grace to his sex simply because he doesn't devote all his spare time to showing Ma the sights? Ma is evidently quite old enough to find her way around, and she should by this time have friends and interests of her own. Why shouldn't Dad have a few nights off to amuse himself?

No I'm not trying to shake your love for your mother, son, but I am trying to jolt you out of a very unhealthy attitude.

You have evidently been reared by a devoted woman who was extremely sorry for herself, and who has succeeded in convincing her child that she's the Original Domestic Martyr and that papa is a brute. Unless your faith er has committed much more drastic crimes than those mentioned in your letter, he is anything but a brute, and you should be thoroughly ashamed of yourself when you say that you have "no respect" for the man who gave years of service to your needs.

The hand that pays the bills deserves honor just as much as the hand that pites the pancakes. William, and your present attitude reflects most unfavorably on your ideals and intelligence. Snap out of it! Go on loving your mother by all means, but use your brains as you do so. Loyalty to her doesn't imply that you must also be loyal to her faults. It may be too late to cure her habit of self-pity and her lack of fairness, but you needn't accept them as part of your standards.

And that advice goes for more than Bill. This situation is far too common in our homes. It is so easy for an unhappy, self-pitying poorly-adjusted wife to blame her husband for her own lack of pep and popularity, and to enlist the sympathies of her children.

Unfortunately, the general public also is apt to sympathize with "Mama merely because she is Mama, and regardless of the rights of the case. Mama is a human and should be judged as other humans. Motherhood is no more sacred or beautiful than fatherhood. Let's be fair to Dad!

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

She picked up her note-book and marched from the room, but, at the door she threw him one last glance and added the wind drop to his cup of humiliation. She laughed!

Her first indignant impulse to leave then and there was succeeded by a malicious desire to put Brady to the embarrassment of discharging her. Some imp whispered in her ear that it would cost him an additional quality or two to do it.

If she could have known the mental anguish of the man in the inner office, she would have been avenged for the insult he had offered her.

Dan Brady stood in front of the mirror and gazed with dismay at the lar ral wreck of his beautiful attire. It was quite some time before he ceased to mourn his ruined raiment and became aware of the situation into which his infatuation for his pretty secretary had precipitated him.

Then he began to wonder how he was going to get home in such a state without being seen and raked for explanations.

He fumed. He cursed the impulse which had prevented his wearing an overcoat. He tried arranging a make shift waistcoat of paper. But the most prominent lawyer of the town could scarcely appear in the street with a newspaper for a vest and great glaring ink spots dotting the front of his carefully creased trousers.

He thought of sending some one to his home for an overcoat. But it was a long drive—and how could he explain his need for a coat on such a balmy afternoon. Regretfully he recalled his reply to his wife, when she had urged him wearing one that morning.

He suddenly thought of her with real affection—for the first time in years and years. She seemed an angel of sweetness, in contrast to the young vixen who had hurled the ink-pot.

Something had to be done—and quickly. Assuming an attitude of dignity which he was far from feeling, he rang for his clerk—a man who had been with him for years and could be depended upon.

"Jenkins," he said briefly, when the clerk opened the door and froze on the threshold with amazement at sight of his chief. "I've had an accident. I—I upset the inkpot, in some way. I've got to have an overcoat to get home. Can you lend me yours?"

"I—but I didn't wear mine, sir," stammered the clerk bewilderedly, wondering if his employer had been trying to drink out of the ink-well. How else could he have that decoration on his chest? "I—I—so warm this morning—"

"One of the other men, then. Ask any one!" he snapped.

Two minutes later, the clerk was back, looking distressed.

"Not a soul's got a coat, Mr. Brady. The weather——"

Brady raged.

"But I've got this, sir," said the clerk hastily. "It's an old one that the office boy had. He doesn't wear it any more."

He held up to his chief's irate gaze a gray sweater, dirty and ragged, flaunting the insignia of some club.

Today's Useful Hint on Jam and Jelly Making

By Elizabeth Palmer

Once you have tried the new abortbol method of making jams and jellies with Certo you will discard the old, uncertain way as an out of date piece of kitchen drudgery.

Certo is a pure fruit product—the jelling substance of fruit refined and bottled.

Certo jams and jellies jell perfectly—just tenderly firm every time—never a failure. They taste better, because the delicate, delicious, fresh flavor of your fruit is not boiled away. They look prettier, because they preserve their bright, natural color. You get half again more jam or jelly from your fruit because you save the juice which used to boil away.

A book of nearly one hundred recipes for delicious jams, jellies and marmalades comes with each bottle of Certo. Even if you are not an experienced cook, you can make perfect jams and jellies every time the Certo way.

More absorbent—
Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

NEW women today cling to the old-time "sanitary pad"—risky and uncertain—because of a new way called KOTEX.

It ends the embarrassment of laundry and disposal. You discard Kotex as easily as tissue.

Five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads. Thus you wear fewer gowns and say frocks under the most trying conditions.

Also deodorizes, and thus ends all fear of offending. 65% better class women now use it. Doctors widely urge it. Most hospitals employ it.

Costs only a few cents for a package of 12 at any drug or department store. Be sure you get the genuine KOTEX, for only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

Says Husky Is Best Medicine He Ever Tried

Man Makes This Statement As Indigestion, Headaches and Constipation Are Relieved

A man who is enthusiastic about the fine results he has obtained through the use of Husky, the herb preparation, now distributed by local drug stores, is Mr. T. B. Jacques, 758 St. Urbain St., Montreal, who tells of his experience with this medicine as follows:

"Indigestion and constipation gave me much trouble for approximately four years. I was always bilious, food soured on my stomach after meals and I would suffer from the formation of gas. I suffered frequently from severe headaches. I was obliged to take strong laxatives that were very weakening on my system.

"Since I began taking Husky my bowels have been as regular as clock work. I have no more sour stomach or distress after meals. I am feeling greatly relieved and my health is being built up in general. I have gained several pounds in weight since I began taking this medicine. I never felt better than I do today. Husky is the best preparation that I ever tried and I am glad to tell others of its merit."

At Good Drug Stores

Every person in this city suffering in any way Husky is recommended to relieve, owes it to himself or to herself to give the Husky treatment a trial. Husky can be obtained at good drug stores everywhere and when taken regularly and over a reasonable length of time it will help you just as it is helping thousands of others.

THE LONG, LONG TRIAL

Electric Mills, Miss., May 16—The Misses Bird, after reaching the ages of 70 and 74, forsook the even tenor of their lives in Electric Mills, Miss., and went to town for the first time. These two have spent their entire lives within 15 miles of Kemper, their county seat, but had never gone there. They were filled with awe at the sight of the courthouse, and announced in one voice that it was the prettiest building they had ever seen. Then, although they said they had enjoyed their outing, they were glad to turn their steps back toward their hills.

CANADIAN NATS. PRACTICE AT H.S. GROUNDS AT 6.15

Manager Mills Makes Strong Appeal For Big Turn-out

The management of the Canadian Nationals have issued orders that tonight's practice will be held on the High School grounds owing to the muddy condition of the diamond at the Agricultural field preventing the team from working out there. 'Peeny' Mills is especially anxious that every candidate for the team should be on deck at 6.15 p.m. sharp.

The season will open one week from tomorrow and certificates must be in within the next few days hence it is essential that the squad turn out in large numbers tonight. Practices will be held every night this week. The following are requested to be on hand—Gibson, Weir, Young, Le Ponte, Scott, Gerow, Amo, Hagerman, Ross, H. Mills, Meagher, Harper, Cleary, Berry, and any others who wish to try for a place.

Point Anne will hold their initial practice tonight and "Soup" Goyer promises some surprises for the fans when his team steps out.

The old Guard are still there and "Jerry" Burley, Alex Weir, Creiney, Harry Blakely and a couple of other new performers will strengthen the Cement-millers roster.

Nothing much has been heard of Deloro but Manager Elliot will place a bang-up aggression on the field when the Umps call "Play Ball" on the after noon of May 24th.

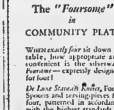

TONS LITERATURE IN SOVIET SAFE

Scotland Yard Authorities Conduct Examination of Documents

London, May 14—After working through the night with pneumatic drills and oxyacetylene torches, the police this morning completed the task of breaking open the safes in the Soviet House, supposed to contain something sought by the authorities, the nature of which has not been disclosed.

The search of the offices of Arcos Limited, the Soviet commercial agency in London and the Russian trade delegation, located in the building was begun Thursday. It continued the great er part of yesterday, large quantities of documents being examined. The newspapers have ceased to feature the discovery of the arms in the Arcos office, the Soviet explanation that the guns were samples of hunting rifles being generally accepted. Seven tons of documents, printed matter and correspondence have already been carted away from the Soviet House to Scotland Yard, it was estimated this morning by Soviet officials who charged that the police were acting in "an absolutely arbitrary manner."

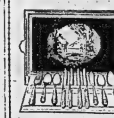

Four tons of worn out paper money is returned to the U. S. treasury every day.

The Irony of Love
By Charles Garvice

"Ah, Phenie!" he said pleasantly. "I've got back——" He paused, and, with narrowed eyes, scanned her face. "What's the matter, my girl? You look seedy; yes, you're looking anything but well. Where's Stranlyre—pardon, I mean, Mr. More?"

"Don't dare——" sprang from her pale lips, then she checked herself and shrugged her shoulders. "He's not here, he's away—he's not been here for days. He was sent for. He is the cattle, where he lives."

"Oh!" said Trevis, softly. "That's rather—strange, isn't it, Phenie? And you're fretting, of course." My dear girl, don't look at me like a wild cat. Really, I don't deserve it. You must admit that I have been a true friend——"

"Friend!" she echoed, with bitter scorn.

"Certainly!" he said, suavely. "The man who uses his wife to get a woman the one thing she wants in the world can surely be considered a friend."

Phenie turned away from him impatiently. "I don't want to talk to you about it. When I see you, when I hear your voice, I feel like a beast. And am! But, bad as I am, I'm not so bad as you. We're a pretty pair."

"My dear Phenie!" he murmured, with the half-mocking smile which always enraged her. "One of the most sensible proverbs know is that which says it is no use crying over spilled milk. There is another which is equally opposite: 'You cannot make an omelet without breaking eggs.' You wanted your omelet, we have had to break eggs. I don't want to hurt your feelings, but don't you think you're a trifle ungrateful? But don't let us quarrel. I wonder what is keeping Stranlyre away from you. He was—all right when you last saw him?"

She nodded indistinctly. "Yes, he was just the same. It's no use asking me any questions, as I don't know why he went, what keeps him."

"Then I must find out, and as soon as possible. I'll run down—shall I go to Glenfyre? No, I think not. To begin cautiously, my dear Phenie, it seems to me that I had better stay here, to look after you, for you certainly appear to need looking after. I'll write to Stranlyre."

He put his stick and gloves and an evening paper on the table, and Phenie, in an aimless way, took up the paper. Suddenly her eyes flashed, she clenched it tightly upon it, then she uttered a cry. It was a strange and fortunate thing, sometimes, that Trevis was a fool, and a fool and it brought Travers to his feet instantly. Without a word he snatched the paper from her, ran his eye up and down the column, then uttered an oath. This was the paragraph which had driven the blood back to Phenie's heart:

"A marriage has been arranged between the Earl of Stranlyre and Lady Maude, the only daughter and child of Lord St. Ives."

CHAPTER 27

Travers clenched the paper in his hand and turned to Phenie. His usually pale face was flushed; his eyes glittered feverishly; he laughed a short laugh in which was more of triumph, and he sank on the table, and, thrusting his hands in his pocket leaned toward her, stared at her as long as if he did not see her, as if his eyes were fixed on the vision of a still more complete triumph.

BELLE THEATRE

Every style of hair bob known to the fomasorial art will be on exhibition in "Hyde or Bruise," the Paramount picture coming to the Bell Theatre Monday. Adolphe Menjou is the star of the production, Greta Nissen and Arlette Marchal his blonde and brunette leading women.

In selecting types to portray a picture-mad group of the Paris younger set, Director Richard Rosson took the most bizarre and striking styles of hair cuts available in Hollywood. About equally divided between blondes and brunettes, the girls display boyish bobs, mannish bobs, and all the different variations of the bob that have been discovered.

SULPHUR SAFE TO HEAL SKIN

For unsightly skin eruptions, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows next day.

Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist. Greta Nissen wears her beautiful blonde hair long in the earlier sequences, but soon has it bobbed to show her transition from an unsophisticated country girl, to a reckless, plunging, sexy Parisienne.

PANIC AT GAME AS STAND FELL; ONE IS KILLED

At Phillies' Park—Section Gave Way After Bleachers Jammed

Philadelphia, Pa., May 16.—During the seventh inning of Saturday's game between the Phillies and Cardinals at the antiquated Broad and Huntingdon Street Ball Park one man was killed and scores injured when the lower right field stands collapsed.

An unidentified man, with a name and of Peter A. Golden, a lithographer, in his pocket, was trampled to death in the wild rush. Golden's body was taken to the morgue.

More than twenty persons were treated for minor injuries at the ball park and as many more hurried away to hospitals near by. Cut hands and legs and bruises constituted most of the injuries.

The point where the collapse occurred is just back of first base and part of the double-decked stand.

A big holiday crowd of 18,000 was on hand. It started to rain in the third inning and the bleacher fans made a rush for the protected left and right field stands. Soon after the Phillies scored eight runs in the sixth inning there seemed to be thousands of persons hurried back of first base, all trying to keep out of the wet.

Sunday's Games

New York, May 16.—Schang's homer in the third with the bases full enabled the Browns to vanquish the Philadelphia Athletics 8 to 6 at St. Louis Sunday in a game featured by three home-runs. "Bing" Miller continued his batting spree started Saturday when he got four safeties one a homer by gathering four hits from four times at bat. Cochrane and Collins each got homers.

Boston bunched three of their four hits off Thomas with a sacrifice and Falk's wild throw to the infield to gather two runs, enough to win, 2 to 1, in the first game of the series at Chicago. Tony Welzer was hit freely by the White Sox but tightened up in the pinches and was given sensational support.

MALONEY TO MEET SHARKEY THURS. EVE.

New York, May 16.—Jack Sharkey and Jim Maloney, Boston's rival heavyweights, will meet in the ring at the Yankee Stadium on Thursday night in one of the most important of Promoter Tex Rickard's heavyweight elimination encounters. The Bay State title contenders are listed to travel fifteen rounds.

The rivals will perform, from present indications, before the largest outdoor boxing gathering of the current open-air season, and the winner will advance a peg in the quest for a match with champion Gene Tunney next fall. The loser will slide gracefully out of the action to become just a heavyweight.

The first people to build real cities are believed to have been the Sumerians, who lived along the Tigris and Euphrates rivers.

WHISKERY WINS KENTUCKY DERBY

Harry Whitney's 3-Year-Old Leads Big Field In Turf Classic

Churchill Downs, Ky., May 16.—With the traditional floral horseshoe draped across his noble brown shoulders Harry Payne Whitney's three-year-old colt Whiskery was reclaimed by the deafening cheers of more than 75,000 enthusiastic spectators the winner Saturday afternoon of the fifty-third running of the historic Kentucky Derby Stakes. Under a perfectly-judged ride by Pony McAtee the brown son of Whisbrook 2nd and Prudery flashed past the winning post at Churchill Downs at the head of a field of fifteen three-year-olds, followed by Joseph E. Widener's sweeper gelding Osmand and Jock, one of the long shots of the field, owned by E. M. McLean.

It was a notable victory for the East which has now carried off the two leading three-year-old classics of the Spring. Mr. Whitney's Bostonian has but captured the Preakness at Pimlico Whiskery, third in that event, today vindicated himself over the longer route of a mile and a quarter, which he ran in 2.06 flat over a course that was improving, but far from fast.

Bostonian this afternoon was by no means disgraced finishing fifth, beaten only a head for fourth money by J. N. Camden's Hydromel.

Whiskery ran like a great colt. Rated well off the pace set by Chick Lang on Jock, he came on like a flash at the finish, climbing up on his opponents and putting them back one by one. As they flashed past the winning post he had a head margin on Osmand, which led Jock by a length and a half.

HURLED FROM AUTO

Hamilton, May 16.—Hurled from the car in which he was a passenger early this morning, on the Toronto-Hamilton highway, John Chaney, 23 years of age of Hamilton, sustained injuries which resulted in his death a few minutes after admission to the General Hospital.

GIANTS RALLY IN THIRD INNINGS BEAT CINCINNATI

McQuillan Pitched Fine Ball While Teammates Bombarded Rixey

New York, May 16.—The only thing that wasn't cut and dried about the Giants second successive victory over the Cincinnati Reds at the Polo Grounds yesterday was the weather. It rained and showered, the sun played hide-and-seek behind clouds that blew up and down and the wind [illegible] to three directions, leaving it uncertain for some time in the first place, and model- [illegible] decide not to stop it after it was under way.

But there was no such indecision on the part of the Giants. They simply set about knocking Eppa Jeptha Rixey about as far out of the box as his name would stretch and Hugh McQuillan, the smiling Long Islander did the rest. The combined result of the concentrated attack on Rixey and the incidental home run by Bill Terry off Red Lucas gave the Giants a 6-3 decision.

At Brooklyn five pitchers failed to stop the Pirates and Pittsburgh triumphed over the Robins for a second time by 9 to 6. The winning score was made off Ehrhardt in the seventh after Big Robbie had knocked Lee Meadows out of the box in the previous session to level a six-run lead. Joe Harris hit a homer.

REFEREE-IN-CHIEF TO BE APPOINTED

Montreal, May 16.—A referee-in-chief is to be appointed by the National Hockey League to supervise the work of the arbiters in league games, to see that a uniform interpretation is placed on the playing rules, and generally to have a roving commission over the circuit seeing that games are properly conducted. That, he will assume some of the duties which have hitherto fallen to President Calder, duties which entailed travelling by the president at a time when, from the point of view of league affairs, it was inconvenient for the chief executive to be on the road. No names have been mentioned in connection with the new post, which will be a full-time position.

The decision to appoint a referee-in-chief was reached at the semi-annual meeting of the National Hockey League held Saturday morning and afternoon at the Windsor Hotel when the club owners heard reports on the past season's activities—and difficulties—it was introduced by Major Frederick McLaughlin, owner of the Chicago Black Hawks, and was apparently an upshot of a discussion of the row which occurred in the Boston-Ottawa final at Ottawa last April, which culminated in an attack by Boston players on Referees Laflamme and Billy Bell, and also a consideration of the rule question.

Protecting the Mileage You Buy

The purchase of a car represents an investment in so many miles of transportation. Premature wear and costly repair bills caused by overheating naturally cut down this mileage, and you, the owner of the car, stand the losses.

Today, 10,000,000 drivers are protecting their investments in motor transportation with the BOYCE MOTO METER.

The BOYCE MOTO METER is a downright utility as a heat indicator, signalling the dangers of overheating fifteen to twenty minutes in advance. It has saved millions of dollars to car owners, and its beauty adds attractiveness to any make of car.

To WOMEN who drive cars 5½ days out of 7

SHOPPING. Meeting trains. Taking the children to school. Driving to the afternoon bridge. Daily, the modern woman must depend on a car. To her breakdowns are a calamity. So she is wisely learning to prevent them.

She is learning, for exmple, that the wrong oil, or careless lubrication, causes 75% of all motor troubles. This is why.

Your motor, when running, is constantly threatened by metal-scorching heat—by grinding friction. It's an oil's job to withstand that heat, to prevent raw metal from chafing against raw metal. Right there ordinary oils fail. They wither and burn and break down. And when your motor oil fails repair bills soon follow.

Little wonder, then, that experienced women motorists turn to Veedol—the oil that gives the fighting "film of protection"—made to resist heat 100 degrees hotter than the hottest friction spot in your car!

Today, drive up to a dealer who displays the orange and black Veedol sign. Ask for Veedol by name. The attendant will quickly drain your crankcase and refill with the correct Veedol for your car.

MONTREAL SENDS 5 CONSERVATIVES TO LEGISLATURE

Figures Show Liberal Majority in Quebec Is Strengthened

PREMIER'S STATEMENT

Arthur Suave, May Resign Leadership of Conservative Party

Montreal, May 17.—A striking approbation of the policy of progress, initiative, sane administration and of the union of all true elements of our people," was how Premier Alexandre Taschereau characterized the result of the Provincial general election yesterday by which his government, already in a powerful majority in the last legislature, was returned with an even greater...following. Of 95 seats that constitute the legislative assembly, the Liberal party captured 72 outright and had claim on two more, candidates in St. Maurice and Chambly, Sayenay being elected as Independent Liberals. The Conservatives who had 18 members in the assembly at dissolution, saw this representation reduced to 10. Of these five were from the Island of Montreal, including William Tremblay, who presented himself as a labor man, but was put up at the Conservative Convention. The election still remains to be carried out in Gaspe where the poll was deferred until next Monday. No statement has yet been given out by Arthur Sauve, Conservative leader, and much interest surrounds his expected declaration. During the campaign Mr. Sauve made it clear that if he were not returned with a majority he would resign the leadership of the party.

PLAN MEMORIAL SERVICE MAY 24

Parks Board Arranges For Flag Raising On Victoria Park.

The 24th of May promises to see a very interesting ceremony in Belleville. Mr. E. Gus Porter has donated a limited flag to the Parks Board, which is being set towards the south end of Victoria Park.

On the 24th the beautiful ceremony of flag-raising will be held. It is understood that the Argyll Light Infantry with their band, the Mayor and City Fathers, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Guides and the Parks Board will all be on hand when the raising takes place. A steel plate is being prepared to attach to the base of the pole.

The ceremony will be of a commemorative nature, bringing to mind the sacrifices of the gallant Canadian troops who fought so valiantly and courageously for the Motherland in her hour of need. It is more particularly the loss of Roger, Mr. E. Gus Porter's son, that has led to the Girls' Idea.

A deputation from a newly formed female club awaited the Parks Board at their regular meeting last night. The enthusiasts of this fame wished tennis courts to be built at the new Recreation Park. Nothing was decided upon in this matter.

A letter was sent to Miss Elizabeth Corbett, thanking her for the gift of maple saplings for planting in the City Parks.

The usual pay sheet was read, and passed.

THIRSTY BELLEVILLIANS MUST WAIT APPOINTEE

Although in some centres in Ontario and especially the larger cities, residents of Canadian Legion will be asked to purchase their permits which are required under the new Government Control Act for the purchasing of whiskey, permits for Belleville citizens will not be available for a short time yet.

At a late hour this afternoon the official appointments of the chief vendor and his assistant had not arrived and it will be some time yet before the Belleville store is fitted up to suit the requirements of the Standards laid down by the Board of Control.

Speaking with several prominent citizens this afternoon, they all stated that they did not anticipate that permits would be issued until the official appointments were made, but that they might come at any time, and a man even ventured to say that the appointments might arrive in the morning accompanied by the permits.

However, even if the permits could be obtained in Belleville no-one-more would do little good as far as local buying is concerned, but the holders of them have the pleasure of gloating of their possession.

THEFT CHARGE IS DISMISSED

W. D. Donnely of Marmora Acquitted On Charge of Stealing Pedigree

A case in which much interest was manifested, partaking to the dog fanciers, came before Magistrate Casement in Marmora a week ago. W. D. Donnelly of Marmora, was charged with stealing a dog pedigree and a bill of sale of a dog, the property of Thomas E. Gray. The accused at first elected to be tried by the Magistrate, but subsequently changed his election to the previous election and elected for trial before the County Judge. The Magistrate then proceeded with the preliminary hearing. The evidence disclosed that Donnelly was a breeder of thoroughbred Boston terriers, and a puppy was sold to Grey. Months later a question arose as to the papers, and the accused alleges that he loaned the pedigree to Grey for the purpose of convincing others, to whom the puppy had been bred, that it was a thoroughbred. Grey alleged that the papers were returned to Donnelly for Donnelly to have the dog registered at Ottawa. The accused alleged that he was willing to have them registered upon payment by Grey of $10.00 extra. At the conclusion of the Crown's case, committal was asked for. Counsel for the accused argued that the Crown had not made out a prima facie case on the grounds that there was no evidence of theft disclosed. Magistrate Casement reserved decision and later took place for judgment, dismissing the charge against Donnelly and refusing to commit the accused. H. C. Deroche appeared for the accused. H. C. Donnan appeared for the Crown.

BISHOP SEAGER DELIVERS CHARGE

Work of Bible Society Commended By Bishop At Synod

Kingston, Ont., May 17.—Delivering his first charge to Synod of the Anglican Church of Ontario here today, Rev. C. A. Seager, Bishop of Ontario commended the necessity of fresh vision of purpose of God in His Church and a wider vision of objective of furthering of the Kingdom of God.

He referred to the work of Upper Canada Bible Society as essential to work of the whole church of England, distributing scriptures as it does in 200 languages. Ontario he emphasized the fact that in his opinion society should be undenominational.

Bishop Seager appealed to the Synod to strengthen official organization of the Church itself.

"Other societies and organizations are of great value," he said, "and should have active support, but the great need is to concentrate on the church itself. Remember the diocese and not the parish is the unit for organization and administration in any episcopal church while the parish is only one unit in great whole."

Different Conditions

Kingston, Ont., May 17.—Referring to present day conditions which affect the church, he said, "The church works today under totally different conditions to those which prevailed even just before the great war and we must adapt ourselves to the requirements placed upon us."

There are two ways which are proposed for adoption by Synod were discussed by the Bishop. They are as follows:—an increased stipend for missionary clergy, the minimum being $1,-200 and home, with an initial allowance for transportation for those clergy in priest's orders.

Encouragement of the clergy. "Such an inauguration would reduce the cost of insurance to the individual" Bishop Seager said. "And would make it possible under-paid clergy to make some provision for their family at death.

Reciprocity with other Diocese in the matter of beneficiary funds, under which clergy can move more freely from one diocese to another without prejudicing their claims to superannuation.

GEORGE FAULKNER HANGS UP RECORD

What is believed to have been a new record was made on the Bay of Quinte Country Club yesterday afternoon, when Mr. George Faulkner, perhaps the crack player of the city, made a hole-in-one three hole on the course, a long drive of four hundred and twenty yards, in three strokes. George was playing with one of the directors when he made the low score, and speaking to the Intelligencer to-day, the director stated that he did not think that in his history of golf he had ever seen this hole been played under four

VETERAN RAILROADER TO RETURN TO BELLEVILLE

Mr. George F. Ostrom, well-known C.P.R. conductor of this city, is in receipt of a letter from his uncle, Mr. Louis Carre, Chief Legal Counsel for the Delaware and Hudson Railway at Albany, N.Y., stating that he expects to spend the months of July and August at his summer home, Shannonbank, near this city.

Mr. Carre is in his eighty-fifth year and it will be recalled that just two years ago while at Rossmore he slipped and fractured a limb and owing to his advanced age, fears for his recovery were entertained. So serious was Mr. Carre's condition at that time that a special car was despatched to this city from Albany, N.Y. to convey him home. A specialist also came with the train from Albany and a Belleville nurse accompanied Mr. Carre home.

However, owing to Mr. Carre's well preserved physique he was able to overcome the shock and is now again able to take long walks and is every day at his post of duty, although now an able assistant has been appointed to him. Only a short time ago Mr. Carre acted for a twelve million dollar estate that had been in legal circles for years and won his case.

Mr. Carre's wife and two sons died some years ago and his grandson and daughter-in-law now reside with him. The grandson who is also a lawyer is in the legal department of the Delaware and Hudson Railway with Mr. Carre.

Crystal Beach Man Smuggled Trinkets At Customs Points

"APPEARED EASY"

Canadian Amusement Man Names Jack Sullivun As Inspector

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 17.—The man who made twenty-six trips across the border at Port Erie and Niagara Falls with smuggled goods in his car, without detection gave evidence before the Royal Customs Commission this morning. Not only was he able to bring goods across, but according to evidence the car was not searched once in the 26 trips. Customs officers would look in and ask him if he had anything, and, on receiving the negative response would let him pass.

Hundreds of Dollars

"It looked pretty easy to me" said this man, John Ritchie, of Crystal Beach, on the Canadian shore, opposite Buffalo. It developed that Mr. Ritchie runs some "games of skill and chance" at Crystal Beach and previously operated a penny arcade, selling cakes and perfumery to lucky winners. He admitted that he had brought these prizes to the value of several hundreds of dollars into Canada without declaring them. He stated, however, that he could not purchase articles which he smuggled in Canada.

Mr. Ritchie explained that after he had crossed the border a number of times bringing any smuggled goods and found the car was not searched it "took od easy to him" so he began bringing in goods.

Amos Vanderveer of Port Colborne was questioned respecting certain rum running trips which he made and men tioned F. Savard was one of his passengers." Mr. Ritchie that the speed of Savard with whom he dealt was Jack Sullivan.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

I have found by experience that nothing is more useful to man than gentleness and affability.

TERENCE

THE GREAT TOMB

As the hours and days go by and there comes no tale of Nungesser and Coli being alive, the reflection is borne upon one whether, after all, their adventure was worth while? It may be contended, of course, that all of the victories that man has achieved over nature, that much if not most of the progress of science, have been won by just such sacrifices on the part of dauntless souls, and that, therefore, the possible burial of the two gallant Frenchmen in "cold ocean's grey and melancholy waste," will not be in vain. But that, it seems to us, is a barren argument. The machine in which Nungesser and Coli set out upon their heroic flight was not of the character that can ever be used to serve any vital or even very useful need of man in communication or transportation between the two continents. Crossing of the Atlantic by huge airships capable of carrying passengers and cargo may, conceivably, become a useful commonplace in the not distant future, and it is not difficult to champion reasonable experiments toward that end. But what object is there to be attained in the mere matter of a single passenger or two passengers flying from one continent to the other in a couple of days that is sufficiently great to call for the sacrifice of human lives? That, it seems to us, admits of no answer.

Man has not yet conquered either air or sea. He has, to a vast extent, an extent unthought of two or three generations ago, accommodated them to his uses; but that is a vast. The constant tales of mishaps in the air, the ever growing roll of tragedies on the sea—they carry their own moral. The time may come when nature may give up some secret that will enable man to fly in the clouds just as safely as they now traverse the earth, but it is not yet. As for the sea, that "great tomb of man," it is still today what Byron wrote of it in a now far day:

"Roll, thou deep and dark blue ocean—roll!
Ten thousand fleets sweep over thee in vain."

MATERNAL INSTINCT

Kidnapping is a peculiarly repellent crime, especially the kidnapping of a helpless child. Half a century ago the whole civilized world was intensely interested in the kidnapping of the child Charlie Ross, and the interest was maintained for years. Last week all Toronto was stirred by the kidnapping of a two-months-old baby which was taken from its carriage outside a store on a business street and was not heard of for three or four days. It was plain that the baby was not stolen for ransom, for the parents are poor and the father being a day laborer. But its disappearance caused widespread compassion for the distracted parents and indignation against the unknown kidnapper.

Now the child has been discovered and restored to its mother. The kidnapper is not a person of criminal tendencies, but a childless mother longing for a child. Seeing a pretty baby in its perambulator alone and unguarded, she could not resist the impulse to take it up and carry it home. That this poor woman is not mentally well balanced is evident from the fact that she endeavored to make the neighbors believe that she had just given birth to the baby. Here is a pathetic case. She is a French-Canadian, and the maternal instinct is strong in her. No doubt in snatching the baby up and taking it home with her she acted on an irresistible impulse without thought of the heinous character of her action. If she were mentally normal she would have satisfied her maternal craving by going to an orphans' home and there selecting an infant to love and care for. Her stealing of the child of a real mother was a perversion of the maternal instinct. But it is to be hoped that a lenient view will be taken of her case. Technically she is guilty of a crime—and yet she is not really a criminal, and is to be pitied not less than blamed.

SOVIET NEST RAIDED

The headquarters of the Russian trade delegation in London have been raided by the police of Scotland Yard and a grist of documents seized. Then is, of course, a tremendous squeal in the British Government from the chief of the delegation. That squeal will be pleasant in the ears of most Britishers.

Too long have these Soviets been permitted to carry on their sinister practices in the heart of the British Empire; too long allowed to make their headquarters a centre for the most pernicious propaganda. No country in the world except Britain would have tolerated these revolution ary foreigners; there was general belief that British generosity had this time overstepped itself.

The Soviets in London have support ed everything that tended to create chaos and the lifeling of class against class; they have even supplied funds wrested from the suffering artisans of Russia to back any movement calculated to bring about trouble. During the great general strike in Britain last year the Unions did themselves proud in refusing financial assistance from Russia; it remained only for the miners misled by a loud-mouthed fellow to accept such moneys.

A belated raid but better late than never. Even if no incriminating documents have been seized the police action will indicate to the foreign revolutionaries that they are being closely watched and not immune from the process of law.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

There are numerous complaints that in most American cities a discount of ten per cent. is exacted on Canadian money. The remedy is easy: Buy in Canada, where Canadian money is always at par.—Hamilton Herald.

Norway only voted in favor of government control a few weeks ago, but their liquor stores are already doing business. Apparently the motto over there is: "We want what we want when we want it."—Hamilton Spectator.

We used to believe that no man should kiss a girl until he was engaged to her. Now we believe that he should at least wait until the paint is dry.—Kitchener Record.

REST

From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving
Whatever gods may be,
That no life lives forever;
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea.

Then star nor sun shall waken,
Nor any change of light;
Nor sound of waters shaken;
Nor any sound or sight;
Nor wintry leaves nor vernal,
Nor days nor things diurnal;
Only the sleep eternal
In an eternal night.

It was just a wayside shanty deep along the P.D.Q.R.R. out West. The troupe of wandering actors set their luggage down on the platform to wait until train time.

The villain of the outfit, having nothing else to do, strode over to where the antique model of a station agent was parked.

"I say, stranger," he began, "do the express trains ever stop here?"

"We-all," was the reply, "they did once for Jesse James."

"Doctor," began the well-dressed patient, "my eyes are bothering me a bit; see what you can do for me in the way of glasses."

"Take a seat, sir," said the oculist. "And now tell me what kind you've been wearing."

"None. I've never worn glasses in my life. Never needed 'em before."

"Indeed! You will pardon my mistake, but I judged from the mark on the bridge of your nose that you—"

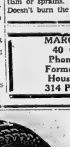

"Oh," interrupted the other. "That mark I got that from drinking home brew out of fruit jars."

DISASTER IN MARRIAGE WITH IMMORAL MEN

By ELSIE MARLOWE

The sweetest girl in town. That's what they called little June two years ago when she announced her engagement to Fred, and all the other men envied him and called him a lucky dog.

But even then there were rumors—flickering knowing looks among the men—

Secret whispers and tattlings among the women——

But little laughing June heard none of the rumors, saw none of the ominous looks. To her, big dashing Fred was a godling sent straight from heaven.

Often and often she wondered if she was half good enough for him. And at night, when she said her prayers, she gave choked, tearful thanks to the good Father for the beautiful gift of Fred's love.

Little laughing June, stripping to her wedding with stars in her eyes and a song in her heart and the sun in a halo on her golden curls—

That was two years ago.

And now? Now the stars are gone from June's eyes and the song from her heart. She looks like a small gray ghost as she sits in an invalid chair recovering from a long, wasting illness. And the little baby is—dead. June's breaking heart dares not even think that the baby had lived. Death is sometimes merciful.

And Fred? Fred is a haunted man with the fangs of remorse tearing forever at his heart.

You have heard of stories like that—and shuddered—and turned away.

Has it ever occurred to you that your own cowardice and laxity may have helped to make such stories possible? Read this brave, honest letter and then search your own heart.

DEAR ELSIE:

I am interested in the discussion of the Single Standard and think J. K. L. is right when she says that women make the double standard possible by their tolerant attitude toward men with a Past and their intolerance toward women in the same boat.

You know as well as I that men are welcomed into homes and allowed to play with the children, who, at the same time, speak of their love adventures. But suppose it was a woman with such a record! Oh, boy, how soon she would be kicked out!

I know of a woman who deliberately entered marriage with a man whom she knew to be immoral! Yes that same woman was fiercely intolerant if she discovered that a young girl had made a mistake. If a girl smoked ,that woman thought it was terrible.

I know of another woman who listens to her husband brag of his affairs with other women. Does she turn against her husband because of that? I'll say she doesn't! But she seizes the chance to gossip about those women and snub them because "she is better than they are."

That's the condition that prevails in the world today and I believe that we women are as much to blame for it as the men, if not more. We women suffer from the double standard more through ourselves and our children than men ever can and we should fight against it even harder than men. But instead, we countenance it and uphold the men who have the rich records.

V.F.C.

Yes, my dear. But there's a glimmer of wisdom on the dark horizon. More and more States are considering laws which will make physical examination before marriage obligatory. And, to their everlasting credit, let it be said that the churches are lined up in their war on tainted unions. When the women themselves take their stand, a new era is going to dawn for suffering humanity.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I read with much enthusiasm the letter written by "Harvard."

I am a girl of seventeen and considered quite good-looking, but I do not have many dates because I do not approve of petting. I like parties, dances and good times, but do not like petting parties, etc. There aren't nearly enough men like "Harvard."

C.M.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

My story is somewhat similar to that of "Harvard," who wrote you recently.

I am a girl of eighteen and have a good home, wonderful parents who want me to have a good time in the right way. They have given me a high school education and for that I am heartily thankful. And they give me attractive clothes. With all these advantages I am not satisfied. I would like to meet a nice young chap, one who would really respect a good girl.

Nowadays, boys don't like nice girls. They call them flat tires. I wish there were more young men like "Harvard."

SINCLAIR'S

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN
By Mildred Barbour

But Bragg, now quite desperate, grabbed it, shed his coat morning coat and inserted his head in the dingy V shaped opening. With a sigh of relief he saw that the garment effectually concealed the ink splotch on the shirt. As for the trousers, well, he'd have to make a dash for it through the outer offices. He only feared that he wouldn't meet an acquaintance in the street before he reached his car.

He bolted through the office whirr. Sybil was calmly typing his letters, but he didn't see her. Every one saw the boss, however, and tongues wagged.

When he reached the street, the sky was clouded and a chill wind was blowing. Suddenly he was aware of how cold and wet that ink spot was. He began to sneeze and, the time he reached home, he felt a chill coming on. He hoped his wife was in. She'd rix him a hot drink.

She was home. She hovered and tucked him up before the fire with a rug over his knees. Model woman, she asked no questions. He blessed her, patted her shoulder, and she, unaccustomed to such a caress, blushed painfully.

He decided that a man threatened with ill cold ought to remain at home —so he did, for three days. His wife waited on him devotedly, and I'm lay on a couch before the fire and thought long thoughts. He was comparing his wife with his secretary—to the detriment of the latter.

Sybil was like a young tigress—brutal, dangerous, deceptively soft to the touch, but ready to turn and rend savagely with claws concealed in velvet.

It wasn't until he returned to the office that he realized the impasse into which his motivation for his private activity had plunged him.

He didn't dare to dismiss her, lest she talk. She had him in the bollow of her hand.

CHAPTER XX.
Silent Blackmail

It was a changed Dan Brady who returned to his office, when he had recovered from the shock of the inkwell incident. Sybil was aware, in some subtle sort of way, of this change.

She had expected, the first morning, to receive her dismissal. Instead, she was summoned, as usual, to take his letters. Brady was fidgety and avoided looking directly at her. Once their glances met simultaneously to the ink spot on the Turkish rug, and she saw him flush. But he said nothing. His manner was formal, respectful.

He knew, and Sybil knew, that he didn't desire her. Her lip curled with scorn for his cowardice.

She nothing, resist taking advantage of the situation. After all, he asked her something for the insult he had offered her. So, when he suggested that an occasional Saturday afternoon off would be very acceptable, he agreed with alacrity.

She found that keeping the household going while Dads lazed before the fire and entertained old cronies, required more time than she could snatch after office hours. There was cleaning to be done, mending, and laundry. She really needed that occasional Saturday afternoon.

And Dan Brady found he needed that respite from her presence. He was glad to have her away. She disturbed him terribly, by her silent reminder of his rebuff and his humiliation. When she asked for a raise in salary, it was granted immediately. It was due her anyway. She had entered his employ at the salary of a stenographer and, when Brady's secretary died and returned to her post, Sybil refused to had not been so much moved by an increase in salary. Brady was willing with half the office force have increased the contents of her pay-envelope—except for one thing—and that interested him. He must have her what she asked.

Question. And, at the end of the day, as he watched the door close behind her, he had a feeling of relief such as few men experienced on seeing that glowing beauty disappear from their sight.

He even was glad when his wife came to his office on some errand or other, for it felt like a small child who wants to hide behind its mother's skirts.

The first time she came, after the ink-pot episode, she saw the stain on the Turkish rug and exclaimed:

"Oh, Dan, what a pity! Such a beautiful rug! How did it happen?"

"I accidentally brushed the inkwell off the desk with my sleeve," he explained hastily. A dull red mounted to his forehead, as he realized that his pretty secretary was having an attack of coughing in her corner by the window.

"Oh, dear," Mrs. Brady was all solicitude for the girl. "You must take care of that cough. It's such bad weather for it. My husband just escaped a horrid one. I hope you didn't get it. Will you let me prescribe some cough medicine? It always helps Mr. Brady so much."

"Thank you, very much," said Sybil, in really hoarse tones. "It is bad weather for colds—so unseasonable."

YOUNG WOMEN SUFFER MOST

These Two Found Relief by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"Ayer's City, Quebec.—"For three years, and at the end of the year I always feel tired and have no appetite. I was awful sick each month, but no backpains in my back until sometimes I was obliged to stop working. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I heard many women telling how good it was so I thought it would help me. And it did. Now I take six bottles every year and recommend it to others."—DONALDA FANTAUX, Ayer's Cliff, Quebec.

"Unable to Work"

Canning, Nova Scotia.—"I had irregular periods and great suffering at those times, the pains causing vomiting and fainting. I was teaching school and often for more than I would be unable to attend to my work. Through an advertisement in the papers I knew of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has been of great benefit to me, the troubles being completely relieved."—LAURA J. EATON, Canning, King's County, Nova Scotia.

NO TRACES OF MISSING MEN

Week Elapsed Since Niagara Men Left For Belleville

Master of lake vessels and residents along both shores of Lake Ontario have been requested to keep a sharp lookout for any trace of the 40-foot cabin cruiser Alma, in which William Collins, aged 43 years, of Niagara-on-the-Lake, and Harry Porteous, aged 21 years of Toronto, left Niagara-on-the-Lake for this city a week ago this morning. An anxious watch has been maintained at the Belleville dock, but now hope has been practically abandoned.

Nothing has been heard of the men since the launch left the mouth of the Niagara River. The lighthouse keeper at Frenchman's Bay recalls having seen a launch proceeding down the lake last Monday, but he was not close enough to it to discern its name or the number of men in it.

Relatives of Collins were yesterday in communication with the Toronto life-saving station. Miss Mary Porteous of 31 Homewood Avenue, Toronto fears that Harry Porteous, one of the missing men, is her brother. She received a letter from him two weeks ago, written at Rochester, where he was recovering from illness.

CHICAGO HONORS ITALIAN FLIER

Chicago, May 16.—A modern Columbus and modern Santa Maria were acclaimed here when Chicago became the host to commander Francesco De Pinedo, Italian aviator carrying a message of Fascism to four continents. De Pinedo arrived Sunday afternoon from St. Louis, Mo., in his Pranschine plane, Santa Maria, on his four continent tour and enthusiasm of his brother Fascists here was so great that he tentatively agreed to delay his departure from Montreal this morning for two hours so that they could pay him full tribute they desired. In a short address at last nights banquet in his honor the aviator recited the advantages of Rule of Second Duce and asked the Italians in North America to live true to the fatherland traditions.

ARGYLES TO PARADE SUNDAY, MAY 29TH

Preparing for the Diamond Jubilee, the Argyll Light Infantry intend to hold a Church Parade on Sunday the 29th of May. An added feature of the parade will be the presence of veterans of 1866, 1885, 1899 and 1914. Cars to call for all these Veterans who have fought for the Motherland will be provided. The eterans of 1885 should apply to W. J. Diamond, 1885 to Lou Soules, 1899 to T. E. Austin and 1914 to Major A. L. Johnston.

Ex-commissioned officers will also be invited by Lt. Col. Vanderwater.

PLANE PASSENGERS WILL WEAR 'CHUTES

London, May 16.—All aeroplane passengers of the future probably will wear parachutes and, in case of accident, may be dropped through the floor.

This prediction is made by Lieutenant P. O. Soden, flight expert of the Royal Air Force, in discussing the importance of improved arrangements for handling passengers in aviation accidents.

"A possible solution," he said, "is perfection of a plan whereby the pilot may be able to jettison his passengers into space by letting the floor of the cabin drop out from under them and depending on the parachutes to save the wearer's lives.

KANSAS PAPER SUPPORTING REED

Kansas City, Mo., May 16.—The Kansas City Star says that a chain letter system has been started urging friends of United States Senator James A. Reed, to support him for the Democratic nomination for president.

Edward Glenn, Louisiana, Mo., campaign manager for the Missouri senator in 1922, started the chain letters, the paper says. With the request that supporters of the proposed write their relatives and friends in other states asking them "to get busy for Reed."

In advocating the chain letter idea Glenn pointed out that he conducted a similar campaign for Champ Clark in 1912 and called attention to the close race the former Speaker of the National House of Representatives made for the Democratic presidential nomination.

A Story—Written On the Nation's Roofs

TIMES change. New customs evolve. Whole industries disappear. The popular and useful of one era become the discarded and useless of another. The tallow candle gives way to the kerosene lamp—the kerosene lamp to gas and electricity.

It is the same with roofs. The old mansard roof of centuries past was succeeded by the thatched roof of our grandfathers' time—the thatched roof by the timber roof.

Yet none of these roofs meet the exacting demands of present-day construction. In their place has been developed the asphalt roof—the roof of the present and the future which, because of its outstanding advantages, is the logical roof for all modern building.

The Story of a Better Roof

In the introduction and development of the modern asphalt roof no Canadian organization has played a more important part than The Brantford Roofing Company. One of the pioneer manufacturers of asphalt roofs in this country, it has so thoroughly and convincingly demonstrated the superiorities of Brantford Asphalt products that now thousands of shrewd builders and contractors specify no other kind.

From its beginning more than twenty years ago it was the ideal of The Brantford Roofing Company to make a super-roof—a roof which would establish new standards of dependability, protection and attractive appearance—which would stand up to every test of time and weather. And that this high ideal has been reached is proven by thousands of buildings throughout Canada, many of which were roofed ten or twenty years ago and are today as weather-proof, fire-resistant and attractive as when they were first put on.

Protection Plus Beauty

Until these fine roofs came on the market only a few very expensive types were beautiful and artistic. It was a foregone conclusion that most roofs required repairing after a few years service. Sometimes old style residential roofs were painted or coated with tar to prolong their life—but roof beauty and distinction were seldom seen except in the most pretentious homes.

Yet The Brantford Roofing Company has not only made permanent, fire-retardent, residential roofs at a price within the reach of all but it has also given them rare beauty and artistic effect. Color harmony has been carefully studied and applied in rich, distinctive treatments, resulting in a variety of luxurious, dignified color combinations which have never before been available to builders in this country. Needless to say these changes have added immeasurably to the value, service and satisfaction of roofs in almost every community.

A Great Organization

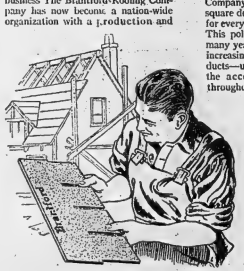

From a small plant doing a modest business The Brantford Roofing Company has now become a nation-wide organization with a production and personnel ten times as great as they were 20 years ago. And during that period it is safe to say that Brantford Roofs have added hundreds of thousands of dollars to the value of homes and other buildings in Canada. They have given beauty, durability and permanence at a cost which is but a fraction of the enhanced value they have made possible for homes, schools, factories, office buildings, summer cottages, farms, churches, garages, country clubs and all other kinds of buildings.

The Standard of Quality

The policy of The Brantford Roofing Company has always been one of fair, square dealing—of 100 per cent. value for every dollar's worth of roofing sold. This policy, rigidly maintained for many years, has borne fruit in an ever increasing demand for Brantford products—until now Brantford roofs are the accepted standard of quality throughout the country.

A Roof for Every Purpose

No matter what sort of building is being erected, there is a form and weight of Brantford Roofing that will meet your exact requirements. To be certain of getting the finest features when you buy roofing always specify Brantford by name. It is your warranty of quality — of strength, protection and lasting satisfaction.

Our attractive booklet in colors, "Beauty with Fire Protection," will be mailed to you free. It is handsomely illustrated and contains roofing information which will prove most valuable to you in roofing or re-roofing your home. Write today.

Made in numerous thicknesses, each one with beveled butt, over a shadow line which adds to the beauty of the finished roof. Being layered, extra thickness and weight are distributed in the butt only, leaving the body and side edges thin. Thickness over all the roof and most of the ridge is the same. The ridge is 1½ inches by 10 inches and 3 inches by 10 inches.

Brantford Four-In-One Slates

Four slates in one strip, size 12 by 36 inches, 3 and 4 inches to the weather. Weight of 111 slate covers 100 square feet of roof. Brantford Four-in-One slate gives a heavy and massive effect to the roof, and is suitable for living and good looking installations.

Brantford Arro-Locks

are locked on. The nailing strip is of wood, nailed and left there are held—coating lies in free, free to lay and nothing for repairs. Arro-Locks are the ideal slate covering for farm homes, barns, bungalows, etc. Their fireproof, weather resisting strength and good appearance are desired. The weight of 100 slate covers 100 square feet of roof.

Brantford Super-Tites are the only shoes that give double thickness over 12½ of the roof. The special Lock Butt construction is fireproof and weather. Each tab Super-Tites give 3 thicknesses of protection. The weight of 120 slates covers 100 square feet of roof. In three fadeless colors.

Brantford Roll Roofing

Four weights—Light, 15 lbs., 45 lbs., 65 lbs., heavy, 90 lbs., per 100 sq. ft. Roll, heavy, 36 inches wide and contains 108 square feet, sufficient for 100 square feet of roof. Light weight is good quality; medium, for quality; heavy, extra heavy, good; and extra heavy, super-fine quality.

CRITICS CONCEDE YANKEES EDGE

Huggins Holds Great Respect For Veteran Athletic Forces

Manager Miller Huggins of the pennant-winning Yankees looks for a tough race in the American League this year.

The Boston Red Sox are the only club that you can count out of the running with any degree of certainty. At that, Boston is expected to show constant improvement under Manager Carrigan.

Bill Carrigan has been out of the majors for ten years. A lot of things have happened since then.

There are many stars in the American League, who are new to Carrigan. Give him once around the circuit however and he will have the players and general situation pretty well sized up. Huggins, not given to doubtful prognostications, has been quoted as saying that the team that beats the Athletics was a pretty good chance of winning.

Miller Huggins is smart. His two contentions that there will be a tough race in the American League and the Athletics will be hard to beat, simply offers further proof.

The Athletics impress Huggins; first because the pitching staff should prove formidable, second because the club has power and third, because it has a world of reserve strength.

How long Cobb, Collins or Wheat will be able to go, doesn't cause very strongly into Huggins' thoughts on the pennant question. He figures the Mackmen were strong last year and the veteran trio simply adds more punch, regardless of how far they go.

The aggressive spirit of Cobb has already added a dash to the play of the Athletics that was missing last year. It was one of the things the club needed.

Getting away from the Athletics and back to the Yankees. Since Miller Huggins has a wholesome respect for the A's, it is interesting to know what he considers the leader as Bill Carrigan thinks of the Mackmen.

In the first series between the two teams, the Yankees looked like a great team, doing everything right.

When a new manager takes charge of a major league club, he must for a time look for expert advice from those closely identified with major league affairs.

Right here it might be well to tell that the Yankees are a peculiar ball club. Ordinarily they look great but at times they can appear just the opposite.

One often hears the remark that the truly great teams in baseball are not streaky. That doesn't apply to the Yanks. They have a few fine moments mingled in with a lot of big ones.

In getting the dope on the various American League clubs, some one apparently told Carrigan that the Yankees were not so much. However, Carrigan was of the impression that any club that could finish seventh one year, then win the pennant the next, must have something.

Here is the way Carrigan spoke of the Yankees, after his club had taken three straight trimmings from the Hugmen.

"So that's the team they told me was just an ordinary ball club that could hit.

"Ten already convinced the Yanks can hit and do a lot of other things just about as well. Give it good pitching and I would say it is a super-team one of the greatest slugging aggregations of all time.

"Of this much I am certain, it has more dangerous batters in its line-up than any club I can recall. There really isn't one of the regulars who gives the opposing pitcher a breathing spell

"If the Yanks are just ordinary, it looks like there is a hard season ahead for the Red Sox and Carrigan."

John Flynn, deaf and dumb since he was shot through the head in the World War, was kicked on the throat in a football game at Bucknell. Eng. The Stimulus to his recovery and vocal powers immediately restored his hearing and voice.

"Adolphe Menjou, Raymond Griffith and Pola Negri are essentially character players," says McDermott. "These people don't lean on the stories of their pictures. They have created characters that occupy a place in the public's heart just as though they were members of each fan's family."

McDermott thinks this tendency toward characterization to be a logical outgrowth. The insatiable maw of the industry absorbs practically every book and stage production that offers screen possibilities.

"After all," says he, "there are only a limited number of situations, but add skillful characterizations that entertain and interest, and they'll serve as long in the future as they have in the past."

McDermott adapted "Blonde or Brunette" from the French farce, "An Angel Passes," by Jacques Bousquet and Henri Falk. Richard Rorson directed. Greta Nissen and Arlette Marchal are featured.

BALL TEAM HAS FINE WORK-OUT

Peterboro Club Anxious To Be Included In Bay of Quinte

The local Ball Club held their best practice of the season at the High School grounds last evening when no less than a dozen candidates turned up and were sent through their paces by Manager "Peeny" Mills.

The latest players to put in an appearance were "Push" Derry formerly of Kingston and Cobourg, and Scott, formerly of the Peoles.

Tonight's work-out will be held at the Agricultural Field and every player in the city is invited to attend.

Secretary Newton Thompson was a busy man last night lining up the certificates and affidavits.

Only four nights this week remain before next Monday evening and "Peeny" is confident that the squad will be sufficiently whipped into shape to give Deloro a warm battle when the lid is pried off on May 24th. The management have not the same material to work with as in former years but it is confidently expected that a formidable nine will take the field. There is two or three positions which may give some trouble particularly 3rd base and the pitching corps but Pilot Mills may unearth a smart guardian of the keg corner before the week is over.

Of last year's team Cunliff, Palmer Blakely, "Olly" Dwyer and possibly Meagher may be missing although the latter may feel the urge too strong and may don the uniform again. He has declared his intentions of lending ability to the girls game this year but Allan has always been a valuable man to have around and it is to be hoped that he will change his decision. Hagerman has not yet appeared on the scene but Stan will be ready to take his regular place on the holiday. Harry Mills and "Wicky" Ross are tied up in the evenings at work but will be in their accustomed position. Weir may be stationed at short-stop with the possibility of "Piper" Latchford in right field. This line-up will give either the Deloro or Point Anne teams a battle royal.

"The Peles Heel"

Secy Thompson is in receipt of a letter from the O. B. A. A. Executive as to the possibilities of Peterboro entering the Bay of Quinte League.

"There isn't a chance in the world," was the word from the local headquarters. The Peterboro Club have appealed to the O. B. A. A. to place them in a Senior League and the parent body have suggested that the B. of Q. be rated as a Senior circuit and include the northerners. Both Deloro and Point Anne are also opposed to the move and it looks as though the Peles may be left out in the cold during the coming season. They have been offered a bye in the Lake Shore group but the moguls up there are not exactly favorable to the idea of playing exhibition games during the early summer months. The Belleville Club were not even naked to have a representative at the Lake Shore meeting and all was "hunky-dunky" with Peterboro until some of the other clubs kicked over the bucket and then the lift-lockers put up a wail to Joe Walsh asking him to place them in an organized League preferably the Bay of Quinte.

None of the teams in this circuit consider themselves of senior calibre.

YANKEES DEFEAT DETROIT TIGERS

Detroit, May 17.—At the risk of contracting pneumonia, chilblains and other annoying ailments, the Yankees cracked the Tigers for a loss of icicles at Navin Field yesterday before several thousand customers who should have had more sense. The score was 6 to 2, making the tally eight out of nine in the first western tour this spring as it was laughingly been called.

The Tigers were away to a two-run start, but by consulting the score above it will readily be grasped that this was both the start and the finish for the Bengals. The Yanks caught up with them in the third and passed them like the wind in the seventh. Mr. Herman smote a single with the bases full in the slush and completed the icy destruction.

Brrr, but it was cold; 'twas on such a day as this that Peary broke through the ice and discovered the North Pole. The only difference was that it was slightly colder yesterday.

Happily Mr. Dutch Ruether showed plainly that somewhere in his geneology there lies an Esquimaux strain. One of Mr. Ruether's ancestors back in the dim ages of history must have fished through a hole in the ice and lived on seal meat and gumdrops, for Dutch showed a noble disdain for frost and pitched in the style that made his name a household word in Flatbush some years ago.

The Philadelphia Athletics and Browns each got twelve hits at St. Louis yesterday, but the Athletics excelled in hitting distance and won, 10 to 8. The visitors annexed sixteen extra bases, including four home runs, with two by Simmons and one each by Cochrane and Cobb. The Browns used four pitchers. O'Rourke was put out in the seventh inning for arguing with the umpire.

Ted Lyons registered his fifth victory of the season yesterday when Chicago bunched hits behind Wiltse's wildness and defeated Boston at Chicago, 3 to 2. Wiltse, who had won four of Boston's eight victories this season, was hit by a line-drive off Falk's bat in the second inning and had to be carried off the field. He was not seriously hurt.

COLTS WIN FROM LEAFS IN 11TH

Syracuse Winning Streak Halted By Buffalo In Final Game

New York, May 17.—Rochester scored three runs in the eleventh inning to win from the Toronto Leafs at Rochester yesterday in the only game of the series, by 9 to 8. The Leafs scored twice in the eleventh on Pitcher Scheffner's wild heave to first which allowed a runner to score from first and Alexander to scamper to third. From there he scored on Spencer's hit to center. Maranville scored the Tribe's winning run with a single to centre to bring in Kunesch, a pinch-hitter for Head. The scheduled first game was postponed, rain.

Syracuse's pinch-hitting strategy worked like a boomerang yesterday and Buffalo broke its losing streak of four straight by taking the final game of the series at Syracuse, 13 to 4.

Joe Poetz, relieving Grabowski in the fourth stopped Buffalo cold, but he gave way after hurling two-thirds of an inning to a pinch-hitter. Stout, who relieved him, was reached for five runs.

ROBINS SCORE 9-5 VICTORY

Jess Petty Tightens Up On Pirates In Pinches

New York, May 17.—After losing two straight to the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Brooklyn Robins turned on their adversaries yesterday afternoon to score a 9 to 5 win. Jess Petty was on the mound for the winners and although he allowed thirteen hits to eleven made by the Robins off the delivery of three Pirate moundsmen, he was tight in the pinches. The veteran Max Carey led the hitters with four hits in five times at bat. One was a double. Grantham hit a home run.

At Philadelphia, Jess Haines won another game for the St. Louis Cardinals when he bested Ferguson in a tight hurling duel to give his team a 2 to 1 decision over the Phillies. Frisch, Hafey, Southworth, Haines, Williams and Wilson got doubles.

The game was played at the American League park, where the Phillies will remain until their stands have been repaired. The right field stand collapsed during Saturday's game.

Rain kept Cincinnati and the Giants idle at the Polo Grounds, as well as Chicago and the Braves at Boston.

Scout King Stanley, famous for 69 cross-country trips in the days of "Buffalo Bill," died in New York.

EVERY Canadian may well take interest in General Motors' contribution to the growth of Canada's exports. He may do so not only for his natural satisfaction in the national progress, but also for reasons more personal than that.

In the last five years General Motors have exported more than 105,000 automobiles.

This volume has called for such an increase in General Motors production as to permit a tremendous expansion of General Motors facilities and operations.

And today all Canada is deriving substantial, direct benefits from this expansion.

Buying in still greater volume from Canadian producers throughout the Dominion, General Motors is aiding more materially than ever in the development of Canadian resources and the success of Canadian industries.

Employing still more advanced large-scale factory methods, General Motors is achieving further economies in production costs.

As a result, General Motors can give—and is giving—greater value for less money to every Canadian buyer of its cars.

The Irony of Love

By Charles Garvice

Phenie stood with one hand pressed against her bosom, the other clenched at her side. Unlike Travers, she was as pale as death. She, like him, her eyes, too, were fixed on a vision — the vision of Hate with another woman in his arms. A fiery jealously raged in Phenie's heart, throbbed in every vein. His Lady Maude, his fine lady, had won him, taken him from her.

The silence between them became too intense, unendurable.

Travers broke it. "Well?" he demanded, his voice nearly not insolent. "What are you going to do?"

She lowered her eyes to his glittering ones, and repeated the question to herself before she could arrive at its significance. She did not speak.

"You don't know?" he resumed. "Fortunately for you, I do. The game is playing itself well, Phenie, so well that I don't mind admitting an ally or by surprise, and that I am a little unprepared. I did not expect Strangtyre and Lady Maude to come to terms so quickly. But he's in love with her, you see, and when a man like Strangtyre is in love—"

A shudder swept over her, and her hand pressed more closely against her bosom. He noted her emotion and laughed harshly.

"But there, you know, what Strangtyre is. But she must have encouraged him, for he was rather shaken at her. She's peerless." He smiled to himself. "Quite peerless. There isn't another woman in the world like her. Forgive me! that's not very complimentary to you, Phenie, but, to be candid though you are pretty—well, it's mostly light unto sunlight, water unto wine. Lady Maude, this fine lady, had won him, taken him, taken him from her.

He was torturing her, and he knew it; and his eyes, cruel now, dwelt on her face as if he were enjoying every pang she suffered.

"But he can't marry Lady Maude"— he laughed—"he belongs to you, doesn't he, Phenie? He's your husband."

At the word she turned her head away from him, as if to hide her face, and sank into a chair, her head still averted.

"That's the crux of the whole business. He is your husband, not his wife. But we mustn't say so just at present. We must let things develop a little. Do you understand?"

She made the slightest sign in the negative.

"No?" He laughed again. "And yet I should have thought it would have been so easy for you to understand. Of course, you'll claim him, but not now. We must wait for the psychological moment. Oh, it's going beautifully. We have had Fate, Chance, call it what you will, on our side from the very first."

He rose and paced up and down, his long, slim hands working together behind his back. Phenie watched him out of the corner of her eyes and waited. Suddenly, in a low voice, he went on:

"I love it all, Phenie. You must leave here, at once, and go back to your old quarters in London, and wait till I give you the word. I don't think you will have to wait long, for these people marry soon after their engagement. Besides, Strangtyre is not the man to postpone his bliss, for the primeval savage, who wants quick is what he wants. Trust him to hurry on the marriage! I shouldn't be surprised if three weeks or a month will be as long as he can wait. And there's no reason for a long engagement." He smiled and, stopping in front of her, looked down at her contemplatively. "Yes, you will go up to London. There's no need for you to be anxious. He is yours right enough, Lady Maude's I shall be supposed to have run over to the Continent and to have married on this engagement. Do you understand the way now?"

She shook her head.

"Why, where's your woman's wit, Phenie?" He smiled at her half contemptuously. "On the morning of the marriage, or, say, the night before you and I turn up at the reside or wherever they are. I've just learn from the Continent, and, becoming aware of the engagement, rush down at her. once with you to tell him I have discovered our harmless little joke, deception, is absolutely serious, and that you and Strangtyre are man and wife."

She rose from the chair, sank into it again, then raised her head and looked at him fixedly.

"What—what are you doing all this for?" she asked, in a low voice. "You told me, when you met me there, outside the house in London, that you wanted to marry Lady Maude; but that isn't the reason, the only reason I know enough now to know it's not likely she'll ever marry you. Why should she? There is some other reason—"

Scientists tell us that every criminal is insane, that none though he may appear to be for a degree part of the time, there come inevitable moments when the insanity breaks out and reveals itself. Such a moment came to Travers now. His face became distorted by an expression which Phenie, closely though she had watched him, had never yet seen; a hateful light burned in his eyes, and in the tempest of passion which mastered him he actually shook, as men shake with an attack of ague. Against his will, her question extorted the answer; though he strove to keep the words back they came from him in a savage torrent.

"Reason!" he said, glaring down at her. "Yes, there's another reason; I hate him, Phenie; I hate him."

"I know that," she said, in a low voice, here eyes fixed watchfully on him. "I've known it all along. I saw it the first time you were together, and I wondered why. Hetd been cruel to you, you pitted yourself his pal and friend, but I knew you hated him. It won't become you wanted, Lady Maude for yourself that you planned this trick on him and made use of me it was because you had something to against him. What was it?"

"I've got everything up against him as you put it," he said, between his teeth. "He's got everything that I ought to have, Phenie. He's got the name, the rank, money, the place in the world that belongs to me."

MADOC EASTERN STAR TENDERED COMP. BANQUET

District Deputy H. J. Clarke Pays Official Visit To Chapter

THE TOASTS

Lodges of District Well-Represented at Enjoyable Function

Last night Bl. Ex.-Comp.—H. J. Clarke, D.D.G.P. paid his official visit to Madoc Chapter No. 161, accompanied by Mrs. Clarke and Ex. Comp. W. H. Nugent, and Mrs. Nugent of Belleville. A complimentary banquet was tendered to Bl. Ex. Comp. H. J. Clarke and visiting companions, given under the auspices of the local Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star. The banquet was served at 6.30 p.m. in the Masonic Hall. Special music was furnished by the orchestra throughout the social hour.

Ex. Comp. Wilfred L. Smith discharged the duties of toastmaster and after extending a cordial welcome to the visitors proposed the toast to "The King." "The Grand Chapter of Ontario" was proposed by Bl. Ex. Comp. W. J. Hill, who outlined the important functions of the Grand Body and paid tribute to the personal merits and qualifications of Bl. Ex. Comp. Clarke, who enjoyed the official honor of D.D.G.P. In responding Bl. Ex. Comp. H. J. Clarke, graciously expressed his appreciation of the honorable office. Referring to the satisfactory condition of Madoc Chapter and the encouraging growth of the order.

Membership of 25,000

"There were now 153 subordinate chapters with a membership of 25,-815. The fact that 119 chapters were represented at the last session, of Grand Chapter proved the active interest of the Craft in the administration of the Grand Body. Financial standing was secure, there being some thing more than $60,000.00 in investments, the interest of which was devoted to benevolent purposes.

That some of the speaker's address: "What Masonery is" in which he dealt with Masonic Symbolism tracing the ancient history and records of the "Great Mysteries" and their intention, continued down through the ages to the present day and their interpretations was most instructive and received the close attention and interest of the assembly.

The Toast "To the Ladies" was proposed by Comp. W. L. Rigg, of Deloro. Ex. Comp. W. H. Nugent, in responding to the toast "To Our Visitors" referred to the ideals of fellowship as embraced in Masonry and he was glad to see as friends of fortune, but of men." In responding Ex. Comp. McInnis of Moira Chapter and Ex. Comp. Findlay of Quinte Friendship Chapter expressed their appreciation of the hospitality of Madoc Chapter. At the close Bl. Ex. Comp. H. J. Clarke, D.D.G. proposed a toast to the "Companions of Madoc Chapter and their ladies" which was suitably responded to by Toastmaster Ex. Comp. Smith.

Following the banquet a convocation of the Chapter was held, during which the degrees were exemplified by the presiding principle and his officers, which received the favorable comment of the D.D.G.S. and compliments of the visiting companions. A pleasing feature of the evening was a presentation to P.P. Sister Ex. Comp. W. T. Ison to P.P. Sister Ex. Comp. W. T. Ison, I.P.Z. presented by Bl. Comp. W. J. Hill and Bro. Comp. W. H. Nugent The arrangement of the presentation was a happy surprise to father and sister.

TWELVE KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Lansing, Mich., May 18.—At least a dozen small children were killed and many others were believed to have lost their lives in an explosion that wrecked the district school at Bath, in Clinton county, North of here this morning. The explosion, the cause of which has not been determined, wrecked the north wing of the structure and it was from the wreckage of this wing that a dozen bodies were recovered. Others are believed to be in the debris.

MAGISTRATE MIKEL VOICES OBJECTION TO CRITICISM

MUST ENFORCE LAW

The Intelligencer's criticism of Magistrate Mikel's attitude is based on two points. First the apparent injustice of sentencing a man presently in jail for driving his car while intoxicated while another man convicted of the same offence is remanded from week to week with a grave doubt as to whether he will not finally be released on suspended sentence.

The second and more important phase of this matter is the protection of the public. Every one knows and admits that a driver fool enough to attempt handling his car while under the influence of liquor is a deadly menace to innocent motorists and pedestrians. At stake must be may be the cause of a serious collision with loss of life and property or he may run down innocent citizens using the streets in a proper manner.

The Intelligencer believes that every driver of an automobile should be forced to realize that if he drives a car while intoxicated he will if caught inevitably have to appear in jail sentence on his name. We believe that if just was the established punishment for such dangerous conduct that it would have a giffielate effect on the reckless drivers who now endanger life and limb on the highway.

Still another angle which Magistrate Mikel overlooks is the fact that within two weeks strong liquors will be freely procurable in all parts of the Province and that there is a certain small percentage of our citizens who are apt to abuse this liberty and turn it into license. There will also be this summer an influx of tourists from the South, a number of whom are sure to follow the same course.

This element must be sternly notified that any infraction of our laws means full weight fine or favor. Considerations of family wealth or influence must not make it possible for any culprit to escape the consequences of his act. The Attorney General of Ontario has stated publicly on more than one occasion that the Government intends that the new liquor law in all its phases is to be enforced rigidly and this is a material portion of the new act.

Crown Attorney Bryson Donnan has taken a commendable attitude in this regard and can be trusted to see that violators of the law are punished in as far as lies in his power. Incidentally we might tell Mr. Mikel that the public are not particularly concerned with legal technicalities but are only interested in having the broad principles of Justice administered in a fair and impartial manner.

MR. MIKEL OBJECTS

A comment in the Editorial columns of the Intelligencer in commenting appeared to refer to a case pending in the Police Court, seeming to offer criticism of the action of the Court. Such conduct on the part of a newspaper is and has been for a great many years in civilized countries regarded as a serious offence. Those who seek equity, should do equity is an old legal maxim which has been at the foundation of our legal system for centuries. "Ignorance is the boldest critic." People on the street who know least about a case, often are the most ready to give judgment.

"There has never been an authoritative determination of the power of the Magistrate as to suspending sentence under Section 1081 of the Criminal Code as to defeing a car while under the influence of liquor. A Judge in a Western Province held that the Magistrate has no such power. An Ontario Supreme Court Judge has said that the Magistrate has in view of the Liquor Control Act it is of great importance to have this point determined. That it would have a giffielate effect on the reckless drivers now endangering life and limb on the highway.

Still another angle which Magistrate Mikel overlooks is the fact that within two weeks strong liquors will be freely procurable in all parts of the Province and that there is a certain small percentage of our citizens who are apt to abuse this liberty and turn it into license. There will also be this summer an influx of tourists from the South, a number of whom are sure to follow the same course.

JURY RENDERS ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT AT ADJOURNED INQUEST

John McCabe Driver of Car Is Exonerated, From Blame

"We, the Jury, empanelled in inquire concerning the death of Ralph Gerald Bond that he came to his death upon the Highway between Cannifton School and Cannifton Church, in the Township of Thurlow, in the County of Hastings, on May 10th, 1927, as a result of being struck and run over by a car of Moise Car, owned by Mary Cavanagh and driven by J. Mc-Cabe of Belleville; and we find that death was accidental."

Above is the verdict rendered by the Jury at the inquest to determine into the death of 8-year-old Ralph Denville, who was almost instantly killed at Cannifton on the afternoon of May 10th. The inquiry was held before Coroner Dr. Boyce at Belleville Police Court last night. A large crowd of people, mostly from Cannifton heard the evidence.

George Denike, Thurlow Township, the driver of the lumber wagon that was passing at the time the lad was killed, was the first witness called. He said he was coming from the mill at Cannifton with a load of gravel and when nearing Mr. Coles' residence in the outskirts of the village, the accident occurred.

Book Thrown

"The school children were coming from school at the time," he said, "and a book was thrown into the road from the north side."

"Did you hear an approaching vehicle behind you?"

"A car tooted a horn just about that time."

"Was that before or after the book was thrown into the road?"

"I don't know."

"What happened then?"

"The Denville boy jumped to pick it up and then he was struck."

PEACE RESTORED AMONG AIMEE'S TROUBLED FLOCK

Los Angeles, May 18.—Peace returned to Aimee Semple McPherson's flock at Angelus Temple today, exactly a year after her disappearance at Ocean Park, which culminated in her being accused of a conspiracy in connection with her story of being kidnapped. The evangelist made this announcement last night at a meeting celebrating the anniversary of her disappearance. The meeting was held on the spot where Mrs. McPherson said she was whisked away in her bathing suit by kidnappers.

Mrs. McPherson announced that in virtually all the members of her orchestra and choir who seceded and formed an independent church recently, had returned to Angelus Temple.

LIQUOR PERMITS WILL BE ISSUED WEDNES. MORNING

Temporary Office To Be Opened at 9 O'Clock Tomorrow

ARRANGEMENTS MADE

The liquor permits are in Belleville and will be issued to the public starting at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning either at 162 Front Street, just north of the Queen's Hotel, or in the upstair office in the Dominion Bank Building at the corner of Bridge and Front Streets. Final arrangements for an office will not be completed until after press time this afternoon but it will be at either of these two places until such time as the Government Liquor Store is opened, when quarters will be obtained on the premises. Office hours for the issuance of permits will be from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. and from 7 to 10 p.m., next Saturday evening.

The precise arrangements reached Mr. B. L. Hynan this morning with Inspector Ross in a temporary office and commence distribution to applicants at once. The qualifications for the issuance of a permit state that the applicant must be 21 years of age, a resident of Ontario, of good and moral character.

It is not anticipated by Mr. Hyman that there will be any unseemly rush as residents have all week in which to make application and the issuance will be readily to be business by that time. The customer's permits however, are good any where in the Province so that thirsty customers are liable or unwilling to wait for the opening of the local store may drive to the nearest point where a drgot is spurred and secure a supply.

TEN DAY SENTENCE FOR DRUNKEN DRIVERS

Toronto, May 18.—Drunken auto mobile drivers will get short shrift from Magistrate Robert J. Browne, if they are convicted in his police court, he said when interviewed on the increase in numbers of drunken auto drivers.

"Drunken drivers of automobiles on the streets are becoming all too prevalent," he stated. "I want the citizens to know that hereafter any person convicted of being at the wheel of an auto while drunk will get a ten-day sentence in jail and that license markers will be revoked for three months. If that does not have the desired effect, heavier penalties will be increased. There are too many fatalities on the streets from autos."

CAR TURNS OVER ON THE HIGHWAY

Mr. and Mrs. John Max and brother-in-law, Mr. Gold, of Montreal driving in a new sedan touring car from mid Montreal overturned on the Trent Road about three miles west of Trenton on Tuesday afternoon and badly lacerated hand as a result of the accident.

It appears that the automobile turned out to allow a farmer to turn into his driveway and in doing so ran into the ditch, overturning the car several times.

In conversation with the Police at their office this afternoon, Chief Kidd stated that a complaint has been laid against Max, although not yet sworn to by the Provincial Police.

Gold was taken to Dr. J. J. Robertson's surgery, 217 Pinnacle Street where the wound was dressed.

VETERANS SPEAK AT CAN LEGION

Local Branch Members Enjoy Unique "Bully Beef" Supper

Over one hundred attended the "Bully Beef and Hard Tack" smoker held in the O. W. V. A. Hall last evening by the newly organized Belleville Branch of the Canadian Legion. J. W. Day, acting chairman of the association presided over the gathering. The speakers were Col. E. D. O'Flynn Rector Vandervater, Louis Soule and William Harrison, the latter two who were veterans of the South African War of 1885 gave interesting addresses, recalling events of their experience there. These two veterans are now members of the Legion.

Col. Vandervater asked all the veterans present to be "loyal" to the memorial at Sidney on Sunday next, a number of the members signified their intention of attending and will go by Rawson's bus.

During the evening all the members were asked to bring a new member to the next meeting and nearly all signified their intentions of doing this.

Col. E. F. Ryan and Capt. Bradford were appointed as a nominating committee with power to act to prepare names to be submitted to the Legion to be voted upon later as permanent officers of the legion.

Those taking part in the program were Fred Rawson at the piano," J. Skinner with the "banjo" and Bandsman Joe Sensaine; songs, B. Edwards, C. Ferfs, B. Bradford and Jack Tyrell.

LITTLE BELGIUM CHANGES HANDS

The summer colony situated along the bay shore on the Front Road about five miles west of Belleville, known as "Little Belgium" has almost completely changed ownership. There were five summer cottages at this point and four of them have been sold. J. V. ogle disposed of his to B. C. Donnan, man's cot age and that of P. H. Wills has been purchased by Dr. Gandy. Marshall and Mrs. B. A. Hyman has sold her cottage to Mrs. B. Chadwick. The remaining cottage in the colony owned by Mr. A. Cillen, postmaster has not been sold, Mr. Cillen intending to occupy it himself.

RECKLESS DRIVERS MUST NOT DESECRATE GRAVES

Some person driving a large car in the cemetery on Sunday evening left behind a narrow roadway and rag up on a lot breaking in a grave This is inexcusable conduct.

The Board of Management are reluctant to close the cemetery to visitors, but must protect the lots in this matter if this unseemly conduct is repeated. The driveways in the cemetery are not public roads and anyone doing damage to the roads or lots may be severely punished as well as made to pay for any damage done.

Besides the damage committed to the grave, there is always the thought that the last resting place of the dead should not be violated by some smart-aleck drivers who wish to use the cemetery as an Indianapolis speedway.

MENTALLY AFFECTED

Lover of Ruth Dembner to Spend Five Years In Portsmouth

Toronto, May 18—Found guilty of performing an illegal operation on the late Ruth Dembner, Doctor O. C. J. Withrow was sentenced to seven years and Bartlett J. Brooks, fiancee of the late Miss Dembner, five years in Portsmouth penitentiary by Mr. Justice Logie in the Assizes today. Dr. Withrow collapsed just before sentenced.

Withrow appeared to be suffering acutely as a result of his position. Brooks looked pale and nervous as he took his place in the dock and listened to the sentence.

The doctor, according to his counsel, is in very serious mental condition. He collapsed in the dock and was sitting down as sentence was passed on him. Brooks listened to the judge intently and broke down as he was being taken to the jail following his sentence. Very few spectators were in the court as only the relatives of either man were present.

Great interest was taken during the trial and the public was finally excluded from the court room.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Those who live on vanity must not unreasonably expect to die of mortification.

MRS. ELLIS

GOOD WORK

"I know what pleasure is," says Robert Louis Stevenson, "for I have done good work." Stevenson, it is unnecessary to say, was a very great author, and the good work he did was, therefore, literary. But it makes no difference what the nature of the work may be, if the effort is sincere, the satisfaction which results is the same. There may be some who doubt this. Pleasure is not usually associated in the young mind with work. Yet it is absolutely true—if we want genuine satisfaction, we have to work for it; "something for nothing" never amounts to anything, and there is no happiness to be compared with that which comes from the consciousness of duty well performed and a task completed to the best of our ability. What we are all in search of is happiness and there are many deceptive roads to be avoided. The road of toil is, perhaps, the one least likely to be chosen in the pursuit of happiness, but it is the one which leads the straightest and the surest to the goal. Idleness, frivolity, neglect, half-hearted performance—these things are bound to bring dissatisfaction in their train.

Moreover, it almost invariably follows that good work of any kind receives its reward. Sometimes it is true, the reward is not of the obvious kind; but it is there just the same. "One self-approving hour whole years out-weighs of stupid starers and of loud hurrays." Whether our sincere and earnest efforts meet with praise and material reward or not, they will always bring us a measure of compensation. Self-respect, most precious of all possessions, comes from the practice of doing one's best in every undertaking; while the sacrifice of self-respect is involved in the opposite policy of shirking responsibility and doing the least possible, and not doing even that well. We get out of life what we put into it—that is often said, and it is one of the truest bits of philosophy ever uttered.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

A grand jury in the Province has recommended the lash accompany jail sentences for certain offenses, specifying robbery under arms, assault and the stealing of autos. For some forms of juvenile deliquency also, especially the all too prevalent practice of auto-thieving by young people, the opinion was expressed that the lash would serve as a greater deterrent and more wholesome corrective than a term in the reformatory. There will be opposition to this view, it may be taken for granted. Corporal punishment, under any circumstances, is regarded with feelings of horror by many people, who view it as a reversion to barbarism, quite out of place in the civilization of today. But it may be that these critics are taking a one-sided view of things, and in striving to be considerate to the offender are in danger of being unfair to the community. It is not in a vindictive spirit that incorrigibles should be dealt with, but in a spirit which contributes to their reformation. If the prison sentence fails to put an end or even to check the commission of these crimes, something more effective must be tried. No system of justice can tolerate a condition under which criminals become more numerous and crimes more daring. The question of parental authority was touched on in the present grand jury. Unquestionably, that is the ideal solution of the problem. The boy with vicious tendencies should be taken vigorously in hand at home; but parental shortcomings are not always responsible. A little stern action on the part of the courts, at any rate, would make up for deficiencies in the home and prevent many a youthful offender from hardening into a jailbird.

CIGARETTE TAX

The applies'on of tobacco companies for a reduction in the excise tax on cigarettes deserves serious consideration at the hands of the tariff advisory board.

When in 1922 the Dominion government raised the excise and sales taxes on 1,000 cigarettes from $3.80 to $7.60 it not only defeated its own object, which was to increase the national revenue, but also gave a direct impetus to the smuggling of cigarettes from the United States. Cigarettes could be purchased in the United States for half the price that had to be paid in Canada.

According to official records the annual consumption of cigarettes in Canada dropped heavily after the excise and sales taxes were increased in 1922. It is, however, false to assume that less cigarettes are being consumed than formerly. On the contrary, so profitable did the smuggling business become that in 1924, according to a statement made in the Senate, over 500,000,000 cigarettes were smuggled in from the United States, which represented a sum of from $5,000,000 to $7,500,000 going out of Canada.

Since 1924 some reductions have been made in the sales tax, but it is argued that the combined excise and sales taxes in effect today are still high enough to make smuggling profitable and that, in fact, there has been no reduction in the number of cigarettes being smuggled in annually. The usual efforts to halt the illicit but profitable trade across the many hundreds of miles of Canadian border are both costly and ineffective. The simplest, and in the end the cheapest way would be for the Dominion government to reduce the excise tax to a point where the profits to be derived from smuggling would not be worth the risk involved. A reduced tax would not only keep Canadian money at home but would also increase the national revenue derived from this source.

MAY

May, queen of blossoms,
And fulfilling flowers,
With what pretty music
Shall we charm the hours?
Will thou have pipe and reed,
Blown in the open mead?
Or to the lute give heed
In the green bowers?

Thou hast no need of us.
Or pipe or wire;
Thou hast the golden bee
Ripened with fire;
And many thousand more
Songsters, that thee adore,
Filling earth's grassy floor,
With new desire.

Thou hast thy mighty herds,
Tame and free-livers;
Doubt not, thy music too
In the deep rivers;
And the whole plumy flight
Warbling the day and night—
Up at the gates of light,
See the lark quiver!

Dicky wears such attractive hosiery. Socks appeal, what!

During the war a colonel was transferred to a new command. On reaching his depot, he found stacks of useless documents accumulated in the archives by his predecessor, so he wired to headquarters for permission to burn them. The answer came back: "Yes, but make copies first."

"You were going forty miles an hour," said the policeman, reproachfully.

"I'm no deliberate lawbreaker," said Mr. Chuggins. "I'm ashamed of myself, but I'm kind of proud of the old flivver."

Two old settlers sat smoking in a cabin far away in the backwoods. No feminine presence ever graced this settlement and domestic arrangements were primitive and rude.

The conversation drifted from politics to cooking, and one of the confirmed bachelors, said: "I got one of them there cookery books once, but I never could do nothin' with it."

"Too much fancy work about it?" asked the other.

"You've 'it it. Every one o' them recipes began in the same way. 'Take a clean dish—' and that settled me at once."

A traveller stopping at a small south ern town asked the old negro who was taking him to the hotel in a dilapidated old cab, his name.

"George Washington, sah," was the reply.

"Well, that's a name well known to everyone in the country," remarked the traveller.

"I reckon, sah, it ought to be, I've been drivin' dem for more'n forty years."—College Humor.

WHEN KIDNEYS HURT CONSULT YOUR DOCTOR

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked, from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

Flood waters from a 600-foot crevasse swept over the famous "sugar-bowl" of Louisiana, endangering 15,000 lives.

YOUNG ORATORS RECEIVE PRAISE

Lorine Adams and Betty Morgan Winners of Silver Medal Contestants

A capacity house at the Y.M.C.A. last evening heard one of the most excellent recitals yet given by young people in the city when the Silver Medal Contest under the auspices of the W.C.T.U. was put on under the talented direction of Mrs. Marion Wood-Ayre and Miss Lorine Adams deserves Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Adams and Betty Morgan daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Morgan of Ledgard avenue are junior winners of the beautiful medals.

The evening was opened by a march by the Misses Dorothy Gordon, Evelyn Bailey, Maude Turner, Lena Bunnell, Anita Brown, Betty Morgan, Estelle Clare, Velma Martin and Pauline Schryer. To music by Miss Dorothy Wagner the girls each dressed in pretty bright colored frocks and carrying Union Jacks marched about the platform. This was followed by a rally call by the young people after which Rev. L. M. Sharpe the chairman in his brief address expressed his satisfaction at the work the contest was doing in the interests of temperance. He paid a warm tribute to Mrs. Alyea serving that her gift of citizenship privileges could not be excelled. "She has given the children really excellent training and in eight brief lessons accomplished wonders", he said.

Solos and ballad duets by the Lennox brothers were greatly enjoyed and the boys proved themselves to be possessors of real genius. Miss Muriel Wardner delighted the audience with a splendid instrumental solo and Miss Barlow and Miss Tuck gave a splendid duet. The judges Misses Mildred Lloyd and Palmer and Rev. Hilliard Jones after long deliberation, when returned their verdict announcing that so excellent were each of the numbers they had found it difficult to choose among them. They awarded excellently trained contestants.

Prizes for selling the greatest number of tickets were awarded to Lena Bunnell and Jean Spafford.

Too great credit cannot not be given to the little winners of the medals who without a hall rented and started their meets most cleverly and proved themselves to be the possessors of remarkable talent which had been will groomed by Mrs. Alyea.

Closs of Youngstown, Ohio; four brothers, Benjamin of Carrollton, Jacob and George of Youngstown, Ohio, and Charles Ockerman of Grand Rock's Rocks, Pennsylvania. Deceased was a member of Holloway Street United Church.

JAMES H. BRENTON

The entire city has sustained a great loss in the passing of James H. Brenton, Recording Steward of Carmen Church, one who was most faithful in the discharge of all duties to the church and the Kingdom of God.

In many respects he walked in the steps of his father—Francis Brenton, who was the recording steward for many years, and surely the mantle of office fell upon one very worthy, for in fourteen years, he was always present at the official meetings. He never shirked any material duty, to interfere with his duty to God and his church.

He led a quiet reserved life, a man of few words, but full of good works. As his pastor has said, he never was asked to help in a benevolent cause, that he did not respond, cheerfully and most liberally.

In addition to the duties of recording steward, he was a special friend of the minister and family, ever ready to sympathize, advise and help.

The funeral service was conducted at the home, by his pastor, Rev. Farmer Rowe assisted by Rev. J. H. McMillan, a former pastor. The text chosen was from II Samuel, "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel."

The whole charge was represented at the service, and the many floral tributes testify to the high esteem in which he was held by all.

His body was laid to rest in the Belleville cemetery.

DOMESTIC CLOUDS BURST OVER THE PHILANDERER

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Wives won't like this article. But it's true. Way do so many seemingly honest, loyal, decent husbands suddenly run amuck and engage in a sentimental affair with some flutterly worthless Doll Baby? For exactly the same reason that little boys step across mud and go to making mud pies.

You don't believe it? Listen.

Here's the case of Fred and Alice. They're typical. Scores of such cases come to this office every month seeking some solution for their bitterness and bewilderment.

Fred was a travelling salesman before he was married. Not one of the wild ones. Didn't care for women, but loved the quick action and speedy competition of his game. Some fellows complained about being always on the go. Fred loved it and made good.

Then he married Alice. Real love match. And, of course, they were both wild over the idea of having a home together and raising a family. So Fred gave up his road job and took a position in the city office. Good position. Regular hours and fine pay, but it fitted Fred's disposition just about as well as a dumb-pagan would fit a race-horse.

However, he didn't mind that at first. He was too much in love with Alice and his new home and the baby he was busy rearing.

Five years and there were three babies. They still loved each other. They didn't realize that they had changed but they had. They'd lost their sparkle and their elasticity. They were getting stiff and tense and edgy. Jealousy galled, but they didn't stop to analyze it. Didn't stop to see the danger. Just kept plugging along.

Then that new girl came in Fred's office. Pretty little bit of blonde fluff. Lived in an apartment with another girl. Gay little place—gay little girl. Lot of laughter—music—foolish fun—merry little chafing-dish parties. Not really bad—just silly. Silliness is a wonderful thing when you haven't been silly for year raned years. Gaiety is mighty restful for nerves that are strained to the breaking point.

Alice's nerves were strained too, but Fred didn't stop to think of that. Didn't think of anything. Just grabbed for a little fun as a small kid grabs for a cooky. Dropped his job for an hour now and then—went to making mud pies.

Last week Alice found a letter in Fred's pocket. A silly, vulgar, intimate letter—the sort of letter that will drive a hard-working, loving wife wild with rage and pain.

She packed up and left that day. Swore she'd get a divorce. Wrote that letter proof enough that he'd been "faithless"—and he'd had a "love affair"?

Fred tried in vain to explain. But the explanation only got him in deeper. How could he make Alice see that he hadn't really been faithless—that he had simply crashed at a little gaiety and froth as any tired child will grab at a glittering bit of color? How could he make Alice see that he hadn't considered "loving her—that he had simply FORGOTTEN her? That sort of an explanation made her madder than the original letter.

Two tired people, magnifying a pure by physical reaction into a grave moral issue. Breaking up a beautiful home and a lifetime's happiness when a sense of humor and a few years' fun now and then might have a situation.

But wives won't agree with me. They'll say I'm standing up for immorality.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

Where can I find a young man who is good, who thinks plenty of clothes, girls, fun and petting? I would like to meet a young man who takes a girl out because he likes her and wants her companionship. I'm not an old-fashioned girl, but I don't want to be kissed until I find someone I can really love.

I wish I knew how boys really want girls to act. LORINETTA

Here are three letters that are variations on the same theme. I can only advise the writers to be patient. Young men of the sort they wish to meet are perhaps not over-plentiful, but neither are they very rare. It is only a question of time before each will meet a young man and would appreciate a real companionship.

In the meantime I must caution the writers to adhere to their principles—without compromise. Vapid amusements are never worth the sacrifice of true ideals.

Paris reports that grey is forging more and more to the front, while navy blue and lighter blues are fulfilling all their prophecies. Of the two novelty fabrics which have been noted recently one is a strong deep yellow green and the other shade is a bright red with a hint or yellow in it, really lacquer red.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

As Mrs. Brady wrote the name of a medicine on Sybil's proffered memo book, the girl noticed how thin her coat was, thin and incredibly shabby, for the wife of a prosperous and prominent citizen. The edges of the cloth were worn almost thread-bare.

Mrs. Brady seemed to sense her thought.

"I—you must wonder at my coming out in such an old wrap," she said. "I—I sent my other coat to be cleaned, and they ruined it—turned the color completely. I must get another."

"You should get a fur coat, Mrs. Brady," said Sybil. It is still quite cold enough to wear one—and there are some wonderful bargains at Thayer's today. I saw them in the window, when I was on my lunch—sables and seals and a perfectly heavenly muskrat."

"Oh, I—" Mrs. Brady flushed and stammered.

"Of course, you should get a fur coat," spoke up her husband. "They tell me it's the best wealth to buy a good one—they're all reduced. Here," he pulled forward his check-book and scribbled in it. "Take this and go right down to Thayer's. That ring you have on is a sight."

She went out, flustered, hardly believing her eyes, when she saw the figures on the check.

"If I find a suitable one, I'll come back and show you," she promised, her eyes shining.

An hour later she returned, and Sybil hardly recognized her. She was wrapped in a mantle of shining, lustrous fur, cut in a dashing style. It beat to her fair skin, gulfiness of attire, the freshness of a girl's. A trim little hat concealed her gray hair.

"The coat didn't take all the money so I got a hat, too," she confessed shyly.

Brady looked her over with distinct approval and admiration. By and, she was still a good-looking woman, he thought! There was a lot more to her face, character and gentleness—and the softened look of pain, too—than there was to the paint-smeared "mugs" of these young girls!

Sybil, musing on the episode, as she walked home that evening, grinned.

"Well, old girl," she told herself, "your first attempt at running a man didn't succeed so well, but it kind of reminded him. He's a changed Dan Brady, all right!"

It was soon common knowledge that he was changed. Talk flew like wildfire, and speculation was rife. For Dan Brady no longer hung around his club, while his wife sat alone in his big, silent house. He stopped faking flashy young girls to tete-a-tete dinners and dances at the country club. He ceased to talk as if his wife was his mother's age and had lodged him in his green, unwary youth.

It would seem now that Brady could n't get home from his office quick enough at night, and he sat by the fireside with his wife and spoke of the peace of middle age and the beauty of perfect marital companionship.

Mrs. Brady found herself the dazed possessor of an "allowance" which permitted her to belong to smart church and club organizations and contribute, as she had long wanted to do, to church work. She even had money enough to give luncheons and afternoon parties for her women friends.

Sybil watched the progress of her own handiwork—for hadn't she, in reality, started the whole thing by her well-aimed ink-pot? She knew as well as if Dan Brady had confessed to her that, when her missile had hit his waistcoat, it had also hit his vanity. He had thought himself a gay Lothario—and he had found that he was only a middle-aged tyrant, robbed of his amusing gallantry and made ridiculous. A youthfully dressed old gallant, striving vainly to wipe away the ink that trickled over his clothes.

He lived in terror that Sybil would spread the story of his undoing, and that he, the admired, the feared, would be the laughing-stock of the town. And side by side with his terror, went a sense of thankfulness for a sweet, gentle wife who loved him; to whom eyes he was still the prince charming he yearned to be.

"Thank Heaven, I'm not married to that young hussy," he said. "If only I could get her out of the office, so that I wouldn't have to look at her and always be reminded of that inkwell!"

Finally, after weeks of silent suffering, he hit upon the happy plan of obtaining for her a much better job with a friend of his—the president of the largest bank in town.

CHAPTER 21.

FRESH FOOLISH

Sybil, new job proved far better than the one in Dan Brady's office. If it hadn't, she wouldn't have taken it. She knew only too well the hold she had on Brady.

At the bank she was made secretary to Arthur Winslow, the son of the president, a leisurely young man who was a mere figure head in the organization holding his job only by pull.

Arthur was blond and a meticulous dresser. A well-clipped fuzz on his upper lip proclaimed itself a mustache—to the initiated. He had loafed through four years of college, got a diploma in Arts and Letters, by the skin of his teeth, and postponed the day when he must go to work, by a honey of a summer in Europe. He had himself "quite continental" in his mode of living and in his viewpoint toward life.

He, Sylvia, a self-made man who had never left home, was very different. Arthur was an only child and was to inherit his full share in his father's fortune when he became thirty.

"I never had any youth," Winslow, Sr., was fond of saying. "At Arthur's age, I was working till all hours, scrimping and saving. When fortune came, I didn't know how to enjoy it. I want Arthur to have his money while he's still young enough to get the best out of life. Besides, I've seen too many heirs' handing around, waiting for their rich elders to die, feigning a sorrow they didn't feel at the death bed of relatives. I want my son to love me as I love him. I don't want him to resent my living, or to be glad when I die."

KIWANIANS MARK 4TH BIRTHDAY IN BELLEVILLE

District Governor Cockburn of Toronto Speaks at Luncheon

Yesterday was the fourth birthday of the Kiwanis Club in Belleville and the local members, together with a large turnout of Kiwanis Queens and guests, celebrated the Anniversary in real style with a dinner and dance at the Queens last evening.

Congratulations and presentations seemed to be the order of the evening; in the first place Kiwanis District Governor Bill Cockburn, of Toronto, came down and told the Club how proud it might be of its accomplishments since the Charter was granted in May 1923. The local Club had made vast strides in its service work in these four years, Mr. Cockburn declared—a success which would serve to inspire the members to even greater efforts in the future.

Kiwanis was enjoying a healthy growth, and boasted a membership at present time of approximately 15,000 business men, all united under the banner of service.

Bouquets seemed to be the thing last evening for Kiwanian Frank Hinchey and Hugh Middleton were awarded with "Valuable" gifts—nobody knew just exactly why—but they got them anyway. And when the 4th Birthday cake was cut by Kiwanian Bill Millet, hilarity reached its climax, and Kiwanis was well started on its fifth year of work here.

The "Rythm Kings" directors brightened things up considerably with their lively music in between bites, and later for the dance, which contributing too, in making the affair one to be remembered were many solos by Messrs. Fred Sprague, Jim Bankier, Hugh Middleton and a first class duet by Messrs. Rickard and Pry. Alan Sprague, competitor in the recent Ontario Oratorical Finals, was there as well, and showed just why he landed well up in the competition.

In the absence of President Jack McIntosh, Kiwanian Greenleaf had charge, and it proved one of the most successful Kiwanis has held in a long time.

Centre, the Honorable Chief Justice Latchford; right, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, former prime minister of Canada, and left, Mr. John D. Falconbridge, K.C., dean of Osgoode Hall law school, judges of the Canadian Oratorical championship finals at Toronto tonight. There are five competitors from Nova Scotia, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

BAND OF WOLVES EXTERMINATED

Edmonton, May 18.—A band of wolves which have been trailing and raiding far northern trap lines and destroying moose and deer, have been killed by trappers, according to word brought here. With scarcely a rabbit in the country, the wolves were driven by hunger to raid the lines, causing heavy losses to trappers. Even hindered prey are feeling the scarcity of food, says Mr. Parnell, who made the report about the wolves.

Woman Tells How Husky Benefitted Her in Every Way

Suffered From Catarrh of Stomach, Neuritis, Constipation and Tired Feelings.

"I am feeling better in every way and have gained several pounds since I started taking Husky. I am still taking this medicine and getting fine results". This statement was made by Mrs. McKee, 4415 Rivard St., Montreal, in speaking of her experience with Husky, the herb preparation, now distributed by local drug stores.

Speaking of her case in more detail, Madame McKey said: "For about four years I suffered from catarrh of the stomach and neuritis in my left side. I also suffered from biliousness, dizzy spells and constipation. I could hardly do my housework and would always feel tired before the day was half gone. I tried to be very careful about food as everything seemed to disagree with me.

MDE. J. McKEY

"I began taking Husky sometime ago and have taken three bottles of this medicine so far. It has helped me wonderfully and I can now eat good, hearty meals and my foods digest. The catarrhal condition has been relieved and the pounds I very much better. Before taking Husky I slept very little, but I now sleep fine. I am feeling much better in every way and have gained several pounds since I started taking Husky. I am still taking this medicine and getting fine results. I will always praise Husky."

At Good Drug Stores

Every man and woman suffering in any way Husky is recommended to relieve, owes it to himself or herself to give the Husky treatment a trial. Husky can be obtained at good druggists everywhere and when taken regularly and over a reasonable length of time it will help you just as it is helping thousands of others.

ACCOMMODATION FOR OLYMPICS NEARLY FINISHED

Amsterdam, May 17.—Accommodations for the 1928 Olympic Games are nearing completion with speed unequalled since the Stockholm games in 1912.

Sixteen months before the scheduled opening of the games, the stadium are taking definite form under the supervision of the Dutch Olympic committee.

The grounds cover an area of 56 acres and are situated in the southwest of Amsterdam, 20 minutes by tramway from the city hall. A ten minute ride in an automobile takes the prospective spectator from a hotel in the central part of the city to the stadium, where garages will be built to accommodate 4,000 cars.

Beside the main Olympic Stadium for track and field sports a swimming pool, pavilion for fencing, cricket ground and tennis courts are under construction. Only a few minutes' walk separates them.

The "grand stadium" will accommodate 40,000 spectators—20,000 seated and 20,000 standing.

It is 285 yards in length by 182 yards wide and contains a football field arranged for display or association and of international regulation dimensions.

Believed to be the result of a robbery attempt, Joe Martin, a taxi-driver and John Hudson were found shot dead in a car near Bothurst.

Thomas Horner, 52, said he set fire to an Orangeville house where a party was being held because he wasn't invited.

CANADA IS A NATION

Canada is a nation, some day in the near future she will be a great nation and it is within the power of Canadians that she will be the greatest unit of the British Empire. It is a wonderful country, a country of unlimited resources and magnificent possibilities. It is a nation she celebrates her fiftieth anniversary this year What better way for you to celebrate it than by taking a trip "Across Canada and Back", and see for yourself the reason for this optimism about the Dominion. Prof. Laird, of Macdonald College, Que., has arranged with the Canadian Pacific Railway for a special train of sleeping cars to leave Toronto on July 25th, cross the continent and get back to Toronto on August 15th, and in that time of 21 days to see all the principal cities, and the noted beauty spots of the West. After Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and the principal cities of the prairies, there is the magnificence of the Rockies, and those famous beauty spots, Banff, Lake Louise, Emerald Lake and the Yoho Valley. Then there are the wonderful cities of Vancouver, Banff to Windermere 104 miles, and from Field to Lake Louise 66 miles. The Kootenay district of which Nelson is the capital, and Okanagan Valley fruit country in which is located Penticton will be visited and Vancouver and Victoria, those rapidly growing Pacific Coast cities will delight everyone.

An illustrated booklet descriptive of the tour is now ready, and can be had on application to W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Toronto, or to Prof. Sinclair Laird Macdonald College, P.O., Que. 4, 11, 18, 25

EDMONTON POLICE FACES EXPENSES

Edmonton, Alta., May 18.— The police of the city are faced with a problem that bids fair to wreck the finances of the department. The trouble started over the eviction of a local family for non-payment of their rent. Sheriff's armed with eviction papers found the tenants had departed but also found nine large door mats the tenants had left. There were weight Danes and a St. Bernard.

The sheriff and his party were nonplussed. Reinforcements were summoned and the pound wagon called. The huge size of the dogs made several trips necessary to the pound enclosure. Then came the problem of feeding the dogs, and the sheriff discovered the dogs were very hungry, and there were no supplies on hand. The chief of police was called on.

"Buy ten biscuits" said the chief. "How much" came the answer. "All they want" responded the chief. Pity sounds were bought. A few minutes later the chief was again called to the rescue. "They're still hungry," appealed the sheriff. "O.K. with me responded the chief, "keep feeding them." But 50 pounds of dog biscuits the dogs appeared to be but an hors d'oeuvre to.

Now the chief is wondering where he can turn out, for the dogs must be fed, or the owners can sue the city.

Some clever effects have been obtained by Roy Del Ruth, the Warner Brothers' director, in filming "Wolf's Clothing," starring Monte Blue with Patsy Ruth Miller. One of the most remarkable is the sequence in which the hero and heroine walk the clouds in the midst of a swirling crowd of revellers, on New Year's Eve, along the Great White Way. The beauty of the scene suggests the Arabian Nights. It is open sesame to O. Henry's Bagdad-on-the-Subway.
The hero of the story, the ranting, roaring Barry Baline (played so sensitively by Monte Blue) is a subway

BRAVES BATTLE CUBS 22 FRAMES

National League Teams Hang Up New Record In Long Session

New York, May 18.—At Boston, Chicago and the Braves approached the major league record for length of games when they battled yesterday for 22 innings. The Cubs ultimately won, 4 to 3, on a base on balls, Stephenson's home and Grimm's single. The Cubs were held runless from the fifth inning to the twenty-second, when R. Smith's weakened under the strain. The Cubs used three hurlers, Blake, Brilhart and Osborn, the latter coming through as victor. The Braves totalled 15 hits against 26 for Chicago.

The Reds were white and blue as they departed more in sorrow than anger from the Polo Grounds yesterday. The color scheme they furnished for the finale would have made George M. Cohan weep with envy. The play is that the fleet had sailed away and there was no band to play the "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Burleigh Grimes took a big broad brush and painted a pitching masterpiece when he spread a streak of white across the first three innings, stuck a dash of white over the next three and finished with one big dash on the same color over the last three. When he finished the lads were completely white washed. There were plenty of reasons for the miss be blue.

The Giants' casualty won a 2-0 victory and made a clean sweep of the three-game series. It was the first shutout of the year for the Reds and that was about the only remnant they had left of their former glory. But it was their sixth straight defeat, but that wasn't so bad. They're getting used to losing.

Jack Scott won a hurling duel from Grover Cleveland Alexander as Philadelphia and Philadelphia took the third and deciding game of the series from Rochester, 4 to 3 in 10 innings. Scott was invincible from the first to the ninth, but in the final inning Jim Bottomley drove one over the fence with Prius on base, accounting for the last two Cardinal tallies.

Brooklyn gained an even break in the four-game series with the Pirates at Brooklyn by taking the concluding fray by 2 to 1. Dizzy Vance allowed eight hits, against three yielded by Hill and Morrison, of Pittsburgh. Partridge hit a homer in the first. The Pirates' only run came in the ninth with Wright's single and Grantham's triple.

RUTH HOMERS AS N.Y. YANKEES WIN

Tiger Pitchers Hammered Hard By the Clan of Huggins

Detroit, May 18.—Mr. Herman Ruth, the eminent thespian, whose latest cinema masterpiece is even now being shown in a local auditorium, demonstrated again yesterday the versatility that has endeared him to the hearts of his countrymen. In the eighth inning he knocked a baseball out of the lot. And those who had come to jeer remained to cheer.

Mr. Ruth's opus, which sailed over the scoreboard in left centre and bounced into the front yard of one of his screen admirers, was his ninth of the season, putting him ahead of the dusty parade and clinching the afternoon's argument between the Yanks and Tigers. The score was 9 to 2. The Yanks, however, could have won without the Ruthian rap. They made runs on the slightest provocation and at the least encouragement. Two Detroit pitchers, Rip Collins and Owen Carroll, felt the sting of the New York flails, which hammered out something like fifteen blows of various kinds and sizes.

The Browns collected sixteen hits off three Philadelphia pitchers at St. Louis and won, 11 to 6. Ehmke was batted out in the fifth inning. Sisler brought in the first run for the Browns in the first inning when he and E. Miller worked the double steal.

Boston hammered Joe Bowman, making his first start for the White Sox this season, off the hill in the first inning and then continued batting Cole in the sixth and seventh innings to defeat Chicago 6 to 2 in the final game of the series at Chicago. Slim Harriss was hit freely by the Sox, but managed to tighten up in the pinches.

Washington knocked three Cleveland pitchers off the rubber and won 12 to 0 at Cleveland, breaking even in the two-game series. Speaker former Cleveland manager, won seven hitless in the first game of the series, drew three singles, a double and a base on balls in five trips to the plate, scoring four runs. Lisenbee was a puzzle throughout, holding Cleveland to four hits, three of which were popped flies.

You can talk all you like about homers
And ninth inning rallies and such.
You can rave about hockey and polo,
I'm sorry I can't hand them much.
In boxing and baseball and wrestling
There isn't a thrill I have seen
To match that heart-tingling reaction
Of sinking one clean 'cross the green!

—Joe Williams.

Frankie Frisch, traded to the Cardinals by the Giants last Fall, told scribes down south last Spring that he was set for a good year, due to the improvement in his health. On Sunday, May 8, he made his first error of the season after accepting 128 chances without a boot.

His hitting has been spectacular.

Which proves Frankie Frisch a prophet, and a true one.

When "Shucks" Pruett, former nemesis of Babe Ruth, was herded out of the big leagues, fans thought that he was through. The lad who southpawed the Bambino to death when he was hurling his forkaided assortment for the Browns, departed from the American league, had a season in the Pacific Coast circuit, and then came back this year with the Phillies. That he still has something on the old onion was shown when he set the Cubs down with three stingy blows and beat them 4 to 1.

Dempsey has apparently contracted extravagant habits, and it is estimated that he requires $100,000 a year to live on—perhaps "rents" is the word. Not like the old "hobo" days of riding freight and other outdoor pastimes.

One week from yesterday the B. of Quinte League schedule will be opened at Belleville Agricultural Field when Deseronto, champions of Ontario and the local C. N. E. team will face the barrier. Interest in baseball in the city is growing and the management are preparing for a big crowd. Chas. Symons reports a fair sale of tickets and the pasteboards will probably be more sought after toward the end of the week.

Manager Elliott's selection for a shiner will likely rest between his good right-hander, Leal, and the southpaw pitcher, Bill Ralph. Both will give the railroaders plenty of trouble. Probable choice rests between "Chummy" Gerow and "Hoot" Gibson, both of whom burn them in from the port-side. The rest of the line-up has not been decided but Manager Mills is sure to place a strong aggregation on the field.

JIM MALONEY IS 7-5 FAVORITE

New York, May 17.—Jack Sharkey's eye injury suffered in training made Jimmy Maloney, his ninth opponent for the heavyweight boxing crown, a 7 to 5 favorite today for their bout Tuesday night at the Yankee Stadium.

While Sharkey was forced to refrain from sparring because of the wound above the left eye, which Maloney inflicted in one of their previous meetings and Sharkey reopened in a match with a sparring partner Saturday, Maloney went through his daily 12 rounds of boxing in a hard drive to get his weight down to the fighting point, 200 pounds.

RIOTS FEATURED TORONTO GAME

Leafs Finally Thrown For a Loss By Bisons Score 1-0

New York, May 18.—The Stars used four pinch-hitters yesterday, all of them delivered hits and Syracuse won the first game of the series from Rochester at Syracuse, 12 to 11. Five home runs were collected, three by Syracuse. Lee Head, Rochester catcher, tied the score in the ninth with a homer on Heid's second pitch that scored three runs.

In a spectacular 14-inning duel, marked by near riots and the banishment of eight players from the field at various stages of the game, the Bisons repulsed the Maple Leafs in the opening game of the series at Buffalo by a score of 1 to 0. Ogden, who relieved Thomas, won his game with a single, scoring the winning run. Umpire Hayes had numerous clashes with the players, while Huber and Hargrave came involved in a fist fight at third-base, and pressure of police on the field three times during the game was required.

Jocko Conlan's single to left field with the bases full in the tenth frame at Newark yesterday gave the Bears a hard-fought ten-inning victory over Jersey City in the opening game of a four-game series by the score of 5 to 4. Al Mamaux, Newark's veteran twirler, was invincible with men on bases. Errors by Kingdon and Lee, gave the Jerseyites two runs. Al Moore, Jersey City outfielder, hit a long home run.

Overcoming a small lead in the fourth inning with a rally that sent five runs across the plate, the Orioles gave the Reading Aces their nineteenth consecutive defeat in a game at Baltimore which ended 7 to 5. G. Mayse's wild throw and Crane's error together with hits by Lake, Scott, Ogden, Storrier and Sheedy did not work.

JACK ADAMS PILOT OF DETROIT TEAM

Montreal, May 18.—Jack Adams, last year with the champion Ottawa Senators in the National Hockey League has been appointed manager of the Detroit team in the major pro hockey circuit, and has already started his activities in the new job, it was learned yesterday when, reports said, was to man age the Detroit Club, has been selected to manage the new chatterbox at Detroit.

ANGLER'S AMBITION IS REALIZED

Aylmer, May 17.—Lake Brothers, on the Ottawa River, near this town, is commonly known as the "spawning ground of early muskinge-lore," but yesterday it surprised two anglers by yielding up a 175-pound sturgeon. Measuring 8 1-2 feet, the fish is among the largest ever hooked in the inland waters of this district. John and Edward Gravelle of Aylmer, who caught the sturgeon, could not land it as they ordered, and had to tow it two miles to shore before it would give up the fight.

Ottawa, Ont., May 17.—Full inquiry respecting the destination of all registered mail destroyed in the wreck of the Imperial Limited near Nipigon, early Sunday morning, is being conducted by the post office department. The investigation will probably take several weeks as the mail coach which was burned to its iron frame together with its contents, carried registered mail all the way from Vancouver and various points enroute.

NURSE'S ACTION DISMISSED BY SUPERIOR COURT

Montreal, Que., May 17. (C.P.)—Action taken by Mary Hayes, a former probationer in the Montreal General Hospital to recover $2,551.50 from the hospital authorities because she contracted tuberculosis while in training, was dismissed in the Superior Court, on the ground that the hospital was not responsible because the nurse did not place herself under its care as soon as she discovered her illness, but sought outside medical advice, and went to a sanitarium as her doctor directed. Mr. Justice Lane, in rendering judgment, said there was no proof that the plaintiff contracted the disease because of her training in the hospital. "Miss Hayes, however, claimed that under a clause of the contract which she entered into with the hospital, she was entitled to gratuitous care while ill, care which she did not receive, she alleged. His Lordship reached the conclusion that while this clause was in the contract, the hospital did not undertake to pay the expenses of nurses who obtained treatment outside the hospital. For this and other reasons the action was dismissed, with costs.

Do You Cough?

Durlph, Ont.—"I caught a severe cold and could not seem to get rid of it. It just clung to me and finally settled in my bronchial tubes causing me a lot of trouble. The cough would be more severe at night than during the day, causing sleeplessness. I finally decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and by the time I had taken one bottle I was entirely relieved of the bronchial trouble—my cough disappeared and I have had no trouble with a cough since. I do not think a person can take anything better for bronchial troubles or persistent coughs than the 'Golden Medical Discovery'."—Miss Mary Dugnas, 153 Ontario St.

CONFIRMATION IN PETERBORO

Peterboro, May 17.—More than one hundred young people of the Province of England entered the full communion of the church yesterday when the Lord Bishop of Toronto, the Rt. Rev. J. P. Sweeney, conducted confirmation services at St. John's, Lakefield and All Saints' churches. A large class was presented at each church, most of the candidates being girls and boys in their teens, while a few were men and women. The ladies all wore white dresses and veils, while the men had white flowers in their buttonholes. Inspiring sermons were preached by His Lordship at all three services.

The Irony of Love By Charles Garvice

"You're mad!" she whispered.

The words ought to have warned him, clocked him; but the passion of hate had got him in its grip, rendered him reckless, and drove him on.

"You don't understand. Don't you see? Think—girl! I'm Stranlyre's elder brother. By right, all that he has should be mine."

"I see," she said, drawing a long breath. "Yes, I do know now."

She shrank a little from his fixed stare, the stare of the madman, the drew his hand across his white face, wet with sweat, and, looking above her head, went on in a low tone, as if he had forgotten her presence.

"Yes, he had everything, and I had nothing; nothing! At our first meeting, I'm nearly robbed me of life itself—his car ran me down, might have killed me. When I got up from the mud and I looked at him and knew who he was, I hated him, and I swore that some day or other, if ever the chance were given me, I'd get something back. I'm going to do so. I can't take from him the name that should be mine, and the rest of it; but I can take from him the woman he loves—and I've done so."

"You must be a devil!" she panted.

"No, I'm human, that's all. Men are human, not angels nor demons. Put yourself in my place; put yourself in my place! Would you, knowing what I know, have loved and looked the hand of the one who stood in your place? I was well-educated, but I was an outcast. I was—I am still!" The words sprang from his lips with the force of an elemental savagery, a bitter despair, even in the moment of his triumph. "I can step between him and happiness; I can separate him from Lady Maude; I can snatch from him the woman he wants; but I shall still be what I was from the beginning—nameless, a by-word. But at least I shall have had my revenge."

He paused for a moment or two, then he went on in a cold, lower tone.

"And who knows what chance may help me with her. She may be really to turn to any one—"

It was the dream, the grotesque hope of a madman; and doubtless, even in the acute phase of his insanity he saw its hopelessness, for, with an upward jerk of his head and a movement of his hand, as if thrusting this side of the matter from him, he continued his tirade:

"Now, I've told you, you understand. All this doesn't concern you. You've got all you want."

He went to the mantelshelf, and, raise enough now, and as calm and collected as if he had not given way to this outburst of insanity, he addressed her as suavely as usual.

"You're all right. I wonder"—he smiled—"whether you realize how very much you have gained. For instance, did it never occur to you that you are a countess, the Countess of Stranlyre?"

Phenie looked at him, then dropped her eyes. She, too, was strangely calm now, and the expression of her face and her attitude indicated a keen watchfulness of him; for the time, at any rate, all emotion in her was subdued to a guarded scrutiny of him.

"The Countess of Stranlyre, the wife of one of the richest noblemen in England, the mistress of that estate up there, of all the other places—That's it, Phenie, you, the waif of a mining camp!—and with it all the man you love, the man you wanted! You've got everything you can wish for. My girl, you ought to be satisfied—and grateful," he added, nodding at her.

The girl lowered her eyes, her face was set. It was as if she were on guard, watchful of herself as well as of him. He stretched himself, drew a long breath, and, with a movement of his hands, as if he were concentrating himself on the details of his plan, brushed back his disheveled hair from his brow.

"I will go up to London with you." He thought for a moment. "It will not do to go tonight; the landlady would be curious, make a fuss. Strain fyre, will not come tonight. We will go tomorrow, by the ten-o'clock train. I'll write to Stranlyre and tell him that I have to go on the Continent, and we will not turn up again until the marriage morn—the happy marriage morn! It's quite easy, you see Phenie?"

"Quite easy", she said mechanically, in an expressionless monotone.

Travers took up his hat and looked at her through half-closed eyes. "Yon my word, Phenie, I don't think you'll make a bad countess. You're fearfully pretty, you're clever, you'll get into the way of it very soon and ruffle it with the best of them." He laughed, but though she winced and her eyes flash ed, she did not see them. "You and I must always be friends, Phenie—I beg your pardon—Lady Stranlyre. I hope your lordship will send me an invitation now and again, and let me have the pleasure of witnessing your happiness. For I am sure you will be very happy, though at first Stranlyre may be a bit rough, as he would say."

She drew a long breath through her clenched teeth.

CITY TRIUMPHS IN BATTLE FOR BIG NEW INDUSTRY

Stephens Adamson Co. Sign Agreement To-day For Purchase Of Marsh Engineering Plant

BELLEVILLE SECURES THE LARGEST INDUSTRY TO COME TO ONTARIO IN YEARS—STEPHENS - ADAMSON COMPANY BUYS MARSH ENGINEERING WORKS PLANT

Long Negotiations Successfully Ended When Agreement Was Signed This Morning—Industrial Commissioner J. O. Herity and Mayor Eardley Wilmot Did Splendid Work For the City—Other Cities Offered Special Inducements—Victory Won Without Giving of Bonus or Special Inducement—City Council and Chamber of Commerce Helped to Achieve Success—Directors Like Belleville as City in Which to Live.

Stephens - Adamson Manufacturing Company of Aurora, Ill., simply by signing this morning to purchase the plant and equipment of the Marsh Engineering Company here and will manufacture in Belleville for the Canadian Trade. The plant will employ at once about one hundred men and this number will increase gradually up to from 250 to 700 and eventually probably many more. Remodelling will start immediately and the plant will be put into operation as rapidly as possible as the Company has some large orders on hand for Canadian customers.

The Stephens-Adamson people are the largest manufacturers of heavy conveying machinery in the world. They make transmission machinery for ore carrying, in mines and for heavy manufacturing. Their catalogue contains about nine hundred and fifty pages featuring all kinds of carrying and elevating equipment.

The Business

The business was founded in 1901 in a small way but has grown so rapidly that their annual output now amounts to over three and a half millions with a payroll of over $600,00. They have a branch factory at Los Angeles to handle their western trade. All their lines will be made in Belleville and in addition they plan to continue the lines formerly made by the Marsh Engineering Company.

A steadily increasing demand for their products in Canada induced the executive of the Company to decide on opening a Canadian plant to handle this business. They had some negotiations with Mr. J. O. Herity, Industrial Commissioner, back in 1925, but finally decided to establish their Los Angles plant at that time and postpone their location in Canada until the present. Canadian business however, went ahead and developed such a point that this year they made up their minds to go ahead with their original plan.

On April 25th last Mr. L. B. Stephens, vice-president and Mr. M. L. Randall, chief engineer; Mr. C. A. Krause, assistant treasurer and Mr. O. A. Free man who is also the General Manager of the local plant, came to Belleville to look over the situation in the local situation. During their visit they looked over the Marsh Engineering Works and found it to be one that can be easily adapted to their purposes as the buildings constructed were somewhat similar and they at once opened negotiations for purchase. Negotiations at this time were held up however owing to the wide difference being asked by the seller and that offered by the intending purchaser.

Had Attractive Offers

The four Company officials then visited a number of other cities and were offered particularly attractive concessions to locate their plant in London, Ontario, and in St. John's, Quebec. London is understood to have offered them seventeen acres of land and to erect a building adapted to their business. The Aurora men, however, were apparently sold on Belleville and refused to close any where else. They returned to Belleville but finally were induced to go back Home without completing the deal. Last week Mayor Eardley Wilmot, City Solicitor H. J. R. Graham, Col. L. W. Marsh and Industrial Commissioner J. O. Herity went to Aurora for a conference with the Company's executive and while they did not reach any agreement they agreed to promote from the President D. B. Pierson that he would visit Belleville before definitely deciding on their Canadian location.

Agreement Reached Tuesday

Mr. Pierson arrived in Belleville on Tuesday noon in accordance with his promise and after a conference with the City Council and the directors of the Chamber of Commerce a tentative agreement was reached with Col. Marsh for the sale of the property that was signed this morning. He left for Montreal but returned last night and the agreement was signed this morning.

Under the terms of the agreement, Mr. Marsh gets cash for the property and is to give possession on Monday, May 23rd. The office and mechanical staff of the Marsh Engineering works will be retained by the new management. Mr. Marsh expects to visit over from headquarters at Aurora at once to introduce the manufacturer of the new plant. Mr. Pierson left for Aurora this city for a few days to complete the transfer of the property and Mr. Freeman, the Manager of the Canadian plant arrived in Belleville from Chicago at noon today.

The Marsh Engineering Works were founded on the present site in 1912 and at one time particularly during the war did a very large business. The plant consists of a splendid group of buildings and is well equipped for manufacturing.

Belleville is Fortunate In Her Civic Leaders

Belleville has perhaps been exceedingly fortunate in securing the industry which they have this morning but the Stephens Adamson Company would not be executing arrangements to start manufacture here if it had not been for the fine and intelligent work of Industrial Commissioner Mr. J. O. Herity, backed wholeheartedly by Mayor Eardley Wilmot the members of the City Council and the directors of our Chamber of Commerce.

The battle was one in the face of strenuous competition from other cities who bid recklessly to secure so valuable addition to their industrial life. Belleville has won out without bonus or special concessions of any kind, but only as the result of skilful negotiations by a small group of men who have the good of the city at heart.

The executives of this big American Company decided on Belleville because of its favorable location as a manufacturing centre of its wonderful transportation facilities primarily but also because they figured that it was a beautiful and progressive city in which to live. In this connection a special word of appreciation is due to the directors and members of the Bay of Quinte Country Club who entertained the distinguished visitors and showed them the fine spirit of hospitality and co-operation which exists in our city.

Throughout the negotiations Col. L. W. Marsh has been very fair and in many cases put the good of the city ahead of his own personal feelings. He reserves the thanks of the citizens of Belleville in no small measure for his attitude and for the way in which he facilitated the coming to the city of this fine industry.

BOAT WRECKAGE TELLS SAD TALE

Cobourg, Ont., May 19.—There can be little doubt that the launch Alma, which left Niagara a week ago last Monday and has not since been seen, foundered, and that the two men, Porteous and Collins, who formed her crew, were drowned.

This week a hatch was picked up at this port and identified as the forward hatch of the Alma from its bearing an aluminum number. NO GREAT RUSH TO GET PERMITS IN BELLEVILLE

Thirty Documents Issued at Local Office This Morning

OPEN SAT. EVENING

Officials Believe Early Start Will Relieve Last Minute Invasion

Sharp at nine o'clock this morning the issuing of liquor permits under the Government Control Act commenced in temporary quarters at 162 Front Street, in the Victoria Block just north of the New Queen's Hotel. Mr. Harry Naylor is the issuer of the permits and Messrs. B. L. Hyman and Harold Bain man, vendor and assistant vendor respectively.

Up until about noon to-day about thirty permits had been issued and a number of forms were obtained by women, who unhesitantly walked in and upon the payment of two dollars were given the permit which will enable them to make fifty-two purchases from the Government stores between now and the first of October. Any quantity of liquor up to one case can be obtained at one time on permit holders.

At nine o'clock this morning two people were standing in front of the temporary office waiting for the office to open.

Permits will be issued to any citizen in good standing and those living in the "dry" area coming from the Belleville office. Residents of Prince Edward County are also eligible to purchase liquor from the Belleville store.

Speaking with the Chief Vendor, B. L. Hyman, to-day, he stated that the office will be opened a sunday evening between the hours of seven and ten o'clock to allow farmers and workingpeople an opportunity of securing permits. Mr. Hyman asked the Intelligencer to refrain from publishing the name of the first person securing a permit this morning.

However, when the liquor store not yet opened in Belleville there was not such a brisk rush for permits as might have been expected and several citizens were heard to say "why the hurry in purchasing them when there is not a store here."

Those who are not eligible to hold permits are:—

(a) Any person under twenty-one years of age.

(b) Any Indian.

(c) Any interdicted person.

(d) Any person who is disqualified under provisions of subsection (3) of section 37 of the Act.

(e) Any person whose permit has been suspended or cancelled under any of the provisions of the Act.

The permit is of heavy paper and eight inches by five in dimensions. It is the colour of the year "1927" in printed in large letters, in red. The wording of the permit requires the applicant to be 21 years of age and a bona fide resident of Ontario for one month previous to the date of issue. It also stipulates that the applicant is not a holder of an unexpired liquor permit or disqualified under the provisions of the Liquor Control Act of Ontario. The permit is signed by B. B. Hanna, Chief Commissioner and countersigned by the local issuer.

Fifty Two Sections

The back of the permit is divided into fifty-two sections each divided in to columns for the date, kind of liquor secured, the number of the store where it was obtained and the name of the vendor. The date will prevent misuse of the permit through holders securing liquor at different stores on the same date.

THE WEATHER

Moderate northwesterly winds, most ly fair to-day and on Friday, station ary or little higher temperature.

FOGGY WEATHER FORCES DePINEDO DOWN TO EARTH

Father Point, Que., May 19.—Commander DePinedo attempting to fly from Quebec to Shippegan, N.B., en-route to Newfoundland alighted in Rimouski harbor at 120 this afternoon. It is thought he was compelled to come down because of the foggy weather.

WEATHER REPORT HALTS FLIGHT

Navigator of Columbia Withdraws Injunction Proceedings

New York, May 19.—Lloyd Bertaud definitely is not going to make the Paris flight in Bellanca monoplane with Clarence Chamberlin and his sponsor has been selected, but his identity will not be revealed until the plane is ready to hop off, Charles A. Levine, head of the company backing the flight, told Associated Press this after noon. Early to-day Bertaud stated the difficulties had been ironed out and that he would go on the flight as originally planned.

New York, May 19.—Differences that threatened the New York-Paris flight of the Bellanca monoplane's "Columbia" were settled to-day, when Lloyd Bertaud, navigator of the plane announced that, injunction proceedings against Charles Levine, backer of the flight, to prevent the "Columbia" from starting on its trip without him would be withdrawn. Adverser weather reports further delayed the Bellanca flight. Stormy seas between here and the New Foundland coast also held up earth. Commander Richard Byrd's giant monoplane "America" and Capt. Charles Lindbergh's monoplane "Spirit of St. Louis." Weather reports said the Mid-Atlantic was clear, but favorable sides the entire extent of the route probably would not appear before to-morrow.

COMPANY DONATES DINGHY TROPHY

The British American Oil Company have donated a cup to be contested for on the 24th of May each year, and the 24th only. It has been presented to the Belleville Dinghy Club in conjunction with the Bay of Quinte Country Club and will be put up for competition this coming Tuesday.

These dinghy races attracted a great deal of attention last year. There must be nearly ten dinghys privately owned in the city, and no doubt more local people will be buying that popular type of boat this year.

Big Brother Sends China-man Spinning Through Window

Although not a city, the village of Stirling had a representation of nearly fifty men and boys in the Belleville Police Court this morning when Albert Ashley, of West Huntingdon faced a charge of assault and battery against Toy Wo, an employee in the Chinese Cafe in Stirling.

On Saturday evening, Ashley, his brother Orrin, Garfield Ashley , and some of their friends were in the cafe between 11 o'clock and midnight, having something to eat and chatting. Young Garfield Ashley, according to the evidence produced in the Court Room this morning, was standing leaning against a chair laughing and talking, when the Henry Hong, another employee in the cafe, walked up to him and kicked him in the ankle and hit him in the eye, evidently wishing him to move. A heated argument started. Then Toy Wo came out from the kitchen and suddenly both Chinamen grabbed the boy and started to put him out of the cafe.

Broke Door Glass

It was at this point that Albert Ashley stepped in, and pushing Henry Hong to one side, smashed Wo in the face with his fist, knocking his cye and sending him spinning so that he crash ed through the glass in the front door. The remains of the little fracas were still evident on Wo's face this morning.

According to other witnesses called a third Chinaman came out from the kitchen and, picking up a chair, made use of it, and after the smoke of battle had cleared away had disappeared.

Magistrate Ponton dismissed the charge against Albert Ashley that he was only "sticking-up" for his friend, and coming to his aid on a moment of peril."

The services of Charlie Ling joint owner of the Queens Cafe were engaged as an interpreter, which made the case drag out longer than is usual Chas. Payne acted for the defence.

FOUR CONSECUTIVE DAYS FROM SCHOOL

"I will certainly recommend that the schools of Belleville remain closed on Monday, May 23rd, at the meeting of the Board of Education on Friday evening. This will give the pupils four consecutive, consecutive holidays commencing Saturday.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

A friend is a fellow who will listen to your troubles instead, of telling about his own.

P. E. HOSPITALITY

As Mr. Owen Herity said, speaking at the Rednersville Community Club closing meeting for the season last night, "the only difference between city and country people now is that the country man is a little sure of his future and his women folks are perhaps a little better dressed." The automobile, the telephone and the radio have brought the man on the farm in as close touch with world news and world thought as the man who lives in a large community.

The Rednersville Community Club is one of the best in Canada. They meet once a week, rotating among four churches on the circuit and have a jolly good time changing views and news, parting better acquainted and so better friends.

The invitations to the Belleville Rotary Club to visit them last night was a kindly thought and showed that they appreciated the advantages of closer co-operation between the urban and rural populations. Certainly the Rotarians appreciated the hospitality of their country friends. For a few hours people in different walks of life met and mingled on a common footing to their mutual advantage.

And the ladies of Rednersville, may Heaven bless them, know their part. If there are any better cooks in Canada or any women with a more generous conception of a man's consumptive capacity, we would very much like to meet them. We have had many meals in many different places, but never anything that surpassed that put on by the good ladies of Prince Edward County last evening. Compared to their efforts, hotel banquets are pale and unsatisfactory substitutes.

THE REAL REMEDY

Because the United States Government, pressed by Detroit trades unions, decreed that Canadians living in Windsor but working in Detroit must either take up permanent residence in the United States or forfeit their jobs there has been much talk between Ottawa and Washington and some hard things said in the press of Canada.

Yet, come to think of it, there can be little reasonable objection to what the United States has done. The first duty of any government is to the citizens of its own country, and, so long as it does not interfere with the rights of the citizens of another country, it has a perfect right to help them, whether by immigration laws, or tariff laws, or by any other laws. It is in line with this principle that the United States maintains the Purdney-McOumber tariff against Canada—a right that nobody denies her.

The course of Canadians in such circumstances, is not to look to Washington. Their course is to look to Ottawa. And the duty of Ottawa, of the Government of Canada, is not to go hat in hand to Washington asking for favors or for special privileges, upon any basis of friendship. The duty of the Government of Canada is to emulate the example of the Government of the United States and to protect its own citizens. When, a few years ago, Washington used every legitimate tariff weapon at its disposal to keep Canada's products out of United States markets, so that its farmers and its workingmen would have every possible advantage, Canada should simply have retaliated by using every legitimate means at her disposal to keep United States goods out of her markets, for the benefit of Canadian farmers and Canadian workingmen. The justice of that, the practical politics of that, is as clear as any thing can be.

But Canada took no such step. Canada was willing to "lie down" before Washington's tariff policy, with the consequence that goods which ought to be manufactured in Canada, providing jobs for Canadian workingmen, Canada bought hundreds of millions of dollars worth of such goods last year. She is buying more of them this year.

That is why Canadians find it necessary to cross the border to get work. That is the real source of the trouble at Windsor.

Since Confederation Canada has lost to the United States more than the present population of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan. We built up one great West—and lost another. That drain will continue—it is going on now—unless and until Canada takes a leaf out of the book of the United States and decides to look after her own people. We may change our immigration policies and our immigration ministers every year. We may spend millions on getting immigrants, and we may scour Europe to get them. It will not matter. Until we devise a policy that will not only get people to come here but that will keep them here after they come, all our efforts will be largely wasted.

MR. TASCHEREAU.

Time does not wither nor custom stale Liberal Governments in Quebec. The snows of thirty winters have melted into spring since the last Conservative Government yielded office, and Monday Mr. Taschereau was returned to power, secure for four years more. Curiously enough, not even the law of diminishing returns, as prevalent in politics as in economics, made anybody expect something different. The reason was that the issue in Quebec was not really between real Liberalism on the one hand and real Conservatism on the other. It was between a Government that uses the label of Liberalism, but which is essentially conservative and an Opposition that calls itself Conservative, but which is really merely opportunist. Principles politics, and parties were hopelessly mixed.

Mr. Taschereau is about as Liberal as Mr. Joynson Hicks, Britain's Die-Hard Home Secretary. Beside him judging from their records, Mr. Howard Ferguson, Ontario's so-called Tory is a flaming radical. But that does not matter—in Quebec. The magic which the name and fame of Laurier gave to the word "Liberalism" in French Canada is still mighty, and when to that advantage Mr. Taschereau added the record of a Government that has been able practical and efficient, and which the breath of scandal has not touched, he became invincible. Liberals supported him because he called himself Liberal, Conservatives because he stood for Conservative policies, people of no particular party allegiance because of his administrative competence. Thus he was able to command the support of a solid Liberal press on the one hand, and of th English Conservative press, as well a of French Conservative papers lik La Patrie and L'Erenement on th other.

DOGS

I've never known a dog to wag
His tail in glee he didn't feel,
Nor quit his old time friend to tag
At some more influential heel.
The yellowest cur I ever knew
Was, to the boy who loved him, true

I've never known a dog to show
Half-way devotion to his friend,
To seek a kinder man to know,
Or richer, but unto the end
The humblest dog I ever knew
Was, to the man that loved him, true

I've never known a dog to fake
Affection for a present gain;
A false display of love to make,
Some little favor to attain.
I've never known a Prince, or Spot
That seemed to be what he was not.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

To the Editor of The Intelligencer,
Dear Mr. Editor:—

May I be permitted to draw attention to the approaching Empire Day Concert in the Armouries when the school children to the number of six or seven hundred of selected voices, will give their annual concert. In advance of the concert there is being held this week competitions in the four Public Schools, and a shield is being donated by the Board of Education for choral singing and competition is very keen for the winning of the trophy, also medals for solo singing by girls and boys given by the Rotary Club. These prizes will be awarded and presented at the concert on Monday night next, the 23rd. Besides the four Public Schools, a choir of girls and boys from St. Michael's Academy will join in a wonderful programme of patriotic choruses, folk-songs and solos. The large audience of last year who were so thrilled with the children's voices will have a greater treat, for with the year's training they will sing better and the improvement will be very marked.

An elevated platform is being built and the seating will be a great advantage for the children, and this platform will be available for all civic and school demonstrations in the future. The City Council and the Board of Education are giving generous support, but a small fee is being charged to meet the necessary expenses.

I feel confident that the singing of the school children will be a revelation to the citizens and demonstrate the great benefit of music in the schools as a cultural influence of singing. The programme is being arranged to feature this Jubilee Year of the Confederation of Canada and the Armouries is being seated for the occasion. Thanking you, I am,

Yours truly,
V. P. HUNT,
Supervisor of Music.

JOHN ST. YOUNG PEOPLE PRESENT CLEVER PAGEANT

"Romance of Canada" Is Exceptionally Well Portrayed

Sixty young people of John Street United Church last night presented one of the finest and most remarkable pageants "The Romance of Canada" that has ever been produced in the city and a large audience enjoyed every word and every line spoken by the talented young people taking part.

With most delightful selections played by Mr. Leo Riggs the pageant opened by the arrival of the Goddess of Fame (Miss Gussie Hill) who was very lovely in the part her tall and stately carriage being eminently fitted to the role. To unfold the story of Canada she summoned back from the past the fathers of Confederation to tell their part in uniting Canada into the embryo of the Great Dominion of today. The manner in which the four young men played the part of the five great Canadians was most convincing and most creditable.

In their turn the provinces who had come into the Confederation were summoned each accompanied by some one of her outstanding heroes or heroines and lastly the pioneers and builders of the Empire. The pageant wound up with the crowning of the mother by the Goddess of Fame she being accorded the first place in the Nations upbuilding.

Those Responsible

Too much cannot be said of the talented manner in which Miss Sylvia Rees trained the cast for the play. Her ingenuity and real genius in supervising a production was fully demonstrated and the result of her efforts was equal to the result of a trained and accomplished professional. Miss Rees had her supervision but a couple of times and had entrusted her talented pupils to carry out the real training. Mr. Leo Riggs was responsible for the very fine musical end of the pageant.

The Cast

The young people of the cast were: Goddess of Fame, Gussie Hill; Pages, Elizabeth Kinnear and Jean Bankier; Snow Queen, Helen Findlay; Page, Shirley McIntosh and Annie Bone; Herald, Edgar Buchanan; Two Guardian Spirits, Eleanor Bone and Helen Cook; Britannia, Edith Moore; Pages, Bobbie Boyce and Robert Hunter; Sir John A. Police Court

Jacob Goldberg, w ho was convicted by illegally having a still in his possession, in his residence on Front Street, netted a fine of $200 and costs from Magistrate Mikel in Police Court this morning. He paid the fine cheerfully and was released.

Facing a charge of a similar nature, David Maracle, who is now serving time "upon the hill" for selling liquor, was remanded until May 26th in order that he might procure a lawyer for his defence.

As well as the Chinamen who appear ed in Court today, a "hobo" of Finnish extraction was up on a charge of vagrancy. The man's name was Kosti Mistelin, and he wouldn't or couldn't, speak English, so it was fairly difficult to decide what to do with him. He was remanded until tomorrow.

Three visitors of the Ontario High way Act netted fines of $5 respectively in Police Court this morning.

JAPANESE DEFEAT TORONTO ALL STARS

Toronto, May 19th.—The Waseda University baseball team from Tokio, Japan, showed its wares before an appreciative crowd at the Island Athletic Stadium last night and defeated the Western City All-Stars 8 to 4 in an exceptionally well-played game.

The students from the Orient showed wonderful ability and executed their plays with snap and dash, receiving continued plaudits from the spectators.

Three players stood out for the visitors, Iguchi at third base, soon caught the eye of the fans. He worked like a big leaguer and handled six hard chances to perfection.

MISSION DOES NOBLE WORK IN POORER SECTIONS

Interesting Report of Rossmore and Dundas St. Charge

The Dundas St. Mission of the United Church comprising Dundas St. Centre St., and Rossmore churches was formed by the last day of quinte Conference and the Rev. S. McMullen placed thereon as a regularly ordained minister instead of former supplies.

During the year Regular preaching and Sunday School services have been conducted at each church. The Dundas St. Church during the autumn and winter conducted very successful Mother's Society meetings, sewing class es and Temperance meetings for children.

The Official Board recently organized has introduced the duplex envelope system at each church all of which have met in full their appropriations to ministerial support and contributed forty dollars to maintenance and Extension Fund.

Improvements amounting to eighty dollars were completed and paid for last autumn on the Dundas St. Church.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Schuster generously donated sufficient coal to keep Dundas St. warm and comfortable for the children of the Sunday School and all meetings held during the year.

There was raised on the Mission fi ld purposes nearly $600, some 500 pastoral calls made, 15 children baptized, 10 funerals attended, 3 marriages solemnized, numerous outgoe and other prayer meetings held and 38 new members received into the church most on confession of faith of which entered from the Sunday Schools

Commencing the work of the year without certain equipment and funds the people of the mission have helped themselves heroically but are still in real need of a proper communion set for sacramental purposes and also for a combined register for marriages, baptisms and burials.

Repairs to Church

The Rossmore people must repair their church at once to the amount at least of $350; the roof of which is in a dilapidated condition and having to replaced since built forty years ago and which has already damaged the interior.

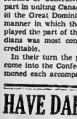

All the United Churches of the city have given financially to Dundas street and organized an inspiring home mission board in its behalf.

This is genuine home mission work. The poor and neglected are at the door and close to charge are not compelled to seek them afar beyond the ocean and the seas, they live beside them, walk the streets with them and go to the same shops with and among the same. They are our very own to love and enmantle with the gospel of the grace of God and thus inspire to nobler living.

It is not the undoing of any man or minister to cast in his labours and his lot with the neglected poor for our master was annointed to preach the gospel to the poor and sent us to the highways and judges to compel them to come in.

Medric Goulard pointed his gun at his wife in North Bay and shot himself when she fainted.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

MARKET SPOTLIGHT ON MOWAT M&M REGGILLIPHOS MINING STOCKS

The latest news regarding the ore body at the Kirkland Lake—Teck Hughes boundary is interesting to all market traders. It is one of the largest bodies so far encountered. It is over three hundred feet in length on the Kirkland Lake property and one hundred and fifty feet on the Teck Hughes property and extends from near the surface to below the eight hundred foot level. The gold content varies from $5.00 to $25.00 per ton over stopink widths of from five to twenty-five feet. Unquestionably, our Teck Hughes but Kirkland Lake has many years of profitable mining ahead of it and we look upon both these stocks as splendid purchases at present prices.

Radio Plays Important Part in Northern Survey

On two occasions engineers of the Canadian National Railways were required to send out location parties in the Peace River country and in Northern Manitoba, the latter party making towards Churchill. On each occasion it was found desirable to include amongst the supplies and equipment a radio receiving set and on the return of the parties it was stated that no addition to camp equipment had ever done so much to add to the morale of the men. The illustration shows: Upper left, a section of a camp in the Owl River district on the way to Churchill; upper right, a group of men in camp listening to Radio reception; below, the survey party in winter garb.

MEMORIAL TO BE ERECTED IN OHIO

Cleveland, May 17.—A suitable memorial to William Livingstone, president of the Lake Carriers' Association for 25 years and its first president will be erected by the association.

According to the plan, a lighthouse built of stone, to serve as a range light, will be erected at the eastern end of Belle Isle, Detroit. A life-size ed monument of Mr. Livingstone and tablets listing donors will be placed in the lighthouse.

The total cost is estimated at $100,000, one half of which will be subscribed by the association and the other half raised by popular subscription. The association plans to levy two and one half cents a ton on cargoes carried by boats belonging to members of the association. This, it was explained, will provide the association's subscription in three years.

The government has advised the association it will maintain the light.

The death occurred last night of James Franklin Schermerhorn, for 40 years a well-known resident of Woodstock. He had been ill for some time. He was born at Drumbo, and was a son of the late James Schermerhorn and Alfonah Templeton.

COMMUNITY CLUB OF REDNERSVILLE ARE GOOD HOSTS

Belleville Rotarians Visit Victoria Church For Closing Banquet

About fifty Rotarians from this city motored to Victoria Church, Rednersville, last evening and were the guests of the Rednersville Community Club at supper, after which the visitors put on a program in the auditorium of the church. The minister, Rev. S. N. Dixon asked the blessing before the meal.

The meal, which took the form of a banquet, and prepared by the ladies of the church was the last word in culinary art and was not only eugenic partaken of, because of its quality but the quantity also was an incentive for more. The menu consisted of potato salad, scalloped potatoes, roast pork, roast veal, salmon loaf, chicken pie, jelly, sweet pickles, relishes, a variety of pies "like mother used to make" deep layer cakes, tarts and coffee as well as real homemade bread and butter. So thoroughly did the Rotarians enjoy the spread, under which the tables fairly groaned, that over one hour was spent in eating and some of the Rotarians even set the record of eating as many as seven pieces of pie (quantity—quality was also indulged during the supper), led by O. H. Scott and J. Arnold Thompson.

After all the visitors had eaten until they were uncomfortable they adjourned to enjoy the president of Rednersville community singing was held while the members of the church were dining and then the gathering was called to order by the president of Rednersville Community Club, Donald Spencer who welcomed the Belleville Rotarians to Victoria Church. A short session of the club was held during which the minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, H. Montgomery. The reading of the "Community Beacon" a community paper consisting of jokes, sports, poetry, society and other phases, featuring the community was given by Frank Walkman. - Dr. E. J. Baker, principal Emeritus of Albert College, opened the meeting with prayer.

Following this the meeting was turned over to the visitors and J. O. Herity, President of the Belleville Rotary Club was called to the platform and gave an interesting and humorous talk. Mr. Herity said that the country life of today and that of when he was a small boy on the farm in Hunterdon Township, had changed considerably. "to-day" said he "the people of the country are better dressed than their city brothers, they are better posted with current events and they enjoy all the privileges of the city by the advent of the automobile, the daily delivery of the mails and the radio."

Speaking of the problems confronting the country today and the benefit of community clubs, Mr. Herity said "in Canada we have racial difference, religious differences, political difference and geographical differences to contend with and these have all to be overcome and we must live in unison if we are to enjoy community life."

Mr. Herity also made references to the splendid meal which had been enjoyed by the rotarians and stated that he had visited Prince Edward County often and always found such splendid cooking—such he attributed either to inherited art from the direction of this country which was handed down from their forebears who came over from the United States or else it was an art acquired.

Mr. Herity will expect two more hot workers of the B. C. Church, Archbishop Campos and Bish Athanasius.

WOMEN TO SPEND HUGE AMOUNTS ON COSMETICS

Chicago, May 17.—To protect their appearances during the next 12 months, the women of the United States will spend 20 times more than their international contemporaries spend for health-less and scientific methods to protect the country's boundaries, according to Mrs. Ruth J. Weaver, head of the Personal Development School, a speaker at the national beauty show here.

Mrs. Weaver said women spend annually 50 per cent. more than men do for their appearance. Women's beauty bill for food totalled 21,25 000 000, she declared, because of the items of adornment and clothing in the figure being hats, hosiery, furs and dresses.

Miss Hazel Morris, St. Thomas school teacher, has been summoned, charged with undue severity to a girl pupil.

GEORGE WEST IS NEW PRESIDENT Y. P. SOCIETIES

Kingston Presbytery Sunday Schools and Young People Meet

Yesterday afternoon and evening a rally of the Sunday schools and Young People's Societies of the Kingston Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church of Canada was held at St. Andrew's Church. Officers were elected, general routine business was discussed, and a very successful day was spent by all concerned. The Rev. W. M. Kannawin of Toronto was the principal speaker of the meeting.

The convention was attended by delegates from all the Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies of the Kingston Presbytery, which is bounded on the east by Gananoque and on the west by Trenton. The session was opened by devotional exercises led by the Rev. R. G. Stewart, following with the report of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies was furnished by the Rev. T. G. Marshall, Presbytery Convener.

The Reports

Reports were heard from twenty four Sunday Schools which show an enrollment of approximately 1520, eighty one officers and teachers. $2.445 was the amount of money raised during the year by the schools and $23 was handed for mission work.

The twenty Peoples Societies reported an enrollment of four hundred men bers, with $1200 raised throughout the year, and $100 for Mission Work, a very creditable showing.

The Nominating Committee was next called and comprised George West, Madoc Convener, Rev. Stewart, Belleville, Rev. B. A. McKenzie, Belleville, Rev. T. G. Marshall, Madoc, Rev. Duncan, Brelin, Miss Davis, Kingston, Miss Fleming, Tamworth and Mr. I. L. Moore, Belleville.

This committee chose as its officers for the coming year—

The Officers

President—George West, Madoc

Secretary—Miss Middleton, Belleville

Treasurer—Miss Davis, Kingston.

Perhaps one of the main features of the day was a sumptious supper served by the ladies of St. Andrews at 6 o'clock in the evening after the afternoon's work was done.

The evening session opened at 7.30 with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. T. G. Marshall of Madoc and closed with prayer and hymns. Throughout the entire convention there were five speeches, and addresses by the Rev. W. M. Kannawin of Toronto who spoke on "Christ's Estimate of St. Andrews Secret Asset," and in the evening on the "Vision of Youth." Addresses were also given by the Rev. A. B. Reid, B.A. of Stirling who spoke on "Education and Character Building," and also Rev. Jones in the evening by the Rev. D. A. McKenzie of Burnham who took as his subject "The Challenge of the Twentieth Century to Young People."

The convention was of only one day's duration and closed last evening after an exceedingly successful meeting.

N.S. IS PLACE OF NICKNAMES

Halifax, N. S., May 17 (C.P.)—"Hair-pin Agents," she was called when a girl was tall and slim and bow-legged," says a writer in the Chronicle, in an article on "Clan Breton Nicknames". There are so many Macdonalds, McNeils, McLeods, McLeans and McAulays in Cape Breton Island that Gaelic names enough to go around. The older generation who took their lead from the Kirk or The Chapels would not stand for nicknames, don't believe in "Old Scotch." So the kids got Donald and Hugh and Alex and so on and John, James, Luke or Mark. The girls had to be satisfied with Mary, Ann, Christy, Sarah, Helen or Catherine. After a time the same ones became so confusing that some villages and towns, yes, even boundaries of the same name. Then to decriminate "who is who" they began to talk one another with nicknames. The Don McNeils from the Intervale were known as Intervale Don; his son as Johnnie Don Vale; his daughter as Sister Don Vale, and so on. As for the Macdonald clans: They are mostly Donald's, or Alexs, or Boys, or Neils. The girls are Marys and Anns and Sussies and Sarahs. The families are always handed on in order to retain some distinction the grandfather's nickname is retained. The grand-children very often are designated by the combination of nicknames as "Sarah Sandy Betty," "Tommy Dan son's Mary Ann;" "Jack Big Archy's Ethel."

The boys get the short and snappy nicknames, such as Donald the Buck, Jack the Rat, Billy Senator, John the Poora Man, Danny Nonsense, Burglar, Jack Spud, Donald the Dan son, Andrew Dan, Alex Bumpee or Donald Archy little, big, red, fair, the school or boy. Any Donald has to have a nickname and he gets it early and it usually sticks to the second or third generation.

HARD WORK TO GET JOB AS AN AIR ANNOUNCER

New York, May 16.—Radio is the rainbow's end in the average entertainer's progress toward fame and fortune, but the climb to the metaphoric is not an easy one and the great majority fail to achieve it.

An official of a broadcasting company, which operates several great radio networks across the country, was asked how performers became radio entertainers, how they went about it to get into radio."

"The same way they get into opera," he smiled. "Auditions, we're having one today. Come on down."

The audition was held in the studios of a local station. Long before the hour to begin the reception rooms were filled with nervous aspirants scanning manuscripts, tuning instruments and humming the selections on which they pinned their hopes.

The hour struck and the audition began. Through the studio they traveled, singly, in pairs, trios, ensembles; each given his chance to prove his artistry. Despite their single purpose they were an ill-assorted lot. There were little men with enormous instruments behind which they seemed to hide from too critical regard. There were large women with tiny voices and small ones with voices to make loud speakers tremble like a ruffle of drums. There was a blind man with something that looked like the pipes of Pan. Brass bands blared and gave way to ensembles of woodwind. Hawaiian orchestras were followed by piano solos or monologues. Zithers and marimbas, balalaikas and bull fiddles, trombones and tubas, all had their chance.

The artists orient, it was learned, was as diverse as the quality of their performances. Some were from church choirs and others from the night clubs. Some had known success in concert, vaudeville or talking machine recording, and others had no more preparation than a mail order course laboriously studied after the day's work in factory or office.

While they played and sang the judges sat in an adjoining cabinet from which a narrow window looked out on the studio and in which there hung a giant loud speaker four feet across. The performers, nervous most of them as participants in the graduation exercise of a vaudeville amateur night, would now and then glance covertly at the cabinet window, wondering no doubt how fared their fates.

QUEEN MARY HAS SEEN BEAUTY PARLOR

London, May 17.—For the first time in her life Queen Mary has seen the inside of a beauty parlor—not as a client, but only as an interested spectator.

Despite her 60 years the Queen has never favored the endeavors of elderly women to look as young as their daughters. However, when Her Majesty was shown London's latest fashionable establishment she showed keen interest in the different appliances used for enhancing feminine beauty.

More than one visiting queen has patronized leading beauty culture establishments in London for an intensive course of treatment. Places however, are the scene of discretion, and nothing is ever revealed of the royal visits.

SLEEPY VILLAGE NEAR TO LONDON

Downe, Kent, England, May 16.—Here in this little village of only 600 inhabitants, and within fifteen miles of the roaring tide of London's millions of inhabitants, is to be found the sleepiest and most unchanging community anywhere in England.

The village has two claims to fame: Charles Darwin, the great naturalist, once made his home here; and in the chancel of the little village church of St. Mary the Virgin a handsomely engraved bronze plate records that Hezekyth buried Jacob Vermilini, Esquire born in the City of Venice, and Elizabeth his wife, born in Antwerp of the Ancient House of Van Buren and Mace."

Vedrelini was the man who introduced drinking glasses into England of which only two of the originals are now left—one at Windsor Castle, and one in the British Museum.

The village enjoys a peace which is is hard to find anywhere within fifty miles of London. It has no railway and the nearest bus route is two miles away. The nearest decent train is five miles off at Farnborough. There are no modern sewerage facilities, no gas and no electric light. Its environment not even a motion picture house. Downsmen seems to have over the village and its people. Yet not more than two miles distant is a big aerodrome and a big broadcasting station.

Modern inventions, however, have no attraction for Downe, and when it was proposed to the vicar to start an omnibus service to London he replied with a worried look: "We don't want them, we are content with things as they are."

OLD AIRSHIP IS NOT NEARLY AS GOOD AS MODERN

Ottawa, May 17.—The development of lighter-than-air commercial trans portation has been handicapped by the prejudices growing out of the war and the British Government has been working during the past few years to overcome this handicap, Major O. H. Scott, commander of the 4th unit in trans-Atlantic flight, declares. Major Scott, who is in Canada to investigate and advise as to the location of a mooring mast for dirigibles in the Dominion, has stated that the R-34 was flown from England to the United States as part of the plan to overcome the prejudices created during the war.

Major Scott contends that no comparisons can be drawn between the performances of war dirigibles, designed as they were for long distance raiding and to ascend to great heights. These ships, he declares, were built along light, weak lines where every pound of air liberty to be used in the inter-imperial service in the fall of 1928 will be staunch craft, designed to meet all weather conditions.

The two huge airships now nearing completion in England to be used on the inter-Empire routes are the largest and most powerful airships the world has ever known. They have a gas capacity of five million cubic feet, more than double the size of the United States dirigible Los Angeles or the ill-fated Shenandoah. The ships will provide every comfort for 100 passengers, including 2-berth cabins, two promenade decks, dining rooms to seat 50 people, smoking rooms and shower baths. There will be no such discomfort as "sea-sickness" aboard the air liners, Major Scott states, the size of the ships preventing rolling and pitching.

Meteorological stations will furnish advance notices along all the air routes and prevent the ships running into exceptional weather conditions which have caused major accidents such as have occurred in both Great Britain and the United States in the past.

NOTICE

A Court for the Revising of the Assessment of the Township of Thurlow for the year 1927 will be held in the Town Hall, Canniton, Monday, May 30th at 11 a.m.

E. W. BROWN,
m19-11d Clerk.

The new mast to be erected in the Dominion will be far in advance of any already in use, according to Major Scott. It will allow for the release of dirigibles in winds as high as 40 miles an hour and for bringing ships to their mooring in winds as high as 30 to 35 miles per hour. The special construction of the ships will enable them to remain at the mast in any wind, he predicts. A crew of from 10 to 15 men will be all that will be required to moor and release the air craft, as compared with a special crew of from 200 to 400 men, required if the ships were to be housed in sheds and hauled out by a ground crew.

Major Scott, who is accompanied by A. R. Cobb, British civil expert, and Canadian air officials, is considering whether the mooring base should be located in the interior of Canada or at the Atlantic seaport. One opinion holds that the latter would be the better plan, passengers to be carried to their ultimate destinations in Canada and the United States by fast pas senger aeroplanes and trains. Mail would be landed at the Digby harbor and rushed by plane to central points Major Scott predicts that the two ships to be put into service in 1928 will be but the forerunners of a fleet of such craft.

Officials of grain elevators at Port Colborne state that two more vessels will be required to clear up grain congestion existing at the Ports. At the present rate of despatch, they said relief cannot be expected in a lesser period.

Fifty were drowned at Madras, India, when a launch foundered.

BELLE THEATRE

In the old fable it was the wolf who donned sheep's clothing, and so attired wrought havoc in the fold. Arthur Somers Roche has placed a new twist to the story by dressing the sheep in wolf's clothing and sending them boldly into the midst of the howling pack of bright Broadway on a New Year's Eve. On the fact that each of us com bines qualities of both wolf and sheep, depends the hard-knuckled, crazy, happy-go-lucky hodgepodge of mirth and mystery which has developed under the direction of Roy Del Ruth, Monte Blue has never had a better starring vehicle than "Wolf's Clothing." The role of Barry Ballew, the roughand ready Westerner, come to New York to see the sights, and travel into the bowels of the earth, serving long hours seven days a week, then sudden ly emerging like a sky-rocket for one meteoric sizzling flight—gives him the opportunity for the display of all his very funny, fantastic and ristic abilities. The piece is a tie between laughter and thrills.

Patsy Ruth Miller, in support of Mr. Blue, is inimitable as a society girl who goes "slumming" alone in a night club and falls in love with the subway guard. Direction, photography and acting make a splendid evening's diver sion. "Wolf's Clothing" comes to the Belle Theatre today, Friday and Saturday.

CAPITOL THEATRE

Tonight at the Capitol theatre, The Imperial players will present their stock play—"The Factory Girl,"—a thrilling melodrama replete with good fun. Miss Blain is seen in one of her comedy parts, and Mr. Dronski and the other members of the company will have an opportunity to show their worth.

On the screen Hoot Gibson will appear in his latest feature, "The Denver Dude". It is said to be a somewhat different type of story for this popular screen favorite.

During the first part of the week Mr. Driscoll permitted the audience to decide between "Camille," and "East Lynne," for next Monday. And the patrons were quite emphatic in selecting "East Lynne". The company is busy with rehearsals, preparation of new scenery, etc., to give this fine old play is worthy production.

Kamiel Leferver, the famous Belgian carillonneur, has accepted an invitation to come to Simcoe during the latter part of June to give a series of recitals on Simcoe's beautiful carillon. This will be his third visit to Simcoe.

GIANTS RECEIVE SEVERE MAULING

Buccaneers Land on Gothamites Hard In Opening Game of Season

New York, May 19.—The Pittsburgh Piratze arrived at the Polo Grounds and lost no time in letting the Giants know of their presence. The Buccaneers had no more than dropped anchor than the Giants were bombarded with a broadside of base hits which left them horizontal and helpless.

In just one-half an inning every player in the Pittsburgh line-up had taken a crack at the ball, five of them had hit safely, another had walked, and with three errors, a passed ball and a sacrifice hit thrown in for good measure the Pirates had accumulated a flying start of five runs. Two innings later it was something more than twice as bad, and the final count over the prostrate New Yorkers was 13 to 6.

The Giants had heard wonderful tales of how the Pirates could hit and run and field and do about everything else that a ball team is required to do, but they had heard the same tales about all the western clubs and found most of them to be somewhat exaggerated.

Loose - Robin fielding enabled the Chicago Cubs to triumph at Brooklyn, 7 to 4, Charley Root held Brooklyn to six hits, while Chicago made eight off the combined deliveries of Bill Doak and Rube Ehrhardt. The Cubs tucked the game away in the fifth, when the Robin defence collapsed and four unearned runs crossed the plate. Hendline made three of Brooklyn's five errors.

The Braves humbled the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals, 8 to 1 in the first game of the series at Boston yesterday. The Warriors fell on Sherdel for five runs in the sixth and drove him from the game with two more in the seventh. Littlejohn relieved and the only hit made off his delivery was an exceedingly irregular home run which came in the eighth when Richbourg single to left got away from Haley and went to the fence.

Cincinnati, at Philadelphia, postponed threatening weather.

Fifteen Japanese baseball players, the crack team of the Waseda University of Tokio, are in Canada to test their skill with Canadian baseball stars. The team, which is headed by Professor Takasugi, professor of English and classics, and Coach Ichioke, have won seven of the eleven games played with university teams throughout the Southern and Western States. They line up with Sagi in left field, Mimitsuar rf., Hirsura, cf., Iguchi ss., Mori 2b., Nishimura 1b., Taminaga ss., Itami catcher, and five pitchers, Nakamatsu, Asahura, Mibunkami, Haraguchi and Fujimoto.

BOTH FIGHTERS ARE CONFIDENT

Maloney Slight Favorite In Tonight's Fistic Battle

New York, May 19.—A calm hung over the fighting camps of Jack Sharkey and Jimmy Maloney today as an ominous prelude to the fistic storm that will beat around them to-night at the Yankee Stadium.

This brutal fray between two of the country's best heavyweights in a battle that nominates one or the other for the chance to fight Jack Dempsey and possibly the titleholder, Gene Tunney, will be waged in the very ruin in which the fighting marine took the world crown from Dempsey at Philadelphia last fall. The roped arena, behind Tex Rickard and has seen a lot of big time fighting.

Jack Sharkey, whose confidence is not that of the blushing violet, found a good omen in the fact that it was in the same ring that he scored a technical knockout over Harry Wills, last October. As he wound up training with weights and punching bags, the ex sailor was down near the 190- pound mark, about ten pounds lighter than Maloney expects to be for the battle. That ten pounds to Sharkey appeared an advantage rather than a handicap as he hopes thereby to have the edge in speed. Sharkey added that the cut over the eye received in training was nearly haled and would not handicap him.

FREDDY GOYER IN BRILLIANT FORM

Guelph, Ont., May 19.— Playing sunset baseball behind the steady twirling of Freddy Goyer, the Guelph Leafs took a 6-1 fall out of Preston Riversides yesterday afternoon, maintaining their half-game advantage over Galt at the top of the Intercounty League. The game was the best played on the local lot so far this season, the Leafs having the edge on the Riversides only in the sixth frame, when "Lefty" Trapcell was forced to yield five hits, on which Guelph succeeded in counting four runs. Apart from this inning Trapcell pitched a beautiful game, engaging in an interesting duel with Goyer, the Leafs' veteran southpaw.

HAD AMBITIONS TOWARD PULPIT

Not long ago Max Carey of the Brooklyn Dodgers received a letter which did not reach his hands without a delay. It was held from him because it was addressed to Max O. Carnarius. That happens to be Max's real name, but since he broke into baseball he has been known as Carey. Wherever he is called Carnarius, or receives mail addressed to that person, memories of his boyhood days, when he had no idea of ever being linked with the abbreviated Carey, come to his mind.

"I'm not called Carnarius very often, and less frequently do I get mail addressed to that fellow," said Max, soon after he received the letter. "This one is from Washington and, of course, wherever I do business with them I'm Sam I'm always Carnarius. It's a name you don't hear often, but yet an ideal one for a ball player.

"While I was attending Concordia college in Fort Wayne, my Latin professor once asked me how I got my name and I couldn't explain beyond telling him that it had been adopted by my ancestors in Germany three or four hundred years ago. The professor then explained it was a Latin word which means one who handles meat. I was told earnest in Latin means flesh or of the meat, and carparius is one who handles meat. I never was a butcher, but the name fits me when I sit down to tackle a big steak. Most ball players are great steak eaters, so carnarius, I guess fits them all.

"I studied to be a minister for about a year and then the lure of the diamond got me. I also studied Latin, Greek, French, Hebrew and German, but didn't know it at the time, but I must have been studying German so as to get along with Barney Dreyfuss in Pittsburg. I was only thirteen years old when I entered there, and remained there six years. I played ball in college, and that no doubt is why the game gradually lured me from the pulpit."

"In 1909 I left Concordia to accept my first professional engagement as a ball player. It was with the Southern league team and I reported as a shortstop, the position I had played with the college team. I thought I had been a good infielder in school, but evidently I wasn't, for soon after I joined the professional ranks I was sent to the outfield. In August of the 1910 season I was sold to the Pirates at the tender age of twenty. I reported to Pittsburgh as an outfielder and have held that position ever since.

TIGERS WIN FROM SENATORS 5 - 3

Bing Miller of Browns Steps Into Lead For Batting Honors

New York, May 19.—The Tigers made their hits count yesterday and defeated Washington in the opening game of the series at Detroit, 5 to 3. Marty McManus, with two doubles, drove in three of the Tiger runs. Bassler, Detroit catcher, was put out of the game in the seventh inning for disputing a decision of Umpire Nallin on a called ball. An inning later Umpire Dineen chased Jack Onslow, coach of the Washington pitchers, from the dugout after Coolio had been called out at first on a close play.

Faced by "Bing" Miller, who boosted his average to .446, and went into major-league batting leadership, the Browns outslugged the Boston Red Sox at St. Louis and won the first game of the series, 8 to 6. The Brown, righthelder, got four hits, including a home run, in five times at bat.

Philadelphia, at Chicago; New York at Cleveland, postponed; rain.

More than 1,000,000,000 tons of soil are carried into the sea every year.

SYRACUSE STARS TWINKLE MERRILY

New York, May 19.—The Stars defeated Rochester at Syracuse yesterday, 7 to 1. Poetz held the Colts to seven hits.

The Buffalo Bisons made it two in a row over the visiting Leafs, taking the second game of the series, 5 to 2. A long home run by Bissonnette cinched the game for the Bisons.

It was Bissonnette's eighth of the season. Toronto worried along without Billy Webb, as he was still suffering from injuries received in Tuesday's fracas.

Newark defeated Jersey City 5 to 2. Swaney was invincible with men on base, although he was touched for eleven hits.

Reading's scheduled double-header at Baltimore was postponed because of rain.

FIVE TO FACE MURDER CHARGE

Los Angeles, Calif., May 18.— State's attorneys said today that charges of murder against all five defendants in the Tom Kerrick murder trial would be prosecuted.

The defendants are Henry Isabell, Joe Hunt, Anita Davis, Iris Burns and Mrs. Sarah Kerrick, the widow.

ENGLISH STILL WANT JAZZ AND FOREIGN FILMS

London, Eng., May 17.—Showmen seem to be without honor in certain English circles. But in spite of the hue and cry against jazz and foreign films, young England is supporting them with shillings.

British "highbrows" are clamoring for more art in the theatre, the cinema, the concert hall and Covent Garden opera and denouncing the men who have made amusement enterprises a financial success.

Lord Newton, declared in a parliamentary speech that Charles B. Cochran, who accepted the management of Albert Hall when the directors found it a white elephant, is a sort of "British Barnum."

The public refused to attend formal concerts in the hall. Cochran is planning to have Suzanne Lenglen play there this summer. "The Miracle" is to be produced and there are plans for spectacular productions of opera in the great hall.

But all these plans have interfered with arranging dates for the Royal Choral Society, and this musical organization has rallied Lord Newton, the Duke of Atholl and others to its support.

Queen's Hall is also the storm centre for a similar row. Sir Henry Wood's orchestra has been unable to continue its promenade concerts there because of lack of financial support, and it is rumored that this historic concert hall is to become a cinema.

Covent Garden, is planning its usual opera season this year but meantime the historic house is used as a popular dance hall nightly and the directors say it will be impossible to keep up the opera season unless some substantial means is found to support.

The British Broadcasting corporation has run abeam Charles Gulliver and other prominent music hall managers who refuse to permit the artists who work for them to go on the air. The public wants professional variety performers on the wireless.

The Irony of Love

By Charles Garvice

"You see, you—and I, of course — were quite innocent; we were not acquainted with the foolish law of marriage and did not know the serious consequences of the little deceit we played on the landlady; we did not know that up here a man and woman have only to declare themselves husband and wife before two witnesses to actually become so. And after a time, Strantyre will ton you as he has in ways do turn to the woman nearest to him. Oh, you'll be all right, Phenie; you're scored heavily. The Countess of Strantyre!—now pack up tonight so as to be ready to go with me in the morning. I'll tell the landlady that your husband, Mr. More, has been suddenly summoned to London and that you are following him. I'll pay the bill—and, by the way, have some money in case you have any little debts."

He held out some notes; she signed to him to put them on the table, and he did so.

'Good night," he said, as he held out his hand.

She hesitated for a moment, then, with tightly compressed lips and her eyes hidden, she gave him her hand.

"You're as cold as death," he said, with a laugh. "Don't be afraid; it's all right."

"Yes, it's all right," she said, almost inaudibly, and, with an encouraging nod, he went out.

CHAPTER 26

A Serious Charge

It was Mr. Durden who had sent the announcement of the engagement to the newspaper; he had considered it as failing within his duty ot do so and, if the truth must be told, he was anxious that Rafe should not be down for the staid lawyer still refused to accept the young man as a responsible being and was always expecting him to do some outlandish thing or get into some scrape. It is possible that Austerly a day passed without Mr. Durden's looking forward to the unpleasant task of offering himself as bail for his darling and reckless client.

The next morning telegrams and congratulations began to pour in upon Rafe and Maude, and they carried ahead of the dismay papers in a garden seat and read them together.

"Didn't know we had so many friends and relations," Rafe remarked. "What's to be done? Have we got to answer all these?"

"Not all," she replied, laughing at the gathering dismay in his face. "Only a few; we'll just let call go unanswered, and it doesn't seem to matter."

"Mr. Travers has been away a great deal," said Maude, a little gravely as she put him into her own place. "Do you think you could get on without him—I mean after we are married?"

"Well," replied Rafe slowly, "I dare say I should miss him——No; that isn't true, Maude. I shouldn't miss anybody while I had you. You don't like him, darling; you'd rather be sent?"

Maude looked up at him with her serene, truthful eyes. "No, I don't like him; I never did. I am glad you will let him go. You see, I accept the offer at once. I know you'd wish me to. We'll ask father to find him some place——"

"Oh, that's all right," said Rafe. "I'll look after him. Poor old Travers he's been a good pal to me — No, don't say another word, dearest; if he was my own brother, I wouldn't keep him, now that I know you still don't like him."

"I feel very selfish, and you are very good to me——"

He caught her in his arms and pressed her to him.

"Show me some way of being good to you, Maude, and I'll thank you for the rest of my life. Good to you! Say, don't you know that every time I look at you and think that you've given yourself to me, I want to—well, I want to go down on my knees and thank God! Sometimes I wake in the night, cold with a dread that I've only been dreaming and that I've woke up to find that you're going to marry Strantyre. I shan't feel that I've got you safe, and sound, and tight until we're walking out of the church, arm in arm with the organ playing behind us. Now I've let out the truth to you, you can't keep me waiting long. You see, at heart, I'm a miser still, and we miners have so many ups and downs, so many slips, that we're never sure of our luck till we've got the gold in our hands. I'm a bit superstitious, too; we all are, and I've got a kind of dread that something will turn up, something will come between us."

"What can come between us, Strantyre?" she asked, very softly, and with a full understanding of everything for, his anxiety and this unspoken dread and to comfort him, she drew his head down and kissed him.

"I dunno," he replied, in his absorption, sinking into the old form of speech. "I might break my leg—but I'll be all right, and I'll be back in time. Good to you! Say, don't you know that every time I look at you and think that you've given yourself to me, I want to—well, I want to go down on my knees and thank God! Sometimes I wake in the night, cold with a dread that I've only been dreaming and that I've woke up to find that you're going to marry Strantyre. I shan't feel that I've got you safe, and sound, and tight until we're walking out of the church, arm in arm with the organ playing behind us. Now I've let out the truth to you, you can't keep me waiting long. You see, at heart, I'm a miner still, and we miners have so many ups and downs, so many slips, that we're never sure of our luck till we've got the gold in our hands. I'm a bit superstitious, too; we all are, and I've got a kind of dread that

"Not stronger than your's, Strantyre," she said with an answering laugh, a laugh of pride in his great strength.

RELIGIOUS BODY TO PROMOTE A BETTER FEELING

New York, May 16.—A voluntary fact finding and opinion making body of Protestants, Roman Catholics and Jews, believed the first of its kind in history, and designed to promote better understanding between the three faiths, has been organized into a permanent commission.

Isaac Landman, editor of the American Hebrew, declares in the current issue of the magazine, that the commission is to be free of private religious views, politics and the consideration of problems touching on international relations. Such a commission, the magazine points out, would preclude ill will and hatred against the faiths engendered from intolerant teaching.

Nine members of the three religions are to function as the permanent commission. They are Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; Martin Conboy, Knight Commander of the Order of St. Gregory the Great; Victor J. Dowling, presiding justice of the appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York; the Rev. Francis P. Duffy, president of the Rainbow Division Veterans' Association; Dr. W. H. P. Faunce, former president of Brown University; Irving Lehman, judge of the Court of Appeals of New York State; Henry Morgenthau, former American Ambassador to Turkey; Roscoe Pound, dean of Harvard Law School, and Dr. Stephen S. Wise, rabbi of Free Synagogue, of New York.

H. A. Marshall, manager of Alberni Pacific Shingle Mills, was drowned while swimming in Stamp River, Vancouver Island.

John Hardy, an Orangeville farmhand, ran amuck and attacked his employer because he couldn't go to church on Sunday.

MANY PIONEERS LEAVE MEMENTOS TO MOUNT ROYAL

La Salle, Maisonneuve and Others Are Recalled In Montreal Archives

Montreal May 17.—Some of the most vivid chapters of early Canadian history are locked away among the closely-packed files which make up the archives of the Dutries of Montreal, presided over by E. Z. Massicotte. The records preserved here cover almost every phase of the life of French-Canada from the founding of the settlement at the foot of Mount Royal in 1642.

The story of Canada's oldest province is here written in facts and figures. Entries of births and deaths in parish registers, notarial deeds recording transfers of land and permits to trade in furs supply the rendering material for innumerable romances. Here are the biographies of dariug pioneers, men whose lives brimmed over with adventure, glory and shame compressed into a few closely written lines.

Scattered thickly through the century-yellowed pages are the signatures of men whose perspicacity and daring have gained them places in every school history book. One of the most interesting of these, historic autographs is that of the Sieur de Maisonneuve, founder and first governor of Montreal. Its authenticity ackwl edged by a survey of the documents housed here. Each page of the first notarial deed issued in the district is thus honored.

This unique document, one of the oldest notarial deeds in the continent transfers to one Pierre Gadoys, forty crpents of farmland situated in what is now a commercial district in the great bi-lingual metropolis.

Another signature which would be highly prized by any collector is that of the famous LaSalle, explorer of the Mississippi river. Before setting out on his epoctal journey into the wilderness, LaSalle, in conformity with the law governing all such expeditions whether for trade or exploration, was obliged to record the name of each member of his party. His name, inscribed by his own hand, may be read on the register of adventurers today.

The roster of the furtrade, which is one of Mr. Massicotte's most treasured charges, runs into thousands of names for not only the generals and captains of that far-scouring army but each private soldier, each wild coriier-de-bois, had his name inscribed in the ueliginal register per" to the start of his wol to what the young colony boasted of civilization.

Many of these men never returned to their pioneer homes, some left vicinus to people hrtions, to the death-dealing rapids of upper Ottawa, or to privation. But many hundreds, according to the archivist, settled by them nameless lakes and rivers in the wilds of the North and South-West. They established family groups and became the pioneers of new populous districts.

Thus many families now prominent in central Canada and the Mississipi states could, if they chose, trace their histories back through the centuries to the French colony on the St. Lawrence. They would find the names of their woods-running ancestors inscribed in the archives of the District of Montreal.

MANITOBA HAS NEW AG. PROJECT

Winnipeg, Man., May 16.—Manitoba is the setting of a unique agricultural development project, under which 100,000 acres of land are divided up into dairy farms of 160 acres each on what is described by the promoters, The Manitoba Dairy Farms Limited, as an "equitable co-partnership between capital and agricultural workers."

"The Davidson Plan" as it is called is being worked out on a tract of land 47 miles southeast of Winnipeg, near Marchand. Fifteen families, Canadian and American, are located already on these farms. They procure cream, butter, cheese and other dairy products for their own use, while a huge amount of these products is marketed in Winnipeg. They produce their own silage, poultry, and feed.

These farms are completely equipped before being occupied, with silo, barns, comfortable houses and "everything" are broken ready for the settler. The price of these farms comes easily within reach of the farmer. Each purchaser is allowed an area of from 10 to twenty good fresh Holsteins, from a herd here and now kept for that purpose. A small payment on the land entitles the purchaser to secure the cows for which he pays out of his cream cheque.

The farms has no more payments to make for three years, and the remainder is spread over twenty years. Roads run through the settlement, a schoolhouse is provided, and a teacher maintained the year round.

General Jan Christian Smuts declares the fish more in South Africa is a mistake and likely to prove a dangerous calamity.

FISH PRODUCTION BIG INCREASE

Edmonton, Alta., May 18.—Fisheries production in Alberta jumped to an increase of almost $200,000 during 1926. The figure for 1925 being $456,504. This is the largest record since 1922, taking the fisheries production for the three prairie provinces, the total shows an increase of over $1,000,000, over 1925. The marketable value of fish caught in Manitoban waters was nearly $2,500,000, while Saskatchewan waters yielded $444,288 worth. The principal varieties of fish caught were, whitefish valued at about $1,200,000, pickerel at over $1,000,000, tullibee at half a million, pike at a similar amount. The number of men engaged in the fishing was nearly 6,000.

Does your daughter attend school regularly?

MANY GIRLS are absent from school for a few days each month because of illness. In many cases this is unnecessary because young girls—as well as older women—can be strengthened by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Girls suffering from run-down condition, sleeplessness, nervousness, and loss of appetite, should gain new strength and vigor from this Vegetable Compound.

The following testimonials show what the Compound has done for other schoolgirls.

NERVOUS AND DIZZY

Charleston, Illinois.—"I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She was nervous, weak and dizzy. At last she was so tired all that she was out of school for four months. The Vegetable Compound has restored her to every way and she has gone back to school. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be."—Mrs. Alice Louthan, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

Remember this package. None genuine without the signature of Lydia E. Pinkham.

SICK AND WEAK

Camden, New Jersey.—"When my daughter was twelve years old she was hurt at the play-ground. She was sick and weak for some time after that and was not able to go to school regularly. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped her wonderfully, and she now goes to school every day. She has gained in weight and has a better appetite than she had before taking it."—Mrs. Ada Melton, 1011 Linden Street, Camden, New Jersey.

TRUTH THE LEAVEN OF CIVILIZED WORLD

By ELSIE MARLOWE

THE BREAD RISES! I like to make bread. I go about it with a different feeling than that which I have for any other house work.

The feeling one might have if one were going to work a miracle.

he simplicity of it all--and the wonder that is worked within that simplicity.

The crude materials:

Flour--grist of the earth.

Salt--grist of the sea.

Milk--grist of Motherhood.

A yellow bowl, a wooden spoon, the sunlight slanting on the kitchen floor --two clumsy human hands. The flour, salt and milk are mixed into a paste. Simple as that mud paste which Jesus mixed to lay upon a blind man's eyes! A paste of flour, salt and milk and then that small, dull lump of leaven we call yeast.

The bread is mixed. I lay it on the board and knead. That kneading motion, back and forth--back and forth --back and forth. The rhythm of the bread. The curious rhythm of the bread which has not altered since the first spoke made a cake of acorn flour--that rhythm which seems to run through everything to life.

The ebb and flow of tides. The rise and fall of sap in Spring and Fall. The ebb and flow of grief and joy in lives of men. The kneading of the bread dough, back and forth, back and forth.

The dough is shaped to loaves and set to rise. Small loaves, as dumb and helpless as a little child. Round, shapeless, sleeping loaves in a warm, darkened pan.

And then the miracle begins to work. The bread is rising! Something is moving in that mass of dough--something is growing through that paste of flour, salt and milk. Something is waking into life as a wee babe wakes to life within its mother's womb.

The leaven works. It spreads and reaches out. The yeast is growing like a hidden plant. The yeast is lifting all the sodden mass--quickening every heavy particle of salt and flour --spreading its life through all the sleeping paste. The yeast has turned that paste into white, living bread.

And so it seems to me that Truth works in the lives of men. That living Truth which is the basis of all healthy growth or progress. That civilizing force which slowly leavens man's dark savagery.

First the dumb elements which we share with the beast--this stubborn, heavy flesh--those instincts which are grist of earth and sea--man dough, as heavy and as dumb as flour paste.

Man dough, which God shaped from the dust of earth. And then the leaven of His living breath--leaven of Truth implanted in that mass and growing slowly in its darkened heart. Spreading out hidden branches through that stupid mass of fear and ignorance--branches of courage, honor, love and generosity--small hidden filaments of thought--dreams like potent bubbles of life-giving gas.

The leaven works! We say the world is still the same old place of fear and sin, of lust and cruelty and brutish greed. We cry that life's a failure and man rotten at the heart. See the bread. The bread that will be the bread. The bread that will some day come out of all this kneading and slow working of the yeast. But just as surely as the dough will rise when once the yeast has stirred in man of life—

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

If a girl goes out with one boy several times, does it scare off all her other boy friends for good?

I was going with four or five boys when I first came to town and because I happened to go out several times in a row with one of them, the others have dropped calling. What shall I do?

V.R.T.

V. R. T.: The next time you are your other friends ask them to call. You can make it quite evident that you are not attached in any way. Although you may not realize it, you may have given the impression of undivided interest in the young man whom you have seen frequently.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

The demand this spring for pearls is better than it has been for several seasons, since the revival of the pearl vogue, and while the old rope remains the leader, chokers are being worn again, particularly those in tinted pearls.

Flat blue, empire green and bordeaux are noted in flat crepe dresses accompanying quite fantrimmed wool ien coats sponsored by Lanvin in midseason and black, with touches of metal, is also noted, while the evening group is distinguished by the use of combined fabrics, such as a bodice of gold lame with a skirt of tulle embroidered in paillettes.

So surely will Truth raise the mass of dull and brutish lust in which God housed the image of Himself.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

So, at thirty, two years hence, Arthur Winslow would be rich. Eventually he also would enjoy into his father's shoes in the bank, if business didn't sore him too much, or interfere to greatly with his pleasures.

Meanwhile, his lot required no sympathy. He came and went as he chose and he had the title of third vice president. Even when he favored the bank with his presence, strolling negligently in at all hours, there was nothing for him to do but sign his name to a few letters which his secretary prepared for him.

Sybil had abandoned the pretense of transcribing his letters as he dictated them. The diskeys in arts and letters was apparently a mere scrap of paper. Arthur composed a letter only less gauche than that of a ten year old boy. Sybil gathered the gist of what he wanted to say and turned out, in her own crisp, pointed style, the letter which eventually reaches the post-bag.

"Pon my word, you're a wonder!" he told her admiringly, when he chanced to read the transcribed product of which he was to sign his name. "I never have thought of putting that into words that way. Just what did I say, anyway?"

She pretended to have mislaid her notes.

"Your letter was a little--er--cumbersome, I thought," she explained.

"Quite right, I'm sure," he agreed amiably. "Now, really, you've put an idea in my head."

"You can't mean it?" said Sybil—to herself.

"Why shouldn't you write all my letters for me?" he suggested, with enthusiasm. "Beastly bore my having to dictate. And think of the time we'll save. That ought to appeal to the old man—he's keen on efficiency, and all that."

"In that case," suggested Sybil, with dangerous meekness, her black eyes lowered to hide their mischievous sparkle, "why should you bother to come to the office at all?"

He stared at her thoughtfully.

"No," he decided, "I don't think that's at all a good idea. You see, I'd miss seeing you every day."

"Would it be a great deprivation?" she murmured, with a false coyness.

"I'll say it would. Look here, you're the prettiest girl in town. Don't you know that? But I expect all the lads have told you so often enough."

He came around the desk and stood looking down at her. His lazy eyes showed their interest.

She shook her lovely head.

"I haven't had many men friends," she said truthfully—and smiled a trifle to herself.

"Sure, you're not kidding me?" He gave a sidelong look. "I can't fancy where you've been all my life," he went on. "I never laid eyes on you till the day old Brady sent you to Dad."

She laughed and shrugged.

Oh, you've seen me often enough—only you never noticed me."

"That's a whopper," he declared. "Think I'd forget, if I'd ever met you? Not on your life."

She bited her eyes. They were unsmiling.

"Perhaps you don't connect the name—my father is Fred Rae."

"Oh!" His eyes narrowed suddenly. He stared at her hard. Something crept into his eyes that made her flush. She hated him in that moment. "Then you're the sister of Ted and Jimmie. We used to run around together, before I left for college and my trip abroad. They never told me they had such a peach of a sister. I'm in luck, what?"

She smiled then, full into his eyes. She knew he was going to be easy.

CHAPTER 22

The Carefully Qualified Proposal

It soon began to be remarked around the bank that young Arthur Winslow was developing a business conscience at least, he showed up at the office every day—something he hadn't always done—and less frequently took afternoons off for golf or tennis or tea-parties.

The wiseacres shook their heads and smiled knowingly. Arthur's secretary was too pretty to be overlooked by the gossips. The only person, apparently, who didn't suspect what was happening was Winslow, Sr. Or, if he did suspect, he didn't give the matter much attention. In his eyes, Arthur could do no wrong. He had always humored the boy's every whim. If he chose to have a discreet little affair with his secretary, it was nobody's business. Boys will be boys, he said, must be boys.

Sybil was fully aware of the gossip. She grimly accepted it as inevitable. Whatever she did, or didn't do, in that town, was sure to be a subject of comment. So she led Arthur Winslow on, covering him secretly for what he was—a lazy, selfish never-do-well, too weak to be really vicious, but fatuously proud of his foolish dissipations.

Sometimes she wondered if the glamour of his social position and the well-bred charm of him would have tricked her, in other circumstances. If she hadn't learned wisdom from the conduct of Dads and her brothers, would she have been silly enough to yield to Arthur's importunities?

Would she have been foolish enough to fall in love with him, if she hadn't so long cherished a hatred of his sex in her heart? Would she have married him and, perhaps, learned too late the lesson that her own mother and other wives had learned? For, except for Dads and the boys, except for the old, old scandal, Sybil knew that Arthur Winslow would ask her to marry him. His infatuation had carried him farther than he had intended.

She knew quite well—as every girl knows—that he was in love with her!

One evening, when an unexpected storm came on, he drove her home from the office. Dads was watching from the window of the living room. When Sybil came in, he said, with a pleasant smile:

"So that's the lay of the land, eh? Well, my girl, you could hardly do better."

Sybil looked at him stonily, before she slipped out of her wraps and tossed aside her hat, preparatory to starting supper.

"You actually think Arthur Winslow's intentions toward me are honorable?"

Dads flushed hotly. He brought his stick down smartly on the floor.

Ottawa City employee endured 9-year agony. Wore to Aviation. Tanlac helps him back to robust health and strength.

Mr. Lee lives at 565 St. Patrick St., Ottawa, Ont. "If I live to be 700," he said recently, "it will be a pleasure to praise Tanlac for the great boon of health it brought me. It stopped nine years of awful suffering for me.

"Every bone in my body ached and often for 3 or 4 nights at a time I could not close my eyes in sleep. Indigestion upset my nervous system and kept me in constant pain. Bloating and cramps were chronic.

"I spent hundreds of dollars for treatments and remedies during those nine years, but none of them gave me any real help. But Tanlac helped me from the very first and soon put me back in excellent condition. I gained 17 lbs. weight and have enjoyed the finest health since then."

ENTERTAIN FEARS FOR MISSING MEN

No Word Received From Niagara Pair Who Left For Belleville

All attempts to locate Harry Porteous and William Collins, the two Niagara Falls men who set out for Belleville in a small Nagiba launch over a week ago have been fruitless and it is feared that the pair may have been fruitless their lives in Lake Ontario. Niagara Falls Police and Toronto Life Saving stations have been notified, and a close watch and the only clue received which might lead to their recovery is furnished by Capt. Joseph Delaney who states that he saw two lights and heard voices near Point St. Peter on Sunday night.

The present mystery recalls a previous disappearance. On November 22, of last year, Dan Sherlock and James Cowle, both of Port Dalhousie, left there in a motor launch bound for Toronto. They reached there and it was alleged, received a load of liquor, starting out again during a storm, and no more was ever heard or seen of men or boat.

It also recalls the trying experience of two youths of St. Catharines who left there in a yawl bound for Toronto. They did not go there and an alarm was immediately raised. A search was started by Supt. Hilliard Lang of the Toronto Life Saving Service, and after 38 hours, during which the youths had to cling to their upturned boat, they were rescued by the Toronto life savers, seven miles west of Port Dalhousie, eight miles off shore.

No More Piles

Thousands Bless Dr. Leonhardt, the Physician Who Discovered This Common Sense Remedy

If you think that the surgeon's knife is the only method of escape from the misery of piles, it's because you haven't heard of the new treatment known as Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID.

This Doctor's treatment is internal. By experimenting, he discovered the cause of piles and then went further and compounded a remedy that would remove the cause.

Every piles sufferer should benefit by his discovery and so that there will be no doubting or delay, Dr. McKeown and all druggists are authorized to sell HEM-ROID with guarantee that it will do as stated or money back.

On that honorable basis every sufferer should secure a package of Mr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID today.

REP. OF BRITISH RAILWAYS WILL HELP PROBLEMS

Dublin, May 17.—Henry Givens Burgess, a retired railroad executive, is going to North America to arrange for facilitating passenger travel between Canada, the United States and the British Isles. He will represent all the British railways.

Burgess is a Tipperary man, born in Nenagh, about 68 years ago, and still talking with a rich Tipperary accent. His railway experience began at the age of 15 when he entered the service of the Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford Railway as a boy clerk at a few shillings a week.

He had only an elementary school education. Many persons in Dublin say they knew him when he used to sell tickets at the Dublin terminus of the railway on whose board he later sat as a director. He attained the position of general manager of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway, from which he retired after 30 years of railway service.

GOVT. PROPOSES TO COMBAT SMUGGLING

Ottawa, May 18.—A fleet of more than twenty vessels, with a speed in some cases of about thirty knots an hour, has been commissioned to patrol the coast line along the Maritime province in an effort to combat smuggling. These vessels will be supplemented by twenty or twenty five high powered automobiles operating on Strategic points where the roads meet in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. The official announcement to this effect was made shortly before noon to-day by the Department of National Revenue.

CREDIT ASSOCIATION IS AWARDED $300

Before Judge O. E. Deroche at the Court House this morning, the case of Canadian Credit Men's Association and Trustees of the Belleville Milling Company versus O'Reilly was heard and damages amounting to something where around three hundred dollars were awarded to the plaintiffs against O'Reilly.

Some time ago the Belleville Milling Company purchased a quantity of hay from O'Reilly and re-sold it to a Toronto firm, where it was found to be musty resulting in the damage case.

STEADY STREAM INVADES LIQUOR PERMIT OFFICES

Toronto Residents Show Some Competition To Get There First

Toronto, May 18.—At the various offices of the issuers of liquor permits in and about Toronto, there was an evidence of competition to be the first to get the permits, but there was no great rush at any point this morning.

Throughout the day there was steady round of applications, however. Some of the foreign speaking applicants expressed a disappointment that their permits were not negotiable till June 1, when according to unofficial announcement made last night the government control stores will be ready for business at several points and the full operation of the government control be continued.

Meanwhile such clauses of the act as are necessary to allow the government control commission to make its preparations have been brought into force

FOR SALE JUNE 1

Toronto, May 18.—The sale of liquor in the Province of Ontario for beverage purposes will commence on Wednesday, June 1st. It was learned last night that this is the date which has been set for the opening of the first liquor stores throughout the Province and for initiating the operation of the Liquor Control Act passed by the Ontario Legislature at last session. While it is hardly likely that all stores will be ready for operation at this time it is understood to be the intention of the commission to give service in all areas throughout the Province without discrimination.

The proclamation of the Liquor Control Act putting into force the remaining clauses of the Liquor Control Act including that repealing the Ontario Temperance Act will, it is learned, be signed on the day preceding that of the opening of the stores.

CHIEF JUSTICE IS SOME JOKER

London, Eng., May 17.—The Lord Chief Justice of England, Lord Hewart, has become known as the "chief jokester" of the bench. Nothing pleases his lordship more, than to make casual humorous remarks while his face assumes the most serious expression.

Divorces by the dozen were suggested the other day by Lord Hewart when hearing a batch of 77 undefended divorce petitions.

When his lordship had heard 50 of the petitions, he remarked:

"If the chancellor of the exchequer really desires an additional source of revenue, as has been reported, he might consider the advisability of issuing decree nisi postage stamps at the post offices."

PRIZES FOR THE BEST "CANADIANIZER"

Calgary, May 17.—At the provincial Convention of the I.O.D.E., organization of the chapter's work among foreigners during the year, the fact that, owing to lack of funds, it had not been possible to engage an I.O.D.E. worker for the year, her entire time to the Canadianization of the newcomers to the province, was recommended at the last annual meeting. In lieu of this, however, it has been decided to award two honorariums of $150,000 each this year to the teachers either men or women, who have been specially recommended by their inspectors as having, on their own initiative and outside their class rooms, done the finest work in Canadianization of the foreign born. In addition, ten scholarships of thirty dollars each will be given to assist teachers who have shown an interest in this work, to take a summer course at the University of Alberta, which has been instituted by the department of education to further this scheme. The course will include practical instruction in teaching English to foreigners, and some insight into the background and customs of the children who make up the classes in these foreign settlements. During the past year chapters through out the province subscribed $535.99 towards this work, and it was announced that two Calgary chapters had promised to be responsible for two honorariums of $150.00 each during the coming year, it being felt that every thing possible should be done to encourage the teachers, who were giving service of such vital importance to the country.

Q.M.-Sergt. W. H. Wood, of the P.P.C.L.I., will substitute for Lieut. Holands on the Canadian Bisley team.

TENNIS LEAGUE IS ORGANIZED

Circuit To Include Same Clubs As Played Last Year

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Tunmon Tennis League was held Tuesday, May 16th, in the Y.M.C.A. This League is composed of clubs from the following places: Napanee, Deseronto, Point Anne, Belleville, Tweed, Madoc, Campbellford and Delore. Representatives were present from Point Anne, Belleville, Tweed and Campbellford.

There was an election of officers, and by a unanimous vote Albert (Army) Armstrong was elected President (second term). Those present felt that "Army" was the King Pin in starting the league last year and made it the real success it was. Last year's games were very closely contested and a general improvement in Tennis has been the result.

Mr. W. E. Tunmon was again elected Hon. President, Mr. Moffatt of Tweed, Vice-President, and R. L. Brown, Secretary-Treasurer.

The first Club Tournament will be held at Tweed on June 2nd, commencing at 9 a.m. and will consist of four events of 1 Men's Singles, 1 Men's Doubles and 3 Mixed Doubles.

It was proposed to carry on a schedule of home and homey games completing the season with a tournament. The season's schedule will be published at a later date.

DEMPSEY SLATED TO MEET WINNER

New York, May 19. — The latest shuffle of the heavyweight boxing cards by the dewier, Tex Rickard, today revealed Jack Dempsey's comeback proposed a month ago and his first major opponent slated to be the victor in this Thursday's battle between the Boston title aspirants, Jack Sharkey and Jim Maloney.

Dempsey, Rickard disclosed, has rejected a proposal to fight Paulino Uzcudun, the "pounding Basque," around July 1, because the former champion feels he will not be in condition by that time. He has definitely agreed, however, to fight the Maloney-Sharkey winner under Richard's auspices at the Yankee stadium, probably during the first week in August.

Making this announcement in connection with the testimonial dinner tendered him by the "600 millionaires" of the Madison Square Garden Club, Rickard added that if Dempsey fails to fulfil his present intention to return to the ring, either Maloney or Sharkey will be Gene Tunney's opponent in the next championship match. The title fight probably will be held in the last week of September. Its site is yet uncertain. But it is expected to be in the Yankee stadium or the Sesquicentennial stadium, Philadelphia.

"Sharkey and Maloney have done all I have asked of them," said Rickard. "They have fought their way up and are entitled to the chance at Dempsey or the title-holder."

The recasting of Rickard's plans temporarily sidetracks Paulino, but may not mean the elimination of the rugged Spaniard altogether. The promoter may match the Basque with Jack Delaney on June 22 at the Yankee stadium as a second "semi-final," the winner to meet the Sharkey-Maloney survivor by way of determining Dempsey's opponent.

Regardless of what new form the preliminaries take, it is regarded as certain that Dempsey will have only one real obstacle to hurdle to get a return title bout with Tunney. The former champion, Rickard said, may have one or two "tune up" matches in the west to help him get into fighting trim, but these will not be against any of the title contenders. California, Detroit or Chicago have been mentioned as possible sites for the "tune up."

SportOgramS By "The Observer".

As opening day approaches local baseball enthusiasts are becoming more and more warmed up to the situation and by the time the Queen's Birthday arrives it is expected that the stands will be packed with Belleville's ever loyal baseball following. Fans in this section can bet their bottom dollar that Delore won't breeze into town with any delegation of set-ups and "Feeny" Mills and Co., have their work cut out for them to send the smelters back home with their first defeat. Manager "Stub" Elliott has been working quietly and has promised to send a right smart aggregation into the fray. Even with only last year's players the Delore team were no slouches when they captured the flag of Quinte title and waltzed through to add the Provincial laurels to their string of victories. With the band and opening ceremonies it should be a right gala day.

A clever young athlete was lost to Belleville when "Stub" Palmer left last week for Oshawa. Especially prominent in baseball circles "Stub" played with the Juniors and last year cavorted with the seniors in the outfield. What is Belleville's loss is Oshawa's gain and sport fans in this section of the country wish Palmer the best of luck in his new location.

The Intelligencer soft-ball team held their first practice last evening and as a result some of the boys are courting sore arms today. The newspaper boys are booking up games for the coming season.

The players who were out last night included, O'Donohoe, Carry Brockhurst, Gilbert, Jack Rooney McPherson, Doyle, Middlemiss and Cook. It is expected that Bill Knoll and Fred Symons, also any others who wish to play softball will be on hand to-night at 6.30 at the St. Michael's School grounds for practice.

Colonel Hammond is trying to catch up to a report that Lester Patrick will not be back with the New York Rangers. The colonel, in the New York Sun, hastens to disclaim all responsibility for such a statement. In a long article he explains the many merits of Lester, expatiates on the hopes for next year, and altogether declaims on the fine qualities of the western mentor, much as Damon did regarding the equally famous Pythias. Patrick didn't win a title for Rangers, but he headed a team that grossed no less than $365,-141.50 and in this commercial age that is considerable of an accomplishment—and to do this a team had to be there or thereabouts.

Body of man who figured in double shooting at North Bay was identified as John Hudson, of Combermere.

1100 Miles Through the Rockies in a 1923 Ford Without a Change of Oil

ON a motor trip through the Canadian Rockies last summer, Mr. A. F. Menzies of Fillmore, Sask., driving a 1923 model Ford Sedan and using Marvelube "F" exclusively, established some real records.

"We noticed a very marked improvement in the performance of the car," writes Mr. Menzies. "The motor had a softer and smoother tone and a very elusive knock completely disappeared. We drove eleven hundred miles before changing the oil, and the oil was the best in every respect that I have ever seen taken out of a car.

"Our car has never had new rings, or any other attention worth mentioning. It had never distinguished itself as a gas-saver, but after we started using Marvelube we got almost phenomenal mileage.

"On the Banff-Windermere highway between Cranbrook and Windermere we made 27 miles to the gallon, which came within a mile of beating the mileage record over this road.

"This was the lowest gas mileage we made. The best mileage made was between Medicine Hat and Lethbridge—34 miles to the gallon. As the old Ford never performed this way before, it is manifest that a good share of the credit is due to Marvelube".

The record made in this instance with Marvelube "F"—while not to be set up as a pattern for the average motorist—is an indication of Marvelube's remarkable stamina.

Even with such wonderful lubricating qualities as are possessed by Marvelube, it is well to change oil every 500 miles.

Using Marvelube and changing regularly you can be sure of the most satisfactory lubrication it is possible to obtain.

WINDSOR LAWYER MAY BE GRILLED BY COMMISSION

H. F. Kuntz Failed To Give Evidence at Probe as Scheduled

MADE DEMANDS

Kuntz Beer Shipped To United States Under Separate Cover

Toronto, May 20.—An effort to obtain evidence from W. M. Egan, former Windsor lawyer will be made by Royal Customs Commission. Mr. Egan, men tioned repeatedly as the man who made demands on Ontario brewers and distillers obtaining thousands of dollars from them, has thus far not appeared to tell his story. The Commission will ask his former partner in Windsor to try and get in touch with Egan. The evidence is, that Egan was campaign manager for A. P. Healy former Liberal member for North Essex Mr. Healy and John O'Gorman of Toronto, both connected with alleged collections, have denied before the commission any attempts to collect money from brewers.

Camouflaged Cargoes

One of features to-day was the failure of H. F. Kuntz, managing director of Kuntz Brewing Company to appear and give evidence. Chief Commissioner Brown said he thought the Commission could find some way to "make this brewery suffer." Further evidence to-day was heard about camouflaging cars of beer which went to the United States. Some of these cars were found to contain Kuntz beer but the Kuntz brewery did not appear as shipper. The evidence was, the beer was shipped by the people who bought from the brewery.

DISTRESS SIGNS WERE IGNORED

Niagara Falls, N.Y., May 20.—Disabled during a search of many hours on Lake Ontario, for trace of Harry Porteous, this city, and William Collins, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., missing since May 8, when they sailed for Belleville, Ont., in the naphtha launch Alma, United States Coast Guard cruiser C.G.-2364, was towed into port at the Port Niagara life-saving station by a sister boat of the Coast Guard flotilla.

Upon their arrival at the port, the crew related a story of being adrift two hours about eight miles out from Colbourg, Ont., and narrowly escaped the fate of Collins and Porteous.

Called by Gwarn

Charges were made by William H. Barber of this city, owner of the Alma, who accompanied the crew of the C.G.-2364, that other lake craft, and persons along the Canadian shore near Cobourg, Oshawa and Whitby ignored the cruiser's distress signals. Barber says he has sworn up the case with Toronto officials and an investigation is under way. The crashboat of the C.G.-2364 was broken.

The crew brought back a hatch cover from the Alma which was washed ashore near Cobourg and picked up by fishermen. Search for Collins and Porteous has extended to the small islands in that part of the lake in the hope that the Alma may have overturned on one of them and that the two men are alive, but marooned.

Barber said the search would not be discontinued until every island in the vicinity has been visited.

SCHOOL BOARD PAYS VISIT TO H. S. GROUNDS

A special meeting of the Board of Education was called yesterday afternoon to visit the grounds of the New Collegiate for the purpose of deciding which direction it should face, when the matter comes up in the Board meeting to-night. Mr. Arnold Thompson the Architect was on hand and was explaining the different technical points and difficulties to the members of the Board. The trustees were there for the greater part of the afternoon but when a reporter from the Intelligencer strolled different members of the Board upon the opinions they had formed the trustees refused to make any comments and said that they would express their opinions in the meeting to-night.

A decoration committee, parade committee, publicity committee and a program committee were named. A general will be called for further discussion among the committees as to what course to take with the local celebrations. Ald. M. F. BETTER CLASSES APPLYING FOR LIQUOR PERMITS

Women As Well As Men Seek the Valuable Document

CURRENT RUMOR

Office Besieged With Inquirers For Jobs In Store

Up until three o'clock this afternoon about sixty permits had been issued, including those issued yesterday There were issued to residents of Belleville, Point Anne, Peterboro, Toronto and surrounding country places Women as well as men are securing permits and they all appear to be of the better class of citizens; this was also confirmed by the officials in charge of the Belleville office who said "the type of persons applying for permits are of the better class and almost every walk of life represented. Mr. B. L. Hyman, Chief Vendor, stated that a big demand for permits is expected to-morrow and to-morrow evening and the office which is located just north of the New Queen's Hotel will be open between seven and ten o'clock for the convenience of those who cannot come during the day.

CAR CRASHES INTO TELEPHONE POLE

At one thirty this morning a car crashed into a telephone pole by the upper brice. The particular pole had a transformer on the top of it, and the wire-carrier buckled just below the transformer, but did not break right off. It is bad, the occupants of the motor would probably not be alive to tell the tale, but would have suffered a horrible death through electrocution. This morning employees of the Hydro Electric Company were removing the transformer.

A UNIQUE INDIVIDUAL

Kenl Matelia Unable To Understand Proceedings in Belleville Court Room

Wanted—an interpreter who can speak Finnish! This would be the advertisement that Kenl Matelia would run if they ran any at all. Kenl Matelia, who claims that he is a Finlander and does not speak any English, appeared again in Police Court this morning before Magistrate Mikel on a charge of vagrancy and was remanded once until sentence could be passed so he can make Kenl understand what it is all about. Mr. Bryson Bonnar, Crown Attorney tried him in German, some other well-meaning soul tried him in French and Spanish, Harry Vannover, tried him in two or three different languages, Russian included, but to no avail! Kenl still smiled vacantly and foolishly, and says solely I do not understand.

NEW ANGLE TO LONDON RAID

Relations Between Britain and Soviet Russia May Be Strained

London, May 20.—Sir Lamming Worthington Evans, Secretary of State for War, added a new mystery angle today to the raid of a week ago on the Soviet House, headquarters here of Soviet Trade Delegation. Replying to a question by Arthur Ponsonby, Labor member, in the House of Commons to-day Sir Lamming said it would not be in public interest to discuss the missing state document which caused the raid.

What are to be the future relations between Britain and Soviet Russia as a consequence of the raid was a burning question to-day. Interest was particularly keen because of the postponement until Tuesday of statement on the raid by home secretary, Sir William Joynson Hicks, which was to have been made in Commons yesterday.

WHICH STREET IS SCHOOL-TO FACE?

Queries Show Citizens Generally Favor Church Street Side

Opinions seem to be pretty well divided on the question as to whether the new Collegiate will face, although all people on the east hill believe it should face Church street. Arguments are many and diversified both pro and con and most are reasonable. On the average the hill resident believes that the school will spoil John street absolutely if it should face that street. However, the much discussed question will be decided expediting and settled by the to-night's meeting of the Board of Education.

The following are a few of the opinions expressed by local citizens stopped at random on the streets of Belleville. Magistrate Mikel is of the opinion that the school should be built close to Church street and facing on that street, as Church is so badly lighted that the High School might help to lighten this dark section of the city at night.

Mr. J. A. McIntosh believes that the new Collegiate should face on John Street.

Mr. W. H. Nugent thinks the school should have its front on Church street, as that is near the County headquarters.

Mr. M. Armstrong thinks that it should face on Church streets, as any visitors to the city looking at the County Buildings would not like to see the rear of the Collegiate. Most visitors, he stated, would come up by Church Street, rather than by John.

Mr. William Day believes that the school should face on Church street.

Mr. Hope McGinnis, is also of that opinion, saying that it that direction was good enough for the old school it surely would be alright for the new.

Many opinions much of this nature were expressed by different citizens, so that it would appear that which ever way the Board decides the new Collegiate Institute shall face many rate-payers will be disappointed as it hard to please everybody.

To think that Church Street is the logical street for it to face" stated Dr. O. A. Morton to the Intelligencer today, when asked his opinion as to the facing of the new collegiate. Dr. Morton stated that all the churches were frontine on Church Street and in his opinion the new collegiate should face that street. Besides, he said, it would be the majesty of the students in attend ance, to march down Church street downtown and would enter from the Church Street entrance" added he.

EXPLOSIONS IN SCHOOL INTERRUPT PICNIC PLANS

Bath, Mich., May 20.—The State of Mich., today was on the alert for the safety of this stricken village, into whose homes a demented farmer Wednesday last death and desolation by dynamite and fire, caused and blowing to death more than two-score persons. Of the 38 victims of the mad school child farmer, pupils in the lower grades of the school.

Yesterday was to have been the date of the annual school picnic. Nightfall now, put happy groups of children refraining from a day of play, but nearly a score of homes observing the burial of death with funeral wreaths on the doors. Here and there on a street corner stood groups of two or three discussing in a low breath what might have been and what is.

Kehoe's part in the tragedy was brought more vividly to mind by Postmaster Sterling, teacher of the first grade. Early yesterday morning, she said she called Kehoe by telephone and asked concerning arrangements for the use of a plot of land farm for the picnic site.

"When are you going to have the picnic?" Kehoe countered.

"Thursday," Miss Sterling replied. "Well if you're going to have a picnic, you'd better have it right away," was the Treasurer's rejoinder as he ended the conversation.

Less than two hours later explosions rocked the school building.

Lindebergh Hopped Off From Roosevelt Field This Morning

PLAYS A LONE HAND

Daring Missouri Captain Has Narrow Escape As He Takes To Air

Halifax, N.S., May 20.—Captain Charles Lindebergh progressed satisfactorily in his non-stop flight from New York to Paris so far as "Spirit of St. Louis" at 7.57 Eastern Daylight Saving time showed The Bowring Brothers had Paris at, reported the flier in longitudes indicating he was crossing the Atlantic on schedule. The flier, who started in the grey monoplane "Spirit of St. Louis" at 7.52 Eastern Daylight Saving time, flew over Nova Scotia at 3.30 Eastern Daylight time. He travelled up the interior of Nova Scotia before electing to swing out over the ocean. Weather in this region was clear.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., May 20.—Charles A. Lindebergh, Captain in the Missouri National Guard has "flown" to his buddies, set out today on an unnamed hop-off for Paris. The Missourian, who plays a poker hand had no qualms to show upon the eve as he hurled his lynx monoplane, "The Spirit of St. Louis" into the maze of air over Roosevelt Field at 7.52 minutes before eight o'clock this morning.

Disaster Threatened

Five times in the long runway over the field was he spot in making his take-off. "The Flying Fool" as he is effectionately termed by his friends he was close to disaster. At the very last as he was climbing before straightening out, for the start of his course leading north his plane, weighted by a load of 2,150 pounds, barely cleared a string of telegraph wires and a few seconds before, it had almost struck a road scraper as he was attempting to rise from the ground. Three times the plane struck soft spots and bounded in to the air, always coming back to earth and finally straightening out after see onds of hesitation which seemed minutes to anxious spectators fringing the flying field.

Order Guide Lights

Paris, May 20.—All ports between the coast to Paris have been ordered lighted to-morrow so that Capt. Lindbergh his way to the French capital. Word of the greatest aeronautic stop of Mount Valerian, just outside of Paris, will flash a beam that on clear nights is visible for forty miles. Ambassador Myron Herrick is active in arranging a welcome for the lone aviator.

Levine's Announcement

New York, May 20.—The Bellanca plane "Columbia" will not hop off on its New York to Paris flight while Capt. Lindebergh is in the air and if "The Flying Pool," is successful there will be no Bellanca flight, Charles Levine, its backer, announced to-day.

"The Bellanca plane 'Columbia' is not ready to go Lindebergs departure today postpones it definitely until next week," Commander Byrd stated today he would not think of taking the air until he knows that there is an opportunity of reaching the goal both seek.

36 Hour Journey

Roosevelt Field, May 20.—The plane carried 448 gallons of gasoline and Lindebergh expected to land in Paris within 36 hours. His departure was an eleventh hour decision for last night he had no thought that the weather would permit him to essay the long jump across the Atlantic Ocean. The weather at midnight was hopeful and at 3.30 a.m. he was at his hangar, making a careful study of the weather report he decided to go. At 7.30 he donned his flying suit and took his seat in cabin of the plane. The cabin holds only one man sitting in a wicker chair, with a "stick" between his legs and little opportunity to move about. Before boarding his monoplane, Charles Abraham Skidmore, of Nassau County police "when I enter that cockpit its going to be like a prize fighter. When I get to Paris it will be like getting pardon from governor."

TODAY'S THOUGHT

'Tis live tomorrow, you delaying cry—
In what far country does tomorrow lie?

LOCAL CELEBRATION

It is deplorable that more people did not turn out for the mass meeting called last night to consider plans for the Jubilee Celebration in Belleville on July 1st, next. Every city, town and village in Canada will give vent to their feelings of patriotism in some manner on Canada's sixtieth birthday and if Belleville, the home of the United Empire Loyalists, fails to mark the occasion it will show a lamentable lack of interest and loyalty to the traditions of Canada.

Only about a score of citizens were in the city hall at the hour appointed and nothing but the most sketchy and tentative plans could be arranged. July 1st is only a short six weeks away and it will take the most earnest and aggressive efforts of all public spirited citizens if any decent celebration is to be staged in this city.

Some good suggestions of appropriate ways to mark this milestone in Canadian history have come from various towns and cities. Orillia would like every village, town and city to light giant bon fires that night so that the light from the flames might gleam across Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It has been suggested that every municipality set out on this day an avenue of maple trees and in other cities the militia will take a prominent part. Surely Belleville can do something better than a parade of school children with a half-hearted community dance in the public square at night.

TO LIVE

A London physician of the "famous specialist" type has been lecturing on "Physiological Efficiency." He says this thing goes back to the question of diet and, being practiced, man would live to be 140 to 150 years old instead of 70 or less. Specifically, "the world should partake of meagre fare, fresh air and all kinds of raw food." Living properly, man would not, as soon as he reaches maturity, "sit down and impair his efficiency as quickly as possible by sending out appeals to every microbe to come and take up residence in his body. What the doctor prescribes is asceticism and denial of needless luxuries and soft comforts.

The truth must be that it is not the struggle for life that is the bane of civilization for merely life does not satisfy. Millions have no more than a bare existence, which is about what one would have following the rules of the London doctor. Prolongation of that makes no appeal. What man wants is to live in comfort, surrounded by conveniences that increase his ease. Needless sacrificing is not for him. Needless luxuries are something to be striven for, to be earned if possible or to be taken away from someone who has them in abundance if they are not to be had otherwise. That's the popular view. What if a few of many germs and microbes make their habitat in his internal mechanism if he feels good? Man wants to live rather than to live long.

NEAR 10,000,000

Before the end of next year Canada will probably have a population exceeding 10,000,000 if the increase during the past two years is maintained. At the present time, according to estimates of the Bureau of Statistics, the population of Canada is 9,830,300 which is an increase of 400,807 since June, 1921, when the official census of the Dominion was taken. At the same rate of growth that has prevailed in the last six years, the population will exceed 10,000,000 before May, 1928, but there is good ground for believing that this total will be attained before then, as Canada was in the midst of a post-war depression in 1921, and for several years made little progress in population. The official figures are worth noting. They are as follows:

Provinces	1927	1921
P. E. I.	97,000	88,615
Nova Scotia	540,000	523,837
New Brunswick	407,200	387,876

Manitoba	639,000	610,118
Saskatchewan	821,000	757,510
Alberta	607,000	588,454
British Columbia	568,400	524,582
Yukon	3,450	4,157
N. W. Territories	8,850	7,886
	9,380,300	8,788,482

These figures are illuminating. They show that in a total increase of just over 600,000, Quebec and Ontario account for, over 400,000, the increase of over 200,000 in Quebec being almost entirely due to the excess of births over deaths. Another point worth noting is that while our population has increased by an average of 100,000 a year during the six year's, this is less than the annual excess of births over deaths, and les athan the number of immigrants annually arriving. The loss has been due to emigration to the United States—a loss which fortunately is becoming proportionately less with the increasing expansion of Canadian industries.

THE CROW

About a year ago a great controversy was aroused by the campaign of Jack Miner, the famous Canadian naturalist and bird-lover, against the crow. At that time, there were strong arguments both for and against its extermination, and the weight or arguments seemed to favor the attitude taken by Mr. Miner.

A further proof that he was not alone in his opinion that the crow was more of a detriment than as aid to agriculture is found in the case of the rural municipality of McKillop, Saskatchewan, which has instituted a municipal campaign against the crow Last year, it is estimated, crows in this district caused hundreds of dollars damage to the crops, and to prevent a similar situation this year, a bounty of one cent for each crow's egg and three cents for each crow, dead or alive, is to be paid.

It is not likely that such drastic action would be taken without good proof that the crows were responsible for the damage which was done, and it will doubtless give much satisfaction to Mr. Miner and those who supported his views to know that they have such substantial backing for the arguments they put forward against the crow.

AT REST

The poor forgets that ever he was poor,
The priest has lost his science o the truth,
The maid her beauty, and the poet his youth,
The statesman has forgot his subtle lure,
The old his age,
The sick his suffering, and the feeble his cure,
The poet his perplexed and vexed page.

These swains that tilled the uplands in the sun
Have all forgot the field's familiar face,
And lie content within the ancient place.

Whereto when hands were tired their thoughts would run
To dream of rest.
When the last furrow was turned down, and won
The last harsh harvest from the earth's patient breast.

From The Intelligencer Files

Mrs. John Brainerd, Donald street, received word yesterday that her husband had died at Point Lewis, N.Y.

Miss Alice Elliott was married to Mr. Alex. V. Weight of Malone, today.

The market was large this morning and prices high. Eggs sold at 12 cents, butter at 20 cents and chickens at 30 and 40 cents each.

John Eaton's departmental store in Toronto was burned yesterday.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Traveler (as train stops)—Will I have time to get a drink here?

Conductor—Yes, sir.

Traveler—Are you sure the train don't start without me?

Conductor—Yes, sir. I'll take one with you.

Mother—Darling you were awfully late last night. I'm afraid I'm dread fully old-fashioned, but I should like to know where you go.

Daughter—Certainly, Mummy darling. I dined with—oh well, you don't know him—and we went to several places I don't suppose you've been to and we finished at a queer little cafe—I forget its name, but it's in a cellar somewhere in Soho. It's all right on it, Mummy?

Mother—Of course, darling. It's only that I just like to know.

The professor, a noted botanist, gave instruction for a dish of mushrooms, which he had gathered himself to be cooked for dinner expressly for his wife. The latter, who was particularly fond of them, was highly delighted at her husband's thought on her behalf and thanked him with much haste. At breakfast next morning he greeted her amusingly.

Sleep all right?, he inquired.

Splendidly, she answered.

Not sick at all—no pains, she persisted.

Why of course not dear, she responded in surprise.

Hurrah then, exclaimed the professor, I have discovered another species of mushroom that isn't poisonous.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

It used to take two sheep to clothe one woman," says a humorous British observer. "Now I understand it takes only one silk worm." But the cotton and woollen industries are not the only ones that are in difficulties through the vagaries of feminine fashion. PORT ELGIN MAN ENDS LIFE

Moncton, N.B., May 20.—The body of Guy Allen, aged about 25 years son of Wilfrid Allen, Port Elgin, was found near the latter's mill about a mile from that town yesterday with a bullet hole over the heart. A coroner's inquest held yesterday afternoon revealed no reason for the shooting and a verdict of suicide was brought in by the jury.

After Suffering 15 Years Relief Gained By Husky

Wonderful Experience Is Related By Mr. Baker, Who Now Enjoys Real Health.

"A medicine that will relieve me of ailments which afflicted me for 15 years, will certainly help others," declared Mr. Henry Baker, 65 Power St., Toronto, recently in telling of his experience with Husky, the herb preparation, now distributed by local drug stores.

In order that others may know of the wonderful merit of Husky Mr. Baker has made a signed statement in regard to his case. His statement follows: "For more than 15 years I didn't see a real well day. My troubles started with a nervous breakdown. My appetite was all right but my food didn't do me any good and I couldn't sleep at night. And my nerves were in rags and I had to put one leg over the other to keep them from jerking. Some mornings I felt that tough I could hardly make myself get up and then during the day a tired, worn out feeling would come all over me. If I walked any distance I would nearly give way.

"My blood was poor and I was in a bad condition generally. I read about Husky doing a lot of good and I decided to try it. I had been in hospitals and tried different kinds of medicine, however, and I didn't have much faith in anything helping me. But now that I am taking the Husky treatment I realize that this medicine really is fine and different from others. I eat fine now and my food digests well and gives me nourishment. The terrible nerve pains in my legs have been relieved and I am able to rest much better. I am feeling better and strengthened in every way.

"Anyone who has suffered as I did and for so long a period knows what this relief means. I am now picking up in every way and have gained several pounds. I am still taking Husky and I recommend it to those who are not in the best of health, as medicine that will do this for me, will certainly help others."

At Good Drug Stores

Every man and woman suffering in any way Husky is recommended to relieve, owe it to themselves to give the Husky treatment a trial. Husky can be obtained at good drug stores everywhere and when taken regularly and over a reasonable length of time it will help you just as it is helping thousands of others.

MAIDEN SOUGHT GREENER FIELDS

Manages To Elude Immigration Officials Camouflaged As Boy

Detroit, Mich., May 20.—A feminine walk and shoes in which her small feet floundered, a cap pulled down Martha Healey, 19 years old, 1437 Victoria Avenue, Windsor, when she appeared in mannishly cut clothes at Canadian Anderson of the Trumbull Ave. Detroit, West Jefferson Avenue, this after noon.

His suspicions aroused, he directed questions at her and a stylish voice completed her exposure. Anderson took her to the women's division, where she told the matrons that she had decided to make her way to Miami, Florida. Her mother died about a year ago and returned with flowing stories of Miami's attractions. She said she dressed herself in her brother's clothes and passed the United States immigration officer without suspicion. In her pockets she had only 23 cents, a lipstick, a cleaner lighter, and—the inevitable feminine touch—a spool of thread and a needle. She was turned over to the immigration authorities.

Women's News and Views

VIEWS ON A WIFE'S VALUE TO HER HUSBAND

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Is a wife a liability or an asset? Taking 'em as a class, on which side of the ledger does the average wife belong?

Of course there's Beulah McBrains, the Congressman's wife, who married a poor boob, and dragged him up the ladder of success by the hair of his head. There's the grocer's wife, who keeps his books and his house, takes care of his children, and makes the potato salad and Spanish beans he sells at his delicatessen counter besides. Everybody knows a few determined, clever women like that. They're assets.

And we all know one or two outstanding failures who are directly responsible for the flops their husbands turned out to be. They're liabilities, and no mistake.

But where does the average woman come in? Does she help or hinder her husband?

A woman whose son is soon to be married put the question and since we can answer it anonymously we ought to get some interesting replies.

Here's her letter:

DEAR ELSIE:

My only son is going to be married in June. I don't know the young lady, may never see her, as she is far from home. So I am quite "neutral" about her. I may add that I trust my son's judgment in picking a girl.

But I am wondering if marriage is going to be a good thing for my boy, who is twenty-three, and up and coming, or if he would go further and faster without a wife. I hate to think of him taking on responsibilities which may keep him from success. Of course she may help him. They say a good wife does.

"They say" she does. But stop a minute—does she? "They said" I was a good helper. I think I was, on the whole. Yet I am afraid I never helped my husband. I don't hesitate now to say that I hindered him. I kept him from moving about the country when he wished to. I kept him from making investments. I had to, for my boy's sake.

As a single man my husband might have succeeded—undoubtedly would have succeeded—but I could not let him take those chances. I had myself and my baby to think of.

Now tell me, what can a man hope to gain by marriage? Home comforts? I gave them to my husband, but he could have bought them for half the cost in any back door hotel. Company, feminine companionship? Yes, but men don't have to marry for that nowadays. There are enough girls earning their own living, who don't want marriage and are willing to be real friends.

Children? Men don't feel the need of them as women do. I used to relent my husband's attitude toward our boy, saying all he did was to pay the bills. Now that I see my son facing marriage, I hate to think of him having to pay the bills.

I find that I, at least, was a better mother than ever I was a wife. I think more of my son's happiness and future than I ever did of my husband's. And I am an over age woman, I think. I have been out in the business world eight years and I know life pretty well—I confess I hate to see my son marry. I know women too well.

I have no idea of advising him against it, understand. I know better than that. I am just ruminating over it, and wondering if I am soured on my sex, or if the others will agree with me. Will you print this and ask for the opinions of others?

A THOUGHTFUL WIFE.

There are some big questions in that letter.

If you're a wife or mother or grandmother, suppose you sit down and answer this one honestly to yourself: Have YOU been a better mother than a wife? Which future have you planned for and worked for harder, your husband's or your sons'?

Or, if you're not married, how about that boy you love? He has told you what a heaven you'll make his life, and naturally you have believed him. But will you?

Makes you sort of humble to face those questions, doesn't it? Well, may be a little more humility wouldn't hurt some of us girls.

NATURE'S HERBAL BALM

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

This summer is to see a vogue for oils lace which will be used for collars and cuffs.

London reports that its milliners have a dark taupe felt hat ready to exploit for fall.

Red browns and almond greens are reported as the leading colors by a foremost Scottish knitwear firm.

London notes that the fashion for spotted effects is becoming more pronounced and it is applied to woollen materials as well as to silks.

One of the foremost court dressmakers uses blonde net in preference to white for costumes even of white satin.

Bridesmaids at a recent picturesque London wedding wore powder blue chiffon frocks and carried nosegays of forget-me-nots, primroses and violets.

Simultaneously with the visit of the Prince of Wales to Madrid and Seville, there is a boom in London for Spanish shoes for women, and quite a large proportion of the smartest varieties now being sold in the West End come from the Peninsula, and are being offered as such openly.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:—

I have a friend who has asked me to marry him. He says he loves me deeply, and his every action gives me reason to believe this. We are both near twenty; he has a splendid position, everybody seems to like him, and I can truthfully say I like him better than anyone else I've ever met. I am positive of his true affection, but hesitate for I'm not so sure of my love for him. Still, I am inclined to believe that we can make a "go" of it, as once married I intend to stay that way and will do everything in my power to make him happy. What do you think?

GLORIA.

GLORIA: I am glad you are frank enough with yourself to admit that you aren't certain of your love. This hesitancy just now may save you misery and heartbreak later on.

Please do not think, Gloria, that I am going to urge you to give up this man. On the contrary, I think that you may be quite happy with him. But the important thing for you to do is to wait. Time will confirm or wipe away your doubts—and that is your problem. If you make it a point to go about with other young men, and to make new contacts, you will learn soon enough just how deep your affection for this man is.

And since you say you are not yet twenty I think that in itself is sufficient reason for you to wait. In a year you will know the answer—one way or the other—and you can base your decision on this year's changes.

While you may find, after you marry that your love is very strong there is a chance that you will learn you are mistaken. And then it will be too late. So wait and think about your problem—it pays!

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

The door leading into the kitchen hung empty. Sybil had left him in midst of his oration.

While she was washing the supper dishes, she had time to be her mother.

"Mary, you must speak to Sybil. She underrates herself. It's a dangerous and fatal tendency for a young girl. Here she regards as a catch any socially prominent young man to marry her, if she speaks of herself as 'just Sybil.' Why, she's a fairy-tale daughter!"

Arthur's infatuation grew. Sybil encouraged it. Her increased sales allowed her a pretty summer wardrobe, after the household expenses were met. She went motoring with Arthur after office hours; sometimes dined with him. As her interest increased, for she couldn't help but see how earnest he was, she avoided the places where his own social set might come upon him in her company.

She put his thoughts as plainly as if they were written in letters of fire. She had seen her brother Ted act just as Arthur was acting, toward the blowsy girls whom he met on office corners and took to public dancers, where only the riff-raff of the town went. She knew that Arthur would never invite her to the country club, or take her to the theatre, or dine with her at one of the popular restaurants. With her in his car, he followed the quiet roads.

Contempt for him, flamed in her and bitterness, because she was suffering for the sins of others. And, with every added drop of humiliation, she smiled more bewitchingly upon him, and took her eyes promise what her lips denied.

Arthur was none too bright, and Sybil was too adroit for him. She danced, like a will o' the wisp, fantastically beyond his reach.

He sent her a jeweled bracelet, and she returned it with dignity. He tried promises—finally, safe promises, which mentioned everything but marriage—and she laughed at him. Sometimes she seemed about to yield, and then she was gone again, like a bird winging into the clouds.

It was an entrancing game to Sybil a bewildering one to Arthur.

"I'm going to get you yet," he threatened, after one of her most audacious rebuffs.

He wouldn't be made a fool of by this little stenographer, he told himself furiously. He, Arthur Winslow, a man of the world, to be led around by the nose by the daughter of the notorious Fred Ross.

Then it occurred to him that probably she was out for what she could get—like her two brothers—and she wouldn't sell her kisses cheaply.

When her had reached the point where he couldn't do without her any longer, he came to a reckless decision. He believed he saw a way around the unsurmountable barrier. Taking Sybil for a moonlight drive, he put it up to her:

"Tell me why it is that I can't ask you to marry me," he explained. "My father would have a stroke, if I even suggested it. But—but we could go away somewhere—say to New York—where nobody knows us. What do you say? You know I'm crazy about you, Sybil!"

She knew quite well that there was no limit for her in the town of her birth. Her father, her brothers, had made that impossible. She might go on until she was an old woman, like her mother, making a mere pittance in one office after another and spending it to help maintain a home for her worthless, profligate father.

Young Winslow offered her a chance to escape. New York! She never could save enough to pay her own way. Here was a chance to forget her unhappy girlhood, to begin a new life far away from the gossip of her home town, to lose herself in the oblivion of a great metropolis where no one bothers to ask who or what you are.

Sybil knew that she was going to accept Arthur's proposition with reservations which that young man would not learn until too late.

She saw a second advantage in taking him up. Had she not a score to settle with him for the humiliation of his surreptitious courtship? Would it not be easy to make him a victim to her lust for revenge?

She turned her face to him, a face lovely, softened, in summer moonlight.

"All right, Arthur — If you wish it," she said quietly.

He was below with triumph, but when he reached out for her hand, she warded him off with an imperative gesture.

"Not before we leave," she said, firmly, and he knew she meant it. In his new joy, he was afraid to risk her withdrawal of her promise, and he fumed and argued that the bargain should be sealed with a kiss, she had her way.

Before the supper a fine impromptu programme was presented. A most remarkable incident was a "mock marriage," in which Miss Lillian Mason was the "groom" and Miss Irene Ethier the "bride." William Preble was the father who gave the blushing bride away and Misses Ruby Tuttle and Florence Taubman were flower girls Ellen Orth Reid was the minister who united the happy pair in "holy matrimony."

A six piece orchestra furnished the music and a snappy music as that for dancing after the supper was over. The party broke up about 1.30 in the morning.

SHOWER GIVEN MISS A. HOWARD

Miss Alice Howard, bride-elect of June, was guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower given last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Belnap, 78 Catharine street, by the Altogether Club. The rooms were prettily decorated in yellow blossoms and a arch of pink and white apple blossoms under which the bride-to-be stood, completed the effective arrangements. While Mrs. Claude Belnap read an address to Miss Howard, Mrs. Howard Anstiine presented her with a handsome gift from the Club. A huge basket tied in pink and white was then brought to the bride-elect on an express wagon driven by Art Skinner and Al Hitchon, and a happy half-hour was spent while the dainty gifts were opened by her and the little messages attached were read and thoroughly appreciated. At cards the first prize was won by Miss May Campbell and Mrs. Fred Carscallen won the consolation. After dainty refreshments had been served, when Mr. McIlrath proposed the toast to the bride and groom, games and dancing were enjoyed until the early hours, and Mrs. Hitchon won the novelty prize. The evening wound up with singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Miss Margaret Strang, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Strang of Belleville, a student of the Medical school at London, won the first prize, amounting to $15, for a paper on Medical History.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

DOG BYLAW

Will you kindly allow space in your paper to ask if the agitation re the dog nuisance, is to die the same death it has been doomed to for the past few years. Some time ago we bought the ben nuisance, now it is dogs. At present it is ducklings who are reigning supreme over flowerlovers.

Why advocate beautifying our homes and parks if every species of mongrel is allowed to wander around the city day and night, with the result that the flowers we have bought and planted are not likely to remain in the ground twenty-four hours. In several cases I know when complaints have been made where we would hope for relief, they were told if they had no fence they could not expect protection. Are there not sufficient men in our Council to pass a bylaw to protect, Flowerlovers from being persecuted as they are at present. Other cities have them. Know the Park Board and hundreds of Citizens will be grateful for protection.

Kingston, May 20.—The ceremonies of graduation in connection with the St. Joseph's Training School, Hotel Dieu Hospital, were held Wednesday night in the St. Joseph's Hall, in the presence of the largest gathering that has ever witnessed graduation exercises at that institute. So large indeed was the crowd that gathered that all could not be accommodated in the hall and the standees from the main hall and the window spaces were utilized as their point of vantage taken to witness the impressive and beautiful ceremonies.

WILL CELEBRATE

adjacent places. Mr. Collins emphasized the fact that the children take an active part in this celebration and also suggested that all the service clubs, the Canadian Legion and militia be incorporated into the procession.

P. C. McLaurin stated that while the schools were in sympathy with the celebration, the department at exhibition time of the high school would be going on until past July 1st and the other classes would have been dismissed by that time, he has assured the meeting that the high school would do all it could to assist on that day. Mr. McLaurin suggested the bringing in of a prominent outside speaker for the occasion.

Col. Barragar, speaking for the public schools, stated that they were in hearty co-operation with the proper commemorating of the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation and suggested a parade of the school children in the morning of July 1st.

Col. O'Flynn suggested that instead of bringing in an outside speaker, that Allan Bympae be asked to deliver his address on Confederation.

Ald. Duff suggested that Prof. Hunter be asked to keep the school children who are to sing on Monday next, organized and drill them on suitable songs for singing at the Diamond Jubilee. Mr. Duff also stated that the council would make a grant of three hundred dollars towards the celebration. He also suggested holding a community dance on the market square in the evening of July 1st and charge a small fee.

Mr. John Elliott, Chairman of the Board of Education stated that the Board was behind the organization.

Mr. Butler said that it would be almost impossible to get an outside speaker to come to Belleville because the whole of Canada were holding a celebration on July 1st.

Col. O'Flynn suggested asking the Hon. R. J. Cooke, Hydro Commissioner, and John Elliott said that possibly the Bishop of Ontario, might be induced to come to Belleville for the occasion.

John Elliott moved, seconded by H. Greenfield and it was left to a suitable celebration be held in Belleville and a prominent speaker be selected and four committees be chosen. This motion was carried unanimously.

The officers for the Citizen's Celebration Committee chosen were Chairman Mayor Wilmot, Vice Chairman Ald. M. P. Duff, Secretary H. H. Ketcheson, Treasurer H. B. Stock.

Messrs. T. P. J. Power, P. C. McLaurin, H. Greenfield and R. D. O'Flynn were chosen as a nominating committee to appoint a publicity committee, a parade committee, a decoration committee and a program committee.

BELLE THEATRE

In "Bell's Clothing," the Warner Bros. picture starring Monte Blue, the Belle Theatre, has one of the most diverting pictures of the season. Found upon Arthur Somers Roche's story, it tells a tale that recalls the spirit of O. Henry. For here New York is once more transformed into Bagdad-on-the-Subway, and once more adventure comes to commonplace people and turns them into types of true romance. Like a character in the Arabian Nights, Barry Blaine, a subway guard is transported into scenes of great pomp and circumstance, and whirled through a night of mad excitement. The night is New Years Eve and the place is New York. A gang of crooks are out to get $50,000 in loot and Barry Blaine finds himself out to get one crooks.

Monte Blue is Barry and Barry is a role that suits Mr. Blue in every particular. A big husky, laughing rough neck, he plays with a ripsnorting zest that sweeps the adventure along into the realm of convincing probability. Playing opposite him is Patsy Ruth Miller, as a society girl who wants to see life without a chaperon. "Bells is out to capture her freedom. She captures, instead, the affections of the sub way guard.

NATIONALS OPEN BAY OF QUINTE LEAGUE TUESDAY

Deloro Coming Here With Strong Team To Combat Locals

The ball team expect to hold the best week-end yet, tonight at the Agricultural field and every player is requested to make a special effort to be on deck. Next Tuesday afternoon the Bay of Quinte League will be officially opened with the appearance of the Deloro and Belleville Clubs and the Ontario champions are coming to town with all good intentions of taking a fall out of "Peeny" Mill's crew. The fans of this city can rest assured that they will be treated to a real exhibition and it is to be hoped that the grand stand and bleachers will be filled to their capacity. Last year saw a giant crowd turned out for the opener and the same in all previous years in it is to be hoped that this season will be no exception. The Smelters led by the genial and hard-working "Soc" Elliott, will be'no little town, with his string of players keyed up to the limit, after two weeks of strenuous practice. "Wyndy" Lee and Bill Ralph has been groomed for club duty and it is believed that the former will be given the assignment. The roster of the visitors remains almost the same as last year with the exception of Jimmy Hughes who covered first base and who has taken a position as Interne at Kingston Hospital. Gibson will likely be the local "choice and if the boy is going right he should give the Smelters a bucketful of trouble. Gibson was up against heavy hitters last year and in the lower class of ball he should fare much better. "Chumsy" Gerow is also ready to step in and take his turn in the box.

Then there is the veteran squad of "Peeney" and Harry Mills, Weir, Hagerman and "Wick" Ross and with this formidable-looking crew the Deloro team will need to be on their best behaviour.

Ken Colling and Walter Gerow will officiate and the presence of the band and the opening ceremonies should make it a red-letter day.

WINNIPEG DENTIST RIDES A BONESHAKER

Winnipeg, Man., May 18.—An ordinary bicycle having no tone a sport and exercise, a local dentist has adopted one of the old high wheel "bone-shakers."

Every day, the dentist takes his trusty steed with his head far above the ordinary traffic. This ancient means of transportation was made in the early 70's, and when mounted, is quoted by the dentist down Portage Avenue, to one of the sights of the city.

The dentist admits that he purposely chooses crossed boulevards in case of emergency. The front wheel of the "bone shaker" being sensitive to too slightest pressure on rider's unbroke is easily lost, and nasty spills follow on the modern paved streets. Having one's head so high from the street, and guiding the ancient wheel in and out of modern traffic, is a stunt that takes much nerve, the dentist states.

OPEN NOSTRILS! END A COLD OR CATARRH

How To Get Relief When Head and Nose are Stuffed Up.

Count Fifty! Your cold in head or catarrh disappears. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more sniffling, hawking, mucous, discharge, dryness or headache; no struggling for breath at night.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothing and healing the swollen or inflamed mucous membrane giving you instant relief. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable. Relief is sure.

TORONTO DROPS 3RD STRAIGHT

Syracuse, May 19.—A five-run rally in the sixth inning gave the Stars their third straight victory over Rochester's Tribesmen here yesterday. The visitors made only three hits, but Hallahan's wildness and poor support in the first three innings combined with Johnny Jones' none run helped the Tribe to score four runs. Prudhomme walked two in the sixth, then Williamson tripled. Selph doubled and Peel hit a homer to bag a 7 to 4 decision.

Raking the delivery of Joe Maley, a former teammate, for eight hits and six runs in the three innings he worked on the mound, the Bisons made it three straight over the Toronto Maple Leafs at Buffalo by a score of 6 to 3. Rousan, who succeeded Maley, gave a sterling mound performance and limited the hard-hitting Bisons to one hit in five rounds. The victory allowed the Bisons to pass the Rochester team for third place.

Baltimore won both games of today's doubleheader, 6 to 1 and 2 to 1, aiding the Reading Keys their twenty-first consecutive defeat. The first game was remarkable only because it was played in 1.20. The second game was won in the seventh when Perry's single scored Maisel.

RUSSIAN DELEGATES THREATEN TO LEAVE

Geneva, May 19.—The Soviet delegates to the international economic conference served notice today that they would leave Geneva immediately unless assured of the adoption of a resolution recognizing the co-existence of the communistic and capitalistic economic systems and the possibility of peaceful collaboration between the two systems.

Kiev, Russia.— Nineteen peasants were drowned today in the capsizing of milk barge in the Dnieper river. Five others were saved.

YANKEES GRAB HART HOUSE HAD ANOTHER GAME SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Lou Gehrig Hits Home Run and Moore Pitches Consistent Ball

Cleveland, Ohio, May 20.—You could hardly blame Miller Huggins for beaming from ear to ear yesterday afternoon. No, indeed, Mr. Huggins might have been pardoned a few giggle, or even a raucous guffaw, for didn't his Yanks grab their seventh straight today, and didn't Wiley Moore win his ten as a regular with a nobby exhibition of relief pitching, and didn't the Hummen look like champions, every inch of them?

The answer to each and every part of the quiz is "yes", and Mr. Huggins would now like you to ask him something hard.

When, for instance, are the Yanks going to lose a game?

That is a poser. They lost one back in Chicago last year or so, and their record on the western buggy ride is also won and ten played.

While swinging a busy lyre for Mr. Moore, however, don't overlook Henry Louis Gehrig, whose home run smack inside the grounds in the first inning virtually set the pennant at George H. Ruth and provided the Yanks with two useful runs.

Louis' ninth slap of the year was also the ancient Gehrig wound up? have called a ballsplosion. It can be described by only one word—wham. The battered pill sailed on a dead line for remote field, bounced merrily against the scoreboard and was almost left to skirt while the former Morningside pupil churned around the bases, making the plate in a cloud of mud.

Hollis Thurston pitched Washington to a 3 to 0 victory over the Tigers at Detroit. Because he was effective with men on bases, Thurston became the first pitcher to shut-out the Tigers this season. Peggy Harper, a former Tiger, now playing shortstop for the senators, drove in two of the Washington runs with a single in the fifth inning.

Tommy Thomas registered his sixth victory of the season today when he bested Letty Grove, Connie Mack's star southpaw, in a pitching duel, which the White Sox won from the Athletics at Chicago, 3 to 0. Thomas allowed only five hits. Ty Cobb, in batting safely on his first trip to the plate, ran his string of consecutive games in which he has made one or more hits to nineteen.

Ken Williams' home run in the tenth gave the Browns a victory over the Boston Red Sox at St. Louis, 6 to 5, and the Browns were into a tie with Philadelphia for third place. It was the fifth Brown victory in six games. Wingard held the visitors to three hits until after two out in the ninth. Then the Sox drove in four runs. Melillo's double in the last half of the ninth scored O'Doul ahead of the tying run. "Bing" Miller, who yesterday boosted his season's batting average to .466, went hitless in four times at bat.

Toronto, May 17.—When Hart House Theatre, Canada's premier Community Playhouse, which has its being in Toronto, closes its doors for the summer at the end of this month, it will conclude its most successful season, both artistically and financially, according to Walter Sinclair, its director. Eleven plays, three of them the work of Canadian playwrights, the rest, productions with established reputations either on the professional or the amateur stage, were presented.

The fame of Hart House Theatre as a laboratory of dramatic art, where experts in stage production conduct experimental research with the most modern stage equipment at their disposition, has spread, during its eight seasons far beyond the boundaries of the Dominion. It is the parent of the Little Theatre movement now gaining strength in many Canadian cities, and so interesting have been its ventures, that the eyes of all advocates of the amateur stage throughout the English-speaking world are following its development.

"Our players are drawn from the community at large," stated Mr. Sinclair, in reviewing the season's work, "and during the past eight years near ly five hundred amateurs have taken part in our productions. Over a score of these are now continuing the careers commenced at Hart House on the professional stage.

"Among the players whose work drew particular praise from the critics this season Jrer Lewis, H. J. Rostance and Frances Rostance were outstanding. Many other amateurs displayed outstanding art and technical skill, strengthening the proof that the amateur theatre has a distinct future before it in this country."

Writing on the importance of the amateur theatre in Canada's cultural development in a recent issue of "The Canadian Forum," Fred Jacobs found his strongest argument for non-commercial production in the excellence of "Thunderbird," a score comedy of Yorkshire life presented at Hart House last January. This play, whose author, James E. Gregson, has never really devoted his art to the amateur theatre, both as director and playwright, was one of the most notable successes of 1926-27.

"At Mrs. Swan's another wellknown English comedy, proved very popular, while Thackeray's Christmas pantomime, "The Rose and the Ring," revived at the festive season was so enthusiastically received that Mr. Sinclair promises a third revival for next Christmas. "Twelfth Night," presented last month, will be revived as the Pepysian."

Plans for the closing offering of the season in response to an eager demand.

The range of ambition of the Hart House workers, and the excellence of the human material at their disposal can further testified to by the successful production during the winter of such plays as Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak House,' and "The Man of Destiny," and St. John Ervines "John Ferguson."

CO'Y CONTENDED HAY WAS UNFIT

Insolvent Belleville Milling Co. Awarded Damages and Costs

At a special sittings of the County Court held yesterday before His Honour Judge Deroche the case of the Belleville Milling Company vs O'Reilly came on for Trial. The action was one for damages for breach of warranty in the sale of Hay by the Defendant to the Company. The Company claimed that they had bargained with O'Reilly for the purchase of a quantity of good mixed timothy and clover hay, and the hay was pressed and shipped to Toronto for sale by the Company, but when the same came to be inspected by the Government Inspector it was found to be bleached and musty, and the Milling Company contended that the Defendant in preparing the hay for pressing had not properly dressed the same by throwing off the dew and raking the sides of the stack, but had pressed the musty and bleached hay along with the good hay and thus spoiled the whole quantity. The Plaintiffs were obliged to resell the hay at Toronto at a very low figure and the action was brought for the difference at which the hay was sold, and the price the Plaintiffs were to obtain had the hay been good hay.

The Plaintiff became insolvent and the action was revived and amended in the name of the Trustee in Bankruptcy. After hearing all the evidence and what was alleged by counsel His Honour gave judgment against the Defendant for $233.85 with costs, but allowed a counter-claim of $10.74 to the Defendant on a difference in weights.

The result is that O'Reilly has Judgment against him for $223.11 with full costs. E. J. Butler, Solicitor for the Plaintiffs and the Trustee, George S. White, Madoc, Solicitor for the Defendant.

The Irony of Love By Charles Garvice

"You must go back to Mr. Gurdon; you know he only lent you to me for an hour; and it's long past that. I'll go and get Eric and you can tease up to her when you're free. And, Stran'ye, you mustn't think any of those dreadful thoughts. Nothing can come between us; nothing, shall divide us. It couldn't." She set her teeth and gave him a little hug. "Give me the telegrams— Oh, here's one unopened. It is from Madeline Despard. How funny she puts it: 'Sweetest congratulations on the unexpected event.' She laughed. "The sting's in the 'unexpected.'"

"That so?" said Rafe.

She looked at him rather archly. "Do you know, Stran'ye, that I was a little jealous of Madeline?"

Rafe laughed as he tilted his pipe, and the laugh was such a complete response that she turned away with a happy smile. Rafe sauntered to the library, and, sitting in a yawn, dropped into his usual chair.

"Now, Mr. Gurdon, fire away. I'll work on this claim of yours for half an hour, good by the clock; only, don't trouble to explain more than you can help. I don't mind signing my name, though even that's a darned nuisance, but I'm dead against any explanation. Say, now, how would you like me to explain the working of a double drift or a placer—. There you are, you see; he broke off, as Mr. Gurdon's countenance eloquently displayed his bewilderment. "Well, now, that's exactly how I feel when you begin to palaver about your blessed deeds and leases, and assignments, and all the rest of it."

On her way to Eva, Maude looked in at her father's den. He laid down The Field with an air of patient resignation and she went to him and put her arm round his neck.

"Father, dear," she whispered, "it will have to be soon. I'm sorry to worry you, dear, but—but guarantee won't wait, and—and I can't help my self."

"All right," said Sir. Ives, patting her shoulder. "Fix it up between yourselves—as Stran'ye would say," he added hastily. "It's no use coming to me for help just for only thing I can do is to order a new suit of clothes, and try to look as if I were sorry to get rid of you, and the only thing I ask is that you don't make more fuss of the business than you can help. On the way, what do you think Stran'ye would like for a wedding present? Bread if I can think of anything."

"You might give him an English dictionary," she replied laughingly. "And you might look through it yourself before you hand it over, for you've gotten almost as sleazy as he is."

Eva welcomed her with outstretched arms, but looked a trifle disappointed by the fact that she was unaccompanied.

"Oh, he'll be here directly, dear," said Maude. "How nice and well you are looking."

"Oh, I'm all right, Auntie Maude," said Eva. But she sighed and moved restlessly, Maude, clearly as she loved the child, did not catch the significance of the sigh, but Rafe did, when it was repeated on his entrance.

"Gettin' the bump, kiddie?" he said sympathetically.

"Yes," said Eva, who always understood Rafe's slang. "I'm getting tired of this big bed and the wall paper. I can see faces in it, and some of them are dreadful ugly."

"That so?" asked Rafe. "Why, of course, you are. Here!" He went to a sofa, picked it up, and carried it to the French window. "I know what's amiss with her," he said; "the room's getting on her nerves; she wants to see the outside world a bit—that's it kiddie, isn't it? Wrap her in the blanket, she won't come to any harm."

They wrapped her up, and he carried her to the sofa and made her comfortable; and her grati...de was so great that she could only look up at him and smooth his cheek with her hand. Maude sat at the head of the sofa and Rafe at the foot; and the two, and delight of the child in seeing the grass and the trees and the sky again was so great that for a time she could not speak.

MANIAC BURNED HIS WIFE'S BODY

Tragedy Stalks In Home of Tiny Michigan Village

Bath, Mich., May 20.—Mrs. Andrew Kehoe, wife of the maniac who blew up the consolidated school here with a loss of 42 lives, his farmhouse and himself, was the first victim of his fury. Portions of her body were found in the ashes of the smouldering of the Kehoe farm.' Her skull was crushed 'ending to the belief that Kehoe killed her before exacting the last duty the building to be burned.

Became Demented

One fourth of the children of this village are dead, as many more maimed and the hand of tragedy has reached into virtually every one in the hundred homes of the community as a result of carefully devised plot of the demented farmer. Among the 41 victims of this day of village school house yesterday was the perpetrator of tragedy, Andrew Kehoe, 55 year old farmer, who was once known as man of brilliance in community, but whose mind had been diverted to schemes of revenge against the school board because of anger over school tax levied against him. Kehoe was a member of the board. Of the 41 who were killed thirty-six were pupils in the school which was wrecked by explosion of dynamite while 40 others were injured.

Miss Tait Resigns As Superintendent Of Hospital ---- Contract Awarded For New Collegiate

TRUSTEE BOARD FAILS TO DECIDE VITAL QUESTION

Front of the New Collegiate Is Still Much In the Air

THREE RESOLUTIONS

All Voted Down and Meeting Broke Up At Midnight

No decision was reached at last night's meeting of the Board of Education as to which direction the new collegiate institute and vocational school should face. For over an hour arguments pro and con were heard and every member on the Board had something to say on this vital matter Sentiment among the trustees appeared to lean towards facing the school on Church street, and many suggestions were advanced among which was the idea that the old school should be torn down and the pupils housed in the old Albert College in the meantime. The idea was found impracticable however. Another plan was to buy part of the Bl. Thomas graveyard and face the collegiate on John street if the entrance could be made to face Queen street.

Finally there were three motions presented to the Board, the first by Mr. F. B. Smith, the second by Mr. McGie, and the third by Mr. F. S. Anderson. The resolution of Mr. F. B. Smith, which was seconded by Mr. Jamieson Bone, wished the old collegiate torn down and the new one built in its place facing Bell... It was lost.

The second resolution and the third were also lost. The second resolution asked that the school face John street.

The meeting adjourned without arriving at any decision whatsoever.

Many Arguments

"The members of the board gave the most serious thought to the question of which direction the new collegiate should face. Personally I have always wished to have it face on Church St., My objection to John street is the position of the main entrance with regard to John street," Mr. Elliott said. He spoke of the suggestion that has been advanced regarding the purchase of some land in St. Thomas' graveyard, explaining that that would take too much time and trouble to be worth it.

Colonel W. N. Ponton also voted to the graveyard idea. Colonel Ponton also of the opinion that the new collegiate should face on Church street. He stated that he believed that the campus should be in front of a school. "The people approve of the building facing on Church street," said Colonel Ponton.

Mr. Cooke, however, believes that the school should face on John street. He stated that it was a mistake to have a campus in front of the collegiate. If the building was moved up to Church street, then Mr. Cooke would be favorable of the idea.

Mr. Arthur McGie said that he did not mind which way the school faced "Are we building this collegiate for looks only?"

Mr. Smith was of the opinion that the old building should be removed and the new building placed more in the centre of the lot.

Mr. Anderson emphatically stated that the school should face on John street, as the back of the collegiate would rather hurt John street as a residential street. "What would our city be like if all our public buildings backed up on a residential street? We would be creating a precedent by building our school with its back on John street."

HOSPITAL LOSES SUPERINTENDENT DUE TO HEALTH

Resignation Will Take Effect July 1st—Successor is Appointed

HERE 4½ YEARS

Miss Tait Brought Local Institution Up To High Standard

The many Belleville friends of Miss Margaret Tait, superintendent of the Belleville General Hospital, will learn with regret that owing to ill-health she has been forced to give her position as head of the local hospital. Although Miss Tait has been spending some time in American cities, and is now in Toronto, her resignation does not take effect until July 1st. Her successor who is a Montreal nurse has already been secured and will be coming to Belleville in about a month's time. It is just possible that Miss Tait will return to Belleville for the graduation of nurses which is to be held shortly.

Miss Tait has been superintendent of the Belleville General Hospital for the past four and a half years and in the assuming charge of the local institution has brought it up a high station. During Miss Tait's regime in this city, the Belleville General Hospital has been standardized and the accommodation has been increased considerably as well as much new equipment added.

Served During War

During the war Miss Tait offered her service to her country and served in military hospitals in Europe with distinction. She is a graduate of a Toronto hospital.

When Miss Tait took charge of the Belleville General Hospital at the commencement of 1922, succeeding Miss Greene, she re-organized the whole institution and placed it in a class only surpassed by the large hospitals of big cities and now Belleville General Hospital is recognized as a first class institution and its training school for nurses holds an enviable reputation due to the efficiency of the nurses throughout the country who trained under the careful supervision of Miss Tait. Miss Tait has not only economically and efficiently guided the destinies of the Belleville General Hospital, but she has been looked upon with confidence by the patients, who were inmates during the past five years and for their kindly interest which she has taken in them, and she has made for a second mother to the student nurses during their period of training.

Popular In Belleville

In severing her connection with the Belleville General Hospital Miss Tait will carry with her from this city the good wishes of a wide circle of friends who will watch with interest whatever course she may care to pursue and she will always receive a warm welcome any time she may care to visit Belleville.

Men Prominent In Belleville Life

A. L. GEEN

In our list of many outstanding citizens who have witnessed the growth of "Ye Ancient Town of Belleville" is the Reverend A. L. Geen, a minister of the Gospel, stationer, bookseller and druggist, and in these four vocations has he been a decided success. In addition to his work as a business man and his duties as a minister, he has found the time to take his mark in local politics, having probably held more offices in his seventy-eight years of life than any other man in Belleville.

Albert L. Geen was born in Belleville on July 22nd, 1849 and has lived here ever since. He is of English parentage. Mr. Geen has been an Oddfellow for forty-three years and was Past Grand Chaplain of that Order. He has also been a Mason for over forty-two years and a member of the Sons of England for a like period. He has rendered invaluable service as a member of the City Council and of the Board of Education. He was ordained as a minister in the Anglican Church in June of 1885 by Archbishop Lewis. He is the senior of nearly all the Anglican clergymen in the diocese in which he lives. He was a member of the first City Council; is past district Chaplain of the Oddfellows; Past Grand Chaplain of the Royal Arcanum; Past Master of the Workmen; Grand Chaplain of the Ruth Worshipful Lodge of Orangemen; Most Worshipful Chaplain of the Grand Chapter of the Black Preceptory of British America and President of the Bible Society.

In 1874 the Reverend Geen was married to Miss Sara Ann Consolo Forneri, daughter of James D. Forneri, L.L.D., of Madoc, who for a number of years did valuable service as professor of languages in Toronto University. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Geen four of whom are living. A daughter, Christina, a graduate of the Royal Victoria and Halifax hospital was one of the first nurses to go overseas during the war. The eldest son, Lieutenant Edgar de Forneri Geen, lost his life in the South African war. Major Victoria Arthur another son is Collector of Customs and Excise at the local port. Lieutenant Percy de Lacy Geen is a graduate in Drug and Stationery business here and is Lieutenant of the Royal Regiment of St. George's Church, Guelph, Ontario.

Reverend and Mrs. Geen celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Thursday, June 22nd, Victoria Avenue and Front Street. In 1866 the building in which Mr. Geen was located was destroyed by fire, and of necessity he moved to the Pilliter Block. He resided there until 1900 when he erected the home in the present quarters, 230 Front street.

Today the Rev. A. L. Geen can look back on seventy-seven years of industrious life and successful business career, having one of the most prosperous Drug and Book stores in the city of Belleville.

Schools Will Close

Schools, both public and High, will be closed on Monday, May 23rd. Little discussion was heard on this matter, and nearly all the members voted that the children and teachers be given a holiday. The only objectors to the holiday plan were Col. W. N. Ponton and Inspector Clarke, both of whom said that a special Empire Day programme had been sent down by the Department.

"I would advocate closing the schools on Monday and giving the teachers and pupils a long holiday. I was directed to this conclusion by the fact of Toronto closing their schools," Mr. John Elliott thus expressed his views upon the subject.

Col. Ponton objected to the idea of a holiday. "We have all agreed that there are too many holidays," stated the Colonel.

Mr. P. C. McLaurin—"We can use any time in the school if we have it, and we can use a holiday if we have it. I don't wish to express my opinions here."

It was decided upon vote that schools would be closed on Monday.

FLASH MESSAGE REPORTS AIRMAN PASSING DOVER

World Waiting Breathlessly To Learn Fate of Gallant Lindbergh

PASSED IRELAND

Lone Flier Seems To Be Winning Duel With Death

Lindbergh heading over County Cork, Southern Ireland at 5.20 this afternoon.

New York—The French Cable Company this afternoon announced receipt of official advices from French Government stating that Captain Lindbergh was over Ireland heading in direction of Cork at 5.20 o'clock this afternoon, Irish time.

New York, N Y , May 21.—The Naval Communications office here today gave out for what it was worth" an unofficial report that we had come to their office that Capt. Lindbergh had been sighted flying over Dover, England at 11.30 this morning. When asked to divulge the source of the report the office however, declined to do so.

The French Cable Company, whose name had been mentioned as the source of the report that Lindbergh was over Dover and also that he was being escorted across channel by English flyers said they had picked up a rumor to this effect.

Expected In Paris Soon

New York, N.Y., May 21.—The Cable Company of America announced at 12.20 this afternoon, Eastern Daylight Time, that they had received a British Marconi Wireless report, which said that the British Naval Flying squadron was escorting Captain Charles A. Lindbergh across the English Channel. The report further stated that Lindbergh was expected o land in France in 2 1-2 hours.

Chatham, Ont., May 21.—Press messages broadcasted to ships from the radio station of the Canadian Corporation of America here today was relayed here from the New York office of the Corporation. It said that the Corporation had report from its Paris office that Mr. Lindbergh plane had been seen over Valencia, Ireland, at 9 a.m. eastern standard time. At the station here it was said that all such messages from the vicinity of Ireland were effaced through the Paris office in the New York office of the Corporation and that the Chatham station was not able to pick up any direct from that part of the Atlantic.

Great Welcome Prepared

Paris, May 21.—France was waiting with baited breath today for the first sight of Charles A. Lindbergh when he nears the close of his lonely flight over seas from New York to Paris. It was some what cloudy over the English Channel this morning, but with brisk winds from the west and southwest, the weather was regarded as extreme ly favorable for the airman. Ocean wide and wireless stations in the vicinity are keeping a sharp look out for the "Spirit" twilling fool as the French call him.

There is no doubt he will get a welcome such as fi vouchafed few visitors to France. Authorities are complete arrangements with military aid to handle record crowds which will flock to the Le Bourget flying field to witness the landing. With a view to pre venting confusion, the authorities have requested that no airplanes take the air tonight during the hours the visitor is expected. United States Ambassador Myron Herrick claims for himself the honor to be the first to clasp the hero's hands and is prepared to stay at the field all night if necessary.

POSSIBLE 3 FULL HOLIDAYS JULY 1ST

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn to tell a story. A well told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sickroom. Learn to keep your troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ails and sorrows.

TORONTO'S SUNDAY

There is a matter for lawyers and laymen to ponder over in a judgment given in Toronto by Magistrate Cohen, holding that tennis, not being a "noisy" game, may be played on Sunday without breach of the Lord's Day Act of 1906, and therefore keeps tennis enthusiasts who had been summoned before him were dismissed, whereas a number of youths, charged with playing baseball on Sunday, were convicted on the ground that baseball is a "noisy" game. Does this mean that the legality of Sunday games is to be judged by the association of sounds and their relation to the "nicties" rather than according to the nature of what is done? Another magistrate might think baseball quite as "nice" as royal tennis, and the noise with which onlookers more than play vent scatter their energies and exhaust their emotion would by him be considered less a disturbance of the peace than a note of enchantment, an echo which would revive the rapture of a thousand memories and be full of significance and intimacy. He might decide that Sunday baseball in Toronto is illegal, but his judgment would be based on "considerants" different to those which which led Magistrate Cohen to the conclusion that Toronto may play games on Sundays if they are nice and noiseless.

PROFITABLE COWS

The low producing cow is slowly but surely giving place to her sisters that yield more milk and fat. With her dis appearance the net returns from the herd are growing without any increase in overhead or labor. Many high individual and herd records are being made, which are a credit to the owners who by careful selection, mating and feeding are raising the standard of their herds.

When a cow or a herd of cows have proven their ability to produce large quantities of milk and fat it encourages the owner to even greater efforts in the way of feeding and breeding. Thus improvement once started continues because it pays, in dollars and cents as well as in satisfaction.

It has been demonstrated time and again that the production and value of a very plain herd can be vastly increased in eight to ten years at little expense other than for a good sire. It means weeding out and breeding only from the best individuals in the herd Better have six cows giving 800 to 10,000 pounds of milk than a dozen with yearly production around 4,00 to 5,000.

The high producing cows, whether pure-bred or grades are in demand Dairymen can scarcely afford not to know the production of each cow. It helps in selecting and it helps in selling.

QUICK DECISIONS

The habit of deciding quickly is just as easily acquired as any other good habit, and it not only saves time but a great deal of nervous energy. We are born to be ruled by our habits There is no way to avoid that slavery And without any conscious effort we acquire dozens of habits that enable us to do routine things without waste of vital force. But the part of wisdom is deliberately to cultivate other habits that will enable us to do quickly, easily and automatically the things that now require us, a dozen times a day, to make decisions. "Taking it under advisement" is a costly business It isn't at all difficult to decide instantly, and decide rightly, once you have the habit.

PEACEFUL DEATH

Most of the tariff deputation that visit Ottawa make the plea that they want protection in order to cause an industry to grow and develop.

A case put up before the Tariff Board at Ottawa on behalf of the makers of buggies and cutters frankly stated that the tariff was needed so that "if the industry had to die, it be allowed to die in peace."

Certainly that was a sympathetic and novel plea, the first of its kind on record.

It is somewhat like a request to put sawdust on the sidewalk in front of a sick man's house.

Paddie—Dry, mon! They're parched. I just had a letter from Mike and the postage stamp was stuck on with a pin.

WHAT WE NEED

A little more kindness and a little less creed,
A little more giving
and a little less greed,
A little more smile
and a little less frown,
A little less kicking
a man when he's down;
A little more "we"
and a little less "I,"
A little more laugh
and a little less cry,
A little more flowers
on the pathway of life,
And less for the wreath on the grave
at the end of the strife.

PLAY YOUR PARTS, GIRLS, BUT PLAY'EM WISELY

By ELSIE MARLOWE

"Even the fairest face must be fed," as The Wizard of Oz or someone of equal sagacity once remarked. Somebody's got to pay for the food, and as the modern girl is enshrined to marry the first gentleman that bids for the privilege, and the family exchequer is usually laid pretty low getting her through high school, dancing school business college or university, sooner or later she has to take on the job herself.

Hence we have an army of young business women, pounding typewriters in the laudable desire to earn their bread and as much cake as possible.

Almost any girl of average intelligence can learn to read her shorthand notes, and transcribe them with reasonable speed and spelling. And so the average girl goes the average salary, which does not by any means stretch to include all the, out sundaes, French perfume and colorful sport frocks her heart desires.

While the average girl is working hard for $45 or $50 a month, there are always a few fortune hunting females sailing down $125 and up. Of course, a few of 'em are lucky enough to be the Boss' wife's cousin, and cause in for a good thing that way. But most of 'em have made their own way, and the point that interests us is HOW DO THEY DO IT?

Miss Mary Brown, of the Symon School of Dramatic Art attempted to explain it to a group of business women in Chicago recently. She said:

"Every place of business is a theatre and every woman worker is her own prima donna.

"Act your part. Dramatizing your personality is just another way of putting yourself across. The business woman who develops a magnetic personality will find she does not have to fight her business battles alone."

That's one woman's explanation of what makes success, and in the wake of that bit of published news I suppose we'll have a bumper crop of office prima donnas this season.

Which, as I see it, is the one thing the country doesn't need.

If it amuses you to think of your office as a theatre, and to dramatize yourself in the job, go to it. Act your part. But act the part that is natural to you. Be the efficient, cool, calm office worker.

Lead the prima donna role for the boss. He's the stage manager. He lays the stages and assigns the parts. All the leading roles are reserved for himself. He feels fully capable of playing the handsome hero, the schemy the politician, the heavy father and the prima donna.

He doesn't wish to play audience to the temperamental stenographer. Nor does he wish to fight for his place in the spotlight. He wants room to strut his stuff, and if he forgets his lines he wants somebody tactfully and unobtrusively to prompt him.

"Mr. Jones, I believe you wanted me to remind you that Mr. Whoosis is coming in at four."

"You mentioned calling in Jinks & Company, would you like me to do it before I go out to lunch?"

And for a girl who can be trusted to remember the things he forgets without being nosy about it, who can keep her own troubles from his, who can play the same loyal, willing worker day after day, week after week, admiring his brilliancy and soundlessly applauding his performance, he is prepared to pay—$125 and up.

Think over the high-salaried girls you know. They're not all beauties; they're not all smartly dressed; some of them aren't exceptionally speedy or unusually clever.

BUT TO THE LAST WOMAN OF 'EM, THEY PLAY THEIR PART AND LET THE BOSS PLAY HIS.

They can be depended upon to write the circular letters without throwing a temperamental tantrum about the monotony of it. They can take criticism without tears, and pause without blowing kisses and rearrange and do more progress. They can sympathize the boss, play the star role by day or a week night, or with or without motion or not preferring his golf—and then settle back into the old bandeau on part.

Think it over, you girls who are nursing the submissive wish and hope to make more. Is it luck that is against you, or are you just a nonentity in the show by missing your cues and trying to play all the parts but the one you were hired to act?

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have been going with a young man to whom my parents object. We see each other whenever we can and as often as possible.

Another young man has asked me to attend a number of dances and parties. I refuse as many as I dare, because neither makes me accept a few. Mother and dad like this young man and think I ought to go with him. I dislike him very much. . .

There is a general misunderstanding between my parents and me. Please advise me what step to take. NILLSON.

NILLSON: Explain to your parents that you appreciate the fact that their first thoughts are for your well being. But explain to them that they are frustrating that purpose by trying to go out with a young man whom you actually dislike. Assure them that you think a good deal of their judgement, but that, after all, nobody but you can be the arbiter of your friendships. Nothing they can do or say can compel you to greater interest in anybody who repels you.

A heart-to-heart talk such as this would at least point out to your parents that you do not want to ignore their wishes. If you seem reasonable, I'm sure they will be glad to reconsider.

However, I can't say that I approve of your seeing the other young man without their knowledge. Talk him over with them, too. Ask them to enumerate their objections to him. Perhaps with their greater experience they have discovered detrimentes in him that you may have overlooked. Perhaps they are judging him unfairly. Ask their permission to see him now and again in your home. Surely they will see that that is preferable to secret meetings outside.

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Polka dot prints have a tremendous vogue in chiffon, georgette or silk, being seen as, tiny dots, huge dots, combinations of dots of all sizes, broken dots, carnival dots, ombre dots, two color dots and dots with points of color.

From Toronto comes the report that this year women are to be bringing a revival of grandma's fuchsias and both at florist's shops and at the market baskets and boxes of these go-by, quaint flowers are seen.

Navy and grege are important colors for daytime wear in Lanvin's midcalf skirts opening, while cyclamen crepe appears in the development of a daytime dress, trimmed with vertical tucks and a border ruff at the hem accents the fullness and gives a flared silhouette. A point generally emphasized in new showings, and black taffeta, silver cloth and white satin are media sponsored in evening themes.

The wider-brimmed hat of felt is being seen to some extent now in New York, where it is usually nice at back, laid of medium width in front and simply trimmed with belting ribbon and an ornament.

New York reports that chiffon weight taupe silk hosiery is becoming more and more fashionable—being worn particularly with black patent leather or suede footwear which completes the tailored suits of grey mixture.

SINCLAIR'S

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

"Girls, you're hard," he exclaimed fervently. "You must be made of ice." "Do you think so?" she flung him a provocative glance. Then, more demurely, "I'm flattered."

"Yes, I am," he cried. "I think you're the most delectable thing that ever lived. Only you won't admit it, yet. But when you do——" he drew a deep breath.

Sybil was fully aware of her power. She employed it shamelessly, and Arthur, like most men of his kind, responded to her every feminine technique. Nothing they can do or say can compel you to greater interest in anybody who repels you.

A heart-to-heart talk such as this would at least point out to your parents that you do not want to ignore their wishes. If you seem reasonable, I'm sure they will be glad to reconsider.

However, I can't say that I approve of your seeing the other young man without their knowledge. Talk him over with them, too. Ask them to enumerate their objections to him. Perhaps with their greater experience they have discovered detrimentes in him that you may have overlooked. Perhaps they are judging him unfairly. Ask their permission to see him now and again in your home. Surely they will see that that is preferable to secret meetings outside.

Think it over, you girls who are nursing the submissive wish and hope to make more. Is it luck that is against you, or are you just a nonentity in the show by missing your cues and trying to play all the parts but the one you were hired to act?

Sybil's heart, often in pain, as well as red and rosy his hearts, also natural, continue to attract the attention of fashionable women in New York.

A number of new spring coats are developed in fine tweeds which have beige and reddish brown tones, and frequently these are finished with a collar of cross fox or else a cross fox scarf is worn with them.

Sybil's self-control was admirable. She declined into the sidway manner of a woman who has had many proposals. Arthur, who was reading, over his soup fruit which tasted strangely bitter that morning, a lengthy telegram from his father.

"You may consider yourself disowned and disinherited," Winslow, Sr., had wired. "Your allowance will also stop from this date. This discreet has made an old man of me. I am disgusted up a new will which leave everything to the Children's Home-Finder." It was signed, not "Father," but "A. J. Winslow."

Arthur, propped up on pillows with the breakfast-tray on his knees, made a wry face. He reached out and secured his wallet from his coat that hung on the back of the dressing-table chair. Very carefully he counted it; contents twice. The result was not reassuring to one who has just learned that his purse will never again be rep seriously and automatically refilled. What with his benefactor's mind he made through his own efforts.

He groaned. Later he cursed Sybil, breaking and flaming. After that he rose, bathed, dressed, and repacked his toilet articles. And for him the days and a suite in one of New York's smartest hotels—not any longer.

He wondered how his father had learned so quickly where he was. Probably the old boy, knowing he usually stopped there, had telephoned the hotel. Arthur groaned again. He would leave under assumed name at the hotel register. No use trying a bluff.

He had no illusions about the delity of that telegram. He knew his father well enough to be certain that he never changed his mind, once he had reached a decision. Arthur had to accept the fact that he was cooked—rather over-done, as it were.

For the first time in his life, he was up against the proposition of getting a job on his own—and keeping it, if after the contents of his wallet gave out, he wished to eat.

He descended into the subway and made his way down-town to the financial district.

Meanwhile Sybil was presenting her credentials to the secretary of the employment agency. Again luck favored her, and she received a temporary position as a substitute stenographer in the offices of an automobile agency. The salary was much larger than she had earned at home.

TO WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE
Mrs. Wilson's Experience a Guide to Women Passing through the Change of Life

Hamilton, Ontario. — "I have taken several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot speak too highly of it as I was through the Change of Life and was all run-down and had no appetite. I was very weak and sick, and the pains in my back were so bad I couldn't move. I got very sad at times and thought I had not a friend on earth. I did not care if I lived or died. I was very nervous, too, and did not go out very much. A friend advised me to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I did. I am a farmer's wife, and always worked hard until lately, and was in bed for two months. I began to feel like a new woman after the first bottle and I recommend it with great success." Mrs. Lydia E. POETIC DANCING OF MISS AUDREY MIKEL'S CLASSES

Large Crowd Enjoyed Pleasing Spectacle At City Hall

Miss Audrey Mikel last night presented in a well-filled house at the City Hall, a most charming delightful and altogether interesting evening in her pupils recital of classic national and interpretive dances. Trained to a fine point by Miss Mikel who is one of the country's most gifted exponents of classic dancing, the young people rendered two hours of really worthwhile entertainment illustrating the poetry of motion in a most charming manner.

The programme opened with "When Apple Blossoms Waltz" and in this Betty Chapman, the fairy piper to the tune of a flute, nobly, topped to the stage and announced the dances. Phyllis Temple, Lois Coleman, Marion Robb, B. Holland, H. Gallagher, Norman, B. Burrows, H. M. Schuster, and F. Kinnear, to awaken and very charmingly the graceful little elves, embodied pretty arms and bloomed while Spring Miss Esther Marsh, powerful about in a pretty classic dance.

In the second number of Nat classic dances, Mrs. J. Anderson as a Rose son went through the most intricate steps and gestures delightfully. In the Hermian Dance was little girl Frances Evans, June Warren, Isabel Wellbelove, Betty Chapman, Ina Reid and A. delineated very charmingly, and in the Rosie Waltz Mrs. Corcoran March, a particularly pretty dance, bouncing down the floor with applause Vase as taken by Gladys L. Ada Bongard Dance won the hearts of all by her grace and ability, carrying most intricate steps with perfect ease and assurance.

"Dreamdreams", the third item on the ...ame and elements programme, included some absolutely lovely features. Gavotte Fantasy danced by M. Hunter, Eleanor Gay, J. Adams, E. March, A. Davis and L. Rushworth showed the lovely girls to be the possessors of unmistakable charm and ability.

In "A Soldier and His Sweetheart", Phillina and Sheila Barrons presented a particularly delightful dance and also in all the dances scored a dainty miss trippin through most appropriate and pretty steps in the ...ecies of the action. Miss Esther Marsh presented Spanish Rhapsody beautifully and in Hour Hopeful Miss Temple, Lois Coleman and Marion Robb brought every dance a success. Betty Holland made an adorable Miss Mischief and Mary Vera Thompson, H. Gilbert, B. Coleman, H. M. Schuster, ... Lawrie, B. Sullivan, E. Kinnear, C. Gilbert and E. Dowey danced a pretty Lollypop dance.

The programme closed with an artistic triumph in "To Love Is Sorry Game," in this Constance Marsh, Lillian Rushworth, Pierrot and Esther Marsh Harlequin, brought forth by nursery the weed of shame inserted with. "Every Little Movement has a Meaning of its Own" delightfully.

Too much cannot be said in appreciation of the splendid musical accompaniment by Miss Florence Davis at the piano and Miss Helen Hunt, the violinist for the evening. The support they lent the lovely young people ...counted for a large percentage of the success of the affair at 8 o'clock.

The consistent increase in Star Car sales is due to the quality of the car itself and to the maintenance of its resale value through safe, sane company policies.

Why Torture Your Little Ones

Mothers, do you think it fair to torture your little ones by forcing them to take ill-tasting oils when they need a laxative medicine? Don't you find that the child's dread of these medicines often do more harm than good?

Baby's Own Tablets are the modern substitute for these nauseous doses. They are the very medicine the child requires and are so pleasant to take that they are as easy to administer as a glass of water. They are the perfect remedy for all the minor ailments of little ones, being absolutely guaranteed from injurious drugs.

Baby's Own Tablets accomplish all that castor oil and other bad-tasting remedies can do. In fact they accomplish more as they do not leave the child exhausted from its struggle against taking medicine. They relieve teething pains, banish indigestion and constipation, break up colds and simple fevers and promote healthful, refreshing sleep. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

It's a safe bet that the cars which step-out with the "go" signal are equipped with Champions—the better spark plug. If every car owner used Champions there would be fewer traffic jams.

Champion is the better spark plug because of standard-rated silimanite insulator, correct heat range, conservation and by-product analysis electrodes.

2 MILLION RATS IN MOSCOW CITY

Moscow, May 17.—It is estimated that Moscow has 2,000,000 rats—one to every inhabitant. At a minimum of one half capeck daily, per rat, the authorities figure the damage by the animals at 1,800,000 rubles ($900,000) yearly.

On holidays when shops are closed rats disport themselves in show-windows of most of the state food shops, indifferent to the crowds generally to be found in front of the windows. They frustrate with the aid intended for their extermination.

A valuable library of more than 20,000 volumes was found to have been destroyed by the rodents in Riechovo-Zolevo, a nearby town.

Fourteen C. N. R. freight cars were broken into overnight in the Kingston yards.

BETHANY HONORS ONE OF HER DAUGHTERS

A very enjoyable evening was spent on Tuesday evening, May 3rd, at the home of Mr. E. W. Brown when about eighty of their friends and neighbours lavraded their home to wish Mrs. Clayton Eggleton (nee Miss Isabel Brown) much joy and happiness in her new home.

Dear Isabel and Clayton:

We your friends and neighbours, have gathered here this evening to extend to you our congratulations upon the new step you have taken in life, and also to spend a social hour with you before you go to your new home in an adjoining township.

It is the inevitable law of nature that time brings changes and we would not wish it otherwise, yet we know, Isabel, that this change will make a void in your home in this community and in the church, the majority of us here, have known you from childhood and we have learned to love you and respect you for your hearty optimistic and persevering disposition. You will depart from the Wide Awake class of girls, the W.M.S. and the choir, in all of which you so willingly and ably assisted. But perhaps most of all the little ones who first learned to love you while you were teacher of Primary Class in Sunday School and later as a teacher who was patient and painstakingly endeavoured to instruct them in music are going to feel the loss.

We are glad though you are not going far away but that we will be able to see you occasionally. We can even hope to have you at times with us in our Sunday morning service.

Clayton, we have confidence to think of you as a jolly good fellow whom we shall see no ill-will even though you have dared to come and carry off one of our fair daughters.

Now we feel that we cannot let you go without expressing in tangible form our love and best wishes for you, so we ask you to accept these gifts of silver and trust that they may ever remind you of your friends at Bethany.

Our earnest prayers go with you that the God who has guided you thus far, will still be your Guide in the upbuilding of another of the happy, Christian homes which mean so much to this Canada of ours.

Signed on behalf of Bethany community.

Sylvia Lydster.

Very fitting replies were made by Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton.

BELLE THEATRE

Characterizing the use of the word "legitimate" when applied to stage drama, as obsolete and meaningless, W. C. Fields, who arrives at the Belle on Monday, in his current Paramount comedy, "The Potter," stirred up considerable discussion among fellow players and officials.

"I am not considering that 'legitimate' as applied to certain types of plays casts any reflection upon other forms of dramatic art," says Fields. "The screen drama, for example, has been elevated to too high a position to suffer by comparison with any form of theatrical entertainment. My contention is merely that the word is no longer applicable. Originally conceived, as I understand it, to distinguish between the old classic tragedy and such productions as burlesque, farce and extravaganze, it has lost meaning because our drama has long since broken down the barriers.

"Modern drama is not kept step with the times and gone hyroid. There's a little bit of musical comedy in every good play and a good deal of vaudeville and burlesque in musical comedy. And we have plays like 'Grandma's Way,' incorporating fragments of cabaret and burlesque, and 'An American Tragedy,' done like a movie. Under these circumstances, what is legitimate?

WILLIAMS GETS THREE HOMERS

Now Tied With Ruth and Gehrig For Home-Run Honors

New York, May 21.—Pittsburgh took another fall out of the Giants here yesterday by coming out on top in a 12-inning battle, by to 3. Lee Meadows had a slight edge on his New York opponents and won his fifth straight game of the spring. Traus far he has not been charged with a defeat. The Pirates won out on Greenfield's wildness in the 12th when he walked three men and yielded three hits, including a home run by Traynor with the sacks full. Eddie Farrell, Giant shortstop, continued his remarkable batting streak with a homer, a double and three singles in five times up. Smith of the Pirates hit a homer with none on base in the fifth.

The Chicago Cubs made it two straight over the Robins at Brooklyn today in a long drawn out game, knock ing Jim Elliott out of the box in the fourth inning and winning eventually by 7 to 5. Brooklyn used four pitchers. Babe Herman, Robins' first baseman, hit two Dodge runs, bringing his total for the season up to six, but he cost his club two runs with a wild throw in the eighth inning.

The first doubleheader of the Philadelphia season resulted in an even break yesterday afternoon, Philadelphia winning the first game, 6 to 3, and Philadelphia pounding out a 15 to 2 victory in the second game. Cy Williams starred at the bat with three home runs and a single, the three circuit clouts tying the National League record for the season. Altogether Williams drove in six teammates and scored four times himself accounting for ten of his team's runs in the first game. "Lang George" Kelly hit a homer with three men on base.

Varicose Veins Reduced or Money Back, Says Doyle

Simple Home Treatment That Is Giving Amazing Results.

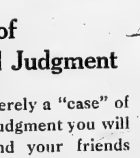

The world progresses. Today ailments that took weeks to treat can now be ended in a few days. If you have varicose veins or bunches you can start today to bring them back to normal size, and if you are wise you will do so.

Just get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil at any dispensing pharmacist and apply it night and morning to the enlarged veins. It is very powerful and penetrating, and only a little is required.

After a few days' treatment the veins will begin to grow smaller and by regular use will soon reduce to normal.

Moone's Emerald Oil is also a marvelous healing agent. One application for instance stops the itching of eczema, and a few applications cause the eruptions to dry up, scale off and completely disappear. It is equally as effective in barber's itch, nail rheum, redness and inflammatory skin trouble.

People who want to reduce varicose veins, or get rid of eczema, ulcers, or piles in a few days should not hesitate to get a bottle at once. It is so powerful that a small bottle lasts a long time. Any pharmacy can supply you. Doyle's Drug Store sells lots of it.

HALF A MILLION PEOPLE TO SEE THE EPSOM RACE

Epsom, Eng., May 21. (C.P.)—Two horses stand out in the otherwise even ly matched field for the Derby here, Curnon's Coil Boy and Lord Derby's Sickle. These two are inevitably connected in the public mentalities with the name of a third horse, Adam's Apple, owned by C. W. Whitburn. Adam's Apple beat both Call Boy and Sickle in the Two Thousand Guineas. Adam's Apple however had to do the Rowley Mile in 1.38 1-5 to win by a beard from Call Boy, with Sickle coming up strong; and the Derby is over a harder and longer course—the historic mile and a half at Epsom Down.

The Derby will be run on Epsom Downs for the 144th time next Wednesday, June 1. Probably half a million people will see the running of a race with unique traditions; with many interwoven romances and tragedies; and the day before the race the half million ask—"will it rain tomorrow?" The last three Derbies have been run in a downpour of rain, that turned the Downs into a pool-ridden muddy waste.

Some changes surround the 144th running of the race, which itself never changes. The new grandstand is at last ready—a magnificent structure in modern style, double-decked; with lunchrooms, halls and restaurants—supplanting the 98 year old structure that accommodated a small portion of the multitude until now. And of course the last hour Derby betting for the first time will be conducted under betting tax conditions.

But the race itself remains as it always was—the thrilling contest of thoroughbreds in the biggest race of their careers; racing for leadership that if held at the winning post gives them lasting prestige.

The Derby will be worth about $55,000. The race thus is not the richest in the world. Neither is the course the best, for purely racing purposes, but a Derby winner has to be a good horse. The runners start at the New High Level Starting Post and ascend for half a mile; after another half mile they turn into the old Derby course and the last half mile is straight. The abrupt turn at Tattenham corner and the severe descent after the turn is made, is held to be a disadvantage. Steve Donoghue knows this course as no other living jockey does; he has rid den a Derby winner six times. He may ride Lady Eleanor Torrington's Vanoe this year.

TORONTO LEAFS WIN IN 9TH, 7-6

Buffalo, May 21.—Staging a crehendo rally after two hands were swept out in the ninth round, the Toronto Leafs today overcame a four-run lead and squeezed out a 7 to 6 verdict over the Bisons here yesterday for their lone victory of the four-game series. A scorching home-run drive over the right-field fence by Lavery, with two men on, was the big gun in the victorious rally and gave the Leafs the tying and winning runs off Mangum, who have handily mastered the Leafs up to this stage. Bratchi's homer over the left-field fence also gave the Leafs their first pair of tallies in the second round.

Syracuse made a clean-sweep of the Rochester series by taking the final game, 5 to 2, with Sylvester Johnson, former St. Louis Cardinals hurler stopping the Tribesmen as relief man for the third time during the series. Johnson relieved Stout with two on and none out in the ninth and Rochester was unable to get a hell out of the infield.

Jersey City closed their four-game series at Newark with a double victory over the Bears, breaking even on the series. The first game was a long drawn out affair with both teams batting the ball hard, the Jerseys winning by the score of 12 to 10.

Joe Zubric hurled great ball in the nightcap, to lose by the score of 1 to 0. Zubric fanned seven and allowed five hits.

The Reading Aces wound-up their four-game series at Baltimore by losing their twenty-second straight game, 12 to 3, leaving the Orioles still tied with Syracuse in first place. The visitors hammered Noble for sixteen safeties, while Jackson held the locals to seven and fanned five. Brenzel and Jones, Reading twirlers, were the victims of the Birds.

UHLE TRIUMPHS PITCHERS' DUEL

Each Allowed Seven Hits But Hoyt's Support Erratic

Cleveland, May 21.—Waite Hoyt and George Uhle, both right-handers and good boys, too, hooked up yesterday in a frightfully old-fashioned pitching duel, and the Yankee lad ran second in a field of two. George's support was perfect whereas Waite's playmates committed a couple of five-thumbed muffs that brought a 2-1 defeat and broke the winning streak of seven straight.

Each of the hurlers allowed only seven hits. This is dreadfully plain to baseball. The rest thing we knew the Yanks and Jordskins will be playing first bounce to out and will come out on the field wearing coin whiskers.

Philadelphia hammered three Chicago pitchers hard and defeated the Sox of Chicago, 12 to 5. The Athletics scored seven runs in the first inning, driving Blankenship and Jacobs off the hill before a runner had been retired. They let loose another barrage in the third inning with Connally on the hill for four more runs.

FAMOUS BELLS ARE ON THE WAY

The famous bells, which on July First will announce to a listening world that Canada is celebrating her sixtieth year of confederation have left the foundry at Croydon have left the port of London, are nearing the Dominion of Canada and will be in Montreal this week-end. The ship which is bringing this mighty load, the carillon that will boom from the majestic victory tower of the parliament buildings at Ottawa, is the Canadian Pacific steamship "Balfour" and it is fitting that a vessel flying the flag of Canadian enterprise should have the honor of sailing into Canadian waters with the bells that will ring forth the name of Canada across the wide world. The bells of the carillon are 53 in number and weigh 53 tons, the bourden alone accounting for 10 tons, but with the framework and fittings the total weight of the monument from Croydon's world famous foundry is as much as 75 tons. When the bells are installed, the Canadian capital will have the largest carillon in the world and one which also is acclaimed as the most beautiful in tone and sonority. There is another thing that must not be forgotten that in Ottawa the bells will have a setting, a beautiful background, such as would delight the eye of poet or painter and would in no way disappoint the radio listener whose imagination had painted a picture of its own. Many applications for the position of carilloneur have been received by the civil service commission at Ottawa. Most of them coming from organists" is now ever pointed out that operating the keyboard of a carillon requires special qualifications, possessed by few organists. The applications are to be considered by Professor J. W. Beatty, head of the Canadian College of Organ fame, and Mr. William Gorham Rice, of the New York State Civil Service Commission, who is a recognized authority on the subject.

It is announced that on Dominion day the broadcasting at " the carillon of Ottawa" will be in the hands of the Dominion Government carillon of Ottawa which will "have the air" for Canada on that day and it is further understood that the bells will be effectively relayed so that there roundelay may be heard in any part of the British Empire and throughout the world.

Would not be Without Zutoo Tablets At Any Cost

Mr. A. O. Norton, the millionaire Soda Manufacturer, of Boston, who recently died, was a great "booster" for Zutoo Tablets.

He suffered from headaches from childhood and when he found Zutoo Tablets stopped those headaches a few minutes and left no bad effect, he began recommending them to his family and friends in an unsolicited letter, Mr. Norton says in closing:

"My family use them when ever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I also carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

SINICAL SADIE SEES

THE FIRST LAW OF GRAVITY.
Never laugh at your own jokes.

PRECAUTION.
An old ferryboat was making hard work of her trip across a choppy loch, and the little group of pleasure-seekers huddled together as they watched the threatening waves. The storm seemed to gather fury the farth-er they got from land, and every one thought that a calamity was near. The ancient ferryman, after a short conversation with his mate, approached the passengers, who waited anxiously to learn his opinion of the danger. When near enough for them to hear his voice above the storm, he shouted, "We'll just talk" our sarspences the noo, for we dinna ken what micht come over us!"

PLACE AUX DAMES
(Lecio in Manchester Guardian)
(A little study for a folk-song in the female-hail manner, based upon Sir William Arbuthnot Lane's remarks, in an interview on "face lifting" and beauty culture, that "it is a great pity that surgeons do not make themselves familiar with such operations, and that they are content to leave the work in the hands of people who in so many cases are not properly qualified.")
I went to Sir Hercules Hackett,
The eminent EXPERT—
My appendix was all on the racket—
It needed removing, I guess,
I sent up my card for attention;
His man brought it back for to say,
"Sir Hercules asked me to remind you
He can't cut you up, sir, today."
CHORUS:—
For he's lining the lid of a lydy.

He's just got a grip on her face,
He's getting the bags bits all tidy
And stitching her ears into place;
He's put a large tuck in her chin, sir,
And reefs in her scalp and her brow
Oh, he's far too full up to begin sir,
Removing appendices now!
I was caught in a railway collision—
My word, it did fetch me a clout!
"He needs," said the Doc, with decision
"A ley off and an eye or two out."
And rang up Sir Slashington Slecke
Who replied, with some haste, "Congratulations
Are quite out of question this week."
CHORUS:—
No, I can't leave the job I'm attending
For any emergency nightly,
If I let go the physog I'm mending.
Gee whiz, it would drop with a crash
Oh, it's not the least use to come drifting
Round here with an accident case—
For I'm right in the middle of lifting
The Duchess of Jellyjam's face!

Poems Old And New

MY DELIGHT

The sleepy twitter of the birds at dawn,
A distant cockcrow heralding the morn,
The dim halation o'er a town at night,
Give me delight.

The roar of traffic in a busy street,
The little rise of rest where four roads meet,
A flower-girl's basket with its colors bright,
Give me delight.

—O. W. McMullen.

MY CASTLE

To heights that mocked the stars it grew,
Bright birds of fancy round it flew,
It long ago!

The Irony of Love By Charles Garvice

While Maude and Rafe were talking they saw that Eva's attention was arrested by something outside; and Maude, following the direction of the latter's eyes, saw a young woman coming up the path. Maude noticed that she was young and pretty, and she thought that it was some one coming to see the housekeeper, probably one of the needlewomen who had been engaged to help in the wedding trousseau; for secretly Maude had that morning begun to make preparations; she knew her man. She watched the approaching figure with faint interest, but suddenly she was startled by an exclamation from Eva, who had raised herself on her elbow and was staring with all her eyes at the girl in the drive, and who cried out with a mixture of surprise and apprehension:

"Stranfyre! Look!"

Rafe rose and went to the window, and stood for a moment or two, as if too astonished to speak; then he turned, with still greater astonishment, to Eva. "You know her, Biddy?" he exclaimed. "How's that—" He turned to Maude. "It's that friend of mine, Sloe's cousin—I don't know why she's come—and Eva knows her! How's that?"

"I saw him with you in Edinburgh," said Eva, panting, a little. "We were in the carriage, Miss Markham and I —and I wanted to go to you, but she wouldn't let me. And she said I was not to tell you that I'd seen you. And I haven't, Blunderbuss, have I?" she wound up eagerly, imploringly.

"I don't understand," said Maude, to Rafe, with a puzzled frown, nodded at Eva reassuringly. "Who is it Stranfyre?"

"It's that friend of mine I told you about," said Rafe. "It's Phenie—Phenie Wilde."

"Phenie Wilde?" said Maude, shaking at her perplexity. Though she herself was not a little bewildered. "But you didn't say it was a woman, a girl Stranfyre!"

"No, you wouldn't let me," he replied simply. "You wouldn't let me tell you any thing. You stopped my mouth when I wanted to."

"Yes, I know dear. I didn't want you to think that I was curious, prying—but tell me now."

"Phenie's an old friend, jist of mine from Jumping Jane. We've known each other since we were boy and girl. She was fond of my dad, and he was fond of her, thought no end of her jist as a little girl, white all through. You'll like her. He broke off the state cats sentences with a feeling that Maude would not understand, but Maude smiled and nodded, as if she did quite understand.

"I am sure I shall like her," she said. "I should like any friend of yours; any friend of the old days, I mean. How pretty she is, and what a good figure! You showed some taste as a boy, Rafe," she added, in a dreamy, dearest. But why didn't you insist on telling me that your friend was a woman? I should have been sure to have had her here to have made friends with her. She could have told me about you, and be when you were a boy. But it isn't too late now. She has come to see you, of course."

"Of course," said Rafe - absently. "Yes, of course. I wish I had told you," he added, almost in his speech with poignant regret, "but Travers —"

"Mr. Travers?" said Maude, raising her brows. "Does Mr. Travers know her?"

"Yes," said Rafe, wondering how on earth he was going to explain every thing, so that Maude should quite understand the stupid tangle. "He brought her to Edinburgh. He thought —now I come to think of it, it seems to me that he was wrong—

"In what way was he wrong—how do you mean—what had Mr. Travers to do with it?" asked Maude.

"Well, I guess he thought—darned if I know what he did think, carrying on so that I would be better if I didn't let on that I was myself— Oh, I'll explain it all to you, Maudie," he broke off, glancing at Eva, whose face was showing acute signs of excitement.

A servant came to the door. "A lady to see Mrs. Lordingham," she said.

"All right," responded Rafe, with a nod. "Say, Maudie, we'll go down together and see her. I'm glad she's come. You won't mind, will you, miss—chief, kiddie, while we're gone?"

"Oh, no," Eva assured him, rather indignantly. "I want to know what she's such a pretty young lady, and I could see, you were very fond of her, when you were talking. May he bring the young lady up to me, Auntie Maudie?"

"We'll see dear," said Maude. "Here's nurse, she'll see that you don't know off the blanket."

Rafe and Maude went down the stairs, Maude thought Rafe was going into to find a beginning to the explanation which had to come. A footman opened the door of the small reception room, and the two entered. The slim, girlish figure was seated at the window, and both Rafe and Maude were startled by the intense pallor and haggardness of her face. As the lips were drawn, there were dark marks under the eyes, which were swollen as if by weeping. Even now as they came in, then sank down again; her head was bowed as if by the weight of some great emotion, and her hands gripped each other and writhed together.

Rafe went to her and held out his hand. "Phenie! So you've come—as I knew you would. But what's the matter, Phenie, you look bad? This is Lady Maude, a great friend of mine—we're going to be married."

Phenie did not look at him; her eyes were still fixed on the floor, her lips moved, but it was evident that she was struggling for speech. Maude was startled and rather frightened by the girl's appearance; but Maude was a woman of the world and accustomed to self-command, and her face was serene and placid as she came forward and, seating herself by the Phenie said in the voice which Rafe thought the sweetest music in the world:

"I am very glad to see you, Miss Wilde. Stranfyre has been telling me about you. I am so sorry I did not know—that so old a friend of his was in Scotland and we near. I would have gone to you, asked you to come and stay with me—" She broke off and gently, for Phenie, had raised her head and looked at her with an expression which startled Maude and filled her with a fear too vague to be fully realized.

"I have come," said Phenie sudden-ing her lips and speaking as if every word were an effort, "I have come because I had to. Don't be angry with me, Rafe, don't say a word till—till I have told the lady the truth, the whole truth! I've got it! I must—or I shall go mad—"

At this, Maude shrank back a little and looked from Phenie to Rafe. He stood perfectly still, as if hearing him self for—what? asked Maude of herself. The vague fear grew more distinct, the color gradually left her face she kept her eyes on the white one on poste.

"No, Phenie," said Rafe gravely, "there's no call for you to be so fright ened. No one's going to be angry with you; why should they? Tell all you want, Mowie will understand. It's a foolish business, and there's nothing in it to upset you so, Phenie."

"Oh, you don't know, you don't understand, Rafe," she said, wringing her hands and looking at him with wild eyes, that were full of appeal. "you think it's all right; it's because you don't know what—what we've done."

Maude rose slowly, but though she was trembling, she still maintained her composure, the self-possession which comes of a long training. "Rafe for and show no sign" is the motto of the world in which Maude and her kind are brought up.

"I—I think I will go, Stranfyre," she said, in a low tone.

"No, don't" he said, stretching out his hand, which wants to tell you, it's on her mind. I'd have told you myself—I wish I had."

Maude did not sit down again, but stood with her hand on the back of the chair. While they had been speak ing the lady-like reserve of the great house, the sumptuous room, the grace was pressure of the young girl, whose beauty awed Phenie, while it tortured her with jealously. Her voice was broken, almost inaudible, her head quite erring, as, with a long breath, she said: "You're going to be married to Rafe? You can't!"

Maude did not speak, but into her face came a look of wonder and then of something like relief. The explanation of this girl's presence and her strangeness seemed plain; she was in some—mad.

"You can't!" repeated Phenie, panting, as if for breath, "because he's married already, he's married to me!"

CHAPTER 9
MY BROTHER!

Rafe started and would have spoken but with a glance of compassion at the distraught girl, Maude signed to him to be silent, and he drove back the denial from his lips.

"He's married to me; he's mine and —oh, you don't look! Speak; tell me I don't you tell me that—that—I'm lying, that I'm a bad woman, that—"

"Hush, dear," Maude, going to her and kneeling beside her. "Don't say such things. You are not bad; you are calmer, until—Stranfyre, bring me some wine for her," she broke off in a half voice.

Phenie sprang to her feet and push ed away Maude's arm. "Don't you understand?" she cried. "Don't you understand?" she cried. "Don't you believe I'm telling you the truth, that I've come here to tell it, though I'd rather go through fire? Wait, you see that it's not because of myself that I've come, but because of you, for your sake I have—I have—sacrifice I know it now," she cast her eyes toward Rafe. "He knows I'm speaking the truth—

1-2 box gelatine
1-2 cup cold water
4 sour oranges
1 cup boiling water
Sugar
2 cups cream

Soak the gelatine in the cold water half an hour. Take the juice of the oranges, add the rind of one and one, and sufficient boiling water to make 2 cups. Sweeten to taste and when hot but not boiling, pour over thoroughly dissolved set aside to cool, stirring occasionally. Whip the cream very stiff, and when jelly begins to thicken, add it by degrees to the cream, stirring lightly until well mixed. Mould.

Let Me Tell You

To keep ivory white it should be rubbed regularly with lemon juice.

Apples and other fruit should be put on dry shelves and looked over occasionally.

Medicine stains can often be removed with alcohol. Ether should not be used for very fine silk fabrics.

Sewing on Buttons
When sewing on buttons; they will not pull out readily with them, put a piece of an old hat above under the material to which the button is sewed. The cloth will never tear away if this is done.

When Roasting Meat
Meat is bound to be hard, however good it may be, if, when be ing roasted, it is not put for the first few minutes into an extra hot enough to seal the outside of the meat, and so prevent the juices from escaping.

Ink Stains
Ink stains on colored material are to be removed with a mixture of sour milk and fuller's-earth. Great care must be taken to wash out the milk after the stains have been removed.

Chocolate Mould
When a chocolate mould looks shrunken and has cracks across it, it is probably because the mixture is too stiff; it should be thin enough to flow immediately into the mould, not form ridges.

The Best Medicine She Ever Used

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Highly Praised by a Quebec Lady.

Mrs. David Logan, Thetford Mines West, Que., gives unsolicited praise to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the good they have done in her family. Mrs Logan says:—"I have been a user of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for many years, on occasion when I or my family have always found them a most reliable medicine. My husband, who was recovering from an attack of typhoid fever, and was in a very weak condition, took the pills, and through them gained health and strength. My daughter was in a run-down condition, and was troubled in discussing work. Again Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were resorted to and she was soon restored to health and vigor. Then my eldest boy had an operation performed for appendicitis, which left him in a weakened condition. Once more Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were tried, and he soon regained his health. So I can truly say that more than satisfactories has been obtained by the use of this medicine. The pills have done more good in my home than hundreds of dollars worth of more expensive medicines."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills assist digestion, correct the lassitude, the palpitation of the heart, shaky nerves and the pallor of the face and lips that are the results of thin, impure blood.

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DOCTORS' CHILDREN.
More daughters of doctors are found in successful authorship in the United States than in any other line of work. A recent investigation of the careers followed by doctors' children showed that they are prominent also in fine arts, in philanthropy and humanitarian work, in educational and library work, and in literature, in which last they exceed men in number. Many sons of doctors are, most naturally, sculptors. There are quite a number of musicians and singers whose fathers were physicians, including Frank and Walter Damrosch, Marguerite Sylva (Sodowsky), Pritzi Scheff, Kreisler and Sophie Braslau. Actors and dramatists are not so numerous, among them are Sol Smith Russell, Sothern, Augustus Thomas, Elsie De Wolfe and Rachael Crothers. The list shows very few inventors. Manufacturing and business show few sons of the medical profession, but finance has quite a long list, including 120 bank presidents and heads of twenty insurance companies.

SHAW ON "WASHING."
The other day I was reading a book of reminiscences, in which I found many speeches of modern times. One is by G. Bernard Shaw and is short enough to reproduce here. It was delivered at a meeting of the Coal Smoke Abatement Society in 1911 and created much merriment.

Gentlemen:—We might say that genius had nothing to do with removing smoke abatement. I cannot help that Smoke is a very common thing, and I know very little about it. Genius is a very uncommon thing and I know all about that. I am in that line my self. My presence here is due to Sir A. Wright, who a short time ago, delivered in London a scientific address, containing a great quantity of valuable matter of which the press took no notice whatever. When Dr. Wright a little later casually let fall in passing some words to the effect that he was rather sceptical about the value of washing one-self, he found himself famous. I have some sympathy with Dr. Wright. I have not really washed myself, except the obvious portions of my hands and face, since about the time when somebody else did it for me. It is quite true that I yield to a superstition that became enormously attractive in the nineteenth century, and that is to indulge in a cold tub. But that is not washing. I do it as a stimulant, and I think sometimes that I might have done better if I had taken to whisky. As to our faces, well look at them. There is only one help in the case, namely, a shave. I do not speak with absolute dogmatic authority as having shaved for the last time, and it wants washing as well already. Briefly, avoidance in any decent standard, then, is not a practice in this room who is not a claimant.

When the knob comes off the lid of a kettle, slip a screw through the hole with the head inside the lid, then screw a cork on the protruding end outside the lid. This makes a knob that will not get hot.

ENGLISH MOTOR OIL FAVORITE IN CANADA TOO
Castrol Now the Choice of Very Many Motorists

Have you tried Castrol Oil? You're probably seen it advertised and have been impressed with the nature of the advertising because of its remarkable claims. But they are not exaggerated.

Castrol, the leading English Motor Oil, was introduced in Canada only during the past year, and has enjoyed immense popularity in this country; it is being handled at the present time in Belleville by leading garages, including Rhoes.

It is an interesting fact that Castrol is recommended by over 200 manufacturers including Rolls-Royce. It was used by Major Segrave in his great mystery car at Daytona Beach in March of this year in establishing a new world's speed record; it is also used by Sir Alan Cobham, and other famous airmen.

Castrol is a perfect combination of finest mineral and castor oils. One oil lubricates, the other giving a full film of protection and perfect service long after other oils have lost their body. What ever the heat or stress, the film of Castrol in an engine cannot be broken down or separated.

It is a fact that Castrol costs a few cents more, but it gives you 2,000 miles to the filling instead of the usual 500 so in this way actually is less costly. Most efficient, it is the most economical lubricant for the motorist to buy.

Ask for Castrol at Rhoes garage next time you're having your oil changed.

WOLVERINE BORN IN DETROIT ZOO IS SNOW WHITE
Unusual Incident Marks Production of First Wolverine Cub

The birth of a snow-white wolverine in Michigan, the Wolverine State, marked the completion of the first Wolverine cub at the Ree Motor Car Company's factory in Lansing. By an unusual coincidence, the "little stranger" made his initial bow to the world on the same day that the first new Wolverine model came off the Ree production line.

The youngsters parents are captive wolverines brought to the Detroit Zoological Gardens by Richard E. Follett, who has obtained seven of the animals in Alaska to form what is said to be the only collection of captive wolverines in the entire country. Mr. Follett is an authority on the habits of wolverines, and is confident that they will thrive in captivity.

The full-grown animal displays strength and endurance in every line of its powerful body. In Alaska and the North Woods, where wolverines are most prevalent, the wolverine is the symbol of tireless travel at any pace, and is declared to be the strongest animal of its size known to man. To the trapper, the capture of a wolverine is a notable event, for this animal, more than any other displays an uncanny and almost human cunning to avoid the trap.

At present, these wolverines are to be kept near Royal Oak, Michigan, in the new quarters of the Detroit Zoological Gardens in Detroit, where, it is understood, all the animals on Belle Isle will later be housed. Watch for the Wolverine in Belleville!

AWNINGS ADD TO SUMMER PEACE IN YOUR HOME
Provide Beauty and Economy Amid Summer Heat

It has been said—and truly—that awnings complete the appearance of the home. The truth of the statement is readily apparent in anyone contrasting the appearance of a house devoid of awnings and one whose windows are fitted with harmoniously colored awnings.

From the standpoint of beauty, well chosen awnings add the ultimate touch in attractive exteriors. It is possible nowadays to secure practically any color or combination of colors desired in the awning.

And speaking of comfort, awnings keep your house cool. When summer heat rules there is nothing like coming from the withering heat of walks and sidewalks to a cool shadowed porch or pleasant interiors protected at every window with correctly designed awnings.

Awnings are an economy, too, for in keeping out the intense heat and glare of the sun they protect your rugs, draperies and other decorations from the destroying effects of continuous sunlight.

D. W. Brown at 10 Campbell street, is agent for J. J. Turner and Sons Limited a firm which turns out a complete line of durable fabrics and dependable colors.

D. W. Brown provides customers with with the best of service and is in a position to secure and fit any awning desired in short order. Selection may be made from sample books and the job will be done promptly and thoroughly by this firm.

Added comfort and attractiveness is possible for your home thru the use of Sunstop Porch Shades, made of basswood slats in green or tan. They are inexpensive, long wearing and will turn your verandah into a cool and comfortable room.

It won't be long before camping time and if its anything in canvas, D. W. Brown can supply you—tents are another specialty of theirs; they have as well, a few good used tents in stock to dispose of cheaply.

And don't forget that Brown's specialize in umbrella repairing of all kinds. They have a large stock of plain and fancy umbrellas at all times.

Remember—D. W. Brown is located on Campbell — the one-way street — at No. 10. .You can't miss it!

HYDRAULIC TYPE SHOCK ABSORBER GIVES COMFORT
Now Available to the Man of Medium Means

Ridine comfort in the modern motor car is determined by the proper combining of the multitude of road shocks. Flexible car springs and balloon tires have added greatly to the comfort of the present day automobile, but there is another important factor which has contributed greatly to solid comfort in the car—and that is the shock absorber.

A few short years ago none but the buyers of more expensive cars enjoyed the privilege of riding on shock absorbers of the recognized better class — the hydraulic absorber. But nowadays this art can be installed in your light car at a price within reach of the average owner.

Among the best known of these is the Lovejoy Shock Absorber for light cars. It's oil cushion absorbs every shock of the road. The recoil of the car creates an hydraulic pressure in the working cylinder of the absorber, which resists the quick jerky upthrow of the car and converts it into a gentle easy motion. Every part of the absorber is thoroughly lubricated and each joint is carefully sealed to keep out all dirt and retain the oil. It is a fact that no Lovejoy has already worn out; and the same perfect condition is afforded after 25,000 miles of service as when new.

Every set of Lovejoy Shock Absorbers is guaranteed for three years against any defect in operation and any defect in material or workmanship. The best agent R. E. Smith, of the City Battery Service at 001 Coleman street, is prepared to put a set on your car for thirty days. If they don't livrup to all that is claimed for them, this dealer will refund your money. Let R. E. Smith explain to you the merits of the Lovejoy Shock Absorbers and just how much it adds to genuine motoring comfort.

CLEANING FIRM SAVES CITIZENS A LOT OF MONEY
Sprague's New Low Rate Plan Pleases Increasing Patronage

Give the public the kind of work it wants at a price it can afford to pay and you won't have ot worry about getting business.

So says Ernie Sprague, well known proprietor of Sprague's Cleaners and Dyers, and the story of Sprague's business recently bears out the truth of this policy.

Previous to this year, cleaning prices locally were fairly uniform, but Sprague's, with a reputation for good cleaning and pressing dating back several years, decided that if the public would know them as to specials, they would reduce the cleaning rate to $1.00 for gents suits and coats, and for ladies suits, coats and dresses, fancy pleating excepted), take a smaller profit on the large volume of business, maintain a steady business and thereby benefit patrons by a substantial saving and help business as well.

It was an innovation—here's how it worked out—new business immediately resulted—in great volume—and has held during the possible chains of critics that work was being "skimped." Letters of appreciation of the class of work done from local residents as well as from many outside of the city bear witness to the satisfaction of every patron.

So much for that. That's "giving the public what it wants at a price it can afford to pay. The reduced rate offered is a fair rate and one with which Spragues are making a smaller profit, it is true, but the extra volume of business has made it satisfactory all round. So Sprague's patrons now clean and old alike have been backing up the firm and as long as they continue to do so, the new low rate will continue. Meanwhile business is good and everybody's satisfied.

A phone call to 232 will bring a driver promptly and let you see for yourself that Sprague is giving the kind of work you want at a price you can afford to pay.

GOVERNMENT'S REFORESTATION POLICY STEP IN RIGHT DIRECTION

Hon. William Finlayson Sponsor of Worthy Movement

By MERRILL DENISON

Ontario has at last grappled with her forest problems in a manner that satisfies even those who have long been urging the necessity of such a course. During the last session of the Legislature, a new Forestry Act was introduced by Hon. William Finlayson Minister of Lands and Forests, which considers Ontario's problems as having a three fold nature, and empowers the Government to undertake their solution with an incompetence that thoroughness. Even those who anticipated something of the new Minister's plans for forest rehabilitation had not dared hope that he would prove so deep in the heart of the matter as the new act indicates.

The Minister is given sweeping powers. He may set aside townships as Crown Forest Reserves; take town ships out of municipalities and close them to future settlement; move settlers from lands found to be unfitted for forestry purposes; close roads; re quire permits for entry to forest lands and establish a technical Forestry Board of research, experiment, recommendation and control.

For forestry purposes, Ontario, like Gaul, is divided into three parts: a southern section embracing the agricultural lands near the lakes; a middle section embracing the rocky lake country of the Laurentian Shield; a northern section embracing all of the gone.

Adequate Access To North Must Be Provided

Few people appreciate the small per centage of Ontario contained in the agricultural country of the south. Old Ontario, south of the French River, is but 15 percent. of the whole, and less than half this area is suitable for farming. The granite lake country which Mr. Finlayson's Forestry Act will provides the means for regenerating is over eight percent. of all Ontario. Within its boundaries the low fer gouged granite hills, between which province to the north of the French and Nipissing Rivers.

Different conditions exist in each. In the south the forests have vanished to give way to rich farm lands and there is no need to bring them back. In the center the forests have largely disappeared and they must be re-established. In the north much of the forest wealth remains and it must be jealously guarded."

The first and third present no new problems nor are new means of coping with the old ones advanced. As an inducement to wood lot planting, ten percent. of farm lands planted in trees will be exempt from taxes. In the North it is proposed to extend the fire prevention services; to institute more rigid cutting regulations, and to avoid the mistakes made in lumbering old Ontario.

But it is in the provision dealing with the central section, the Laurentian Shield, that the Act is most interesting. In reading its clauses one imagination is seized, and one senses in the author of them the same breadth of vision that has already made Ontario a place of splendid undertakings. The proposed scheme for the rehabilitation of the backwoods is as great in its conception as was the Hydro Electric Development or the T. & N. O. Railway. In certain ways it is typical. It is the first full recognition on the part of our government, that the Laurentian country of Ontario can serve any use but that of a wild land. It is to be exploited for its wealth as a mine is exploited, and like a mine abandoned when its wealth is northern section embracing all of the gone.

"Will Morning Never Come?"

"IF I could only sleep I believe my nerves would soon be all right, but night after night I lie awake and think about everything under the sun.

"What chance is there of getting better so long as this goes on?"

"None. Nerve force is being exhausted nearly twenty-four hours of every day, and there is no rest and sleep in which to replenish the waste."

"One thing sure I cannot stand it much longer, for I know that every week—yes, every day—finds me more restless and nervous, and less able to stand the strain of the day's work."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

60c a box all dealers or The Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto 2, Canada.

"I suppose the doctor could give me something to make me sleep, but I want that. I am weak enough now. I want something to build up strength rather than to tear down the tissues of the body."

"I believe I will try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I have often heard of it, but never thought I would need to use it. I was always so strong and healthy."

"This nervous trouble is a peculiar ailment. No one would believe what I suffer from sleeplessness and nervousness. I do not look like an invalid, but I certainly am one."

"One thing sure I shall not spend another sleepless night before I begin using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I expect it will take a little time to get my nerves right, but I shall get half a dozen boxes and give it a try out. Something seems to tell me that I shall not be disappointed."

has ever been known. At that time lost forest wealth was considered inexhaustible and illimitable. As with all natural resources in a new country whether they be soil or trees, gold or fish, silver or human beings, this wealth was mined. A primitive industry was allowed to exploit it ruthlessly with no thought of the future. With only an occasional voice raised in protest we allowed the heritage of the pine lands to be turned into a man-made wilderness, when with an ounce of intelligent fore-sight and a minimum of sane regulation the forests of the backcountry might have been a source of wealth in perpetuity. It is pointless to cry over spilt milk or to point out these old errors, and we have the consolation for throwing away a magnificent heritage so inconsiderately that every people in the world has done the same thing. It seems to be an economic law that the forests can only be guarded when the last tree is fallen and the last fire has roared through the slash.

Along with the economic disaster wrought by the lumbering methods went a social disaster. The early settlers were lost into the country they could drive for days through a natural cathedral whose columns were the living trunks of pines. Underfoot the ground was covered with the accumulated vegetable debris of centuries. There was little chance of telling what the land was like. They went into the lake counties—its stings, Prontenac, Lennox and Addington, Victoria, Peterborough, Ontario, Parry Sound, Muskoka and Renfrew—and took up free grants of land along the colonization roads.

On their heels came the lumbermen, and while the industry flourished it provided a ready market for the products of the backwoods farms and a place where the settler could sell his labor. The land was very rich for the first few years of cultivation. Great crops were raised on farms where now there are only stumps and grass, and where each spring a new crop of glacial rounded boulders creeps up like mushrooms with the thawing of the ground.

Northland a Pleasure-Seeker's Paradise

Twenty to thirty years saw the coming and going of the lumber operations on any water shed. In 1875 120 million feet were cut on the Trent Watershed; by 1910 all major operations had been abandoned. The timber was slaughtered. It was a common thing to take a twenty foot log out of an eighty foot tree and leave the rest rotting on the ground. The numerous lakes and rivers made the marketing of pine a simple matter. Some of the extensive capital improvements, such as roads, railways, efficient schools, that actually drop a country were necessary to the lumber ing industry. It was there one day and gone the next. Nothing permanent remained in its wake but wreckage. Stumps, rotting dams and log chutes, moss grown tote roads, haggard farms, and a vast timber box waiting for the spark. Fire finished what the axe had left. They have been loyal and ruthless allies. There are many sections of country where the very soil has been burned from them.

With the withdrawal of the lumber operators the settlers lost their markets, and lost their means of winter employment. The best of them on their own initiative got out, the poorer types remained. These poor souls struggled on with scrawny farms of rock, muskeg, swamp and glacial drift, trying to eke out an existence on land that would not provide decent scratching for a self respecting hen. Those occasional farms which were good were too far away from markets to be of great worth.

Left to shift for themselves, twenty to thirty miles from a railroad, forgotten by the province except when a coming election made a road grant advisable, ignored by the prosperous sections of the country, is it any wonder that retrogression set in?

The settlers living in the backcountry are no more responsible for the dilemma, the inbreeding, the petty viciousness, the economic destitution that exists here than you or I are for the spots on the sun. The conditions which are becoming fairly widely known are the direct result of the demolition of the pine, and settlement on lands so unfitted for agriculture that no matter what labor may be applied to them the resultant crops will not support human life decently. The prospect and hope of reward in the form of economic improvement is an absolute essential if the human animal is not to lose all social standards and revert to a condition where he is content to satisfy his animal appetites alone.

The back country has seemed a baleful ground where man and nature have been fighting a warfare to the death, and where nature, who provided such a magnificent store of accumulated wealth in her pines, is as implacable an enemy as she was prepared to be a generous friend.

She fights every attempt to turn her pine lands into farms. She throws continually into the struggle her illimitable reserves of growth. The encroaching populars creep under the rail fences, out from the fringes of the rock piles, from the centers of the old roads, ever fighting to win again the backcountry for the trees.

Forests Ruthlessly Sacrificed For Commercialism

Mr. Finlayson's Forestry Act comes as a proclamation of a truce in this warfare. It is the Government's statement that it shall cease, and that in future man will work with nature to further her purposes instead of fighting her for rewards she will never give.

Such is the country the Minister of Lands and Forests proposes to rehabilitate. Discussed in agricultural terms it is an economic wilderness; as a government forest preserve it has a future half a century hence, and as a provincial park an immediate future provided certain things are done which I propose to discuss later.

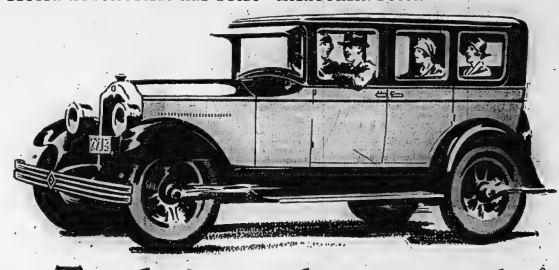

I will first briefly outline the provisions of the Act for taking hold of the Laurentian Shield. The most significant feature is the recognition of an obligation to the settlers on barren farm lands they ought never to have been permitted to take up. These people will be moved at the Government's expense, together with their furniture and implements, their stock and anything they wish to take with them, to the fertile clay belt of Northern Ontario. They will be given title there in exchange for their old farms and they will be assisted in various ways to establish themselves. The saving to the Government in school grants and road up-keep will in many cases pay the cost of the movement in many townships in a single year.

The townships thus vocated will be closed to further settlement, and will be incorporated in the Crown Forest Reserves. The important work of fire prevention which is fundamental to any scheme of managed forests is already well under way. A splendid system of towers connected by telephone wires and manned by an able personnel has been developed in the last four years and has been the means of reducing the fire losses in old Ontario to a minimum.

But to consider the Laurentian boun try of Ontario as a forest area alone would be to cast aside its greatest potentialities: Those who know the country from the Georgian Bay to the Ottawa know that it has possibilities unsurpassed in the world for development as a play ground area. Few who have ever come in contact with the simple kind of lakes and rugged hills have failed to feel its spell. In Canadian lore have known it as a place of happy holidays during the summers of their growing years, one finds a fierce love of one part of Can ada too rarely found among this new people.

GOVERNMENT'S REFORESTATION POLICY STEP IN RIGHT DIRECTION

The Muskoka Lakes, the Georgian Bay, Lake of Bays, Algonquin Park, the Kawartha and Rideau Lakes, the Frontenac Highlands are districts already accustomed to State Highways. These known districts are but a small part of the whole. Throughout the backcountry are virtually hundreds of little known lakes each with some charm that is its alone.

Within a twenty-four hour rail journey of this area are 60 million of a most prodigious race of travellers. They are as restless as ants and they roam like bees. It is certain that hundreds of thousands of these people will come to Ontario, but it will not be the cities that will draw them back nor the beauties of the agricultural districts. The Laurentian country has the attractions to make it the permanent playground for large numbers of these people, but it is essential that these attractions be protected, preserved and enhanced. The Forestry Act is a most important step in this direction, and much will be accomplished because of it, but it is only the first step. It marks a change in the point of view toward the waste lands of Ontario, but a still more comprehensive point of view is needed.

Veritable Battle Is Being Fought

It is doubtful if the timber industry of old Ontario can ever again compete successfully with that of the Pacific Coast. How then can we justify the expenditure of considerable sums of money in the regeneration of a forest for timber purposes?

Timber, it seems to me, must from now on be regarded as a by-product. The time has come to realize that a tree may be of more value to Ontario as scenery than it can ever be as lumber; just as a six pound black bass caught on a six ounce rod if of more value than a ton of commercial fish.

This is the point of view which must be accepted if Ontario is to realize to the fullest the potential wealth of the Laurentian Shield. Instead of looking upon the Planning Board and the Forestry Act as being on account of timber which will bring in dollars returns for seventy five to a hundred years, let us consider the monies as an investment in scenery and in beauty—two immediately saleable commodities.

With Algonquin Park to the north, the Eastern Forest Reserves to the east, and a possible provincial park on the shores of Georgian Bay, and with the steady acquisition of townships from which the settlers have been removed, it is easy to imagine in the course of a decade a great provincial park embracing eighty percent. of all Ontario with attractions for the tourist which should make it one of the most valuable assets of the province.

Pacific Coast Now Home of Lumber Industry

With the dedication of the country may prove practical to withdraw the to playground purposes, it would seem sensible to co-ordinate these different functions, and in time to devise a more rational arrangement of political boundaries. Just as townships will be withdrawn from municipalities, it

At the present time the back country is the concern of various Departments. Its roads are under four different bodies; The Highways Department, Colonization Roads Branch of Lands and Forests; Counties and the Municipalities. Fish and game are under the Department of Mines. The Hydro Electric Commission with no thought of fish, land or scenic values, controls a large number of lakes and streams. There is a superintendent of Algonquin Park. The Forestry Department and Game and Fisheries maintain separate field services of wardens and inspectors. The resorts of the district are partly the concern of the Board of License Commissioners and the Public Health Department.

An additional point of interest is in the political divisions of the back country. The lake counties thrust long fingers into the north, and in many cases these counties are divided by rocky hills and bad roads into two parts which have no economic relation to one another. Persons living north of the Toronto-Peterboro-Montreal line of the C.P.R., whether on Georgian Bay or in Renfrew, share a greater community of interests than with farmers a few miles south of them.

The various departments and governing bodies mentioned work with insufficient funds and often with little apparent appreciation of what each other is doing, possibly because they have no common purpose.

sistent and vigorous policy of fish propagation which might embrace a scheme whereby certain lakes in each district would be allowed to lie fallow for three or four years. Time may prove the value of building Provincial golf links throughout the area. The present body of Foresters can serve as the nucleus of a service with high ideals and with a strong imaginative appeal. Serving as guides, counsellors and friends, as guardians of the woods, the fish and game, as police, and by dramatizing the service through a characteristic uniform; by the deliberate assumption of the old traditions of the Canadian woodsmen and through the personal character of the men, there is every prospect of such an organization becoming as famous in time as the R.N.W.F.

Above all the country must be made accessible. Now the good roads system furnishes excellent exits from the province. Because of the distribution of population this has been unavoidable, but the time has arrived to provide some means of staying in the province. If you look at most road maps of Ontario you will find the most beautiful parts of the province a field of unrelieved white. Running north from the transprovincial highway are short roads that lose themselves in the bush. The tourist entering this country has no chance of coming back "another way." One of the first demands in planning a tour is that new country be visited on the entire journey. This will only be possible in Ontario after more diagonal and lateral roads are established.

The reserve side of the problem of developing the tourist industry for tourist purposes is publicity. There are now four or five different publicity departments, each of them very timorous when the suggestion of spending more than a few hundred dollars is mentioned. Co-ordination is needed here too, and the same commission which would manages a greater provincial park, might well look after its publicity as well.

Tourist revenues never show in trade statistics, and yet the tourist business is destined to become one of the great export industries. It has been estimated that within ten years the tourist business will bring 200 million dollars annually into Ontario. The value of timber for the last five years, irrespective of pulp and paper, has been less than 15 millions.

In considering the money spent on reforestration, is it much wiser to regard as spent in the interests of an industry with an annual turn-over of 200 millions, than one with $5,000,000?

POLICE HOLD DRIVER AFTER SMASH ON DRUNK CHARGE

Magistrate Mikel Gives Gilbert Seven Days In Jail — War Memorial Unveiled In Stirling

SEVEN DAYS IN JAIL METED OUT TO WM. GILBERT

Prisoner Withdrew Plea For Suspended Sentence This Morning

MUST PAY COSTS

Dismissed Charge of Taking Car But Crown Attorney Appeals

William Gilbert Jr., will go to jail for a period of 7 days following his plea of guilty upon a charge of driving a car while under the influence of liquor. Sentence was imposed by Magistrate Mikel this morning and the accused nonchalantly accepted his fate without any sign of disappointment. He will commence his short term at once. Gilbert had applied for a suspended sentence but withdrew his application a few days ago. Should he have been given a suspended sentence he would have been obliged to attend Church regularly every Sunday and also denied the privilege of driving a car and apparently this course did not appeal to him and through his Counsel Gilbert withdrew his appeal and insisted accepted the usual penalty of 7 days. Undoubtedly his appeal for a suspended sentence would have been granted as Magistrate Mikel intimated this morning that he was seriously considering the application. The costs of $19.50 must be paid by the accused.

The charge of taking a car without the owner's consent was dismissed and Crown Attorney Donnan gave notice of appeal upon the announcement.

Magistrate Mikel stated in summing up the evidence that Gilbert had been in the habit of using Harry Keitcheson's car and that had never been revoked and under the circumstances he could not find Gilbert guilty. "Mr. Ketcheson", he said, "did never intimated that the accused should not use the car.

It will be remembered that Gilbert took Ketcheson's car while intoxicated and was apprehended by Dept. of Detectives Graham after a merry chase through the city streets.

The case has been enlarged several times and was to have been finally settled on Saturday but Mr. Payne was absent from the city.

CRASHED INTO A GASOLINE PUMP

Started Blaze Which Destroyed Car and Did Much Damage

When Mrs. Harvey Anderson of East Moira Street was driving east on Henry Street Sunday afternoon, she struck the rear of Mr. D. O. Webster's car which was travelling south on Coleman Street, and careening across Coleman Street mounted the curb and crashed into a gasoline pump in front of the Bercier Station of Chas. H. Brooks, breaking it off at its base and setting fire to the contents. In a flash the car was enveloped in flames. Mrs. Anderson and her two children barely escaping serious injury, but the car was totally destroyed.

There was about ten gallons of gas in the visible part of the pump which spread quickly, the resulting fire doing approximately $1000. damage to the building and $200 to the stock of supplies and electrical fixtures of which Mr. Brooks carries a complete line. He was sitting in my office when the car came past my door at a fast rate of speed and the next minute the whole place was in flames," said Mr. Brooks.

The fire department was called, and responding quickly to the call, soon had the fire under control.

The impact which must have been terific as gasoline pumps are quite strongly reinforced and have a two inch steel pipe inside them, and the car driven by Mrs. Anderson cut right through the pipe. It was fortunate that nobody was seriously burnt as gasoline fire spreads quickly.

DUKE AND DUCHESS GOING BACK HOME

Perth, West Australia, May 23 — The Duke and Duchess of York have completed their Australian tour, departing on the cruiser Renown this morning. In a farewell message the Duke expressed gratitude for the wonderful welcome and kindness accorded them.

The Renown will call at Suez, Malta and Gibraltar and is due at Portsmouth, England, on June 27.

A large number of officers and men from Marmora, Trenton, Belleville, Frankford and other centres was present. The veterans of Belleville turned out for the ceremony in a body and the Cadet Corps of the village of Stirling were also present. The parade was in charge of Major Bryson Donnan, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. After the ceremony was completed refreshments were provided by the Women's Institute.

WHOLE DISTRICT IS LOOKING FOR FARMER

Perth, Ont., May 23.—Residents of the township of Drummond have been deeply stirred by the disappearance of George Widenmaier, aged 21 years, a farmer of the district, who was last seen on Friday afternoon between one and two p.m. No effort was made to find him until after he had failed to return for supper. The whole neighbourhood was then aroused to start search for the missing farmer.

ON LAST LAP

Timpson, Tex., May 23.—Clement Francesco DePinedo, Italian flier, hopped off for Hacta, Azores, on the first leg of his round trip from Rome, at 4.28 a.m. today (1.58 Eastern Standard Time).

SUMMER CAME ON SUNDAY AND FURNACES ARE OUT

With the mercury at the Belleville and then to awaken yesterday morning official thermometer yesterday registering at 70 was the hottest day that has so far been felt this year. During Saturday night the temperature rose eleven points, and at two o'clock today it was again almost as high as that of yesterday, the thermometer pointing at seventy-seven.

The feature of the sudden advent of yesterday's heat was that it came so unexpectedly. In the majority of Belleville homes the furnaces were stoked up on Saturday night to make the house comfortable for winter in respect and feel the "heavy" heat which was prevalent.

The sudden change in the atmosphere gave a notable impetus to the out-of-door movements and the bathing, water-edges and woods were sought as a place where people might "cool off". In the evening the highways were again thick with automobiles, loaded with people trying to get a breath of fresh air. However, around midnight a relief came of the way of a breeze and to-day with the downpour of rain, comfortable weather is again enjoyed.

STEP-MOTHER IS FREED OF ABUSE CHARGE ON CHILD

Crown Attorney Donnan Appeals—Children With Grandparents

Doctor Testifies To Finding Welts On Little Girl's Back

Mrs. Mary Gauthier was discharged by Magistrate Mikel this morning upon a charge of assaulting and doing bodily harm to her step-child Beatrice Gauthier. It was alleged that on the 12th day of May the little girl was today beaten with a broom stick and as a result carried bruises and welts on her back. The little tot went to the home of her grandfather, Adolphus Burgoyne, Pinnacle St., along with her little brother where they have been remained.

The children were placed in the care of Inspectors T. D. Barton and were apprehended under the Children Protection Act and by consent Mr. Ruston left them in the care of the Burgoynes.

The Gauthier's through their Counsel, Mr. Payne agreed to consider terms with the Burgoyne's whereby him the care of the children but upon the conclusion of the Court it was decided that there would be a fight for their custody. Mr. Payne did not take kindly to the attitude of Mr. and Mrs. Burgoyne in the matter.

Mrs. Gauthier pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Dr. Emma Connor who was the first witness said that "Betty" Gauthier was brought to her office on the 12th of May and on examination revealed that the girl was suffering from bruises on the back and on abrasion on the left shoulder which appeared to be welts made by the stroke of a stick.

Little "Betty" Gauthier answered Mr. Donnan's questions in a most straightforward manner stating that her stepmother had whipped her severely because she had been sent on an errand and instead of returning directly to her home went to her grandfather's home. She said her father had whipped her on previous occasions.

Mr. Donnan proposed to exhibit the scars on the little girl's back but Mr. Payne took objection.

"Betty" said that her step-mother had been beaten at the same time for going to Mr. Burgoyne's home.

Mrs. Gauthier's Testimony

Mrs. Gauthier denied the charge and said that she struck the girl with her hand but not with a broom stick. She admitted that she

DEADLOCKED

For a question which is not really vital the matter of which direction the new collegiate building shall face is causing a lot of trouble. It was originally finally decided that it should front on John Street. A later meeting gave a second final decision that Church Street should be favored with the main entrance. On Friday last the trustees wrestled with this question until midnight without coming to any conclusion and the argument was laid over for a week when it is to be hoped that it will be finished.

The points urged by the trustees of the two frontages are about even in value. Church Street is, of course, closer down town and if the front of the building is on that street it will be directly opposite the county buildings. The argument in favor of John Street is chiefly that the present plans are drawn in that way and it will probably cost something to change them. Besides the people who live and own property on Queen and adjoining streets think that it would look better if faced that way. To the students it is not going to matter a whole lot so it is to be sincerely hoped that the trustees will reach a third final decision on Friday night next and get on with the work.

HAPPINESS IN WORK

"If you want anything done well do it yourself" is a workable axiom, but it is not infallible. If it were without exceptions our great industrial and commercial enterprises would never have developed. There are intelligent workers but they are surely not in the majority.

Careless and unfinished work is the hardest kind whether for the wage earner, salaried man, tradesman or manufacturer. When you fall down on the job you lose that satisfaction which is part of the wage of the good workman and you face the possibility of losing a job, a profit, a contract, a customer or a business.

Elbert Hubbard said that we must "get happiness out of our work or never know what happiness is." The easiest way of getting happiness out of work is by doing good work.

Public commiseration is to blame for much inefficiency among employees of others. People will complain to a store keeper about unsatisfactory goods but they will not report inattention or discourtesies on the part of clerks because they fear the clerk might lose his or her position. The clerk, the public and and the store owner all suffer. In the factory the foreman is responsible for the work of those under him, just as the manufacturer is responsible for the quality of his products Each has the advantage of this additional urge to do good work.

Everybody would profit if everybody would strive rather to do better work than to do less work.

TEMPTATION GONE

The surprisingly weak manner which has marked the opening sale of permits to buy liquor from Government shops seems to illustrate a curious thing in human nature. It is the rather strange fact, attested to by all experience, that once a thing has reasonably satisfied the desire on the part of human beings to get it begins to wane. If, six months or a year ago, it became known that somewhere in Ottawa one could get a card that would permit absolute evasion of the O.T.A. imagine the rush that would have followed! Now, however, when all that is necessary to purchase liquor is that one should walk across the street and pay $2.00 for a permit, nobody seems much interested. All the adventure, all the joy that people appear to take out of doing something exceptional is gone. Buying liquor has been made commonplace.

This is a trait in human nature with which reformers should reckon. Listening to some orators during the course of the last provincial election one would imagine that the opening of Government shops would be marked by an orgy of "celebrations," by a loosing of the dykes of restraint that would flood Ontario with whiskey. But what really seems to be about to happen is that the public is going to accept the new order with apathy and dignity.

The Journal has always believed that the only real cure for intemperance was education. Teach people that there is something weak and undignified and unworthy about intemperance and, if the teaching is persistent enough, it is bound to make an impression. Tell them by legislation that they are not fit to master their appetites, that they are too weak to look after themselves, and that, therefore, they must practice sobriety in chains—and they will rebel. That was the fundamental weakness of the O.T.A

LONG FEUD
By Louis Untermeyre

Where, without bloodshed, can there be
A more relentless enmity
Than the long feud fought silently.
Between man and the growing grass!
Man's the aggressor, for he has
Weapons to humble and harass

The impudent spears that charge upon
His sacred primacy of lawn.
He mows them down, and they are gone

Only to lie in wait, although
He builds above and digs below,
Where never a root would dare to go.

His are the triumphs till the day
There's no more grass to cut away.
And, weary of labor, weary of play,
Having exhausted every whim,
He stretches out each conquering limb
And then the small grass covers him.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

The statement that Western Ontario will require a force of 45,000 men to help harvest the tobacco crop this fall reads like some of the appeals which are annually sent out for harvest workers for Western Canada. If this number is required for Western Ontario, where are the prairie provinces to secure their harvesters this year?—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Arthur Ponsonby, the English Labor politician, is a pacifist about whom partisan there can be no doubt. He moved in parliament that the British air service be abolished, leaving British towns unprotected against air raids from the continent. Even peace does not justify folly.—Hamilton Herald.

Four Toronto motorists have been sent to jail for ten days for driving while intoxicated. The punishment is much too light. A drunken driver is a potential killer, and the example made of him should be sufficient to encourage sobriety in others.—Montreal Gazette.

TODAY'S MARKET

New York, May 23.—Speculation for the advance gained momentum in today's stock market when a heavy buying movement developed on behalf of the so called "merger rails". But the rally was slowed by the offer made when the call money rate was marked up from 4 to 4 1-2 per cent.

Early gains ran from one to seven points. The Pennsylvania railroad common moved up to 62 3-8 the highest price since 1913 in large volume. More than a score of other issues broke through the new peak prices since 1925, or longer.

Toronto, May 22. Livestock. Receipts 2,775. Trade strong. Heavy steers sold here 8.50 to 9.25. Butcher steers good to choice 8.50 to 9.40. Butcher cows medium 5.50 to 6.50. Butcher cows good to choice 9.50 to 11.50. Bulls select 10.50 to 11. Good cow lambs 14 to 14.50.

Winnipeg, May 23.—Wheat prices on the Winnipeg grain exchange today, on new peak levels today in one of the wildest early morning markets of many months. A rise primarily spurred by the May option sky rocketed to 1.56 1-8, gain of 2 3-4 cents from the close on Saturday. In the hectic drive to fill orders, traders also forced October to 1.48 1-2, gain of 2 3-4 cents higher while the other future scored substantial gains. It was primarily speculative market with the heavy rainfall over the prairie provinces providing the bull sentiment. All the course grains were carried higher in sympathy with wheat.

WHEN WIFE DIGS UP HALF THE EXPENSES

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Ernestine is a modern girl. She rolls her stockings, mingles her hair and earns her own living.

"If there is one thing that makes me sick," says ernestine, "it's a parasite. I made up my mind I'd never be that, no matter what happened but I am beginning to wonder—well, I hate to say it—but I am beginning to wonder if my husband is as particular about being independent as I am!"

To go on with Ernestine's story: Ernestine has been working for seven years, the first four as a stenographer the last three, as private secretary. Most of the time she shared an apartment with another girl. They divided the expense, and took turns getting dinner and cleaning house. Ernestine did her own washing and her friend did likewise. They lived in comfort and saved money.

Then Ernestine fell in love with her employer's bookkeeper, Lorrie.

"He was getting $25 a month more than I, and showing he had fairly extravagant habits I wasn't willing to give up my position and try to make him support me on $150 a month. I know that two can't live as cheaply as one.

"But I was willing to keep on working, pay my share of our expenses and wait for the day when he would realize his ambition to become a certified public accountant.' Anyway, I liked the idea of being independent, as I suppose any modern girl that has ever earned her own living does.

"We each pay $75 into the common fund on the first of the month, and that leaves him with $75 over and me with $50, on which to dress, pay personal expenses and save. When we go out we go fifty-fifty.

"Now, I'm not kicking about that. What I'm kicking about is that after paying half the expenses, I am expected to do ALL the work, and listen to his complaints about marriage robbing a man of independence.

"I do my shopping on my way home from work, get dinner, wash the dishes, clean the apartment and am handed his socks and shirts to wash with the explanation that his mother always washed them for him when he lived at home and he 'never paid any $75 board, either.'

"Worse than that, he finds it irksome to have to report to me whether or not he is coming home to dinner. He says before he was married he could go and come as he liked, no questions asked, and plenty of independence. Once or twice I have had to ask him for more money to cover his share of extra entertaining we did at home and he complains he hasn't a cent left for himself.

"I am getting sick of washing all Sunday morning and scrubbing my life away around a kitchen. I never found any share of the common fund on the first of the month, and that leaves him with $75 over and me with $50, on which to dress, pay personal expenses and save. When we go out we go fifty-fifty.

"Now, I'm not kicking about that. What I'm kicking about is that after paying half the expenses, I am expected to do ALL the work, and listen to his complaints about marriage robbing a man of independence.

"I do my shopping on my way home from work, get dinner, wash the dishes, clean the apartment and am handed his socks and shirts to wash with the explanation that his mother always washed them for him when he lived at home and he 'never

LIZZIE: It would be quite proper to invite the boy to escort you to the party.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens and have many friends. But there is a boy whom I love and I know he loves me. My mother won't let me go to places with him and she doesn't want him to come to see me.

Please give me your advice.

LONESOME

LONESOME: There must be a reason for your mother's decision, and it is up to you to learn what that reason is. Perhaps your mother has learned something to the young man's discredit. It may not be true, and in this case you can convince her that he is worthy of your friendship. Your mother has only your interest at heart by that, and she wouldn't willingly stand between you and a good friend. So find out where the trouble lies and try to rectify it.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

The surroundings were very gratifying. The agency handled one of the most expensive makes of cars, and the showrooms, with their overhanging balcony on which Sybil walked, were luxuriously furnished. The salesmen were modelled after the well-dressed man should wear." There were fresh flowers in tall wicker stands and Oriental rugs on the polished floors. The telephone operator, whose switchboard was just Sybil's desk, dare-a black frock smart enough for an after noon function in the most exclusive circles of Sybil's home town society.

"You'll have to cut out the bloused-and-skirt, even if you are only a 'sale' the other girl told her, looking with disfavor on Sybil's white silk blouse. "It ain't done any more in the business world. Got any dough? Good. I'll put you next to a swell little shop on Fourteenth Street."

When Sybil went home that night to the boarding-house where she had rented a small, back room, she carried under her arm a pasteboard box containing the one practical frock she ever had owned. It was a soft black flannelette, severely plain, with deft touches of silver at the collar, belt, and tiny pocket, and just a suspicion of Chinese red to bring out the shadowiness of her hair the ivory of her skin and the scarlet of her mouth.

She tried it on after dinner before the mirror on her dresser and was entranced with her own gentleness.

"Well, at least, I look in keeping with the job," she said, as she smiled back at her her own reflection.

She had made up her mind that she was going to turn that temporary position into a permanent one.

Before she went to bed that night, she wrote a long letter to her mother. Among other things, she said:

"You see, dearest, that you can trust me, after all. I'm perfectly safe and settled in very nice surroundings. There is no harm done—except to my reputation, and I never had any, anyway, back home. I fell into a job with a good salary, and I'll send you money every week. If I can manage to work up into something even better I want you to stop slaving at Madame Irene's, but you must promise not to let Dads have any of the money, because he'll simply fritter it away."

Mary Hues replied promptly:

"I thank Heaven on my five knees that you have gone through the fire safely. Looking back, I think I must have been mad to let you go. But then, my dear child, you have your own father's assurance it has always been too much for me. I am likewise proud of you, and yours also. However, things have turned out all right. Mr. Winslow has kept very quiet, and there is never a shred of evidence that you and Arthur went to New York on the same train. People gossip, of course, because he was paying you attention, but they've always been out each other, and I suppose they always will. You, Sybil, seem to be made for luck!"

Sybil's red lips curled as she read the last sentence, but, a fortnight later she had a fresh example of her misjudging good fortune.

CHAPTER 25

The Fairy Godmother

Sybil, looking very smart and pretty in her new frock, came down to her boarding-house one autumn evening to find a visitor awaiting her in the dingy parlor.

It proved to be Cousin Agatha, most decidedly expensive than ever, a Tiete was a slightly rakish air about her, a blocking look in her glittering eye. After she had greeted her hostess and young cousin, the latter sat down rather nervously.

"I won't be staying long, my dear," announced.

"All right, Sybil, to surprise, "Well!"

"You have for a pretty young woman," replied Cousin Agatha briefly. "It's lucky I found you so soon—before you were ruined by the abominable environment."

"But I really like it," protested Sybil. "And by the way, you haven't told me how you happen to be here."

"Got back from Europe two weeks ago," explained Cousin Agatha. "Been there ever since I saw you last. That's how I happened to miss hearing about Brady and the ink-pot. Ha! Ha! That's the richest story I ever listened to.

Sybil grunted, in spite of herself.

"He did feel rather ridiculous, with the ink dripping down his waistcoat," she admitted.

"I'll bet he did," agreed Cousin Agatha with relish. "I used to know him when I was a girl. Pompous, conceited old fool! I'd give a thousand dollars to have seen him when you finished with him. I didn't know you had such spirit, Fanny Mary Hues' daughter with that much spirit."

"But you haven't told me yet how you happened to find me," Sybil reminded her.

Cousin Agatha shrugged.

"Oh, I went back to the old town after I returned from Europe, just for a look around and mostly to see you. You interested me a lot when I was there last winter. I felt there was actually something to you, and I liked your ideas about men. I haven't a scrap of use for the creatures, you know, but, when a woman has a face as plain as mine, she can't do much harm to the sex. But you—well, I wanted to see if you had the nerve to carry out your program."

"And you heard—"

Cousin Agatha's chuckle cut across Sybil's question.

"Your mother told me about young Winslow, and, somehow, that story about Dan Brady and the ink-pot got out. The girls in the outer office put two and two together. I'll tell you Brady was lying low, all right."

Cousin Agatha rocked with amusement. "And that old fraud of a butler of yours was taking around in his usual melodramatic way about being disgraced by the conduct of his daughter, the child of his flesh and blood. I wanted to slap him, for he did prove me a good laugh and I had the first chance to do it. Oh, him what I really thought of him."

"So mother told you where I was?" Cousin Agatha nodded.

"She was tearful and apologetic, as usual, and blamed herself for everything. Poor Mary Hues, she can't help it. If Fred Hues had had a wife who knew how to handle him, he never would have left with her piercing gray eyes dwelling appreciatively on Sybil, "there'd never have been any trouble or scandal in the first place."

Sybil nodded.

"And what about young Winslow?" demanded Cousin Agatha.

Sybil told her about the trip, the arrival at the hotel, her abrupt farewell to Arthur.

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Paris women are wearing new neck laces of blocks of crystal, set alternately with bars of amethysts, and fastened with a clasp of old silver.

Women barristers, practising at the Parliamentary Bar, are now permitted to lunch without the escort of a member in the Strangers dining room at Britain's House of Commons.

New fabrics this spring in Paris are wool voile and medoza silk, the latter being as bright as taffetas, and as supple as crepe de chine, and the shot variety is the most popular.

A bride's trousseau selected in Paris, now being featured at a Fifth Avenue shop, includes a gown and veil by Callot Soeurs, a beige afternoon frock, a lace dinner gown, an ensemble gown, a flowered chiffon frock by Callot and a Vionnet evening cape.

OPERATION LEFT HER VERY WEAK

Letter Tells of Wonderful Relief After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Castleton-on-Hudson.—"After a hysterical operation and a three weeks' stay in a hospital I returned home so weak that I was unable to move a chair. For four months I was almost frantic with pains and suffering until I thought sure there was no help for me. I lived in severe pain in my left side and suffered agony every month. One day when I was not able to get up my mother begged me to try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of Vegetable Compound at once and I took it. I started a second bottle and to my surprise and joy the pain in my side left me completely and I am able to do all my work without help. I am a farmer's wife, so you see I can't be idle long. In all, I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, five bottles of the Compound Tablets, two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, and have also used the Sanative Wash."—Mrs. L. LAFRENIERE, Box 102, Castleton, Ontario.

BELLEVILLE WILL SEND STRONG TEAM INTO ACTION TOMORROW

Scott, Harper and Derry All Granted Permission To Play

With good weather promised for tomorrow, the opening ball game should draw a great crowd. The Deloro Club is coming to town with a bang-up aggregation and will give the Nationals a battle royal.

The local camp was in jubilant mood today following the glorious news that 'Punch' Derry and Scott, of the Kingston Ponies, and Harper, late of Aitken cups, of Toronto, have all been granted permission to play and will be seen in action in the opening game tomorrow. This trio should give the railroaders just the punch that is needed to complete the roster.

This means that Derry will likely be started on the mound and the old boy has still plenty of cunning yet. When he pitched for Kingston Ponies and the Cobourg team he was regarded as one of the best in the district. Fans are requested to give Derry a hand should he be given the assignment tomorrow.

Scott is a smart outfielder and is the man needed in the outer garden. He will go into right with Ross and Hagerman in the other two positions. This hoped shapes up as the cleverest set of fielders to represent Belleville in many years.

The inner works is somewhat of a problem but Manager "Peeky" Mills has brother Harry for first base, Vern Weir at third with Flagley, Harper, Post and Latchford to fill the other two positions. Of course Manager Mills himself will take care of Derry's slants and the old boy with his smart baseball head is the man in the right position.

Manager Elliott of the Deloro Club will likely send Bill Leal to the mound although Ralph who is a south paw, would cause a lot of trouble if he goes into the box.

Jack Hughes will go to first, Quinn at second, Ron Jack at short-stop with Billy Regan at third, which constitutes a fast quartette.

Bordreau has arrived back from parts unknown and will go into centre field with Brown in left.

Jimmie Quinn will go behind the bat and he is touted as one of the best Intermediate receivers in the Province.

The Nationals hope to step off on the right foot and a big delegation of fans will help a lot.

The opening ceremonies are being arranged and the 15th A.L.U. Band will be in attendance.

Ken Colling and Walter Gerow will be in charge and send the boat on their way promptly at 3 p.m.

REFUGEES OF FLOOD ABANDON HOMESTEADS

New Orleans, May 21.—Refugees continue to pour out of Point Coupee Parish as a result of the warning issued by John M. Parker, State Relief Director. A crevasse in the levee in Point Coupee would inundate about 2,000,000 acres, the rest of the "Great Basin" section and affect about 100,000 persons. The danger zone is from 150 to 160 miles above New Orleans on the West side of the Mississippi river.

Captain Alfred E. Light of Kingston, lighthouse of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, who is one of Canada's most famous lighthouses. Captain Light has been in the military service for 50 years, and for 27 years has been a lighthouse. He spent many years in Africa and was a trumpeter for Roberts.

The latest addition to the chain of Canadian Pacific hotels, the Hotel Regina (above), will be officially opened on May 24 by E. W. Beatty, president of the C.P.R. The new hotel is a modern ten-storey building, faced with Tyndal stone quarried in Western Canada.

MONTROSE COMPLETES SECOND ROUND TRIP

Quebec, May 23.—The first liner of the season completed her second trip of the St. Lawrence this morning when the Canadian Pacific Montrose docked from Liverpool with a heavy list of passengers, both returning Canadians and new settlers. The first Thomas Cook party of newcomers and settlers to land in Canada from a Canadian Pacific Steamer this year stepped off the Montrose this morning en route to the west from Liverpool. There were a hundred in the party, under charge of Conductor R. E. Shepherd and he escorted them all to the various destinations in the prairie and Pacific provinces.

TROUTLET WINS RACING CLASSIC

Surprises For Turf Followers at Opening of Woodbine

Several surprises were in store for racing followers who attended the opening of the spring meet at the Woodbine track, Toronto, on Saturday. Twenty-five thousand milled and clambered in the mammoth Essex road plant, although a sprinkling of rain threatened to spoil the day. Jups Plant restrained himself for another day. A slight breeze blew from the East and top coats and the prevailing slacker were in order. The track had been previously dragged and rolled and a fast surface was provided for the horses.

The presence of the Governor-General and his party, Premier King and the Lieutenant-Governor, along with several other members of the inner circle added to the stateliness of the occasion. The Highlanders' band furnished several selections and the climax was reached when the Willowdene drove past the stand flanked by his bodyguard and from thousands of throats there arose a mighty cheer.

The pari mutuels did a thriving business and many were unable to wedge the crazing masses to place their bets. Of course the biggest upset of the day was Troutlet who galloped down the stretch to pass Mr. Quinty a few rods from the wire. The two speed demons ran nose and nose but the new entry had the greater staying power and galloped home in front. Troutlet was not considered a money horse and many of the critics picked his stable mate, Taurus, to grab the laurels, and as a consequence the odds were low.

Taurus was a big disappointment to many after having made an impressive showing in his early season trials. Troutlet also ran the distance a few days ago in good time but later received a slight injury which was thought might impair his running ability. Mr. Gaiety, the Glasco entry, ran a great race but it was in a large measure to the expert handling of the winner by Jockey Howe that Troutlet annexed the King's Plate. Had the track been heavy Taurus would have undoubtedly been farther up in the field.

The real long shot of the day was Patricia J. who galloped home to give her backers $42.10 for a $2.00 ticket. Rolls-Royce who was a big favorite, followed closely and was an easy second. Rolls-Royce led at the 8th and looked all over an easy winner but Plaiman aboard Patricia J. sent the Joyce horse home by a head.

Gunboat who was conceded the steeplechase, breezed in with a length to spare over the nearest rival, Autumn Bells. The latter named led until the final stretch when Gunboat ambled alongside and crept ahead and finished with plenty of reserve to spare.

J. C. Fletcher's steel hanging Duke came through in the third race and paid 11 to 1. Sengram's horse, Young Kitty and Suncrest were favorites.

The King's Plate race the betting about even with the Sengram and New entries odds-on favorites. Sengram had little luck on Saturday with his Blind Cast with Butwell up breezed home in the fifth race. Knight was quoted at big odds before the race and the critics picked him to lead the field by a wide margin, but again the dope bucket was sent spinning into oblivion and the backers of Knight promptly marked time while Blind Cast's supporters collected $28.55 on a $2 ticket.

Dancing Fool was played up as the winner of the sixth but the signals were crossed and Pat Calhoun centered across first. Allatache was also given a good chance but was not in the money. Nimrod and K. A. Kee were quoted at equal odds in the final race of the day but Nimrod finished far ahead and showed his superiority.

2100 Miles in hottest Weather ~Without adding a Pint of Oil

ONE of the finest bits of claim-proving for Marvelube Motor Oil reported to date is a record-breaking run of 2100 miles made last summer by Mr. G. J. Rathbone, Manager of the Brown Wire Specialty Co., of Hamilton.

Mr. Rathbone, using Marvelube Heavy in his 1926 Oldsmobile Coach, completed this long trip under very trying conditions, without changing or adding to the oil in his engine.

He describes his experience as follows:

"I filled my car with Marvelube when starting on my vacation, and travelled 2100 miles, mostly in the States, where the heat was intense, at some points as high as 110° in the shade.

"I added no oil whatever during the 2100 miles, and when I finally drained the oil it was in such splendid condition that the Service Station didn't want to take it out."

This steady grind of over two thousand miles through intense atmospheric heat offered a searching test of Marvelube's ability to "stand up" and retain its lubricating body. An ordinary oil would have "broken down" and caused serious inconvenience to the driver and damage to the motor.

The success with which Marvelube passed this test is proved by Mr. Rathbone's report on the condition of the oil when the crank case was finally drained.

You do not need to break records to prove Marvelube's high quality. Breaking records is a hazardous pastime—dependent as much upon the perfect mechanical fitness of your car as the quality of the oil you use. But you can be sure of satisfaction and economy of upkeep from your car under normal conditions by using Marvelube regularly and changing oil every 500 miles, as recommended by most lubrication experts and car manufacturers.

Killing weeds is only one object of tangling the compact little plants. cultivation. Even more important is how the tall type. The majority of our vegetables consist of 80% water at most, and usually more than that. The These marigolds should not be planted utility of the vegetables, therefore, depends upon them having a sufficient supply of moisture at all times.

Marigolds

Marigolds in richer reds, browns and mahoganies, more glowing orange and purer yellows and lemons, have come into the garden during the last few seasons and given it new gorgeousness during the hot summer months when these annuals are at their best, finish up with a burst of brilliance as the first frosts approach. The most noticeable development is a recognition of the value of the tall French types, rich for garden decoration and for cutting. This is the smallest-flowered type, which contains the red shades.

For many years the dwarf French marigolds were the only ones offered in the garden. Transplanting, dumping, when done carefully, strengthens the root growth, and makes a stronger stockier plant. When plants are taken from the original flat in which the seed is grown and set directly out in the garden, they are hottest to be unduly and tender. Just after setting out in the garden sprinkle a little nitrate of soda around—do-ole ing this quick fertilizer in water and applying in liquid form is the best way, and your plants will shoot ahead.

Support For Climbers

It is not advisable to use wire for supporting climbing roses, sweet peas and other vines, if something else can be procured. On hot days the metal absorbs heat and may burn the tender plants tied to it. If you are screening a fence and must train something to it let your tape first to the wire and then make a loop and put this around the vine. A wooden trellis is best for vines and other climbers while the old fashioned brush fence made by pushing bushy trimmings from fruit trees into the ground is one of the best affairs upon which to train sweet peas.

Transplanting Advisable

Most of the plants started indoors such as tomatoes, cabbage, Cosmos, Zinnias, Nicotiana, and a score of others should be transplanted at least once before being placed in their permanent position in the garden. Transplanting when done carefully strengthens the root growth, and makes a stronger stockier plant. BELLE THEATRE

Although she has played the type almost exclusively for fourteen years, Mary Alden, appearing as Ma Potter in W. C. Fields' Paramount starring picture "The Potters," which arrives at the Belle Theatre today, believes that the sweet, suffering old-fashioned Mother was much less admirable than she's been painted.

"Saying an all-forgiving mother and analyzing her emotions gives one a fairly good idea of what she represented," says Miss Alden. "I don't pretend to encompass all her traits; I'll minimize her virtues. To me her chief handicap was the fact that she was literally smothered in sentimentality.

"Take the modern mother. She does not absorb herself in her offspring; yet she's much more appreciated. The present-day child's regard for his mother is one of real sentiment, not of sentimentality. Sentimentality is the fruit of emotional instead of intellectual, selfishness. True sentiment is beautiful—like truth—

INDIAN PITCHERS ARE DRIVEN FROM BOX BY YANKS

Ninth Inning Rally By St. Louis Noses Red Sox Out

New York, May 23.—Shocker was almost invincible with men on bases and New York won, 7 to 2, from the Indians at Cleveland, thus ending the series. The Yankees battered three Indian pitchers. Babe Ruth knocked out his tenth home run of the season in the sixth inning with one man on.

Staging a ninth-inning rally, which drove in two runs, the Browns came from behind at St. Louis and defeated the Boston Red Sox 6 to 5, giving them a clean sweep of the four-game series. The Browns have now won seven of their last eight games at home. McFayden and Williams each hit home runs.

Howard Ehmke let the White Sox down at Chicago with, five scattered hits, while the Athletics bunched their hits off Faber and Barnabey, defeating the Sox 6 to 1 in the final game of the series.

Eddie Collins, lead-off man for the Athletics, started the inning five different times. Ty Cobb, who had hit safely in 21 consecutive games, failed to hit today, in five times up.

Manush's home-run in the ninth inning gave Detroit a tie to six tie with Washington in the final game of the series at Detroit yesterday. With two runners on the bases, Manush drove the ball high against the right-field fence. It bounded back almost to second base, where Buck Harris kicked it into left field.

Before the Washington players could recover the ball Manush circled the bases behind Gehringer and Warner. Harris was not charged with an error because Manush's drive had left the playing field and was automatically a home-run.

The game was called in the ninth by agreement to enable the Washington team to catch a train.

GIANTS STAGED BELATED RALLY

Pirates Accumulated Early Lead and Come Down In Front

New York, May 23.—Positive proof was furnished 40,000 eye-witnesses at the Polo Grounds yesterday that the Giants aren't drowning. A drowning man stays down after submerging three times. But the Giants already have gone down four times in succession before the bombardment of base hits from the Pirates, and they're still very much alive.

They showed that in the last of the ninth inning when they flared up with a belated rally which Rogers Hornsby thought to a climax and to close with his seventh home run of the season. That convinced everyone that there's life in the old team yet, but it didn't get very far toward cutting down the lead that the Pittsburghers had piled up in the earlier innings.

The Pirates have shown that they can make a few hits go a long way on several occasions, but they took 4 different means of beating the Giants, 7 to 4, yesterday. They made a lot of little ones serve the same purpose. A dream of singles that scored runs, a scare end and wore down Burleigh Grimes in the third and fourth innings like water dripping on a stone.

Cincinnati touched four Chicago pitchers for a total of 11 hits and won, 7 to 4. The Reds batted hard to shatter Chicago's winning streak of six games. Root last year won six games he pitched against the Reds, but they knocked him out of the box today in the fourth inning.

Brooklyn went on a rampage at home yesterday and assaulted three Philadelphia pitchers for 22 hits for a 25 to 4 victory. It was the fifth straight triumph for Dazzy Vance, Robins' speed ball artist. Willoughby was knocked out of the box before a man had been retired in the first inning and his successors, Carlson and O'Neill, were powerless before the Brooklyn attack.

IF YOUR SKIN BREAKS OUT USE SULPHUR

Just a moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning, or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation leaves into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

TRIPLE PLAY IN TORONTO GAME

Baltimore Downs Newark In Both Ends of Double Header

Rochester, May 22.—The Syracuse Stars gave Rochester its seventh straight defeat at Rochester yesterday by winning yesterday's game, 10 to 5. The Tribe used three pitchers to stem the Syracuse attack, but to no avail.

Featuring with a triple play in the first inning, the Bisons smacked the Toronto Maple Leafs to defeat again at Buffalo for a record of four out of five games played between the clubs in six days. The score was 6 to 1. Sterling pitching by Fay Thomas, ex-Giant, combined with long-distance hitting by Geo. Fisher, who slashed a homer and a triple, made the victory comparatively easy for the Herd. The Bisons completed their triple play in the opening round after Spencer and Lavry opened the game with safe hits.

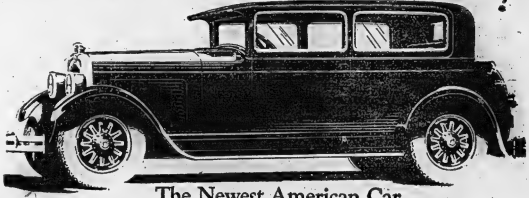

Hargrave bunted a short fly to Bissonette, who shoveled quickly and threw to Cohen, who covered first and retired Lavry before he returned to the base. Cohen in turn relayed the ball to Taylor at second before Spencer, who had a running start, could scramble back to the bag in safety.

In a pair of diamond arguments that, among other things, resulted in seven home-runs being pushed out of the lot, 31 pitchers taking their stand on the peak, and 28 runs clashing over the plate, the Orioles upset the Newark Bears, 11 to 9 and 6 to 2, at Baltimore, before a crowd of about 7,000 fans.

The Skeeters took both ends of yesterday's double-header from the Reading Pretzels, winning 4 to 3 and 2 to 2. It was the Pretzel's 24th and 25th consecutive defeats and their drop in the column lowered this world's record of 23 straight defeats set by Pittsburgh in 1890.

The Newest American Car

By One of the Oldest American Builders

FOUR months ago, the Reo Motor Car Company announced the Reo Flying Cloud. Its instant acceptance by the public has been the outstanding feature of an otherwise colorless automobile season.

Now the Reo Motor Car Company announces the Wolverine.

Named for the strongest animal of its size in all the world, the Wolverine—substantially lower in price and somewhat smaller in size than the Reo Flying Cloud—will bring to an even wider field of motorists that honesty of construction and sureness of performance for which Reo automobiles have always been known.

The Wolverine is small enough for easy handling and low operating costs—but no power, nor brawn nor beauty was sacrificed in making it smaller.

It's fast—fast on the getaway, fast on the open road and quick to stop.

Both its performance and its appearance will be a delight to those who, in the past, have looked in vain for something of superior in a moderate priced automobile.

PRINCIPAL FINED FOR GIVING A GOOD LICKING

Moose Jaw, Sask., May 20.—The pain ful administering corporal punishment in schools, was frowned upon here in police court recently, when the principal of Deer Prince Arthur school was fined , two dollars and costs for strapping a ten year old pupil for insubordination.

The defence counsel pointed out that if the accused was found guilty and convicted, it would place him in the odious category of the common criminal, and make impossible the enforcement of discipline in the public schools. The scholastic authorities, he argued, would hesitate to administer punishment in the future for fear of being dragged to the courts.

The prosecuting attorney took exception to this heresy and stated that the schoolmaster was only guilty of a misdemeanour. He asked the magistrate to reflect seriously on what he would feel if the girl had been his own child.

The magistrate in giving his decision stated that if corporal punishment was necessary in schools, then there should be a graduated weight of straps used in order to meet more tender pupils the same decree of punishment meted out to older scholars. He thought the principal had no intention of marking the child's body.

PORTRAITS OF KING AND QUEEN

London, May 21. (C.P.)—Portraits of the King and Queen, the first by Sir Arthur S. Cope and the second by Richard Jack, are a distinguishing feature of the 159th showing of the Royal Academy. "Humanly and officially, both these Royal portraits meet the requirements," the Times' art critic says. Of the two, that of the King is the more satisfying, partly on account of the fuller color scheme. Without loss of dignity it is a genial portrait.

The present exhibition, the Times critic says, may be said to represent the best in contemporary British art more consistently than most within memory. Last year's Academy was described as "elderly" in its general effect; this is distinctly young; and the difference between them is an interesting comment on the possibilities contained in similar material—for there is reason to suppose that the wealth he exhibitors ran younger this year. Moreover, several of the younger-hung ed members and associates—Frank Brangwyn, Sir D. Y. Cameron, Augustus John, George Lambert and Charles Sims among them—do not exhibit, and Gerald Leslie Brockhurst, who is the youngest-hearted of the fold, has only one small picture.

The two pictures of the year are considered to be Mrs. Dod Proctor's "Morning," and Walter W. Russell's "Izabella." The first is a painting of a young girl asleep. It is a "soulpturn" composition, in a kind of formal effect, and the picture is described as perfectly consistent in form, color and surface quality. In Mr. Russell's picture, everything is subordinated to color and surface quality.

The two main galleries are I and III. The pictures in Gallery I, do not lack depth, but it is atmospheric rather than structural depth, depending upon the relations in tone of one plane behind another—like stage profiles—rather than upon the organization of the picture "en plan," and the general effect is correspondingly thin, if charm be in color and surface quality.

Nothing within the common recognizes of the Academy can quite stand up to the silk wall of Gallery II, but the effect there is so enormous improvement on that of last year when, on Private View day, there was nothing to be seen over the heads of the crowd but an expanse of paper, fleshy bangles—ties, and sat rome points of view, pictures deep—has added this, but the solid still conquers in tone. What is wanted is more pictures like "For thirs art wrought with weather ground in dreams," by Ancril Stronach, and "The River," by Philip H. Pastwick, the last, showing that not so much strong color as strong pattern is he requirement; but the difference between that the hangers have made be most of their resources in this kind of picture.

BEAVERBROOK AT HUGE BANQUET

London, May 21 (C.P.)—Lord Beaverbrook presided over a compliments ary dinner to Ralph D. Blumenfeld given by the staff of the Daily Express in celebration of Mr. Blumenfeld's completion of 25 years' editorship of the paper. The gathering included many who had worked on the paper for a whole of this quarter of a century.

The Daily Express was founded in 1900 by the late Sir Arthur Pearson. It was one of the only two daily newspapers of London which at that time printed its main news on the front page. The other newspaper has since gone out of business but several who have survived adopted this practice. Mr. Blumenfeld, who in earlier life had considerable newspaper experience in the United States, went to the Express after a rather brief experience of news-editing on the Daily Mail, and his development of Mr. Rhmenfeld's abilities to say that for many years the Express was virtually impossible as a paying proposition. It was bright and enterprising, but somehow failed to make its presence really felt in the crowd of English newspapers

A crowd which by now has been considerably thinned. However, when Lord Beaverbrook took the general administration of the paper in hand, some time after the close of the war, matters quickly improved, and the Express nowadays possesses the second largest net sale of any daily paper in this country. Only the other week arrangements were completed for printing the paper Southampton as well as Manchester,

At the celebration of his long connection with the paper Mr. Blumenfeld referred to the contrast in salaries and general conditions in Fleet Street prevailing twenty-five years ago and now. "What change," he said, "is due to the attitude of the man—Lord Beaverbrook. He believes in high pay for good service." Lord Beaverbrook however, would be the first to repudiate that he was the pioneer of generous salaries for first-class work. He did not make his presence felt in Fleet Street until the "new journalism" was well established. It was the late Lord Northcliffe who first adopted the principle of paying capable men handsomely.

In many Indian tribes the language spoken by the women differs somewhat from that of the men.

The Irony of Love

CHAPTER 29

Rafe started and would have spoken but with a glance of compassion at the distraught girl, Maude signed to him to be silent, and he drove back the denial from his lips.

"He's married to me; we're man and wife! Oh, why don't you speak; don't you tell me that—that—I am lying, that I'm a bad woman, that——"

"Hush!" said Maude, going to her and kneeling beside her. "Don't say any more just now. Wait until you are calmer, until—Stranger, bring me some wine for her," she broke off, in a low voice.

Denise sprang to her feet and pushed away Maude's arm. "Don't you understand?" she cried. "Don't you see that I'm telling you the truth, that I've come here to tell it, though I'd rather go through fire? Can't you see that it's not because of myself that I've come, but because of you, for your sake, for his? We're married. He knows it now." She cast her eyes toward Rafe. "He knows I'm speaking the truth——"

Rafe came forward and laid his hand on Denise's shoulder. "Hush, Denise!" he said soothingly. "This person is too much for you. Let me take up the hand, let me tell Maude just how the thing shapes. You've no call to be so cut up, to carry on. It's a darned foolish thing, but you're making a heartbreaking one of it. Hey, Maude, this is how it is." He turned to Maude crazily, with regret, with something like an apology in his eyes. "When Plenie came, Travers thought that I'd better hide my own right hand and put that in, that was the beginning of it; and then—well it was this way."

With some trouble, but clearly enough, he told the story of the deceit they had played on the landlords, and wound up with a laugh, but not a very hearty one.

"And that is all there is to it. Just tell her that there's no call for her to worry herself, that you and I understand that though it was a lowdown silly kind of a joke, we've done nothing that we need be ashamed of—more especially she."

Before the words were out of his lips, Plenie sprang to her feet, swam stretching out her hand. "It's no joke for me," she cried, her eyes flaming. It was planned by me and him—— Oh there, there's no use in that!" to Rafe, lady; I've loved him ever since we were boy and girl. I—I wanted him! And he—that devil!—knew that Rafe would be sure to come to love me—he led me on. I was but a bit of clay in his hands, he had not any shape he liked——"

"Hey!" demanded Rafe, bewildered and confused.

"Peace!" she said, between her teeth. "It was him that did it. It was him that planned it all, gave me more cry, urged me on."

In the intense silence that followed the ticking of the great French clock sounded like a knell in Rafe's ears; he was semiconscious of footsteps passing in the hall, of Mr. Gulliffan's voice. He felt as if he were standing on a jet of rock, set in the middle of a surging sea; for the moment he lost the sense of Plenie's words, even of her presence and of Maude's. Was effort to be covered himself—got a grip of himself as he would have put it—and looked from Plenie to Maude with the expression of a man controlled by a very real and terrible problem which he has to solve quickly. With a gesture toward Maude, as if to ask her advice, and for the moment he left a low voice:

"Hold on, Plenie! Are you talking wild, or do you know what you're saying? It's hard to believe you do. You are charging Travers—Travers—me with the Lord knows what. You're talking like a girl in a play at a theatre. You say that he played it lowdown on us, that what he meant for a joke was real earnest. How can that be? We aren't married; there was no ceremony——"

"No," she said, blanking her head with despair and a kind of sullen impatience at the ignorance of his sympathy. "It isn't necessary here in this country to be married in a church, to have a clergyman; the law's different from the one in England. You're only to say both of you, before two witnesses, that you're man and wife, and you're married; no one can separate you."

Rafe stared at her with incredulity in every feature, then looked at Maude. She shook her head slightly, intimating that she did not know whether the assertion was true or not, then she bent her head, her hands tightly clasped, and waited.

"Oh, but that's all wrong!" said Rafe, forcing a laugh. "Somebody's been spoofing you, Plenie, pulling your leg. It's too ridiculous!"

"It's true," she said. "He knew it all the time, and I—yes, I knew it," she added, almost inaudibly, choking ly. "I'm as bad as he is—no, not quite as bad, for—I did it because I—I loved you, Rafe." She raised her head at this and looked at him with the woman's appeal that love inspires the woman's belief that love justifies much.

"I can't believe it," burst out Rafe. "Here! We'll soon know."

He strode to the door, opened it, crossed the hall, and burst into the library, where Mr. Gurdon, Sir. Ives and Mr. Gulliffan were talking. They looked up smilingly, but their smiles turned to astonishment at the sight of his white, stern face.

"Mr. Gurdon, I want you," said Rafe, for the first time since they had known him, peremptory, commanding every inch an earl. "Will you come with me, please? Lord St. Ives, and you too, Mr. Gilliflan; I'll be glad if you'll come with me."

Piles Disappear

No Cutting or Rubber Needed

External treatments seldom banish piles and for the very good reason that the cause is inside—bad circulation in affected parts, veins are flabby and bowel walls weakened. To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation and send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments can't give lasting relief.

J. E. Leonhardt, M.D., a specialist, set work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and it has proven successful in thousands of cases—so successful that now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists under a money back guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at J. S. McKeown's, who will promptly refund the purchase price if you are dissatisfied.

PLANS PREPARED FOR SUMMER RESORT AT JONES' CREEK

New Hospital Superintendent Not Selected Yet — Mills Family Suffer Ptomaine Poisoning

RESIGNATION OF MISS TAIT HAS BEEN CONFIRMED

Hospital Board Announces That Miss H. M. Collier Is In Charge

APPOINTMENT PENDING

Directors Considering Several Possibilities But No Selection Made

In connection with the change of superintendents at the Belleville General Hospital—which—was announced exclusively in The Intelligencer last Saturday, the Board of Governors of the Hospital today made the following official statement:

"In view of the reports in local newspapers and from other sources relative to the Superintendency of the Belleville General Hospital, the Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital desire to make the following statement:

"Miss Tait left the Hospital on May 1st, since which date no direct communication from Miss Tait has reached the Board of Governors other than a request from her medical adviser for a prolonged leave of absence.

"The Board has placed Miss H. M. Collier in charge from May 1st and she is now Acting Superintendent pending arrangements being made for the appointment of a new Superintendent."

Officially this is all the Hospital Board has to say, but negotiations have been completed with two of three persons whom the directors thought might make a suitable successor to Miss Tait, but they are not yet ready to make the appointment.

The nurse from a Montreal hospital whom the board had in mind is definitely out of the running. Another suggestion was Miss Flora Kerr, Assistant Superintendent of the Victoria Memorial Hospital, Toronto, who was in Belleville on the holiday, looking over the local situation, but who is not coming on account of family reasons.

Miss Kerr is a sister of Mr. Norman Kerr, 306 Bleecker Avenue, this city, Head Purchaser on the Canadian National Railway. She would very much like to have come to Belleville, but owing to the delicate health of her mother, she wishes to remain in Toronto.

KIWANIS MEETS ON THE HOLIDAY

Heard Fine Patriotic Address From J. O. Herity On Canada

In conjunction with the "approaching celebration of Canada's Diamond Jubilee Kiwanis listened yesterday to an excellent address on the subject of "Canada and the Empire" delivered by Kiwanian Owen Herity, Mr. Herity took the place in review over the sixty years since Confederation, telling some thing of Canada's progress and of her loyalty to the Motherland. The speaker dwelt especially on the fact of our freedom—and that of England as well, —from the spirit of Bolshevism which has wrought havoc with the welfare of so many lesser countries. Through the close union of the two nations, wise and safe administration on the part of their governments working with "level headed peoples" the Red Element had been successfully combatted.

It is expected that some eight or nine hundred Bellevillians will join the local Service Clubs and the Knights of Columbus in the big "All Canada" Day at Hydegeir, June 15th. Arrangements have been completed and the affair in Rochester will take part of a public event with Civic officials and Service Clubs there participating.

DEDICATION OF FLAG POLE IS MOST IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

Citizens Honor Memory Of The Late Roger Porter

With drums beating, the band playing "God Save the King" and the Argyll Light Infantry drawn up at the General Salute, the British Flag was run up on the new flag staff, dedicated to Roger Porter by his father, E. Guss Porter, yesterday morning in Victoria Park. Hundreds had assembled to witness this event that fell so fittingly on Queen Victoria's birthday and despite the rain the impressive ceremony was carried out.

Promptly at 11.30 the Argyll Light Infantry with the band followed by the Boy Scouts marched into the Park, the infantry were drawn up directly in front of the platform and the Boy Scouts directly behind them. Girl Guides were on hand, scattered throughout the crowd.

Upon the platform were standing His Worship the Mayor, Col. Ponton, Vandewater, Col. W. N. Ponton, Dr. F. E. Maloit, Mr. Clarke, Mr. T. J. P. Powers, chairman of the Park's Board, and Roger Porter's little son.

The ceremony opened by Mayor Eardley Wilmot asking Col. Vandewater to take charge of the operations. The Colonel was the first speaker on the programme and told of Roger Porter, his gallantry and love of his country.

Col. W. N. Ponton then arose to speak. His was perhaps the best speech of the day, and the Colonel broke down while giving it. It was

INTELLIGENCER'S STORY IS CONFIRMED TO-DAY

The Daily Ontario today has the unpleasant duty of confirming the exclusive Intelligencer story of Saturday which they denied in their Monday issue. The Ontario did not know apparently that Miss Tait, Superintendent of the Belleville General Hospital was resigning her post, and were naturally peeved when the story appeared in The Intelligencer. The Editor of the Ontario, though, should by this time be used to this situation and not lose his temper and deny stories which his paper fails to get.

Miss Tait has resigned her position as announced by the Board today, the notification coming from her physician. The fact that no direct word had been received by the Hospital Reporters from Miss Tait as stated in the Ontario on Monday, does not in any way alter the authenticity of the story.

There were two other stories which The Intelligencer printed exclusively and which the Ontario afterwards denied and which will be confirmed within the next few days. These stories are the appointment of the ladies' tender for Belleville and the location of the vendor store. And when those official announcements come down, we will take much pleasure in telling the Editor of the Ontario about them.

SUMMER RESORT TO BE ERECTED AT JONES' CREEK

Alderman C. C. Walker's Plans Are Almost Completely Now

BUILD COTTAGES

Dance Hall Will Be Social Centre During Hot Weather

"I expect to have everything definitely settled this week" stated Mr. C. C. Walker, of the Walker Hardware Limited to the Intelligencer this afternoon when asked if there was any foundation to the rumor that he intended building a number of summer cottages and a dance hall at Jones' Creek, Toronto Road.

It was rumored about the streets on Monday that the contract for the erection of the cottages and dance hall had already been given out, but as stated above, Mr. Walker would not confirm the rumor to the newspaperman this afternoon.

With the erection of these cottages which will be available for leasing during the summer months is just a proof hall, Jones' Creek should prove to be a mecca of interest to Belleville and district residents.

LOCAL GIRL WON VALUED SCHOLARSHIP

Bellevillians attending the graduation exercises at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, were justly proud of one of their number, Miss Margaret Edna Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Collins, 124 Pinnacle street, who was awarded the H. H. Williams Scholarship of $350 for efficient work in the operating room. Miss Collins also merited the R. A. Laidlaw and I. H. Weldon Scholarships of $500 for highest standing in theory and practical work which enables the winner to pursue a post graduate course. The Misses Collins' father Miss Collins declined, wishing to pursue her career as a nurse upon concluding her course at the hospital in September, she having still four months to study at the hospital, though a graduate of the May 1927 class.

Miss Harriet McIntosh, daughter of Mrs. John McIntosh, is also a member of the 1927 class.

Both young ladies received their education in the Belleville public and high school and are splendid records in their school careers.

JOURNEYED TO STIRLING IN THE MANNER OF THE '70's

The early 70's were vividly recalled to astonished spectators who yesterday saw Earl Phillips of the Canadian National Telegraph Service on route to Stirling, dash by mounted on a huge "bone shaker" one foot bicycle owned by Mr. L. B. Cooper and which has figured in many a comic procession.

With a joking companion, Phillips set out from the city at 4 o'clock in the morning and after a tiresome journey in which he on foot escorted the cycle up the hills, he reached Stirling at 8.25, spent the day in the village and after an accident in which he lacerated his hand badly, started for his home at 4 p.m., arriving here shortly after six. Outside of very sore legs and a determination never to do it again he has quite recovered from his unusual trip

Knights of Columbus from all over the district gathered in a giant convocation at Trenton yesterday.

Sports including golf, ball, bowling and Boxing made up the program during the afternoon and evening.

D. B. Hanna Will Not Say Yet But States There Will Be One

Toronto, May 25.—There is to be a limitation on the quantity of liquor that may be bought by an Ontario permit holder within a specified time, D. B. Hanna, chairman of the Liquor Control Board stated today. "I cannot say just yet what the limit will be. It will be announced before we open the doors for the sale of liquor, but there will certainly have to be some limit," he said. Mr. Hanna was not in a position to announce the date of opening for the stores.

REV. H. B. KENNY RESIGNS PULPIT

Ill-Health Forces Tabernacle Pastor To Retire From Active Work

Rev. H. B. Kenny, pastor of the Tabernacle United Church, has decided to retire from the active work of the ministry, at the coming Bay of Quinte Conference, in June, and will consolidate his pastorate here on July 1st. For some months Mr. Kenny has been unwell and advised by his physician to retire from active work.

For some years Mr. Kenny has been a prominent Conference man, and a recognized leader, serving the Church in various capacities as Chairman of Districts, President of the Bay Conference, General Conference of the Methodist Church and in 1921 was sent by his Conference to the Ecumenical Conference, London, England. He served for four years on the Board of Foreign Missions and Social Service. He was member of the first general Council of the United Church and assembled his name to the Basis of Union. At that Council he was appointed one of the representatives-at-large on permanent organizations, and member which entailed much work. He was elected commissioner to the second general council held in Montreal. Since Union he has been a member of the Settlement Committee of the Conference and is now the chairman, also Chairman of the Belleville Ministerial. It was a matter of great regret to the officials of the Tabernacle Church to learn that Mr. Kenny's health is so impaired as to make successful pastorate. Every effort has been made to relieve the burden of the Church has been sustained and seven thousand dollars of church debt paid during the four years of his second term at the Tabernacle, which makes financing comparatively easy.

It is hoped that Rev. Mr. Kenny will make Belleville his permanent home, where he has so many friends, not only in the Tabernacle but in all denominations. At present he is President of the City Ministerial Association. All friends join in the hope that complete rest will fully restore him to health again.

PANIC CAUSED BY FALSE CRY OF "FIRE"

Merrickville, May 25.—When a capacity audience in the town hall here was viewing a motion picture last night, some person in the back of the building shouted "fire" and people sprang to their feet. The manager, however, assured the audience the cry was a hoax and later announced a reward for arrest of those who almost caused a panic.

SITTING IN THE MOIRA BUT HAD NO IDEA OF SUICIDE

William Leonard was sentenced to a month in the County Jail by Police Magistrate Mikel this morning on a charge of being found in an intoxicated condition in Victoria Park, on Monday afternoon.

Leonard, who had been drinking rubbing alcohol and wine, had fallen into the bay underneath the railroad bridge by Victoria Park and Constable Evans found him sitting in the water.

When asked this morning whether he had tried to commit suicide, Bill emphatically denied the thought.

"I'd like to die, though," Leonard stated to the Magistrate. "I am sick and tired of life. I was all right up until some time ago when a close personal friend of mine died and I went right to pieces after that."

When the Magistrate wished to give him a longer sentence in one of the "farms" to try and straighten him up, Leonard pleaded that they would not accept him as he had been seriously injured during the great war and could not do any manual labor.

WHOLE FAMILY IS STRICKEN AFTER EATING CANNED PEAS YESTERDAY

FORMER FOLLIES STAR

"Peeny" Mills, Popular Baseball Manager Has Narrow Escape

STILL IN BED

Wife and Child Suffer But Are Out Of Danger Now

After a meal yesterday in which canned peas figured on the menu, the family of Wm. J. Mills, better known as "Peeny", manager of the local C. N. baseball team, succumbed to a severe attack of ptomaine poisoning last night.

Returning from work as gardman at the C.N.R., Mr. Mills was seized with severe cramps in his abdomen similar to pains from which his wife and child were suffering. One child, Doris, who had not eaten any of the canned peas, escaped any illness which infected the source of the poisoning.

A local physician was immediately called and he confirmed Mr. Mills suspicions of the cause of the attack. The doctor ordered the family to bed after giving them and administered the usual antidotes for the poisoning.

After severe agony Mrs. Mills and baby son recovered sufficiently to arise this morning, but Mr. Mills is still confined to his bed.

New Mrs. Hill

A few minutes after being granted divorce from his first wife, Walter Hill, son of the late railway builder, James J. Hill, married Mildred Richardson, former Ziegfeld Follies star at Livingston, Mont. Miss Richardson is the daughter of Mrs. C. R. Meyers of Long Island, N.Y. Her father, W. Earl Richardson, is a financier of Saskatchewan.

COMPLETE BREAK WITH THE SOVIET

Give Russian Emissaries a Week To Leave—Labor Party Opposes

London, May 25.—The note containing the British Government's final word to Soviet Russia was in court of drafting by the cabinet today. It will be handed to the Soviet representative at Chesham House, former Imperial Embassy, as soon as possible after the House of Commons approves the Government's decision to sever both diplomatic and formal trade relations with Moscow. The note which will simultaneously be dispatched to Moscow will give the Government's full terms regarding Russian emissaries in England. It is understood they will be allowed a period of grace amounting to a week or ten days in which to pack their baggage.

Now that the situation has been brought to a head there was speculation today as to how the Anglo-Russian business relations would be continued. It was agreed that while business probably would be suspended temporarily it would be resumed on a basis of trading arrangements between United States and Russia.

Labor Party Opposes

London, May 25.—Although it appeared obvious today that the governments big majority in the House of Commons assured the endorsement of its policy to sever relations with Soviet Russia, the decision will not go unchallenged by the opposition. The parliamentary labor party today considered the situation regarding Russia and decided to submit a motion to the effect that no action should be taken. Premier Stanley Baldwin regarding a break with Soviet be taken until the committee has inquired into the whole matter and reported to the House of Commons. This motion will be submitted to the House tomorrow by Rt. Hon. J. R. Clynes.

Music Teacher City Schools at Moose Jaw, Sask., was signally honored on May 20th when the pupils of the Moose Jaw Schools, who have received their tuition under Miss Dempsey, were adjudged winners in the Musical Festival at Regina. The school children were taken by Miss Dempsey to Regina in five coaches at an expense of five hundred dollars and all expenses were royally received. The final decision of the adjudicators gave the three Moose Jaw schools first, second and third place and in summing up the decision the Chief adjudicator paid a warm tribute to the excellence of the training the children had received.

Miss Dempsey who is a Prince Edward girl, received her musical education from Miss MacColl, of Belleville and later at the Toronto Conservatory of Music. Previous to adopting a musical career she was successful as one of the ablest school teachers in the county side.

EXPRESS HOPE OF ACHIEVEMENT

Lindbergh Modestly Says His Flight Is New Starting Point

Paris, May 25.—Capt. Chas. Lindbergh, the first ambassador of America" was introduced to the French Chamber of Deputies this afternoon by Myron T. Herrick, "temporarily retiring ambassador" and received a tremendous ovation. Fernand Bouisson, President of the Chamber, greeted the birdman officially while below the Dais stood General Barail, President of Aviation Group and almost the entire membership of the Chamber. It was a memorable day and all of us pay tribute to the illustrious aviator, the first to cross the Atlantic, whose flight is a new starting point modestly, said the President.

Lindbergh addressing the Chamber declared that when Heriot crossed the English Channel in 1909 people asked what good did it do. Today people were asking "What good has it done to cross the Atlantic?" He hoped it would produce the greatest good not only for great spirit of friendship between the two countries, but also that in future actual, and regular communications across Atlantic by air.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

We receive but what we give,
And in our life alone doth nature live.

COLERIDGE.

WELL EARNED HONOR

A statue of James Pliny Whitney has been unveiled in Queen's Park, Toronto, not far from the main entrances to the parliament building. Effigies of two other Ontario Premiers stand in that vicinity—of John Sandfield Macdonald, the first premier of this province (1867-1871), and Sir Oliver Mowat who for twenty-four consecutive years directed the affairs of Ontario.

Sir James Whitney was perhaps not the equal either of Mowat or Macdonald as a statesman or politician but he was superior to both of them in some essential qualities of leadership. He was a man of extraordinary force of character, of adamantine will, of unfailing courage, of vast energy, and of unsullied honesty. He was a man to inspire confidence, and the people of Ontario gave him their confidence unstintedly. He succeeded to power at a time when the Liberal party had become honeycombed with corruption, and when the moribund Liberal government was to a great extent at the mercy of the corrupt elements in the party. Whitney and his colleagues restored clean government and by prompt and example elevated the standards of public service. This, together with his staunch support of the Hydro-electric project, was his chief contribution to public welfare in his native province.

Not because of any superior intellectual gifts or achievements, not because he initiated any great cause or directed it to a triumphant close, is Sir James Whitney's memory revered and the erection of his statue near the parliament buildings recognized as a fitting memorial of him; but because by his rugged honesty, his courage, his high ideals and his tenacity in living up to them, he inaugurated a new and better era in political life in this province.

"AMERICANS"

The old discussion regarding the use of the word "American" to designate exclusively citizens of the United States has broken out again. Curiously enough it is only in the United States that the question arouses interest.

The New York Times defends the right of United States citizens to the title "American" on the ground of historical justification. Such defence has resulted in a shower of protests from New Yorkers, Bostonians and other "American" citizens that the word is a misuse of terms, and that Canadians, Mexicans, Argentines, Peruvians and Tierra del Fuegians have as much right to be called Americans as Americans.

The trouble is that the United States nation has never evolved an euphonious word to apply to its citizens. The term "United Stateser" is clumsy, and the manufactured word "Usans" (U. S. A.-ans), which has been recommended by some, sounds ridiculous.

To Canadians, the bother about the word "American" must appear a trivial matter, but from the United States standpoint it is quite understandable. The word fails to describe. It is the same as if an Englishman had no other word to describe him but European, and war sometimes forced in press despatches to share the responsibilities for domestic happenings in the far-away Balkan Peninsula.

The great majority of Canadians are content to let the United States settle the question. Occasionally a Canadian may protest that the United States resident has no right to the title of "American," but he does not covet it for himself. Let someone call him an American and he soon corrects the error.

"WILDCATS"

That the volume of doubtful mining securities being unloaded on the Canadian investor by means of high pressure methods is reaching serious proportions is indicated by reports which are coming in from all parts of the country. In most cases victims are persuaded to purchase substantial allotments of stock representing monetary outlays which they can ill afford, tempted by the get-rich-quick schemes of salesmen for the various brokers who are distributing the issues.

The widespread development of mining in the North Country lends itself at the present time to the success of such methods. So rapid has been the development of the mining industry and so many new fields have been opened up within the past few years that it is literally impossible for the public to keep pace with legitimate development. Even the newspapers, with their corps of correspondents, are unable to cover developments in all the mining fields, except in a general and haphazard way. So far as the prospective investor is concerned, removed as he is from the atmosphere of mining, and without the advice of reliable mining authorities, he is almost at the mercy of the slick tongued salesmen attempting to unload any kind of worthless security. The spectacular success of some of the established producers in the North has made the road of the "wildcatter" still more easy. The man who hangs before the eyes of his intended victim the example of those who have reaped fortunes from the splendid success of the big Porcupine and Kirkland Lake mines, has already made considerable progress toward landing his quarry. It is safe to say that the "story" of Lake Shore and Teck Hughes, to say nothing of McIntyre and Hollinger, has made almost as much money for the promoters of wildcat propositions as the mines themselves have made for their shareholders.

Deplorable as it may seem that legitimate mining enterprise should be hampered by the operation of such methods there appears to be little remedy, so long as the public refuse to become educated to the fundamental principles to be observed with regard to the purchase of mining or other securities. One of these principles is —Never buy stocks from a stranger. Another is—Do not buy ANY stock from ANYONE without first investigating its merits.

DOWN THE STRETCH

Do you think they're not proud when the roar of the crowd
Is hailing the gallant, gay ranks,
As they come to the post while each silken hunched ghost
Is soothing the quivering flanks?

When the barrier—whirrs! and the clay-ribbon blurs
On the lunge of the van for the lead.
Do you thing they don't try, as the world hurtles by,
To win, and run true to the breed?

At the turn to the straight where the pace and the weight
Is telling its heart-breaking tale,
Where the quitter goes wide and a father-wet hide
Comes through with a rush on the rail.

Where the frantic lane streams and a mad rider screams
And the whip and the steel heels bite
Where they're lapped-in-a-row with a furlong to go—
Does anyone think they don't fight?

When they're groggy, and sway, as they roll back to weigh,
And they know they have hung to the lead,
When their thundering name goes down to turf-fame—
Do you think they don't thrill to their deed?

Bathtubs and refinement are not symbols of prosperity, neither are palatial residences nor huge government buildings. For every million dollar residence there will be a thousand hovels. The true signs of wealth and prosperity are growing crops, live stock grazing on hillsides, the hum of the saw in forest, minerals coming to the surface of the working mines. It is the creation of wealth, not the hoarding of it, that brings prosperity to a nation.

FORTIFY YOURSELF AGAINST THEM

It is estimated that a sufferer from colds loses three days' time from work in a year.

At work, in the "movie," or at any entertainment, if your neighbor has a cold and sneezes or coughs, the air is full of germs and if you are not in good condition, you may become ill. The only protection you can have is to build resistance against disease forces. Take that splendid herbal tonic,

SHELL PRODUCTS

ON land, water, and in the air, great progress has been made in motor transportation, and synonymous with this progress are SHELL PRODUCTS.

In the early days of the Great War, large quantities of T.N.T.—the most powerful high explosive—were manufactured by extracting the power properties from SHELL GASOLINE.

To-day, these same powerful properties are retained in well balanced proportions in "AVIATION" and "SHELL" Gasoline.

Fill up your tank with "AVIATION" the famous quality anti-knock Gasoline—you can't help noticing the difference.

A SAD STORY

Mr. "Ab" Wannacott, popular Front Street Tobacconist, spent the holiday trout fishing near Springbrook. Mr. Wannacott holds little hope for the fishing streams of the North Country after yesterday's sad results when he came home with a bag-full of alibis rather than a string of finny creatures. According to "Ab," the party were nearly mired, eaten alive by the tiny denizens of the forest and lastly ran into hard luck when it came to landing the trout. However, like all true disciples of Izaac Walton, Mr. Wannacott will not discontinue his fishing activities but plans to choose a spot where better results may be obtained.

Directly after supper, dancing was resumed for a short time, everybody going home in the small hours of the morning, convinced that the Bay of Quinte Country Club certainly knew how to entertain.

TODAY'S MARKET

New York, May 25.—Stock prices opened strong, but broke sharply when heavy selling developed. Recovery from the market just before midday and then made an irregular recovery when buying orders could be removed in the high grade industrials. The reaction was accompanied by rumors of the serious illness of Commerce Baker, veteran capitalist, but these were promptly denied.

General Electric responded to the increase of from 6¾ to 84 in the annual dividend, by touching 103, a new high record for the present time. Baldwin was pushed up above 220 after a severe reverse took place in United States Steel common. General Motors, Anaconda Iron Sugar Refining and other industrial favorites.

American Wagon preferred sagged to 80 and a half, the lowest price in 20 years, and the common was down to 17 5-8, lowest since 1915. Real Silk Hosiery also touched a new low. Firm tone of color of the old standbys was associated with rumors of a pending silk merger.

Opening 5-8 cent off to half cent up, Chicago wheat latter rose to equal of 2 to 4 cents over yesterday's cases. Corn and oats also developed strength, starting with a cent to a cent decline to 1-8 cent advance and subsequently soaring gains. Provisions were irregular.

OPENING DAY AT GOLF CLUB

Keen Competition In Contests at East End Course

The opening day at the Belleville Golf Club, out Cannifton way, somewhat uncertain weather, proved a brilliant success. Mrs. Springer and Mrs. Bowerman were the ones at which over a hundred members and friends were present. The decoration, so tastefully done by Mrs. Hilda Scott, Mrs. R. Cooper and Miss Stewart Masson, were greatly admired.

The course, to the surprise of the players, was found to be in capital condition, in spite of the very heavy rains of the last few days.

Shortly after two o'clock the first couple started off for the President vs. Vice-President match, which resulted in a win for Mr. Donovan's side. Mr. J. Whalen was the only player for Mr. Kerr's side not defeated. Mr. A. Lemoll played a brilliant game having a score of 38 and easily winning the game's prize for lowest score.

Mrs. W. H. Reeves won the ladies' prize with a score of 56. The approach and putting competition was closely contested. Mr. H. Davison had the best card for the men, Mrs. A. Ketchenon's visitor, Miss M. Foster, not only had the best score for the ladies' prize but the lowest card in this competition.

HOLDING YOUR WIFE BY CORRFCT ATTIRE

By ELSIE MARLOWE

A lot of good ink has been used exhorting wives to look to their laurels and dress becomingly and neatly at all times in order to hold their husbands."

I've dedicated a lot of enthusiasm to that cause myself. With tears in my eyes and throbs in my fingers, I've typed out several yards of good advice all about the horrors of cooking the oatmeal before you washed your face, and sitting down to breakfast in a bath robe in which you would hesitate to be rescued from a fire by any but a blind fireman. But why go on? You know all about it!

Now, we're going to have a change. We're going to devote a little thought to husbands who wear dress to please their wives. And now, if you've ready we'll tune in on a letter from a wife who thinks it is about time her husband got busy and tried "to hold her."

DEAR ELSIE:

The clothes question seems to be troubling a great many people, but my husband and I are bothered over a little different side of it than is usual.

We like to go to shows together, but I have decided that I will not go with him in the kind of clothes he wears, and he is usually determined not to wear other clothes. So we have decided to put it up to you.

Here is his side. He says to tell that he is a good provider and good otherwise, that he keeps shaved, that he likes to wear a clean work shirt and keep clean, that he likes to wear the clean work shirt, khaki pants and a decent-looking coat to the show and he thinks it is my place to go with him looking that way.

Now, here is my side. Yes, he is a steady worker and has no bad habits, but I don't see that he has it over me there, because I am a good housekeeper and a good cook, a good seamstress and very saving with his money. Besides I do all the work such as mowing the lawn, etc., with the exception of cutting the wood.

"The clean work shirt" is just as likely as not to be one he has worn around the house for a week, and bodily in need of pressing, if not washing, and he will ogle button one button on the collar band, and leaves the extension of the band sticking out over the collar. He refuses to wear a tie.

Then he always wears a khaki-colored vest which I knitted six years ago, and that is badly out of shape now, and he only buttons about every other button on it. With this he wears khaki pants, which are usually baggy at the knees, but he has a fairly new pair now. Then you can usually see about two inches of his white cotton work socks above his shoes, that are not laced over the last two loops. He also wears an old black suit coat that he keeps wide open in the front so that every-one can see his half buttoned vest. He has a very heavy beard and usually shaves every other day, sometimes only every third day.

Do you think I am unreasonable because I object to going to CHURCH with him dolled up like that?

The other day my husband said I was the only girl he wanted and that when he tired of me and wanted someone else he would wear clothes to please a woman then.

I hope you will answer this question for us.

ANNOYED.

Well, 'don't forget that your husband means more to you than the other folks you meet at the show. It's a good idea to keep the eternal verities in mind while you're discussing work shirts and khaki pants. There's such a thing as paying too much for style; and don't forget that, either.

But at the same time there's such a thing as paying too much for comfort, which same seems to be hubby's failing. If he isn't interested in attracting other women, he might still be interested in attracting you, if he stopped to think about it.

However, if he insists on work clothes, the only thing I can suggest is for you to wear work clothes too. Put on your, kitchen apron, and a decent-looking sweater, let's say about five or six years old, and if he complains, remind him you're a good cook. Why should you doll up when he does it? Have a little harmony in the home!

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Pale green is one of the season's favorite shades for evening frocks in London.

New York reports a preference for capes for evening rather than coats, and those of sheer velvet are liked. That the very latest artificial-butsunbule in Paris is a Futurist affair made of coral and framed in tiny silver leaves, and a similar decoration composed of leaves appears in poises upon a single leaf of black kid.

At the United Hunts meet, many smart New Yorkers wore leather coats of tall and three-quarter length and some were flared below the belt, other principle, and each colors of mauve, blue, bois de rose, grey and brown were favored.

London reports that white is the color which is most frequently chosen for evening frocks this season and lace, tulle and moussoline, chiffon velvet, and satin crepe are all favored, while black is also smart, providing that it is used alone or with flesh color of strain and fear was gone from her eyes.

"You're a good girl, Sybil," she told her lovely daughter gratefully.

Sybil made an amused little move.

"Try to get out of your home to believe that!"

Mary Ross sighed.

"Some people talk, of course, about you and Arthur. (You never see him?"

Sybil shook her head.

"So far as I know, the earth has opened and swallowed him. I would it care, if it had, the horrid little wretch!"

Mary Ross gazed at her daughter reproachfully.

"You are so hard, Sybil!" she murmured. "Maybe Europe will change you. You'll be happy, now, with so many people, and you'll be far away from the painful scenes of your childhood." Sybil made a bravely saling around the Continent. She stopped in Paris only enough to stock up lavishly on frocks and furs and hats and all the other accessories which bloom on the Rue de la Paix. Then to the Riviera for the winter; the spring in Italy; Spain and Biarritz, before the weather became too hot; summer in the cool beauty of Normandy and, once again, Paris, before sailing back to New York.

In Paris, at the shop of a smart couturier, Sybil ran across the former Janet Wayland- now the wife of her brother Jimmie.

Janet's eyes had a wistful expression when she caught sight of Sybil. At home she had always been cool and reserved with the girl who later had become her sister-in-law. But, in a foreign country, anybody from home looked good to her. She was deeply and pitifully lonely.

"How wonderfully well you look, Sybil!" she exclaimed, after the first surprised greetings had been exchanged. "I'd hardly have recognized you."

"Cousin Agatha is the fairy godmother," explained Sybil.

"Oh, I thought—Jimmie and I thought—" Janet's plain face flushed painfully.

"You thought it was Arthur Winslow?" Sybil calmly finished the sentence for her. "No, Janet, you must-n't judge me whole family by a few of its members. We're not all rotters."

Janet looked ready to cry. Sybil wondered grimly just what sort of a life her lazy, indolent brother was leading the girl. Janet was charmed certainly, from the spoiled, flippant only daughter of wealthy and indulgent parents.

Mentally, Sybil chalked up another mark against men, not that she cared particularly about Janet, but because she was on the side of any unhappy woman.

"Do come back to the hotel for tea," begged Janet wistfully. "Jimmie may be home. He'll be so angry to see you."

But Jimmie wasn't home when the two girls reached the expensive suite in a hotel on the Champs d'Elysees. Sybil lingered over an elaborate tea, but still Jimmie didn't come, and Sybil at the really had to go, because [illegible] going to the Opera that night.

"I'll be so sorry to have missed you," murmured Janet. "We should have gone to the Ritz. We'd surely have run across him there. He likes the American bar, and this is just the cocktail hour."

But, as Sybil stepped out into the dusk of the Avenue, she met Jimmie descending from a taxi. His good-looking face was flushed, and he was inhaling with his wallet.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

Cousin Agatha wept with laughter.

"Sybil, you'll be the death of me. Heaven; how I admire your spirit."

"I have a pleasant job," Sybil went on. "It's only temporary, but I'm hoping to make so good that they'll let me keep it."

"Shameless! You'll resign tomorrow" declared Cousin Agatha, briskly.

Sybil fitted amazed eyes.

"You're too gently to work. If beauty doesn't deserve leisure and luxury, I'd like to know what does. It always hurts me to see plain women—like me, for instance," she added bitterly, "raking around in a limousine while lovely young things hang to cab way straps."

"But, Cousin Agatha, I've a living to make and there's Mother—"

"Tomorrow morning," continued the imperturbably lady, "I'm taking you to my lawyer. We'll arrange an annuity for you. I've a heap more money than I know what to do with. I'll leave it to you anyway, but it hardly seems fair to make you wait till my death. You can use it so beautifully now."

She named an amount that made Sybil fairly faint. It couldn't be possible, she thought.

"There's one string to the gift," declared Cousin Agatha. "You can see what you like of the money to help your mother along but it's got to be understood that Fred Ross doesn't get his hands on a single penny. If your poor foolish mother wants to keep a roof over his head and feed him three meals a day, all well and good. But not one cent is to go into his pocket. Is that understood?"

Sybil nodded dumbly.

Cousin Agatha rose and smoothed her expensive frock over her thin hips. "I'll call for you at ten o'clock to-morrow morning. Remember what I said; not one penny to that old scalawag. I'm going to see to it that you spend my money on yourself."

CHAPTER 26.

THE BIRTH OF A BUTTERFLY

It was Cousin Agatha's proud boast that, when she set her hand to a situation, things happened rapidly.

In a few weeks following her unexpected visit to the dingy boarding-house, Sybil learned that this was no idle boast. Almost before she knew it—while she was still fairly dizzy with her good luck—she found herself possessed of a modest fortune and off for a year in Europe, attended by a correct and wooden-faced person who was a combination of maid and companion. Cousin Agatha had selected the person herself; she was middle-aged and severely respectable.

Hilda was personal maid to Lady Pritzerald for fifteen years," Cousin Agatha told Sybil. "They tell me she's a gem at hair and frocks—though goodness knows, her own appearance doesn't suggest it. Anyway, she speaks French and German fluently, and she'll be able to guide you around Europe and teach you languages in the bargain."

So, secure in the guardianship of Hilda, Sybil departed for Europe, after having arranged with Cousin Agatha's lawyer for the payment of her mother's rent and household expenses, with a small personal allowance in the bargain. This was quite satisfactory to the donor of Sybil's fortune, since it left no money lying around loose for the grasping fingers of Fred Ross.

Mary Ross, who was thus enabled to give up her work at Madame Irene's, came to see Sybil off. She looked quite pretty and fresh, for all her years of slavery, and the expression

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of seventeen, and have been going with a young man of eighteen for over a year. Recently I started going out with other boys. When he found it out, he began running around with other girls, the wrong kind. He has always been very decent to me. He is only doing these things to spite me, and instead of spiting me he is harming himself. I really think too much of him to see him go wrong. Would it be right to talk to him, and try to make him realize what he is doing?

HELEN P.

HELEN P.: Since you were not engaged, it was and is your right to have other friends. And it is no less the young man's right to go out with as many girls as he chooses.

However, if you feel responsible for his questionable behavior, I would suggest that you have a talk with him. But that you are more than ready to continue the friendship, but neither must limit your friendships to the other. And point out to him that just as long as he chooses the "wrong kind" of girls, he must expect, he must not count you among them.

I must caution you to be tactful, when you talk the matter over with him. The wrong tactics will not only fail to accomplish what you wish, but will entrench him more deeply in his new mode of living.

PUBLIC SCHOOL PUPILS VIE FOR SINGING HONORS

Armouries Crowded For Empire Day Concert—Mr. Hunt Complimented

Before hundreds of Belleville citizens, over six hundred children representing King George, Queen Mary, Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra Schools and St. Michael's Academy brought credit upon themselves, their schools and upon Prof. V. P. Hunt, Director of Music in the Public Schools on the evening of Empire ay, Monday May 23rd, at the local armouries.

Just a year ago the children of these schools took part in their first public singing and the vast improvement made since then was evident on Empire Day of this year. The shading and expression of the group singing of this week was quite evident in the various songs and, altogether reflects great credit upon Mr. Hunt, who had no easy task in training such a large group of children with untrained voices. Miss Wilda Palmer acted as pianist.

Besides singing there were also the presentation of prizes to the best vocalist in the contest which was held between the four public schools as well as short addresses by the Chairman, Mr. John Elliot, Chairman of the Belleville Board of Education, Col. Ponton, Chairman of the Musical Committee of the City Schools, Col. Roscoe Vanderwater and Mayor Eardley Wilmot. An unique feature of the evening's program were the two songs of Kenneth Munnings and Syrella Test who obtained the highest marks in the singing contest of the public school.

Chairman's Address

Mr. Elliot at the beginning of the program eulogized Prof. Hunt for the splendid showing he had made in the large number of children taking part in the program and also for the efficient manner which they were able to conduct themselves and the high quality of their singing, "all of which" stated the chairman" reflects great credit upon their instructor". Mr. Elliot also, on behalf of Mr. A. L. Bull man, who is at present a patient at the Belleville General Hospital, expressed his regrets at being unable to be present. "Mr. Sullivan" stated Mr. Elliott "is deeply interested in this work."

Col. Ponton

"The boys who are here tonight are the soldiers of tomorrow who will take the places filled by the present members of the Argyll Infantry and other regiments" said Col. W. N. Ponton, Chairman of the Musical Committee of the Board of Education, and also a veteran member of the Board of Education. The Colonel also stated that he hoped the time was not far distant when there would be a Scottish clad battalion in this city. The speaker made references to the song "Rule Britannia" which it stood for and where it originated and completed his address by referring to the significance of music, stating "that where music was, law abiding citizens were also to be found."

Col. Roscoe Vanderwater

"Do not forget the significance of today and exhibit pride in your country three hundred and sixty-five days in the year" stated Col. Roscoe Vanderwater in his address to the children at the Empire Day concert held in the armouries on Monday evening.

The speaker stated that on the 24th of May, the 108th anniversary of Queen Victoria, the Good, would be commemorated.

Mayor Eardley Wilmot

"I am proud of you, as I am sure your parents are also" stated Mayor Wilmot to the school children taking part in the Empire Day Celebration at the armouries. The Mayor also made references to the significance of the day which was being commemorated and what loyalty to the British Empire meant to the life of the nation.

At this juncture of the program, Mrs. Agnes McPee presented the shield to the school adjudged the best singers and which was awarded to Queen Alexandra School. Col. W. N. Ponton presented the medals to the individual winners.

1867 — DIAMOND JUBILEE SERIES — 1927

This War Memorial stands in Canadian Pacific Stations in Montreal (Windsor Station), in Winnipeg, and in Vancouver.

THE founders of the Canadian Pacific Railway well knew that the road which they planned would be not merely a great nation-building force in time of peace, but a powerful engine of defence in the Empire's day of need. Their faith was more than vindicated in 1914-18.

At the first rumors of war, the resources of the Canadian Pacific Railway were immediately turned over to the defenders of liberty and the Empire.

Both Atlantic and Pacific fleets co-operated with the transcontinental railway, its rolling stock, its shops, its terminal elevators and all its varied mechanism, for moving supplies.

Through its connections with United States Railways, and with the asset of its experienced personnel, the Canadian Pacific became at once a powerful auxiliary of the Allies' War Machine.

On the sea, the Company had special opportunities of service. Perhaps no more romantic story is to be found in naval annals than that of the Empress of Russia and her exploits on the Seven Seas. The Company's ships transported safely overseas from 1914 to 1918 more than 14,000,000 tons of supplies.

The total number of the Company's employees joining the army was 10,187. The Canadian Pacific allowed six months' full pay to each employee voluntarily enlisting, and let it be known that such men would be taken back into the service on their return.

All troop trains were handled with a skill which the military authorities characterized as "truly amazing." At all times the entire organization of the Railway was at the disposal of the Government.

Returned soldiers taken into employment up to the end of 1920 numbered 18,000 men, of whom more than 11,000 were in addition to the former employees who came back into the service.

BEAUTIFUL BIRD ONCE SEEN HERE

Rose Breasted Grosbeak Almost Wiped Out—$5 Reward For Nest

Wallace Havelock Robb wants to find a Rose-breasted Grosbeak's nest and is offering a prize of $5.00 to any person who will show him one. Some years ago these birds used to be fairly common in and around Belleville but cats and other enemies seem to have done for them.

Mr. Robb has been observing a female or two not far from Belleville. He is anxious to find the pair in natural nesting conditions. They nest in late May or any time in June, or possibly running into July. These birds like a locality that is a mixture to tangled thickets, open spaces, clumps of woodland and like birch oak or apple trees if mixed up with variety, especially if there is a stream nearby.

Male Is Handsome Bird

The Rose-breasted Grosbeak is bigger than a Bluebird, but smaller than a Robin. The Male is black and white with a white breast and a breast bib of a wonderful rose color. The head and back, but this black seems to have a slight hint of a blue cast to it. The lower part of the back or rump is white. The wings are black with white marking on them. The beak is a light colour, and the bill of male is pointed at the base. Under the wings is also a lovely rose colour and it shows when he is flying or flattering. The rest of the underparts are white. The tail is dark.

He sings very beautifully, in a clear melodious tone not unlike the Robin in a few notes. It is a cheerful one. His beak is rather big and strong.

The female is the same size as the male but otherwise not like him, except for the beak, which is stout and strong and big looking, but otherwise the beak is very much like that of the common English Sparrow. In fact the Female Rose-breasted Grosbeak might be described as very much like an oversized English Sparrow. She is streaked and brownish in general appearance. She has a noticeable white streak over the eye and a hint at a dull yellow suffusion in her sides and upper breast.

MOVIE CONCERN AWAITS PERMIT

Seek Consent To Keep Wild Animals In Sidney Township

If they don't die of old age before someone runs out who is responsible in Hastings for the importation of foreign animals, the two leopards and pair of cheetahs, which have been bought by Mr. Montrose for the animal training farm run by him and Mr. O. K. Graham, on the Trent Road, will really become Belleville citizens "some" time.

As nobody about the county seems to have established a precedent in the matter of bringing anything wilder than a parrot into Hastings, nobody so far has discovered who should be responsible in granting the apparently necessary permit. For two months Mr. Montrose has travelled about the city and county interviewing officials all of whom seemed vague about who should finally give the needed consent. After spending considerable time and money in his fruitless search, he finally appealed to the Sidney Council who debated the matter and left their decision over until the next session.

Meanwhile two leopards, a bear, two wolves and the cheetahs are roaring, whining and yelping in cages in the United States, eating their heads off waiting to be shipped here to train for the pictures under Mr. Montroses supervision and later to make their debut in Canadian films. While they remain out of the country Belleville is losing a lot of publicity as by now audiences all over America would in all probability have been enjoying seeing some trained animals on the silver screen taking part in hairbreadth escapades. No doubt the menagerie will too prove to be an attraction to tourists who will broadcast the news of Belleville's wild show.

So far four little red foxes captured in North Hastings are learning to do all sorts of tricks, four lynxes and the menagerie Mr. Montrose has had since starting the animal project are getting along nicely and many are ready for screen appearance, but the trainer wants to complete the zoo before commercializing any one species talents.

"Silver" a pony, Mr. Montrose has showed in many a film in the United States, has arrived in Belleville and is a big attraction to all who pass by the farm. He tells his age, computes figures, dances and does any amount of things a screen horse should do and is most happy in his new surroundings.

DEDICATION

during his talk that the flag was raised.

Feelingly he delivered the following poem:

And you our brothers who for all our praying,
To this dear land of ours come back no more,
Who lie, your Country's debt of honour paying,
And not in vain, upon the Belgian shore.

Till that great day when at the Throne of Heaven,
The books are open and the judgment set,
Your lives for honour and for Empire,
Be herein and home—no given.
This land will not forget—will not forget.

Captain Sword, an officer in the Argylls suddenly started raising the Union Jack, the band played "God Save the King," the Infantry smartly came up to the general salute and the male members in the crowd doffed their hats throughout the beautiful and inspiring ceremony. What person present preferred did not have a lump in his or her throat as the old symbol of the unity of the British Empire were unfurled skyward? How many eyes were bright with unshed tears thinking of Canada's glorious dead who died defending their country's honour so that the German war lords might rule over the world? Of these glorious slain Roger Porter is one.

After the flag-raising, Col. Ponton continued with his speech, telling of the 59th Regiment, and how Sergt. Powers, chairman of the Parks Board, Dr. F. E. Mabee who spoke on Scouting and the Scout's Oath, and Rev. Mr. Clarke who also spoke on Scouting.

Mr. E. Guss Porter who gave the flag pole to the city, was helped from his car and in a few words thanked all who had helped in the impressive event.

When the Argyll returned to the Armouries, Col. W. N. Ponton took the salute.

Several dogs, known to be kind, faithful and positively harmless, have been poisoned lately in St. Catharines by some unknown person.

BELLE THEATRE

Intimate glimpses into the life of the "tin can tourist" are provided by Alan Hale, director of "Rubber Tires," featuring Harrison Ford and Bessie Love, which will be on view at the Belle theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

This human comedy of the auto camps, which Zelda Sears and Tay Garnett adapted from a story by Frank Condon, chronicles in a highly humorous vein the motor jaunt overland of a typical New York family via the auto tourist camps. Miss Love, as Mary Ellen Stack, the heroine, after losing her job in New York City, trades her household belongings for an automobile of ancient vintage, and motors West with her dependent family.

Enroute she meets the hero, portrayed by Harrison Ford, and the experience encountered during the trip from the Atlantic to Pacific furnish laughs galore.

"Rubber Tires" was filmed during a trip of several thousand miles, with all of the scenes taken in various auto camps at which the company stopped en route. In addition to Miss Love and Ford the cast includes May Robson, Junior Coghlan, John Patrick, and Erwin Connelly. Don't miss it.

SOFT BALL TEAM OPENS SEASON

Nationals of Toronto and Kingston Supremes To Meet Beavers

Allan Meagher, Manager of the Beavers soft ball team is arranging for some early season exhibition tilts and announced today that the Supremes, one of Kingston's fastest aggregations will be here on June 3rd and will meet the Beavers on the armouries lawn. On the day following, June 4th the Nationals, of Toronto, Intermediate Champions of the Province, will back up with the locals. Both of these games will be first class tilts and Mr. Meagher is to be complimented in providing the fans with soft-ball of this calibre. The Nationals will play two games on the 4th in the afternoon at 2.30 and in the evening at 6.15.

There is a possibility that "Babe" Vincent, star pitcher with the Peterboro team may twirl for the Beavers against these outside teams.

Local softball followers should know the calibre of ball played by the Nationals and the Supremes and big crowds should turn out.

Mr. Meagher is considering the proposition of bringing a fast Montreal girls team here for a couple of games but the fans must first show their support in the two games already scheduled.

ONE BAD FRAME DEFEATS LEAFS

Cincinnati Pitchers Driven From Box By Buccaneers Yesterday

Toronto, May 25.—Joe Mojey had one bad inning here yesterday afternoon when the Syracuse Stars bunched two bases on balls with four hits and scored three runs to defeat Toronto, 5 to 2.

Barnes was close to invincible, except in the third inning when four hits and a sacrifice bunt accounted for the Leafs' two runs of the game.

Only one game was played, the morning fixture being called off owing to rain. The field this afternoon was covered with puddles of water, while high winds made it difficult for the outfielders. Two double-plays by the Stars and a one-hand scoop by Lamotte featured the defensive play.

New York, May 25.—Lee Meadows, of the Pirates, held the Cincinnati Reds to three hits yesterday, while his mates batted Pete Donohue and Lonis for 10 hits to make it two out of three games by winning 11 to 1 at Cincinnati today. The Reds made the first triple play of the National season today when Dressen, batting in L. Waner's liner with the bases full, forced Harris and caught Smith before he could get back to second.

The Brooklyn Robins, at Philadelphia, found Carlson for 13 hits and nosed through to a 6 to 5 verdict in the second game of a series, evening the count. Ehrhardt was sent to the showers in the fifth, and was succeeded by Cvetkvil and Doak, the latter holding the Phillies to one run in the last four innings.

New York, May 25.—Detroit knocked Georee Uhle out of the Cleveland box in the fourth inning of yesterday's game and won 6 to 3. Stoner was unusually effective until the eighth inning, when a triple and a fumble gave Cleveland two. When Karr replaced Uhle in the fourth inning Manush greeted him with a home run that scored two men ahead of him.

LEAFS GET JACOBSON

Philadelphia, May 25.—The Brooklyn Nationals today announced the outright release of Merwin Jacobson an outfielder to the Toronto Club of the International League. He was obtained a year ago from the Jersey City team of the International League. The release brought the Dodgers' roster to the 25-player limit.

DEMPSEY READY TO FIGHT

Los Angeles, May 21.—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, believes that Jack Sharkey had shown himself by his defeat of Jim Maloney "just about good enough to stop Gene Tunney, the title holder, right now." "While I think I can take Sharkey, a Sharkey fight should draw a big purse," Dempsey said.

GAME POSTPONED

Wet Grounds Forces Local Officers To Call Off Opening Tilt

Wet grounds caused the postponement of the opening ball game yesterday and Jup Nur certainly dealt a sore blow to the local club as it was expected that a big crowd would attend.

Some of the officials visited the park early yesterday morning and the diamond appeared to be in fairly good shape and it was planned to go ahead with the game if the elements behaved themselves but alas to the hopes the tiny little raindrops commenced to fall gently and it was immediately decided to call the party off.

When the game will be played is in the hands of Pres. R. H. Elliott and it is not believed that he will order it this week or next.

The next game is scheduled for June 1st with Deloro visiting Point Anne.

Belleville has no other home games until the 9th of June when Point Anne will be here. The local grounds will not be in fit shape for play for some days.

RHEUMATISM OVERCOME BY RED PEPPERS

Ask any good druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

In these thousands and thousands of acres of northern forest reserves, you can have a vacation that will quickly rid you of that jaded feeling that always seems to come with the passing of winter and spring.

Algonquin Park is one of the finest fishing districts in Canada. The fishing varieties are all there—small mouth bass, big lunge and speckled trout. Hundreds of miles of waterways, free camping places without number, good hotels, service and companionship—here are all the ingredients of the finest holiday you have ever had.

Highland Inn and camps owned and operated by Canadian National Railways, opens for its season on July 1st and reservations are already pouring in. If you want to know more about Algonquin Park and the hotels and bail car facilities there is an illustrated folder waiting for you at the nearest office of Canadian National Railways.

A Long, Wicked Hill
and a Cool Motor at the Top

IT'S a fine feeling to have your car sweep swiftly and quietly up a long hill and to arrive at the top with your engine as cool as when you began the climb.

And yet there are thousands of fine cars that labor and get overheated on many an easy hill, simply because the owner used "cheap", inferior oil in a misguided attempt to economize.

CASTROL costs a little more than ordinary oil, but it gives your car perfect performance no matter how severe the heat or stress. CASTROL is the most successful enemy of friction known to motordom, possessing superlative stamina and requiring changing every 2,000 miles, not the usual 500!

There is only one "CASTROL"

Wakefield CASTROL Motor Oil is recognized as England's finest lubricant and now enjoys a world-wide reputation. Millions of users, in every quarter of the globe, have learned that there is no substitute for CASTROL; no motor oil can give such satisfaction.

This same CASTROL is now available for you in Canada. Sold by leading garages. Write for folder, "Lubrication Wisdom," to

ACIDS CAUSE BAD KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when bad weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, drink drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders. By all means drink lots of good water every day.

CHICKEN THIEF IS GIVEN TWO YEARS

William Nicholson who hails from the Northern Townships, was given a month in the County Jail upon pleading guilty to a charge of chicken thievery this morning.

His less fortunate brother, Pierce Nicholson, who has a trail of convictions behind him was given two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory upon the same charge. The fowl were taken from the farm of George Poste. The pair were recently convicted in Peterboro for a similar offence.

Pierce Nicholson has served time in Burwash and in jail.

When asked by the Cadi if he had anything to say he pleaded that if allowed to go home he would never perform in the role as a chicken thief again. However, this seems to be the Nicholsons' favorite pastime and their liking for the feathered creatures is such that they are a menace to the farmers in the community.

FLY-TOX

The Irony of Love By Charles Garvice

They followed him silently, and at sight of the two agitated girls he stopped short, too surprised to utter a word.

"Mr. Gurdon," said Rafe slowly, sternly, "I want to ask you a question about your law here, your law about marriage. Is it true that if a man and a woman say that they are man and wife—before two other people as witnesses—that they are married?"

Mr. Gurdon gave the little legal cough, and began, in legal fashion, to ask a question: "Are you putting a case—"

Rafe's eyes blazed and he flung back his head. "Answer me," he said. "You're a lawyer. What the devil's the use of your—"

"My dear Lord Stranfyre," said Our don gravely. "Of course I will answer your question. If a man or woman are not already married, and they have made the declaration of their own free will, here on Scottish land, they certainly are man and wife."

Rafe stood still for a second, then he swung round to Mr. Gilfillan. "Is that so, sir?" he said thickly. "You're a minister, you know."

"It is so, Lord Stranfyre," said Mr. Gilfillan.

"Then," said Rafe slowly, hoarsely, "this woman here is my wife."

No one spoke; there was no exclamation, the climax was so terrible that it permitted of none; the three men stared from him to Phenie, then at Maude, who had covered her face with her hands.

"Are you out of your mind, Stranfyre?" demanded Sir Ives, breaking the silence, "or is this a — a joke? If so, give me leave to tell you that it's in devilish bad taste! What do you mean by this—this absurb statement?

"It's true," said Rafe. "I've said Phenie here was my wife; she said she was my wife; there were witnesses Travers—the landlady. Oh, it's all right!" He laughed a dreadful laugh to hear, took a step toward Maude and then stopped. "But I want to say," he addressed her, and there was an agony in his voice which none who heard it ever forgot; "I want to say, here and now, that I didn't know what I was doing, I do believe that, Maude?"

She did not speak; they saw that she was shaking with the sobs she was trying to suppress. Suddenly he swung round on Phenie.

"You say he, Travers, planned this, worked it? Why? Why? You've got to answer; you've got to tell me. Why did he do it? I—I never did him any harm; I liked him. Why should he play this trick on me? He liked me—

"Oh, Rafe, he hated you!" she burst out. "He hated the sight of you! He was trying all the time to do you an injury!"

"Hated me!" he exclaimed. "Why did he hate me?"

"Because he is your brother," she said, in a two voice, her head drooping.

"My brother!" he echoed, looking from one to the other, as if he felt he must have misheard, indeed entered into the business. "My—brother!" He leaned at St. Ives, and saw him exchange a quick and agitated glance with Mr. Gurdon.

"No! it's a lie!"

St. Ives stepped forward and laid his hand upon Rafe's arm. "Come away, Stranfyre," he said, in a broken voice. "Come into the library. Mr. Gurdon and I want to speak to you—"

"No!" said Rafe, shaking off St. Ives' hand. "I want to know the truth of all this. I want to know it now and here. Phenie's not telling a lie. I can see it in her face. You say that he's my brother—and yet he hates me—"

"My dear Lord Stranfyre," said Mr. Gurdon, firmly and yet sympathetically, "I agree with you that the truth should be spoken, and here. The man The man you know as Mr. Travers is also your natural brother. You understand?"

Rafe swept the hair from his forehead and thought for a moment; then with set lips and darkened face nodded that he understood. He noticed a certain resemblance to your father, but it did not suspect the truth," said Mr. Gurdon, in a low voice. "The whole business is quite clear to me now. Of course he hated you. He would do so, and it is natural that he should strive to do you an injury. You stand in his place—but you understand?"

Lord St. Ives went up to Maude and put his arm round her. She rose and hid her face on his breast, but as he opened the door she looked over her shoulder at Rafe, and their eyes met—love, pity, despair on hers, and in his the blackness of death.

Mr. Gilfillan followed the father and daughter, and Mr. Gurdon went across to Phenie and drew up a chair.

"Will you please tell me all about this wretched business," he said. "I beg of you to be calm; so much, so very much, depends upon our actions at this critical moment."

Rafe went to the window and stood looking out; he saw nothing but Maude's face, the love, the pity, the anguish in her eyes. Phenie's story was wrung from her bit by bit. Mr. Gurdon put it all out of her, then he went to Rafe.

"I must ask you to intrust this matter to me, the whole of it," he said. "I mean, Lord Stranfyre, that I must insist upon your taking no steps in this business until you have consulted me. As to this lady—"

He turned toward Phenie. She sprang up, her hands clenched, her head thrown back.

SOVIET'S HOSTILE ACTIVITIES ARE EXTENDED TO CANADA

Belleville's Liquor Store May Not Go On Bridge Street — Tourists' Permits to be Delayed

SOVIET'S SECRET LIST GAVE SOME TORONTO NAMES

Includes Prominent Members of Communist Party In Canada

OPPOSE SOVIET

Maurice Spector, Chairman Of Canadian Branch Against War

London, Eng., May 26.—The British Government today made good its promise to publish some of the documents alleged to have been uncovered in the recent anti-national raid on Soviet House in London, headquarters of the Soviet trade delegation and Arcos Limited, a Russian commercial organization. It issued a white paper the most interesting part of which, from an international standpoint, was a list of addresses allegedly found in possession of Anton Miller, Soviet cipher clerk, who, Premier Baldwin told the House of Commons Tuesday, was found hurriedly burning papers in his office when the raiders arrived.

Sixteen documents including a list of addresses were included in the "white paper" to illustrate the hostile activities of the Soviet Government and the Third Internationale against Great Britain.

Paper number 4 is captioned: List of addresses found in possession of Anton Miller. It contains the following: 1st A. Canada (No. 1 Communist Party of Canada, Room 301, 85 King Street East, Toronto, Canada. Private address (No. 1) Miss Ekens, 54 Victor Avenue, Toronto, Canada. (Inside envelope, 1 MacDonald). Canada (No. 2) Maurice Spector, 231 Palmerston Avenue, Toronto.

Additional addresses found in possession of Anton Miller under heading of "Canada Confidential Matter" were: Mr. Chas. Gray, 168 Lisgar Street, Toronto; Mr. E. Pittilieu, 56 West Rosetter Avenue, Toronto; Mrs. Mary M. Sutcliffe, 84 Tyndal Avenue, Toronto. (Inside envelope MacDonald or other). Miss Alice Ekens, 54 Delany Crescent, Toronto. Cable address "Truetoronto." The following note was written after these addresses, "Tim Buck address is changed to 34 Delany Crescent. Miss E. Ekens address is changed to 34 Tindale Avenue."

Soviet Illegal Advances

While the white paper gave this out simply as a list of addresses found in Miller's possession it is assumed to be the same list which Premier Baldwin described as "a list of secret cover addresses or 'illegal' addresses for communicating with the Communist parties in Canada, United States, Mexico, South America, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa." The effort was rather take off most of the documents from the fact that the Premier read them or noted from them. ex-

MILLIONS OF FISH PLACED IN WATERS

One hundred and five million fish, babies, born and raised in Belleville at the Fish Hatcheries, have left their aquatic home to prepare sport for fishermen in a few years' time in waters new.

The Hatcheries having disposed of all the 1927 young fry is now undergoing spring cleaning preparatory for the 1928 crop. Bottles, containers and instruments used in the intricate business of artificially raising the little fish from the spawn gathered in the spawning season, are being sterilized and placed in readiness to provide ideal conditions for prospective lunge, white fish, pickerel and perch, plus the older fish which have been sown by former years by the officials of the Hatchery.

Starting directly the lake water was free, Mr. Oakes, the Superintendent of the Hatchery, placed the sands upon thousands of every variety of fish suitable for Canadian waters, in the Bay of Quinte, Lake Ontario and inland lakes. The little fish were, he said, the best he had ever set out and the percentage which developed from the eggs the highest yet. It was the best year in his experience in every way.

WHEN 7 DAYS MEANS 50 HOURS IT'S SHORT WEEK

Whatever constitutes a week? Most people would say seven days of twenty-four hours each. A total of 168 hours, but a famous week has just expired in local police circles which was made up of something under 50 hours.

When Magistrate Mikel sentenced William Gilbert Jr. to seven days in jail for driving a car recklessly, while drunk, the average citizen felt that the law was finally being maintained and that this sentence might have a salutory effect on young fools who endanger the lives of innocent people by their criminal actions.

But there was apparently a joker in the pack. In the first place the sentence was given on Monday morning on that as Monday counted the first day, the term would normally have expired on the following Sunday. Apparently, it is the jail custom to let a prisoner out on Saturday if his sentence ends on Sunday, presumably in order that he may go to church, and so automatically the seven days was cut to six. Then for some unknown reason Gilbert's sentence was dated back to May 19th instead of May 23rd, and so on May 25th the week was up.

Should Have Had More Remands

Actually, therefore, Gilbert spent from about noon on Monday until a little after three on Wednesday in jail which is the shortest week of which we have any recollection. Interviewed by The Intelligencer this morning over the telephone, Magistrate Mikel said that he dated Gilbert's sentence back to May 19th as he figured on the days that the prisoner appeared in Court to ask for a remand should count as days spent in custody. Figuring on this basis Gilbert should have been asked for two more remands and the week would have been up before it started, which would have broken even the splendid record which he has established for a short week.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan emphatically disagrees with the above method of figuring time, for he was most positive in his statement that he intended to see that the law against drunken drivers was enforced to the limit, and, if necessary, will take this and similar cases to the Attorney-General of the Province.

Crown Attorney Donnan has also prepared a stated case for the higher court on the charge against Gilbert of taking a car without the owner's permission, which Magistrate Mikel dismissed. Peter Rozon's case, where suspended sentence was given by the Magistrate, when Rozon appeared on a charge of being in charge of a car while intoxicated, will also be reviewed by higher court.

SEVEN DINGHYS READY TO RACE

Local Club Elect Officers For Year—Expect Good Season

The 3rd of June will see the official opening of the Dinghy racing season in and around Belleville. May 24th was to have been the opening date, but due to inclement weather it was laid over until the 3rd of June. Seven dinghy owners belong to this Bay of Quinte Dinghy Club. Eardley Wilmot with his 14 ft. craft, George Graham's "Blue Bird", Bruce Graham has the "Green Hat", Dr. Proctor with "Little Dorothy", Alan Schofield, Major Bleecker and Michael Gillen. All these dinghys are in the fourteen foster class and fairly well matched.

The Officers

The officers of the Dinghy association are President Eardley Wilmot, and Secretary Treasurer Captain Allen Harper. These officials contributed much to the success of the dinghy racing last year in Belleville, and intend to do even more this season.

FRANKFORD HAS TRAFFIC REGULATIONS UP-TO-DATE

Who says Frankford isn't progressive? As the municipal leaders of quiet county roads to enter the busy main street of the village he has secular proof that the little town nestling on the banks of the Trent River is right up-to-date just like Belleville, Toronto, New York and other large places.

As one crosses the Trent Bridge the most prominent thing in sight is a big "Stop" sign and obediently each car comes to a dead halt before passing its way gentle into the main traffic on low. The village fathers are taking no chances on motor accidents within the confines of the community.

Incidentally Frankford is planning a big time for the "Home-Coming Week" on June 7th 8th and 9th when all their straying sons and daughters are invited to return for a glorious holiday. No doubt, many hundreds from Belleville will visit at Frankford during these days to help along with the celebration.

DEMAND DEEPER PROBE INTO THE KEENE MYSTERY

Residents of Marmora Dissatisfied With Actions of the Authorities

PETITION COMING

Will Ask Attorney-General To Send Best Officers To Investigate

Dissatisfied with the result of the recent inquest into the cause of the death of Jerome Keene, found murdered in a lonely shack on the Cordova Road in February, the people of Marmora village and vicinity are considering the circulation of a petition to the Government requesting that the best officers on the Provincial Police Force should be detailed to probe further into the tragedy.

As it is the matter seems in a fair way to being added to the roll of unsolved mysteries of Hastings County, Marmora and throughout the district the people are expressing themselves in no uncertain terms regarding what they believe to be a cold indifference on the part of those entrusted with the administration of the law.

Should this petition be circulated, it is believed that it will be signed by almost every man and woman in the village.

The jury probing Keene's death, which came by shot gun wounds fired by an unknown assain, brought in an open verdict, and ever since there has been an undercurrent of dissatisfaction, the people feeling that the killing has not been as fully investigated as might have been possible.

Little doubt exists in the minds of the citizens of Marmora but that the party who placed the poisonous liquor on the table at which Jerome Keene sat is identical with the person who sent the aged man into eternity.

It is generally thought that much more might have been brought in at the inquest and that a charge of perjury should have been laid against one or two of the witnesses.

CYRIL SEEMS TO HAVE THE HABIT

Cyril Rire, Canadian boy soprano who is well known in Belleville from having sung in St. Thomas' Church, has been arrested in Ashland, Wisconsin, for passing worthless cheques, and will be held for Grand Forks, N.D., officials.

Rire was arrested in Belleville, Oshawa and other Ontario cities for similar offences, but kind friends interceded on his behalf in this city and he was allowed his freedom, only to be re-arrested in Oshawa a short time afterwards for the same offence.

Apparently Cyril was not cured as a singer in "The Little Church Around the Corner" in New York City, as he is endeavoring to lead a life of ease and leisure with the proceeds of the worth while gift of a power of attorney from Toronto, May 26.—Further regulations under which the Liquor Control Act of Ontario will be administered were approved by Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council this afternoon, and it was indicated that the final proclamation bringing the new law into effect will be made on Saturday, June 4. The regulations adopted today cover numerous details in connection with the operation of the law and will be published in the Ontario Gazette on Saturday next, when they will be effective.

LINDBERGH SEES BELGIAN HEROES

Honored By Joffre and Foch—Presented With Photograph

Paris, May 26.—Captain Charles Lindbergh was an honored guest today of two famous marshals of France, Foch and Joffre. He also received a call from the programme to make a trip to the Hotel Des Invalides to greet a delegation of veterans of the wounded who have been visiting Paris.

After a visit to Versailles he was the guest at a dejeuner given at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. "Your effort has been a great one," Marshal Joffre said to the trans-Paris flier, "because it shows what a young man can do when he is well prepared for his attempt and has courage to see it through."

Presenting Lindbergh with his photocraph the allied Generalissimo said: "It isn't a picture of a pretty girl, but a picture of a friend." Lindbergh's visit to Marshal Joffre was more or less inspiring. Lindbergh of the Marne threw his arms around the airman and kissed him on both cheeks. Lindbergh was much touched by the reception given him by the Belgian wounded. "You're a great boy," said one, "and everybody said in, "You are the greatest flier in the world."

CIRCUS IS COMING

"Circus 's comin'!"

Belleville is to be visited on June 16th by Sparks Brothers Circus, which will show on the usual grounds on Pine street, north of Bleecker avenue. Ar arrangement for the parade has as yet been made, although advance agents have already visited the city in connection with this show. City Treasurer R. W. Ponton has already had the permit for this circus to show in Belleville on the above date.

Although it is rumored that other circuses may visit the city, yet nothing definite has been established in regard to same.

While circuses take considerable money out of a town, yet they also leave large sums in the way of groceries and feed.

Although circumstantial reports had been received in London, England, that Commander Francesco De Pinedo, Italian four continent flier, had reached either Ponta d' Flores, Island of the Azores group, in his homeward flight from Newfoundland to Italy, latest despatches from the Azores do not confirm them. These latest despatches indicate that nothing is definitely known there later than a report that a schooner had been sighted with a plane generally assumed to be De Pinedo's.

A wireless message received at Lisbon from an Italian steamship at three o'clock this afternoon says that the vessel met the Pan-American airplane piloted by Italo Balbo, Italian Minister of Aviation, and Captain Ayala, flying from Horta, Azores, on the Italian steamer sometime tonight.

THINKS WAR CAN NOT BE AVOIDED

Maurice Spector Believes Russia and Britain Will Clash Soon

Toronto, May 26.—Maurice Spector, chairman of the communist party in Canada, believes that sooner or later Great Britain and Russia will go to war. The Canadian communist leader stated today that even now "the spectre of war with the prospect of Canadian participation in it, is at last as great as it was during the Chanak crisis, when war with Russia threatened." "A very serious international crisis is looming ahead" he continued, "I certainly think that the stabilization of Europe which the recent Geneva conference showed signs, has been given a severe jolt back. Since then the crities were correct who pointed out that the Locarno conference was a step toward the isolation of the Soviet union, we reason that this last diplomatic move will be that it will not recur-ality in the immediate future. For a long time before 1914 the relations between Great Britain and Germany became steadily worse. Germany was used as "Britain's bogey" "Bogey man", and conditions finally culminated in 1914. Today the united Socialist Soviet Republics have taken the place of Germany in the eyes of the British ruling class of the menace to their imperial power."

Mrs. H. Welbanks, wife of Dr. H. Welbanks, dances street, told The Intelligencer today that although her husband had not closed the deal as yet, he intends to build a dancing pavilion at Rossmore, just the other side of the Bay Bridge. Dr. Welbanks was out of the city today.

"He is not absolutely certain as yet, but Dr. Welbanks is seriously contemplating building the pavilion in Rossmore," stated Mrs. Welbanks. The delay is following the lead of Mr. C. C. Walker and Mr. Harry Ketchenon who also intend to build dancing pavilions just outside of Belleville, but with the addition of tourist cottages.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Law should be like death, which spares no one.—Montesquiu.

LINDBERGH'S FLIGHT

All the world loves a hero, and in Captain Lindbergh we have a hero indeed. His successful flight from New York to Paris, alone and in a light monoplane, a distance of 3,600 miles, after two hours' sleep and on a sandwich and a half with a drink of water is a feat to thrill the dullest imagination. The most experienced airmen are amazed at the triumphant daring of this unassuming American youth who is declared to have accomplished the "impossible." While wind conditions were favorable, the lone navigator encountered the worst kind of flying weather for many hundreds of miles over the Atlantic. "If we had known that the weather would be so bad over that part of the ocean as it turned out to be," he said, "we would not have started"—the "we" referring to himself and his machine. In spite of this handicap, however, Lindbergh declares that he could have gone on for much longer, and that he was never pushed to the limit of his endurance. There is only one thing to be said of him and that is that he belongs to the order of supermen.

The flight will undoubtedly do much more than advance the cause of aviation. It can be regarded as an important international event, politically. The overwhelming enthusiasm with which the hero was received by the Parisians took on the character of a demonstration in honor of the United States. The Stars and Stripes were brought out and "Vive l'Americain!" was heard on all sides. So the emphatic lie has been given to the slander that a successful flier from New York would not be welcomed in the French capital. Lindbergh could not have been received with greater popular acclaim in his own country.

What this daring young aviator has done will be done again. He has men by blazed the trail, where others will follow, till the crossing is accepted as a matter of course. It is only twenty years since the Wright brothers were making their first exhibition flights in 1909 Blerlot made the first crossing of the English channel, and in 1911 Alcock and Brown flew over the Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland but that was shorter by over 1,500 miles than Lindbergh's non-stop flight, a record for distance. It is marvellous to think of the progress which has been made in the last twenty years not only in aviation, but in all other branches of science. Conditions have been completely revolutionized. Captain Lindbergh left New York in the morning and was in Paris the following evening; he then spoke to his mother in Detroit over the telephone through a third person in London. It is truly an age of miracles in which we are living.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN

London cables tell of high tributes which British newspapers and statesmen are showering upon Sir Robert Borden. To those in Canada who have appreciated Sir Robert at his full worth, such tributes are very welcome. For it is true, and unfortunately that, like many another public man whose achievements were more solid than showy, Sir Robert Borden has never received from Canadians the regard to which he is entitled. His indeed, has been the fate of the prophets; for it is in Britain that recognition is usually ex- tended only to all that he did in the ar. If the War Cabinet formed by Lloyd George, as well as at Versailles, w voices spoke with more authority, or commanded more respect than that of Sir Robert Borden. In all that was written by outlanders concerning those momentous gatherings, the insight and solid character of the Canadian statesman received unqualified praise.

Yet in Canada, for some inexplicable reason, Sir Robert never quite caught the public imagination. His ability acknowledged, his character admired the public yet somehow withheld from him that recognition of wider achievement to which he was entirely entitled. If the tributes of British statesmen and British newspapers help to correct such injustice they will be doing some thing worth while.

THE MARITIMES

Whether it be the psychological effect of the Government's acceptance of the Duncan report, or some other more practical reason, there is no doubt that conditions are improving in the Maritime Provinces. The Halifax Herald reports that manufacturers in Nova Scotia are all busy; that the wholesale business is prosperous; that industrial activities of the province this year will exceed those of 1926 by ten million dollars; and that agricultural prospects are the greatest for many years. The Herald's report confirms the impression gained from other sources that the Maritimes are entering upon a period of prosperity such as they have not known since the palmy days of wooden ships and iron men. The Herald's report is a welcome change from the note of pessimism and discontent of the past few years. And it is as good for the rest of Canada as for the Maritimes. No part of Confederation can be backward or dissatisfied without the effect being felt by the entire country.

WHY AUSTRALIA?

The report of the British Overseas Settlement Committee, made public a few days ago, should be of interest to Canada. For the most important thing disclosed by the report is that out of the 150,000 settlers who were given assistance under the Empire Settlement Act, only 30,000 found their way to Canada. The figures for the various Dominions are as follows:

	1925.	1926
Australia	22,537	23,722
Canada	8,869	11,344
New Zealand	8,097	11,709
South Africa	126	232
	39,959	66,102

As a land of opportunity for new settlers Australia, despite its advantages, is not comparable with Canada. Yet in two years Australia receives 53,000 British settlers as against 30,000 received by Canada. Something seems to be radically wrong somewhere in our immigration efforts.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Youthful correspondent wants to know what is a suitable present to give to a sweetheart. A plain gold band is generally very acceptable.—Ottawa Journal.

Boston, centre of shoe manufacturing, is sponsoring a "walk more week." Wait for an answer from Detroit.—Oakland Tribune.

One has only to see the crowds or foolish informed tip-hunters who crowd small stock brokerage offices to realize that as much money is lost in poor investments by city people as is lost in the country districts. The confidence game of finance find as many victims in large centres as in small cities, contrary to general impression.

The difference between the city sucker and the country sucker seems to be this: that most city suckers lose their money backing their own judgment in honest stock brokerage houses trying, in short, to beat the stock market; while most country suckers lose their money in crooked promotions where high pressure salesmanship is a factor in selling securities.

One man, who has observed investing in both town and country, states that there are as many people stung in the cities as in the country but it is difficult to get the city people to admit it.—From the Financial Post.

It is rather noteworthy to read that the wheat growers of North Dakota are complaining that cash wheat is 10 cents a bushel higher in Winnipeg than in Minneapolis, in spite of the Pordney-McCumber tariff of 42 cents a bushel. It is a fine tribute to the quantity of Canadian wheat.—Brantford Expositor.

The St. Thomas Times-Journal is complimenting the chief of police to that city on putting a stop to the practice of children being allowed to drive automobiles by their parents. That example might well be followed elsewhere, but then it is so hard to guess which are children and which are not in these days.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

"Port Rowan residents have petitioned that a cut be made across Long Point to Lake Erie at Port Rowan Bay, to protect bass from fishermen at Turkey Point.

RAIN MAGIC

Never a wind blows down the sky
On the breast of the cool spring rain.
But I feel its restless urge in my heart,
Stirring my blood again.

And I long to be out in the rain-grey dusk,
With the hill mists hanging low,
Then might I find and follow the road,
To the place where the lost dreams go.

CONSTANCE TROY.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Mama—"Does my new gown fit all right?"

Papa—"Not so worse, but can't you get into it a little farther?"

"Mother," said little Bobby, "what does father go downtown for every day?" "Why, he goes downtown to work and get money, so Bobby can have a good dinner every day," his mother replied.

A few days later, when Bobby sat down to dinner, he viewed the table with a critical eye. Seeing none of his favorite dishes he disdainfully shrugged his shoulders and grunted, "Huh! Father didn't do so much today, did he?"

"How are you getting along with your girl's folks?"

"Great! They're already beginning to treat me as one of the family. Last night I got bawled out for using one of the guest towels."

"Do you believe in the survival of the fittest?"

"I don't believe in the survival of anybody. I am an undertaker."

A judge was trying to get the exact words of a reported conversation from a witness who was somewhat scantily equipped with humor. "Witness," said the judge, "did the prisoner say, 'I stole the horse?'" "Oh, no, my lord," the witness replied in a deprecatory tone, "your lordship's name was never mentioned."

Here is a new story of the ready wit of Lord Darling.

It appears that one day while trying a case he was disturbed by a young man who kept moving in the rear of the court.

"Young man," exclaimed the learned judge at last, "you are making a good deal of unnecessary noise. What are you doing?

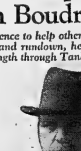

"Minted," replied the offender, "I have lost my overcoat and am trying to find it."

"Well," came the witty reply, "people often lose whole suits in here without all that fuss."

Tells facts from own experience to help others. Almost wild with pain, weak and rundown, he won new health and strength through Tanlac

Allen Boudria, engineer, of 612 St. Patrick St., is one of Ottawa's best known citizens. "My purpose in telling the facts of my experience," he said, "is to help others who suffer as I did.

"For five years I was in misery. My whole system seemed out of gear, but stomach trouble was the worst. Gas would distend my stomach to bloat and swell abnormally. Gas would pressure on my heart so that I could hardly breathe. Sour risings would come nearly choking me. Pain would come on when I was doubled over, terrific beatings of my heart.

"My friend M. Lapointe told me about Tanlac and helped him out of similar trouble, so I got some and used it with results all I had hoped for. I felt better in all. It put a wonderful appetite on me. I gained 20 pounds in weight and now weigh 214 lbs. My appetite and digestion are both fine. I eat what I like and sleep like a top. Tanlac and nothing else, made this great change. I'm for Tanlac.

LIVINGSTONE STRING TO BE DISPOSED OF

Tronto, May 26.—Mrs. L. A. Livingstone, who maintains an extensive breeding establishment at Cobourg, Ontario, has announced her retirement from horse racing, and the twenty-two thoroughbreds she has in training will be sold at auction on June 3. The farm at Cobourg, one of the most up-to-date establishments in Canada, will also be sold.

The Pontiac Farm at Cobourg has produced two King's Plate winners, Tar Heron and Leading Light, since it passed into the possession of Mrs. Livingstone in 1926. Botemia, one of the foundation stock at Cobourg, was the winner of the Ontario Jockey Club Cup on three occasions, and in 1925 she won the four-mile Endurance Stake at Louisville running the distance in 7.10 2-5, a world's record. In 1913 Pandorim duplicated Sotemia's performance in the Endurance Stake, and Mrs. Livingstone has the distinction of being the only breeder and owner to win this stake twice.

SHOWER FOR SPRING BRIDE HAPPY EVENT

In honor of Miss Alice Howard whose wedding takes place shortly, Mrs. R. H. Smith, Maxwell Street, entertained at a delightful shower at her home last evening and a most happy time was spent by the guests. Cards were enjoyed until supper and the winners were, at euchre Mrs. George Lee, at whist Miss Hopkins, and in the guessing contests Miss Horton, Miss Colclough, Miss Turnbull and Mrs. Smith were winners.

During the evening a "love ship"-filled with valuable gifts was brought in by Mrs. Smith who read the following address to which Miss Howard made a grateful reply, thanking the many guests for their generosity and kind thoughts:

Dear Alice—

In our hearts, would like to express in some tangible way our affection and wish that you kindly accept these, our gifts, as a small token of love.

As you launch your "Loveship" out upon the Sea of Matrimony may its cargo be a testimony of our high esteem for you and our every good wish for your happiness always; and as an adequate ballast in storm or calm.

We are sorry, indeed, that there are so many miles that will separate us. We shall miss you, Alice, oh, so much. But we are happy in your happiness and to know that you are truly happy will soothe us in our loneliness.

Always you have found and given your best and the best shall come back to you. We send our hearts with the hope that life holds for you a bounty of love, happiness, success, all things hoped for.

On behalf of your friends,

RED AND WHITE STORES' ANNUAL MEETING HELD

Hundreds Of Delegates Gather In Buffalo To Discuss Plans

The extent to which co-operative buying and selling of foodstuffs has developed, both in Canada and the States was demonstrated on Monday and Tuesday of this week when hundreds of delegates to the Red and White Stores Annual Convention assembled for the discussion of marketing and selling problems in Buffalo.

In the Hotel Statler, headquarters of the Convention, were gathered Red and White wholesale and retail representatives from practically every State in the Union to the south of us, various cities and towns in Ontario, Manitoba and the other Western provinces constituted delegates, emphasizing the fact that the organization is a nation-wide one; it is, in fact the largest co-operative grocery system of its kind on the continent.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the musty mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

Police Court

Police Court was short and snappy this morning. The magistrate sentenced a solitary drunk to a $15 fine with $7 costs and remanded Tom Maracle until the 11th of June on a charge of illegally having a still in his possession. Maracle is at present serving a sentence for illegally selling liquor.

Mr. J. Wylie, manager of John Sloan Company of this city and District manager of the Red and White Stores, returned yesterday from the Buffalo Convention at which the large representation discussed business methods, and—of chief interest to the consumer—the problem of providing high grade foodstuffs at lower prices and with the immense buying power of the Red and White Stores, the process is being followed with real interest.

The Red and White Chain Stores, organized in the States some ten years ago, were introduced to Canada during the past two years and their success has been phenomenal. It is expected that there will be one thousand stores in the West by 1928.

Had Gas 25 Years, Gone Now

"I suffered 25 years with stomach gas and constipation, and tried many remedies. After taking Adlerika, I can eat anything. I feel just full of pep."—Mrs. E. J. Benedette.

Adlerika gives the system a REAL cleansing and brings out old poisons which may have caused trouble for a long time. Unlike most medicines, it acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and takes away that full, bloated feeling so that you can eat better and sleep better. Even if bowels move daily, Adlerika brings out much additional poison which you never thought was in your system and which caused sour, gassy stomach, sleeplessness, sleeplessness, headache. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.—J. S. McKeown, Druggist.

MARKET SPOTLIGHT — MOHAWT M&M EXCELLIVAM — MINING STOCKS

Lake Shore Mines has announced that in addition to the quarterly dividend of 10½, they will pay an additional bonus of 10% to shareholders of June 1st. This means 30c a share for the first six months of the present year. While this announcement has been expected and its effect somewhat discounted, we still look for considerably higher prices for this stock before the end of the present year.

Reports from the MASSEY-HARRIS Company indicate that the present year is showing a favourable increase in business over last year, quite up to expectations. For several years past this Company has been making steady progress, and one of the most attractive features of the situation is the prospect of this growth continuing. The general situation in the farm implement business has been steadily improving since the war, and where previously agriculturists bought second hand implements they are today in the market for new equipment. The public has been raised, that during the past six or eight years the average earnings would not justify anything beyond a very moderate dividend payment on the old amount of stock outstanding. So far as we can learn, however, the conditions that prevailed after the war are considered as absolutely over connected with this industry. The improvement in agricultural conditions the world over during the past two or three years has meant a great deal to the Massey-Harris Company, and we confidently predict a bright future in this stock.

ADVANCE THEORY IN AIR MYSTERY

St. John's Nfld., May 26.—Interest in the efforts being made to solve the mystery of the missing French aviators, Nungesser and Coli, was stimulated to day when Hon. O. A. Bartlett arrived from the vicinity of Burin with a report from two men of Paradise Sound, an islet of Placentia Bay, to the effect that they had heard a series of three explosions about ten o'clock on the morning of Monday, May 9. It was at that time that the French airmen, in their transatlantic flight, were supposed to pass over Newfoundland, and numerous persons have testified that they heard and saw a plane similar to the "White Bird" of Nungesser and Coli, as near as 20 miles from Paradise Sound on that morning.

PLANS PREPARED FOR BIG COLONY FROM MAN ISL.

Self-Contained Community To Be Established In Canada

Toronto, Ont., May 26.—Intimation that plans are under consideration for the establishment in Canada of a big mass settlement to take care of the excess population of the Isle of Man, was given today by A. B. Crookall, Mayor of Douglas, and a member of the House of Keys, the Manx Legislative Assembly, who with a party of sixteen of his fellow countrymen, are making a tour of Ontario and Quebec, as well as a number of United States cities, under the guidance of C. K. Howard Jr., Steamship representative of the Canadian National Railways.

In outlining the proposed settlement Mayor Crookall stated that it would be agricultural purely, but that it would be self contained inasmuch as the plans called for the sending over of the necessary artisans and tradesmen to form a manx community within itself. "I am aware that self-contained communities of this nature may not find favor in certain provinces," said the Mayor, "and that fault has been found on the grounds that such people do not readily assimilate. It must be remembered, however, that in this particular case it is an entirely English community, and the peculiar psychology of our people would respond more readily to a plan of this nature than that of any other. We Manx men are practically all Agriculturist but our land resources are limited. Therefore, each year there are more than 400 boys with sound training in mixed farming who must seek elsewhere for a livelihood. There is no opening for them on the island, but being people of a small island they are naturally timid at venturing out alone into the world, and by the means of such a community, any scruples they might have would be over come and they would make valuable settlers to whatever country they went. If necessary, I shall come myself and settle in the new community."

Bring Few Settlers First

Going more into the details of the proposed plan, Mayor Crookall said that the idea called for the securing of a large tract of land and at first a few families, accompanied by a number of the younger men, together with some artisans and a tradesmen or two, would come to Canada and while the Artisans were building their homes, the others would clear the land. By the means a small Manx village would be erected and this would gradually grow into a good sized town as the eligible youth of man joined them. The Mayor stressed the point that the settlement would be entirely agricultural in nature as only sufficient of the other classes would be permitted to come over to meet the requirements of the community.

Last year Mayor Crookall travelled Canada from coast to coast to look to the opportunities for the founding of the community, but he stated as yet the plan was in the embryo and that no definite province had been decided upon. One reason for the tour of the leading Manx-men this year was that so a number of them could see something of Canada and also to visit the various manxmen in Ontario and Quebec, as well as Cleveland, where there is a large Manx settlement with a view to securing their attendance at a grand re-union of Manxmen in the Isle of Man in June of this year. At that time the plans to form the Manx colony in Canada will be formally placed before the convention, and if the scheme is adopted, as anticipated, immediate steps will be taken with the Government to acquire the land and commence active operation in laying the basis for colony.

After Visiting the States

The Manx party, which includes other members of the House of Keys, as well as prominent business men and newspaper proprietors, were welcomed to the City of Toronto Manxmen and made a tour of inspection, visiting the Parliament Buildings and being received by Mayor Foster. The party left for Niagara Falls on the 2 o'clock Canadian National train and from there will go to Cleveland returning subsequently to Montreal via Philadelphia, Washington and New York, they will sail for the Isle of Man on the Steamship Alberic, returning in time for the opening of the world Manx Association. Mayor Crookall stated that more than 500 Manxmen would come from Canada and California, arrangements being made with the Canadian National to operate special trains for their convenience to the port of sailing.

CANADA IS A NATION

Canada is a nation, some day in the near future she will be a great nation and it is within the range of possibilities that she will be the greatest unit of the British Empire. It is a wonderful country, a country of unlimited resources and magnificent possibilities. As a nation she celebrates her sixtieth anniversary this year. What better way for you to celebrate it than by taking a trip "Across Canada and Back", and see for yourself the reason for this optimism about the future. Prof. Laird, of Macdonald College, has arranged with the Canadian Pacific Railway for a special train of sleeping cars to leave Toronto on July 30th, cross the continent and get back to Toronto on August 15th, and in that space of 21 days to see all the principal cities, and the noted beauty spots of the West. After Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and the principal cities of the prairies, there is the panorama of the Rockies, and those famous beauty spots, Banff, Lake Louise, Emerald Lake and the Yoho Valley. Then there are two wonderful motor drives, from Banff to Windermere 104 miles, and from Field to Lake Louise 40 miles. The Okotoney district with Nelson for the capital, and Okanagan Valley fruit country in which is located Penticton will be visited and Vancouver and Victoria, thence rapidly growing Pacific coast cities will delight everyone.

An illustrated booklet descriptive of the tour is now ready, and can be had on application to W. Pullen, District Passenger Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Toronto, or F. Sinclair Laird, Macdonald College, P.O., Que. ja18, 29, m2, 10, 18, 26.

Many accidents have occurred the past two days on the Provincial Highway west of Woodstock through slippery pavement.

Here and There

Experiments in the Pacific Ocean by the Canadian Fisheries, being made by R. B. Cann, of Lunenburg, mouth, N.S., with his new halibut boat, "Jeannie Powell," following his extensive studies in the Pacific Coast.

The Canadian Pacific's net earnings for the first quarter of this year were the largest on record; that quarter, at $44,256,809, or an increase of $2,801,051 over the corresponding quarter of last year. Net however, was a little lower than last year at $6,462,628, compared with $6,531,087.

Madame Jane Sion, champion of European women swimmers, arrived in Canada about the middle of May on the Canadian Pacific steamer "Montnairn" from Antwerp She will take part in various swimming marathons in Montreal and other centres in both Canada and the United States, including events in the Toronto Exhibition.

The total catch of seafish on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts during the month of March showed an increase of nearly 2,000,000 pounds over the catch for the same month last year. The catch amounted to 21,183,000 pounds, valued at $1,224,796, according to a report of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. The increase was due largely to increased catch of herring on the Pacific Coast.

Two thousand poultrymen from the United States will attend the forthcoming World's Poultry Congress, to be held at Ottawa July 27 to August 4. The delegates will be headed by the Hon. W. M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, officially representing the Government. He will be accompanied by assistant secretary R. W. Dunlop. Some 25 States are participating.

That the prospects for British settlers coming to New Brunswick were good; that, in fact, arrangements had already been made for bringing out a substantial number of British families to this province, was asserted by J. A. Murray, provincial superintendent of Immigration and Industry, who has returned from England where he was acting in the interests of the Government. He has received many enquiries as to the settlement prospects in New Brunswick.

That Calgary district has again taken its place in the front rank as a producer of horses in the Dominion was pointed out by G. H. Hutton, President of the Calgary Rotary Club, who declared that 57 carloads of horses had been shipped east from Calgary in three weeks, recently. Indicating the growth of the industry in the district he referred to the large number of entries received for the Calgary Horse Show, totalling more than 800, as compared with 600 last year.

Evidence of the interest in the new departure, among Canadian Pacific locomotives known as the "Jubilee" type or "Pacific" engine in its remarkable combination of greatly increased power and speed, coupled with very slightly increased weight, is furnished by the fact that principals of this locomotive with a view to using them in these schools for the information of the children.

Gene Tunney, world's champion heavy weight boxer, arrived in Montreal at the Canadian Pacific Windsor Street Station, May 6, and proceeded north to the Mazzas in the Laurentian Mountains. From here he proceeded by motor to Five Fingers Lake, spending several days fishing. Tunney was accompanied on the outing by W. O. McGeehan, sporting editor, New York Herald-Tribune, and W. A. Davenport, of Colliers Weekly.

BELLE THEATRE

A motor car without a motor is the newest "freak" to find its place in motion picture.

The "motionless flivver" figures prominently in "Rubber Tires," a screen version of Frank Condon's humorous story of the auto camps, which Alan Dale directed for Cecil B. DeMille, and which comes to the Belle theatre today, Friday and Saturday.

Harrison Ford, who plays the male lead, if he is to follow his sweetheart, Bessie Love, who has motored Westward via the auto camps with her family, must have an automobile. He has only $25, but with this small sum he is able to buy a Ford wreck which boasts no engine. He purchases the car, and pulling the broken down automobile stall, works his way across country with the aid of unsuspecting and gullible motorists.

This is but one of a series of humorous situations in "Rubber Tires," as prepared for the screen by Zelda Sears and Tay Garnett. Don't miss it.

MEN AND WOMEN WORK ON GIANT ENG. AEROPLANE

Bowden, Yorkshire, Eng., May 16.—Three hundred persons including 140 girls, are working on the new giant airship for the government which will be finished, the largest in the world when complete, with a length of 700 feet and diameter 130 feet. Its capacity will be more than four million cubic feet and a maximum speed of 70 miles an hour. There will be accommodation for 125 passengers.

Workers are conveyed to and from the aerodrome by motor bus from outlying districts. The experts are housed on the site of the aerodrome, and no strangers are allowed anywhere near the grounds.

Editor Reads Riot Act to Certain Merchants Who Do Not Advertise

Deseronto, May 23.—Pats reeling to all and sundry is given by the Pole:—

For going on nine years, the post, which has consistently carried on a Trade-at-Home campaign, has been waiting for certain Deseronto business men whose business interests we have been protecting to spend a little money in advertising in this paper. Many these people who will carry on business and make money under the Post's policy of protection have failed to do their bit, consequently we are opening these columns to Belleville and Napanee business houses whose advertising will not compete with advertising that is not now nor has been carried in these columns.

OWLS WAR ON RATS

Washington, May 23.—Cats, traps and poison have failed to end the plague of rats that infest Lord Howe Island in the South Seas. The Australian government has at length to see what could be done to relieve the 11 inhabitants, who threatened to quit the island. The expert sent for two cases of California barn owls, most persistent of all enemies of rats.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Editor "The Intelligencer":

Dear Sir:—At the present time we are reading and hearing so much about our country's federation, that I would like, in this connection, to suggest that the Committee in charge of affairs get in touch with the people who are now recently presented "The Romance of Canada" and see to get them to present it for the benefit of those who failed to see it at the time it was given.

I feel sure that many people say that it was the finest Pageant ever given in Canada, and its presentation is more suitable, or more appropriate for our Jubilee.

Every person who took part in it, from the Goddess of Fame to the tiny fairies who attended the Snow Queen, did their parts so exceedingly well.

The recitations were of the best, and with Mr. Major as Master of Ceremonies, and Mr. Bankier singing there was little left to wish for.

As one listened to the different parts, it helped to make one more proud of being a Canadian and to realize something of the struggles of our forefathers, to make this our HOME.

The costumes were delightful, lending an additional charm, seldom seen in amateur affairs.

I feel sure, could it be repeated, most of those who missed it, on the first evening, as well as hundreds of others, would crowd to see it.

A RATE PAYER.

Belleville, Ont., May 25, 1927.

To the Editor:—

Allow me dear Editor, to enquire in the columns of your valuable paper by reference to liquor permits issued under the Government Control Act appearing in this paper on Thursday the 19th inst.

There are those that Indians are refused permits why then should our Canadian soldiers who have been fighting for Government Control, during election, can to no end, one after the other call-ing for "Whiskey" and even women included to get a flag vote. Now that the Indian is in force and Indian has to take the best seat is there anything fair about that? Could it be possible that our men and boys are more dangerous to be at large in an intoxicated condition than our white brothers. Not that I care so much as I'm greatly opposed to strong drink myself, nor must one go proud to be an Indian, always ready and willing to stand by my own race of people. Thanking you for your space.

Yours and oblige,

(Signed) A Lonely Indian.

WILL PROVIDES FOR DINNERS ONCE A YEAR

New York, May 16.—Here's an addition to stories about freak wills.

Fritz Bernard Behr, inventor of the Monorail, friend of the late King Edward VII, and noted German clubman, has left a legacy of 300 pounds, $1500) the interest of which is to be used to provide seven of his best friends with an annual dinner.

Cosmo Hamilton, English playwright, who is one of the seven, verified details of the legacy today. He and the other six five to continue the annual dinners as long as two are alive. The survivor gets the 300. The legacy is left to commemorate Behr's friendship with the seven. Hamilton said he thought he heside himself over his peers.

Behr died recently at the age of 58.

Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Cooke, of Beachville, were given a surprise party by relatives on their 50th wedding anniversary.

Sick and Tired No Pep

You Are Full of Spring Poisons

Calomel is now put up in a new form called Thanol Chlorated Tablets. They are easy to take, do not nauseate, no salts, or seidlitz needed next morning like ordinary Calomel. Calomel is the only drug known that acts upon the liver. It cleanses the stomach, kidney, bladder, blood and bowels, driving away all common complaints such as indigestion, gas in stomach, headaches and other such ills. Take two Thanol Calomel tablets before meals or two at bedtime then next morning drink a glass or two of hot water and away goes all the poisons, day's waste toxins and poisons before more food is taken in. You then arise in the morning refreshed, invigorated, full of vigor and vivacity, good appetite, brain clear, mind composed and ready for a good day's work. McKeown's Drug Store, Belleville, have these tablets.

SULPHUR WILL QUICKLY CLEAR PIMPLY SKIN

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms of body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur.

PILES GO QUICK

Without Salves or Cutting

Thousands who have piles don't know that quick and permanent relief can be accomplished with internal medicines. Cutting or any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will not remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a stagnation of blood circulation in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt found the remedy and called it the prescription HEM-ROID. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in many cases with a marvelous record of success, such a wonderful record that HEM-ROID is now sold by druggists everywhere under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with outside applications. Get a package of HEM-ROID from J. S. McKeown today. It has given quick and lasting relief to thousands and should do the same for you.

APPOINTMENT IS RECEIVED WITH MUCH PLEASURE

London, May 21 (C.P.).—The appointment of Admiral of the Fleet Sir Charles P. Madden as First Sea Lord, in succession to Lord Beatty, has been received with unqualified satisfaction by the Navy. Although the public has heard less about Sir Charles Madden than certain of his brother officers, in the service itself he has long been an outstanding figure, and possesses its confidence in an unusual degree. During the war he served afloat continuously. As chief of staff to Admiral Jellicoe, and subsequently as second-in-command of the Grand Fleet, he was largely responsible for the direction of strategy in the principal theatre of naval operations. Among certain other ill-considered projects which he strongly and, successfully opposed was the proposed invasion of Heligoland by the battle fleet.

Sir Charles joined the Navy 52 years ago. His first experience of active service was in the Egyptian War of 1882, as an acting Sub-Lieutenant in H. M. S. Ruby. As a post-Captain his first ship was H. M. S. Good Hope, the flagship of Admiral Evans, commanding the Cruiser Squadron in 1902-04. Then followed two years of duty at the Admiralty as naval assistant to the Controller and, latterly, to the First Sea Lord. In 1907 he went to sea again as Captain of H. M. S. Dreadnought and chief of staff, Home Fleet, but soon returned to Whitehall as private secretary to the First Lord and, in 1910-11 as a junior Sea Lord. Attaining flag rank in April, 1911, he was appointed successively Rear-Admiral in the First Division of the Home Fleet and Rear-Admiral commanding the third and second Cruiser Squadrons.

When Sir John Jellicoe was given command of the Grand Fleet on the eve of war he applied for and obtained the services of Admiral Madden as his chief of staff. The latter served in this capacity until 1917, when he became second-in-command of the Grand Fleet. At the Battle of Jutland he was present with Admiral Jellicoe in the fleet flagship Iron Duke receiving the following mention in the Commander-in-Chief's despatch: "Through out a period of 21 months of war his services have been of inestimable value." His good judgment, his long experience of fleets, special gift for organization, and his love for unlimited work, have all been of the greatest assistance to me."

For his service during the war he was created a baronet. In 1919-22 he commanded the Atlantic Fleet, and upon vacating this post was appointed first and principal aide-de-camp to His Majesty. He became an Admiral of the Fleet in 1924. Sir Charles Madden is a brother-in-law of Earl Jellicoe, having married in 1905 the third daughter of Sir Charles Cayzer.

THIS CAUSED THE WAR

New York, May 23.—At last the responsibility for the World War has been placed. Dr. George D. Stewart, president of the American College of Surgeons, blames cancer. Had not cancer killed Frederick, II. of Prussia, who espoused democratic principles, the great conflict probably never would have started, he says.

GRAND STAND DESTROYED

Norfolk, Va., May 26.—A sudden storm today blew down the grandstand of the Portsmouth Baseball Park during a game at which Commissioner Landis was the guest of honor.

One man was killed and it was estimated that between 50 and 75 persons were injured. Thirty were taken to an hospital and many others removed to their homes after receiving emergency treatment.

DEATH IN CHAIR EASIEST OF ALL, STATES WARDEN

Tells Why This Superior To Other Modes of Execution

MUCH QUICKER

Current Stops the Heart Action in 1-240th of Second

Columbus, O., May 2(—No one wants to die in the electric chair, yet it is the easiest of all deaths, according to Warden P. E. Thomas, of Ohio penitentiary.

Warden Thomas, who has made a careful study of the subject, recommends the electric chair as far superior to other forms of violent death, and he is willing to recommend it in preference to death by asphyxiation, drowning, carbolic acid, a leap from a tall building or even a shot from a pistol.

"A current of 1,850 volts is applied at the start," he said, in extolling the merits of the chair.

Heart Action Stops

"Almost instantaneously — in less than one-two-hundred-fortieth of a second, according to cyllographic test —heart action stops.

"It takes 24 times as long as that, one-tenth of a second, before the sensation made by the prick of a needle at the base of the skull is recorded by the brain."

Thomas went on to explain the effects of the charge carried by the chair, which is left on long enough would cremate the body of the victim.

A Man Is Dead

"While the current is on, the heart remains still. When it is turned off the heart frequently commences to beat again, although the man in the chair is not breathing. The man is dead. The heart has not the sustaining qualities. It beats cannot be accelerated nor strengthened.

"As long as the voltage passes through the body the respiratory organs are paralyzed. This causes the air to be forced from the lungs. At the same time the blood corpuscels disintegrate.

"Either of these, the paralysis of the lungs or the disintegration of the blood corpuscles, is of itself fatal.

"Blood of an electrocuted person does not congeal. The shattered corpuscles can never be put together again and the idea that an electrocuted person may be revived is false.",

Easier in Summer

"A sickly man does not die as easily for the reason that his skin is dry and does not conduct the electricity as well as when it is damp. And for the same reason, it is easier to execute a man in the summer time, when his body is bathed in perspiration, than in the winter, when his skin is usually dry," he said.

Thomas said that during the electrocution the condemned man's body temperature rises of 148 and the temperature of the brain to 200 degrees, although man cannot live at a higher temperature than 110 degrees.

MULE RESCUES PONY

Forsyth, Mo., May 2(—A spotted Shetland pony, carried by the rise of the White river, which had invaded its pasture, struck out for the center of the current, apparently with suicidal intent. Its pasture pal a white mule leaped in after the pony, struggled half an hour to turn it toward shore, finally seized its mane and dragged it to land.

Earl Fedak, CENTRE, former Budapest stage favorite, now in this country, has suffered a series of reverses lately that have made afi-acted tragedy very real for her. Beautiful Miss Darvas, Hungarian dancer, LEFT, inflicted the first of the series when she supplanted Miss Fedak as star in the dramas of Ferenc Molnar. Later, Miss Fedak then divorced from Molnar, her playwright husband, discovered Tibor Mindszenthy, who she thought resembled the late Rudolph Valentino so much that she brought him to Hollywood but his success there was far short of her expectations. She blames Vilma Banky, a competing film beauty, RIGHT, for thwarting her plans.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT BRINGS OUT BOYS

Quebec, May 25—A party of 35 boys ranging from 15 to 17 years brought out by the Ontario Government, disembarked here this afternoon from the White Star Liner Doric. They left shortly afterwards on the Special Canadian National Railways trains through to Guelph where they will go to the Vinny Ridge Farm. Under the Ontario scheme these boys are distributed to farmers throughout Ontario with whom they gain practical farm experience but for three years they are under supervision of the Ontario Government.

NEITHER GOT HER MAN

Lenberg, May 25.—Strolling along one afternoon, Lena Bonder and Helen Jorawski acknowledged the greeting of a mutual boy-friend, later quarrelled over which one his greeting was intended for. Next morning they fought a duel. Lena was wounded and permanently disfigured. Helen was spurned by the boy-friend because she was such a good shot.

FIRE THREATENS HOME

St. John, N.B., May 25.—Fire in a rear shed threatened the home of Hon. W. E. Foster, former Dominion Secretary of State, and Ex-Premier of New Brunswick, for a time this afternoon. The flames were extinguished before extensive damage was done. The family was absent at the time of the fire.

CONFEDERATION GREW SLOWLY IN MINDS OF MANY

Seven Men Get Most of the Glory For Development

Who first conceived the idea of linking together in a strong and permanent union the scattered colonies of British North America, it would be difficult to say. Probably, like a good many other important movements, the idea of Confederation was a gradual growth, simmering in the minds of a few men of vision until the time was ripe to make it a reality. Most people are inclined to associate it with the Fathers of Confederation, but the idea is much earlier than their day. They, however, took hold of it and simmered and fashioned it into a practicable scheme.

Of the thirty-three Fathers of Confederation, perhaps seven may be regarded as the governing minds. These were the actual Fathers of Confederation—Macdonald, Cartier, Galt, Tupper, Brown, McGee, Tilley, and it is probable that Galt, although little is heard of him today, should rank with even among these. Without the influence and enthusiasm of Cartier it would have been impossible to persuade French Canada to consent to the union; Brown ensured the support of the influential Reformers of Upper Canada; Tupper and Tilley won the Maritimers; McGee by his eloquence swayed the Irish vote; and Macdonald's inimitable leadership united Confederation through countless difficulties; but it remains true that without the far-sightedness and enthusiasm and constructive mind of Alexander Galt it is very unlikely if the Dominion would now be celebrating its Diamond Jubilee.

Galt saw years before his associates that a union of all the provinces was the only solution of the problem, the only way out of the political tangle which every year was becoming more hopeless. He took the idea of Confederation and, with infinite care, built it up into a complete and practicable scheme. The practical politicians of his day were inclined at first to laugh at him and to brush his plan aside as an impossible dream, but in the end they were forced to admit that it was not only practicable but the only one while road to peace and security. Galt not only developed the scheme of Confederation, but he more than any other man, prepared the public mind to accept it. In season and out of season he hailed Confederation, and, although no spell-binder, his clear, logical mind, his complete faith in the idea, and the confidence that the people had in his integrity, won the support of thousands of citizens who otherwise might have regarded the union of the provinces as a mad and dangerous experiment.

Without questioning for a moment the debt that Canada owes to the genius of Macdonald, in steering the ship of state through the rocks and whirlpools of party, racial and provincial jealousies and misunderstandings into the harbour of Confederation, it is only just to Alexander Galt to remember that he, above all others, sowed the field that Macdonald reaped. Macdonald was a shrewd and cautious statesman. He had no faith in rash experiments. He knew that the wise and successful politician let the people the way they were already inclined to go. Macdonald was indeed the captain of Confederation, but Galt was its pioneer.

Altogether, before he died after Confederation, Alexander Tilloch Galt gave nearly sixty years to the service of his country. He lived to see its weak and scattered provinces welded into a powerful and ambitious dominion. A man of rare personal charm, modest and unassuming but with a quiet dignity that commanded respect, he had the genius of his family for finance and colonization, and was a master of diplomacy. It is only right that Canadians should remind themselves that they owe a debt of gratitude to this man whose constructive vision and untiring effort were devoted so largely to the creation and upbuilding of the Dominion.

CAFETERIA HAS INVADED NORTH

Edmonton, Alta., May 18.—The soda fountain and Cafeteria have invaded the far north.

At Port Smith, on the northern edge of Alberta, the jumping-off-place for the Arctic and all points north, Frank Commbeare, farthest north hotel keeper, has set up a lunch counter, bright burnished nickle trimmings and every thing, with straws colored pops, ice-cream and all the rest.

Now, Arctic traders and trappers who are hardened to fighting off huskies for a piece of frozen fish or a well-knawed caribou hock, are offered hot tamales, real hot dogs, the old half of bread and a pound til meat, to say nothing of coffee and tea.

Even the Indian braves who were wont to make a dainty repast on strips of well-worn moccasions and worn-out dog harness, take kindly to the luxurious...

BIGAOUETTE FOUND GUILTY

Quebec, May 26.—Eugene Bigaouette was found guilty of the murder of his mother by a jury in the Court of King's Bench last evening. The jury added a rider recommending mercy. Judge Marchand sentenced Bigaouette to hang on August 19.

GEESE BRAVED CAN. WINTER

Davidson, Sask., May 18.—Eight wild geese, or "Canadian Honkers" braved the cold of a northern winter here. Five of them fell to the guns of spring hunters. Last fall these eight geese refused to be penned up in winter-quarters on the Lloyd goose reserve. Having their wings pinioned did not appeal to them, so they staged out in the cold open spaces. The way they survived the ordeal is passing local nimrods.

Girls Who Wear The High Hat Walk Alone

The man without a country was a lonely guy, but the girl without a boy friend is a more pitiable object.

She goes her drab, colorless way, envying her more fortunate friends, building up a little protecting wall of "don't care" — "hate the things anyway," superiority against their pity. And the tragedy of it is that she's no other taken at her word, dismissed as a girl who "doesn't care for men," left out of things she might, just as well have had.

There's Louisa, who is writing today. Louisa says she has no men friends because she "won't pet, make it fast over them the way girls have to, to keep them."

She says she's glad of it! But you don't have to read far into Louisa's letter to glimpse the loneliness an heartache there.

DEAR ELSIE:

I am in a rather unfortunate position, my own fault, no doubt. I came out here from a city in another State, where I was popular and liked. We had wonderful times. There is nothing like a small town for fun. At times I think I will go crazy here. Out here it seems all any man as well be dead as not to be a petter, and I'm not.

I have no men friends because I won't pet and make a fuss over them the way the girls have to, to keep them. I don't care about that, for I care nothing for their company, anyway. I can pay my way wherever I go, but wouldn't you think there would be other girls who would enjoy pleasant times with girls? I can't seem to find any.

When I do make a little plan to do something pleasant with a girl, she thinks nothing of breaking it at the last moment with the excuse that A MAN ASKED HER FOR A DATE! That is the very word a young lady gave me yesterday when she broke an engagement we had been planning on for a week. She saw I was hurt and she said: "Well, you don't understand. If you cared for men I could have had you in on it, but no use in taking you when you won't be a good sport."

To be a good sport must you pet them, and fall all over them? Apparently, yes. But what hurts me is that just because a girl doesn't care for that sort of thing, the girls drop her, too. The girls in the office where I work treat me as if I wasn't there most of the time.

Because I hate men is no sign I hate good times. I dance beautifully. I play golf better than anybody I know here. I dress well, and have an exceptionally fine voice. I don't say this to brag.

I wish I could be like the others, but I was brought up differently. And when I hear them talk of their good times I know they didn't get them for nothing; and I think, "Anyhow, I have my self respect, even if I have no friends." It is hard, but right is always hard.

But do you think I wil ever meet anyone, man or woman, who will share my high ideals?

LOUISA.

Cling to the high ideals, Louisa, but lose the high hat.

Get over that idea that there are no innocent good times between girls and boys. That's not true and you know it. You're simply using that as an alibi for your failure to be in on them.

When Mary or Margaret or Helen tells you about the perfectly wonderful time she had last night, and you answer a little and say, "I'd rather stay home with a book!" your queer your chances of being included in the next good time.

It isn't your refusal to pet, but your top-lofty attitude toward those that do, that is making for all the loneliness, and dislike. Everyone hates being sneered at, and high-hatted. Everyone likes the girl who listens frankly and appreciatively to the other fellow's good times.

If you'd be honest and say "I wish I had a boy friend, so I could cruise in on some of the fun!" the chances are the girls would scout around and find a brother or a cousin or somebody for you.

But so long as you sniff and look superior and say "I hate men!" you'll be left to hate them.

Climb out of your shell, girl! Change your tactics. You're only young once and if you don't make a big effort to grab off some of those good times now, you may never have them.

You don't have to be popular. But you'll never get on in the world pretending you don't need your friends, both boys and girls. They'll take you at your word, and then call to separate, while a fork will thoroughly blend the ingredients.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Madame de Boulle, one of the most beautiful women in Paris, recently had a dining room built in her house entirely of glass, walls, floor and ceiling and even the table is of black glass.

The newest type of hat for evening wear is a fanciful creation of lamenese shaded chiffon flowers, and a note of contrast is given by a long streamer bow and ends of dark satin.

White narcissus is the latest whim for the little clusters of flowers at the side of the hat.

A-dvice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young man with a fair education. I am not bad looking and I have a pretty good position for a country boy of 22.

Here is my problem:

I have never had a real romantic love affair. I have been keeping company with a young lady who I love teaching in a country school. She is neither pretty nor wealthy, but she has many admirable qualities, and she loves me devotedly.

I am not sure that I love her, although I have the highest respect for her. However, I am quite sure that I love no one else.

My father and mother are dead and I live a very lonesome life. Ought I marry this girl in our unromantic way? Or ought I wait until romance really comes into my life? TED.

TED: Unless you are absolutely certain that you love her I must advise you against marriage with the girl you describe. You are still very young and must not despair of finding the real, romantic love that you are seeking.

If you were both many years older your affection and admiration for the young woman might be an adequate basis for marriage. But marriage on that basis at your age would be a hazardous undertaking. If you married her now there is no certainty that the love you are seeking might not come after marriage—for somebody else than your wife. Certainly you must realize what a disaster that would be.

Why not continue the friendship? Perhaps at some time you may discover that you care more for her than you realize.

Have you thought of making new contacts, of meeting other girls? Interest yourself in varied activities and people. I am sure that will relieve the loneliness that has made you contemplate marriage at this time.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

"Need the aid of more nimble fingers, Jimmie?" asked Sybil good-naturedly, coming up behind him.

He whirled about and stared at her a full minute, before he recognized his sister in the lustrously gowned young beauty who held out her hand to him. "Well, if it isn't Sybil!" he said, at length. "Where did you drop from?"

She told him.

"Then you didn't elope with Winslow?"

"Yes, I did—but not very far," she admitted, with a grin, as she sketched the story briefly for him.

"How about you, Jimmie?" she asked "Happy—and successful?"

His face clouded.

"Jane's got a rotten disposition."

"You can't have everything, Jimmie" Sybil reminded him. "One must pay for a free living, in some way."

Jimmie scowled.

"Sometimes I almost think I'll go to work and get out of this hole. She's so stingy that you'd think she believed she could have got a man for her looks."

Irony flickered in Sybil's eyes.

"When she got you, she certainly didn't get a man," she remarked crisply. "Jimmie do you ever hear anything of Ted?"

He shook his head.

"Guess he made a clean get-away."

Sybil stared down the Avenue where through the mists of twilight, the Arc de Triomphe was softly etched against a purpling sky. She turned her gaze to her worthless brother and held out her hand again.

"Poor Ted! Poor Jimmie — and poor me!" she said softly. "What a family! Without loyalty or affection. None of us earnin' in what part of the world, or under what circumstances, the others may be running. Good-bye, Jimmie. I'm off for America on Monday. Are you coming back some day?"

"Dunno if I know," was the gloomy reply. "It's up to Janet. I'm only a dog on a leash."

Sybil left him, feeling curiously saddened. For the first time in her life it occurred to her that, left to themselves, men brought catastrophe upon their own heads without outside intervention.

She dismissed the thought and later forgot all about it, because, during her crossing, she met Serge Patton.

CHAPTER 21.

A ROMANTIC SOUL

Serge Patton's baptismal name was Samuel Patton, as Sybil learned much later—and not from him. He was an American and he hailed from a small town, but he said he was an Hungarian.

How could an eminent violinist and composer (to quote his own rating of himself) be expected to handicap himself by answering to the name of Samuel—or, worse, yet, Sam? The homely Christian name had no artistic "atmosphere" so was Patton had rechristened himself "Serge" and had come to live in a studio in New York.

All this information came to Sybil long after she met "Serge" on her voyage home.

She saw him the second morning out from Cherbourg. He was striding up and down the deck with a girl of the flapper type. Unlike the other passengers, he wore no cap, and the stiff sea-breeze ruffled his long dark hair that fell in an untidy "cow-lick" over his forehead. To Sybil's disillusioned eye, his manner seemed artificial and his gestures studied.

The next day Sybil's chair beside her was vacant, and, later in the morning, she found him occupying it. While she read, deeply interested in a French book, recommended and purchased by the paragon Hilda, who had written careful translations of the phrases in the margin, Sybil was nevertheless conscious of frequent glances from the occupant of the next chair.

In the afternoon, the sun was obscured by lowering clouds rising out of the west, and the breeze blew chill. Sybil read on, trying vainly to keep her slim legs covered with the totally inadequate length of her wrap.

It was then that her neighbor leaned over and said:

"Pardon—but you are cold. I am going below for a rug. Would you care to have me bring one for you?"

She lifted her cool gaze.

"Thanks, if you don't mind. My cabin is 328. My maid, is there—she'll give you my rug."

When he came back with it over his arm, he turned her in it with that graceful, attentive air which belongs only to men who know a great deal about women. After that, he asked permission to introduce himself.

Patton was a good American name, but the "Serge" puzzled Sybil, until he explained that he was a violinist. He had been studying in Vienna for the summer, and now he was returning to New York, where he had a series of concerts planned, he told Sybil.

They had tea together and walked the deck for an hour before dinner. That evening they danced in the salon and he paid her devoted attention, scowling darkly when a ship's officer and one or two men she had met the previous night, cut in.

The following day, he managed to be seated at her table. "Thereafter, he was her devoted slave. She could not move without stumbling over him. It rather amused her and, as the rest of the passengers seemed uninteresting she permitted him to monopolize her.

For a time, he kept up the pretense of being an Hungarian; later, he confessed that his mother was Hungarian his father being a descendant of the earliest American settlers, and finally, in an hour of utter burst of confidence, it came out that the Hungarian strain in his mother dated back some generations.

"But it must be that I get my talent from her side of the family," he explained. "She had temperament, best Dad," he shrugged, "well, he was crass ness business-like. He made his money in a pickle and preserving concern, and he wanted me to keep the firm going when he died. Fancy, with my temperament!" He laughed. "Of course, I left at once for Europe, and an old employee of Dad's is staggering along with the business. I hope he succeed, for his own sake, but it really hurts me to think our name was ever connected with anything so—so crude."

"And yet what would life be without pickles?" asked Sybil flippantly.

He looked at her reproachfully.

"Sometimes I think you have no soul," he murmured. "And yet, can such beauty be soulless?"

"I'm not sure about that," she smiled. "But I can assure you that I'm quite heartless."

THREE CANADIAN WOMEN REGAIN THEIR HEALTH

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Every Suffering Woman Should Be Interested in Reading Their Letters

Sussex, King's Co., N.B.—"I have taken your medicine and find that it does just what you say it will do. I am the mother of four boys and they are all healthy. When I was carrying my first baby I was suffering from bearing-down feelings and could hardly get around to do my work. I would have to lie quite for a good deal of the time. There was not a great deal to do, so I managed to fix or seven months by lying down several times a day. I saw in one of your little books what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for women in my condition, so I said to my husband, 'I am going to try this medicine.' He got me a bottle and it gave me great relief. I got so I was able to stand on my feet and get around at my work. Now, I have my own work to do, as I am a widow, I always recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and tell them just what it has done for me. I have recommended it to my neighbor and she says she is feeling more better since taking it."—Mrs. Thomas Anderson, R. R. 2, Sussex, King's County, New Brunswick.

Women pay attention to what their neighbors say regarding health matters. In this way the results of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound are circulated in every neighborhood.

Barrington, N. S.—"I had terrible feelings, headaches, back and side aches and pains all over my body. I would have to go to bed every month and nothing would do me good. My husband and my father did my work for me for I have two children and we have quite a big place. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then got a little book about it. I thought the matter and my husband sent to Eaton's and got me a bottle, and then we got more from the store. I am feeling fine now and do all my work and am able to go out around more. I tell my friends it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that makes me feel so well."—Mrs. Vernon Richardson, Barrington, Nova Scotia.

The Advice of Friends

Shebo, Sask.—"I was irregular and had severe pains in my left side during my periods. Through the advice of friends I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I have more regular periods and am without pain at these times."—Mrs. F. C. Darling, Shebo, Saskatchewan.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for all these troubles.

The Irony of Love

By Charles Garvice

"Leave me out of it," she panted fiercely. "I've nothing to do with you, with any of you but Rafe. It's between me and him." She went to Rafe and touched him on the shoulder "Rafe, look at me," she pleaded. "You don't think I want to harm you? You don't think I mean to—hold you? Look at me, Rafe, and tell me that—that you don't think so mean of me. I shouldn't have come here and given myself away before all these grand people, if I'd meant to keep a hold on you. No, no, Rafe, forgive me! And say you'll forgive me. Oh, Rafe, you know what love is, you know what I—I have suffered——"

"I know, Phenie," he said. "If I didn't, I'd find it hard to forgive you; but I do know— Why, is there anything I wouldn't do to get the woman I love? Yes, I forgive you, Phenie."

Her hands closed on his arm, closed tightly, as if they would never loose their hold; then suddenly they fell from him; she turned, crossed the room, and gained the door.

"Wait, wait!" Mr. Gurdon said hurriedly stretching out his hand to stop her.

Phenie threw up her head, showed her teeth, as if she were a dog about to bite, struck blindly at the hand that would detain her, and went from them.

CHAPTER XXX.

CRUSHED

Naturally enough, Rafe was for some time too stunned to fully realize what had happened, the extent of the injury that had been done him. All that he could grasp was that Maude and he were divided forever, that they had been thrust apart, that he should never hold her in his arms again, never kiss her, call her his. Between them had been erected, by an unspeakable guile, a barrier which could not be thrown down. It was this that crushed the life out of him as he stood there, with the heather, heedless of the direction he was taking. He wanted to walk away from everything, from himself.

The sky clouded over, a drifting rain began to fall, and a mist gathered over the hills, one of those mists which penetrate the thickest clothing and soon wet one through; but Rafe was unconscious of it, and walked on until he was exhausted, mentally and physically; then he threw himself full length on the heather, with his face on his arms, and lay there as still and motionless as if he were as dead as he longed to be; but after a while, chilled by the mist and the rain, his brain cleared somewhat, and he was able to see more plainly.

Indeed, there was no problem to solve, no mystery; Phenie had made it all too clear; he had been sacrificed to her love and Travers' hate; and, strange as it may seem, Rafe could sympathize with both of them. As Phenie had said, when she pleaded for his forgiveness, he knew what love was, and how far on the path of good or evil it will drive; and he could understand, also, Travers' hatred, for he had suffered a great wrong.

If he had only—only to me,' Rafe thought; if he had only told me who he was—poor dad's son, just as I am —I'd have tried to make it up to him. I'd have shared all I've got with him; we'd have gone halves, like brothers. It was all I could have done for him, but I'd have done that willingly."

Blood is thicker than water, and even at this moment Rafe could not find it in him to hate Travers. If the man had been there, it was possible that he would have fared badly in Rafe's hands; but after Rafe had struck him down, it is more than probable that he would have raised him up and forgiven him; for the instincts and the impulses of the wilds smack of primeval justice. After a while the circus and steam winch racked him re-

CUBS DIVIDE WITH CARDINALS

Moyn Yields Only Five Hits But Reds Lost

New York, May 26.—Chicago and St. Louis divided a double-header at Chicago yesterday, the Cardinals winning the first game 8 to 6, while the Cubs won the second 8 to 4. Alexander went the route for the visitors in the first game, in which he was materially helped by home-run smashes by Bottomley and Bell, the latter's blow coming with the bases filled in the fifth inning. Sherdel was driven off the hill in the eighth inning of the second game when Chicago went on a batting rampage, broke a tied score and won.

Three straight singles and a sacrifice fly in the fourth defeated the Reds 7 to 0 at Cincinnati and gave Pittsburgh all three games of the series. The Pirate dependables turned the trick, Cuyler—P—Waner and Wright drawing singles while Traynor clubbed the ball for a fly to right field. The Red fielding was working better and the Pirates were caught in two double-plays. Carl Mays held the Pirates to five hits while Hill was hit six times.

American League

New York, May 26.—The Cleveland Indians wound up a long stay at home yesterday by defeating the Detroit Tigers 9 to 8 in a hard-hitting contest. Hudlin, Cleveland's young pitcher, had the better of Hankins who was knocked out of the box in the sixth inning when the Indians scored four runs. Extra base hits featured the contest, Cleveland marking up three doubles and four triples while Detroit got two doubles and three triples.

The Chicago White Sox won both games of a double-header with the Browns at St. Louis, 14 to 8, and 1 to 0, and thereby tightened their hold on second place. The Browns used five pitchers in the first game to stop the Chicago batters. In the second game the Browns held the Sox scoreless until the fifth when B. Falk walked and circled the bases on two sacrifices and a wild throw.

International League

New York, May 26.—Exercising complete mastery over the Bisons and forcing ten to die via the strike-out route, Pitcher Sylvester Johnson cleverly piloted the Syracuse Stars to a five to two triumph at Buffalo. Ralph's homer over the left field fence with a man on second gave the Stars a safe advantage in the seventh inning.

CAPTAIN'S BODY FOUND

Marine City, Mich., May 25.—The body of Captain R. Z. Utley, 57, was found floating in the St. Clair River, yesterday. Captain Utley had been missing since April 17. He had been in poor health for some weeks before he disappeared.

CALL BOY AND SICKLE TO BE RACE FAVORITES

Adam's Apple Also Popular Entrant In Great Epsom Classic

Epsom, Eng., May 21. (C.P.)—Old, yet ever new, the Derby will be run on June 1 over the Derby course on Epsom Downs. From all parts of the world visitors, of all classes of humanity, from king to coster; from financier to gypsy, will congregate for something more than a horse race. The Derby has achieved a unique place in the hearts of the British people, and the multitude will be on Epsom Downs as much for its own impressiveness as for the race itself. But all, including even the proportion that will never see another race all season, will inevitably be gripped with the essentials of the Derby—the thudding hoofs and straining bodies of highly-bred horses racing for the Olympian Prize.

The public has a fear—the sport loving public that likes the Derby without being overly-interested in other racing —knows of two horses it thinks will be battling in front. One is Call Boy and the other is Sickle. Call Boy is owned by Frank Curzon, and is by Hurry On—Comedienne. Sickle is owned by Lord Derby, whose ancestor founded the race and is by Phalaris-Selene. There is an interesting touch to the fact that these two share popular favoritism. Call Boy is a half brother of Coronach, who won the Derby last year. Sickle is a half-brother of Colorado, and Colorado won the Two Thousand Guineas, beating Coronach last year. In the Derby Coronach won but Colorado was third. The battle between sons of Hurry On and of Phalaris is thus continued.

There is another horse often mentioned whenever people talk about the Derby. He is Adam's Apple, by Pommern—Mount Whistle, owned by C. W. Whitburn. Adam's Apple defeated both Call Boy and Sickle in the Two Thousand Guineas this year, the three running in the order named. But experts and turf connoisseurs all reiterate that Adam's Apple has no stamina; that he is bred for speed. He negotiated the Rowley Mile in 1.38 1-5, but Call Boy was only a head behind, and Sickle in third place was coming fast at the finish. The Derby is a half mile longer and is considerably harder than the Two Thousand Guineas. From these statements the logical conclusion is that Adam's Apple will approach in the longer race to the more powerful Call Boy and Sickle. That is the way the public looks at it.

But there are other good colts in the race—colts who proved their worth in the great races for two-year-olds last year. The best of these are believed to be Mrs. Chester Beatty's Money-maker; Sir V. Sassoon's Hot Night; Anthony de Rothchild's Tattoo; T. Ryan's Demon and S. Tattersall's Sledmere. Steve Donoghue, who has ridden the winner in the Derby six times, will probably ride Lady Eleanor Torrington's Vanoc-Lord Beaverbrook. Restiguoche is nominated, and his victory would be popular in Canada but the most generous do not concede Restiguoche to be a dangerous contender. He was unplaced in the Two Thousand and was unplaced in his two starts last year. If he runs in the Derby, he will be up against the best three-year-olds in England. Restiguoche is a Gainsborough colt. The favorites Call Boy and Sickle, and the best of the high-class

TORONTO INTERESTS BIG IN ALBERTA

Lethbridge, Alta., — Toronto interests planned $20,000 near the counter of the dominion lands office here recently, in the greatest burst of filing to be done at one time ever since the Devenish interests of Calgary filed on 320 acres on the Lucky Strike Dome last summer.

The Toronto interests filed on an area west of the Cypress Hills, southeast of Medicine Hat. The individuals in the syndicate are not known, but the deal adds to the assurance that Toronto money is now entering the southern Alberta oil development drive

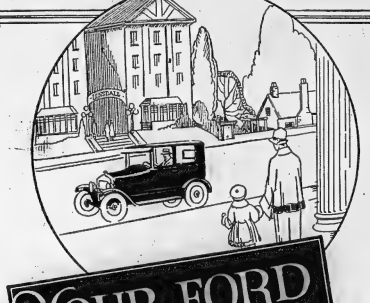

MAGNATE GETS MILEAGE

William Ashton of Baltimore, Md., owner of the Reading baseball team, might quite easily pose as an authority on the care of automobile tires. One of the tires on his Packard Eight has travelled 33,000 miles, and he believed three-year-olds surrounding them do not exhaust the roster of colts who will make substantial backing. The remainder of the probable field includes a number of colts who have shown flashes of excellence. The outcome of a Derby cannot be forecasted with accuracy.

it still has many thousands of miles left.

De Pinedos' Plane Being Towed Into Azores --- Premier Baldwin Disclaims All Idea Of War

DOES NOT IMPLY WAR SAYS PREM. BALDWIN TODAY

Britain Will Have No Further Political Dealings With Moscow

WERE PATIENT

British Government Tolerated Insults and Treachery For Long Time

London, May 27.—Premier Baldwin made the emphatic declaration today that the breaking of diplomatic relations with Moscow "does not mean or imply war against Russia."

Addressing a mass meeting of women Unionists in Albert Hall, the premier said "our rupture of diplomatic relations does not mean or imply war against Russia. It means what it appears to mean—that we do not intend to have any further political dealings with Moscow, but we will wholly in favor of the pursuit of legitimate trade between the two countries." The Premier said he welcomed the opportunity of repeating that the step taken by the government was "solely because we found that their (the Soviets) interference in our domestic affairs was intolerable and because we found that in every part of the world their agents constantly acted in hostile or unfriendly proceedings against us.

"Our decision was not the result of a deep laid plot to get up a world combination against Russia" he said. "On the contrary, as the foreign secretary has said, we refrained for a long time from breaking with Moscow out of consideration for our continental allies and friends. The Soviet Russia made it impossible for us to retain that attitude by their refusal to listen to our repeated warnings. It is part of their propaganda to represent our every move as one which aims at war and which is based on forgery."

DELEGATES SENT TO HYGIENE CONVENTION

Belleville, it is understood, will be among the municipalities represented in Toronto on Wednesday, June 1st, when representatives of the local branches of the Ontario Social Hygiene Council from all parts of the Province will meet in their annual convention.

This health and hygiene congress, marks the inauguration of an intensive educational campaign throughout Ontario which will be carried on by means of moving pictures, a series of study courses, the distribution of specially prepared literature and addresses by a group of outstanding speakers.

The Ontario Council in turn is a branch of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council which experiments similar activities from coast to coast. The exact function of the Council, in all its branches, is set out as a voluntary auxiliary to the Federal and Provincial Health Departments as well as local health officers and boards.

Social problems and the campaign against preventable diseases are the phases of the work receiving the great est attention.

Among those interested in the Council's endeavors, locally, are Dr. V. Hinkley, Chairman of the local Committee; Mr. Stan Nurse, Secretary; Dr. Cronk, M O.H., Miss A. Hazel; Mrs. (Col.) Panton, Magistrate Mikel and others.

NEW CONSTABLE BEEN APPOINTED

Peter Thomson, of Hamilton, has been appointed to the Belleville Police Force and will assume his new duties next week. Coming from Scotland one year ago the new officer made the acquaintance of his home when he was employed in a foundry. He is a married man and will bring his wife and family to the city shortly.

His original home was in Alford, Scotland, where he was engaged in a mine and coming from sturdy Scotch ancestry as he does Mr. Thomson is of fine physique, over six feet in height and weighing in the neighborhood, of 185 pounds. He is an unassuming chap and should develop into an ideal officer. His appointment was chosen from among a large number of others.

There is still one more appointment to be made on the local force and this may be announced within a few days.

AMERICAN OPTICAL COMPANY IS MAKING LARGE EXTENSIONS HERE

Local Plant Will Handle Much of Firm's Export Trade

The American Optical Company of Canada has entered upon an important program of expansion at its Belleville plant. This will result in a largely increased working force, the installation of additional machines and the manufacture of a full line of optical lenses.

When the American Optical Company established the Canadian lens manufacturing plant at Belleville in June, 1922, it began business in a very modest way. The experts were sent here from the parent plant at Southbridge, Mass. and seven local boys and girls were engaged to learn the highly technical business, of producing lenses for the best grade spectacles. From that small beginning the business has advanced steadily, but with never any uncertainty, to its present position with a payroll of $5 hands.

Purchased New Factory

The Deacon Shirt Company factory which was purchased by the Optical Company three years ago, became an ideal location for a plant of this character. It is near the concentrated centre of the city and therefore most convenient for the workers to reach from their homes. It is one of the most attractive factory buildings in the Province of Ontario.

The new machines that have been ordered will be installed during the summer months which has been the case this year for June 25th to July 11th.

Twenty-five additional workers will be required to operate the new equipment and this will bring the workmen up to 100 hands.

An electric elevator is being installed which will serve all four stories of the building. This will make a much appreciated improvement and greatly facilitate the movement of material from one floor to another.

Further mechanical equipment will be added to the machine shop so that a larger part of the repair and replacement work can be done right on the premises.

Manufacture For Export

The Belleville factory will become in a larger sense the medium for the large foreign export business of the American Optical Company. Already export connection has been largely built up with Great Britain and the various British Dominions but there has also been an expanding business

NO LARGE STAFFS WILL BE ENGAGED IN LIQUOR STORES

Toronto, May 27.—The Ontario Liquor Control Board is planning only a put a brace staff on the job of dispensing liquor to the people of this province.

The small demand for permits has stop the board some cause for consideration and the Press was told today from a close official source that Chairman D. B. Hanna and his two colleagues are moving very cautiously in the matter of taking on help.

Small staffs will be the order of the day at first and if the business grows enough to warrant increases more help will be taken on.

In the meantime as permits continue to sell freely, the permit sellers have been given instructions that they are to make their returns to headquarters at the Old University Avenue every week instead of every day. This will reduce the expense and at the same time lessen the clerical work.

ST. PAUL'S OPENS SUN., JUNE 5TH

Services Resumed In Wharf St. Mission After Twelve Years' Absence

St. Paul's Church, Wharf street, closed for the past twelve or thirteen years, will be reopened on Sunday, June 5th, when Rev. John Lyons, vicar of St. Thomas Church, will conduct the first service at 2 p.m. This decision was reached at a meeting of the Advisory Board of St. Thomas Church held last evening in the building for the purpose of inspecting the many changes which have been made since the Church since it was decided to reopen it some weeks ago.

Devout members of the Church of England have at their own expense, totally renovated the building, which have scrubbed the floors and woodwork, men have painted and varnished in their leisure hours and Mr. Frank Ward of John street furnished wiring which was installed gratuitously by W. W. A. Carter, Mr. Harry Smith gave invaluable service in the renovation, and the building is now ready for divine worship.

To further the good work already done, Mr. Joseph Tickell last evening donated sufficient white paint to decorate the interior of the Church and willing hands will do the work gratuitously, and the disused and down-at-the-heel building will be a thing of beauty and will be an attractive spot on the street

The little mission which serves the people of St. Thomas Church residing in the district of Wharf street, was opened in the Parish Hall of St. Thomas Church was opened, and the closing caused the greatest regret. Ven. Archdeacon Bramish gave liberally of his time to further the interests of St. Paul's and it was with keen regret the congregation saw the building fall into disuse.

SLOW PROGRESS

Rescue Steamer Towing Commander De Pinedo's Plane Into Port

Lisbon, Portugal, May 27.—The Italian steamer Superga which is towing Commander De Pinedos seaplane to Horta in the Azores, sent a message to Horta at three o'clock this afternoon that she was still ninety miles distance.

The message said the commander of the Superga was unable to estimate what time the steamer would arrive at Horta, as the wind and conditions of the sea necessitated very slow progress to avoid damaging the seaplane.

SOVIET ENVOYS PREPARED TO GO

Winding Up Affairs In England—Germany To Look After Interests

London, May 27.—The note serving notice between the Soviet and British governments was delivered at Chesham House, Soviet headquarters, this morning. It requested the official Soviet representatives to leave and specified that if they failed to do so they allowed to remain to wind up the affairs of the organization. The British diplomatic mission in Moscow will be recalled in accordance with the terms of the note, but representatives will be allowed about ten days to leave Russia.

The British note sent to Chesham House by special messenger and deliver ed at 10 o'clock by M. Rosengolz, the Soviet charge d'Affaires. Simultaneously with its delivery, several trunks belonging to members of the Russian House were loaded into taxicabs and started for the railway station.

Chesham House announced this afternoon that the German embassy had agreed to look after the Soviet interests here as part of the system of winding up diplomatic affairs which will require some months. Part of the Chesham House staff will be divided between Paris and Berlin, the others returning to Moscow. Most of them including Charge Rosengolz and other officials are planning to leave in less than a week

Moscow Expects War

Moscow, May 27.—The conviction obtaining in all Soviet political circles and generally disseminated through the press is that Great Britain ii embarked upon a war of intervention of which severance of relations with the Soviet Union is the first gun. The next step is expected to be the papers say, an effort towards a financial and economic blockade calculated to weaken the Soviet Union.

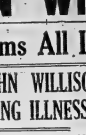

A Spokesman at Chesham House told the Associated Press: "Now that the note is delivered we know our fate. We wish it were possible to pull up relations overnight, but as our war is We have no desire to remain in any country where we are not wanted. Naturally, after six years residence it will require a little time to pack baggage. We are not waiting for documents which are to be taken to Moscow". Chesham House, which was formerly the Imperial Russian embassy, was closed to the public three days. Mr. Elvins has a foot iron gate guarded by policeman.

OLD BELLEVILLE BOY IS HONORED

Clifford Elvins Born and Educated Here Now President

High honors have been bestowed upon a former Belleville boy, Clifford Elvins, who has recently been elected President of the Insurance Advertising Conference at the annual meeting at Hartford, Conn. This is an International body comprising over two hundred and fifty insurance companies in all branches of business on the American continent. Clifford Elvins was born in Belleville a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Elvins and after securing his early education in the Belleville High School and the Ontario Business College he left for Toronto where he later entered the employ of the Canada Life Insurance Company afterwards transferring to the Imperial Company with which concern he has been connected for the past twenty-two years. Perseverance and good business qualities soon won for him the position of advertising manager and for the past ten years with Toronto as his headquarters he has successfully carried on that end of the business. Mr. Elvins visited with his mother on Power Avenue last summer for some days. Mr. Elvins has many friends in Belleville who will be pleased at his new appointment.

LINDBERGH WILL SEE KING GEORGE

London, May 27.—It was officially announced tonight that the King will receive Capt. Charles Lindberg at Buckingham Palace, Tuesday morning at 9.—

Flew Unrecognized

Paris, May 27.—Captain Charles Lindberg flew over Paris in a French military scout plane for more than an hour this morning without the knowledge of the general public. He made a perfect ascent and landing. During the flight he paid homage to France's unknown soldier, descending at one time to within 200 feet of the tomb in the Arc de Triumphe. Advices from Le Bourget state a reception will soon be tendered to Lindberg in the Belgian capital tomorrow.

Many of the lands he will be presented to King Albert and members of the Royal Family. On Sunday the American aviator expects to fly from Brussels to London where he will meet the Prince of Wales and members of the British Royal Family and take part in numerous social functions which have been arranged in his honor.

For the first time since he made his historic flight Lindbergh yesterday stated his objection to the term "Flying Fool." He said it was unjust.'

Attends Paris Reception

Paris, May 27.—Capt. Charles Lindbergh was the guest of M. Painleve at the Ministry of National Defence today. Military honors were rendered by a platoon which was mounted the stairs to greet the distinguished company, which included General Pershing, General Coustaud and Marshal Pedin.

'You have,' M. Painleve told the aviator, "realized an impossible dream and glorified the heroism of humanity to the dimension of the planets. You have thrown across the Atlantic between our two cities, between our two nations and between our two continents, an invisible link that never will be broken."

GRINNING WILDCATS GIVEN WIDE BERTH BY VISITORS

Snarling, growling, spitting and hissing like a half dozen tom cats keeping watch on the back fence on a moonlight night, two lynx from the wilds of Kennebec are parked at the main entrance of the Customs House waiting for Mr. Montrose, animal trainer at the George K. Graham farm, to pay the duty and take them away. They came by C. P. R. Express.

The brutes which are apparently young, stand about two feet high and are much like our own Canadian lynx with about one hundred per cent of ferociousness added. They grinned hideously as each visitor surveyed them as they paced from one end to the other of their little cage and hissed threaten ingly as they guarded a few bones which were thrown to them from a pail of chicken. Visiting them at close range one is tinged with a little disgust as the little fellows smell horribly the main reason why they are parked outside of the Customs building.

The invoice gives them a value of $30 and if this is accepted, the local officials will charge $7.50, as there is a duty of 25 on wild animals imported into the country. The customs officials are giving them a wide berth, not wishing any close acquaintance with the clawing, grinning cats. —

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Where lives the man that has not tried,
How mirth can into folly glide,
And folly into sin!

DECISION TO-NIGHT

To-night the Board of Education has to make up its mind which way the new High School will face. There is no use, at this stage, of considering impracticable things so it would be a waste of time to consider placing the building on any other site than that at present occupied out, that is, immediately behind the present structure. The question seems to resolve itself into whether the front entrance shall be up against the sidewalk on John Street or whether it shall face over the campus towards Church Street.

There is no doubt that Col. W. N. Ponton had the really best idea yet advanced when he suggested acquiring St. Agnes' School and putting the new school there. This would have made an ideal situation and the beautiful new building would have been where ever tourist going through Belleville would have had a view of it. It is too late of course, to consider this now.

If it had been possible to have acquired a little more land to the South so that the main entrance could have faced directly up Queen Street, the advocates of the John Street frontage would have had a better argument. However, the plans as drawn will bring the front door opposite the north sidewalk of Queen Street and while this is not ideal it will not be particularly objectionable.

If there were room between the present building and Church Street to build that would be the best location and the front then could be along the Church Street line. This is impossible so that if the front is to be a playground and not a lawn bordered with flowers. It will hardly be attractive.

The suggestion has been made by one of the trustees that the school will face Church Street and that the entire stretch of what is now the campus should not be used for that purpose but that be kept for new purposes and the students be obliged to play their games and take their exercise on the East end playground at the corner of Bridge and Bleecker Avenue which the City purchased for that purpose. This will scarcely meet with the approval of the students who have to be considered somewhat in the plan finally adopted. Owners of property on John Street, Queen Street and in that vicinity have no justifiable objection to the back entrance being built along John, close to the sidewalk. It will undoubtedly detract from the appearance for residential purposes, but the objections to the other way are almost as strong.

It would seem then as though the vote of the school trustees to-night will have to be confined to two points. It would take a year to get any more ground to the South so that, the school entrance would face directly up Queen Street. It would be costly to tear down the present building and house the children in Albert College for a year as has been suggested. It would mean too much expenditure to abandon the present ground altogether and build on St. Agnes' School grounds. So the new half million dollar school will have to go behind the present building and the Board will have to register to-night their final unalterable decision as to whether the front door is to be on John Street sidewalk or face over a wide stretch of campus which can hardly be kept in the condition of a show place with grass and flowers.

EMOTIONAL INSANITY

Clarence Darrow, famous crimina lawyer of the United States, in a recent interview expressed the opinion that Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray could have been saved from the electric chair had their counsel pleaded emotional insanity. The distortions of love are in comprehensible says Mr. Darrow. Well, let's admit that. So also are the distortions of greed and it has been pretty clearly established that greed and not love was the motive for this atrocious crime. If love can cause emotional insanity so also can greed. So also can the majority of things which lead men and women to murder. Mr. Darrow in the notorious Leopold-Loeb case, a murder by two young "intellectuals" as revolting as the Snyder -tragedy spun to the jury a fairy story which he said, had been told to one of the defendants by his nurse years ago. That fairy story left an impression upon the child's mind that later brought on the insanity that caused him to commit murder. Mr. Darrow averred Something equally fantastical — we've forgotten what it was — was cited to prove the insanity of the other slayer The jury returned a verdict which saved Leopold and Loeb from the gibbe and they are now serving life terms at Joliet penitentiary. If all those who can prove emotional insanity are to be spared the death penalty, capita punishment might as well be abolishe in the United States. Supposing a plea of emotional insanity had save Mrs. Snyder and Gray, we wonder Mr. Darrow would say justice would have been better served than by the consignment to death. Now that they have been sentenced to the electric chair, Mr. Darrow believes that the order of the court will be carried out. Wherever he goes, he says, he finds that mass sentiment is against them. This is an encouraging sign. When mass sentiment is against all those who are guilty of crime, then there will be fewer crimes in the United States. It has been the glorification of the killer in the past that has created wholesale disregard for law and order.

"He was a pretender," came the answer. "He pretended he was the son of a king. But he wasn't. He was the son of respectable parents."

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Editor, Intelligencer:

The writer has been following as closely as possible the controversy now raging as to which way the proposed new Collegiate is to face when built. Now, from a layman's point of view, the big problem to decide is "where it is going to be built." It would seem that at present the Board of Education is trying to build a High School to suit a campus—something like buying a pair of gloves and then going out to buy the rest of one's apparel to match.

To place the new High School where it is planned to place it viz—the East side of the present High School—to my mind is a huge mistake and one that will be regretted for all time for it can never be an architectural success no matter what street it may face—but to demolish the old school and rear a beautiful building in the centre of those wonderful grounds would give to Belleville a beauty spot to be proud of as well as being an educational centre. True, the argument will be raised that you can't have a campus large enough—but the thing to decide is, are we building a High School to suit the campus—or a campus to suit the High School. It doesn't take a half million dollars to build a campus, but it does to build the Collegiate.

Now that the matter is opened up again let us think twice before making snap judgment.

Truly yours,
RATEPAYER.

Dr. E. W. Hamber, the general manager of the American Optical Company of Canada, has become a true citizen of Belleville and has, since his arrival here, made for himself a host of friends. He has already taken up full responsibility as a member of the Belleville community. He has already been elected to several positions of honor. NEGOTIATE FOR USE OF ALBERT COLLEGE

"Although nothing definite has been done, some negotiations were underway that they should make use of the schoolhouses in Belleville Old Albert," stated Dr. C. W. Bishop, Principal of Albert College to the Intelligencer this afternoon when asked if the Old Albert had been leased by the Board of Education to be used during the erection of the new Collegiate.

"Of course this step was taken on the assumption that the old High School would be torn down before the new building was commenced," added Dr. Bishop. The question will be settled tonight.

CRONKWRIGHT—ARTHUR

On Wednesday morning at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Arthur, Sr., Washburn street, Picton, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives of the contracting parties, the wedding was quietly solemnized, Rev. Mr. Pee officiating, of Doris Annie Arthur and Mr. Ross Cronkwright, of La Salle, N.Y.

The drawing-room was beautifully decorated in spring blossoms and pink roses, a charming arch finished in the same flowers under which the ceremony was performed.

The bride, who was charming in white radium lace and georgette gown, long veil caught with orange blossoms and carrying Killarney roses, was given away by her father. She was attended by Miss Marjorie Bland, of Belleville, who was lovely in french gown of mauve and pink georgette, large picture hat and corsage bouquet of pink roses. Mr. John Arthur, Jr., supported the groom.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served and the happy couple later left for a honeymoon to be spent in Western cities. They will later return to Lasalle where they will reside. Mrs. Arthur's going-away gown was a very handsome and ensemble suit with hat to match, and blonde shoes and stockings.

TODAY'S MARKET

New York, May 27.—Pre-holiday readjustment of speculative accounts impasted some irregularity to today's security market, with main trend continued upward. Impressive demonstrations of gross strength were given by rails, public utilities and chemicals. Nearly two score specialities were mark ed up to new high levels. Strength and activity of the rails was rather surprising in face of the publication of relatively poor April earnings statements. New York Central led the list of about a dozen highs. Wabash was again heavily bought, but Pittsburgh and West, ingnia broke six points.

Steel shares held fairly steely despite the reporter reduction of 25 cents ton in iron and steel scrap in the Chicago district and slackening of output in other centres. Motors which were freely sold yesterday, received better support today.

Chicago, May 27.—Wheat and corn both jumped early today to the highest prices that deferred deliveries have yet reached this season. An unexpected sharp advance in Liverpool wheat quotations was the chief bullish factor with further rains in Canada and the corn belt. Opening at 7-8 cent to 3 cents higher, Chicago wheat scored for ther gains. Corn started at 1 1-4 cts to 3 1- cts advance and later showed some additional returns.

Oats were firmer. Provisions also displayed strength.

GRAIN MARKETS

Winnipeg, May 27.—Opening—Wheat, May, 1 3-8 cents to 2 1-8 cents higher at 161 3-8 to 162 1-2, July 1-2 to 1 1-4 cents higher at 150 to 151 1-4, October 1-2 cent to 1 1-2 cent higher at 141 1-2 to 142 1-2, December 1 3-4 cent to 1 3-4 cent higher at 142 3-4 to 144 1-8. Oats, May 1-2 cent higher at 61 1-2, July 1-4 cent higher at 61 5-8, October 1-4 cent higher at 52 7-8.

Chicago, May 27.—Opening—Wheat May 152 5-8, July 137 1-8. Corn, May unquoted, July 95 1-4. Oats, May unquoted, July 50 1-2.

NOW THEN, BANISH THAT INFERIORITY COMPLEX

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Meet Henry and his Inferiority Complex. Henry feels inferior in the game of love, but his ease has a thousand applications. So this little talk for Henry will probably fit your pet yellow streak as well.

DEAR ELSIE:

I was in love once, no kidding—but for some reason or other the object of my affection told me to go jump in the lake. She is a wonderful girl; yes, she still is; still single and making her own way in the world: I have it figured out that as soon as she made her first one hundred dollars she couldn't see any man with the idea of marriage. But that's all right, I'm not complaining. It's perfectly O. K. with me. I want her to be happy However, she has left ME anything but happy.

Now, do you know what has happened? I have the-ides, somehow that every girl I like is too good for me. Try as I might, I can't figure why a girl should care anything at all about me.

The kind of a girl I like is one who has had as much education as I have had, one that can talk about something else than parties, clothes, movies, etc. But the worst of it is that when I find a girl with these characteristics, I throw up my hands and say: 'What in the world does she want with my love?" If she should happen to like me, I think she would soon wake up to the Kid I am and leave me cold.

My reputation is good, twenty-eight years old, and at one time I had lots of ambition. Now tell me; why should I feel toward girls like I do?

HENRY.

Why have you this inferiority complex? Why has anyone an inferiority complex? That depends entirely on the person and the life he has led.

Some of us develop this dread of ourselves because life has hurt us badly at some time. Perhaps we were physically crippled, and so came to feel that we were out of the running. Perhaps as children we were homely, or stupid, or slow, and our spirits were beaten down by the resulting jeers. Maybe some domineering, critical parent has robbed us of our trust in our own ability; or a foolishly devoted parent may have deprived us of the "roughage" of experience which all growing spirits need.

We may have been shamed, frightened, hectored, bullied. For all these reasons men and women develop inferiority complexes.

But there's still another reason which is much less flattering to the individual. Some of us develop inferiority complex because we ENJOY BEING INFERIOR. That's a strange, sickly form of enjoyment, isn't it? Yet many men and women indulge in it. Such people find the battle of life too strenuous for them. For some reason they fail to attain the superiority which they crave intensely, so they make a tragic substitute of their feeling of inferiority.

If they can't count their blessings, they'll count their miseries; and they proceed to do so, and to force everyone else to do so. In a queer, perverted way, this sense of failure feeds their ego almost as much as a sense of success would. Just watch it. It makes them feel DIFFERENT than other men, and to the hungry ego that is the most gratifying of all sensations, even though it be brought at a tragic cost.

So there you have the commonest reasons for the "inferiority complex" Henry. I don't know which is YOUR reason, but I do know that no girl is to blame for your condition. You and you alone are to blame.

You have always doubted yourself—always sold yourself out. Even in that first incident you were probably to blame. The girl told you to "jump in the lake," and you, poor sailing, thought she meant it! Whereas, in all probability, she was merely trying to test you out, and see if you were man enough to fight for what you wanted.

Well, you weren't. You didn't believe enough in yourself. And so she went away. And I'll bet dollars to doughnuts, the average girl would get, too, and you could still win her if you'd be like a regular two-fisted male, instead of a fish-worm.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of sixteen, and am in love with a young man six years my senior. My father does not want me to see him any more. A girl told my father untruths about him. She wants to separate us because she thinks I took him from her sister.

I know he loves me and I love him. My mother was married when she was my age. Do you think I am too young to get married?

WORRIED MARY.

WORRIED MARY: Of course you are far too young to disturb yourself about the situation you have described. Probably your father feels as I do about it. You will not know a real lasting love for many years to come.

Remember that your father is only interested in your welfare. It is quite all right to play about with a group of young people, but you must not make seriously the attainment of love one young man. Forget your problem play and be carefree.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

Is it proper for a girl to be inviting a young man to her home when he doesn't ask her any more?

HEARTBROKEN.

HEARTBROKEN: There is no recipe by which love can be recaptured. But it is more than likely that neither of you is old enough to feel a real and lasting love. I would advise you not to take the matter too seriously. Keep him as a friend, if you wish. But don't lose yourself in the matter as friend-hip. A real love will come to you in due time.

WAITING.

WAITING: If you are certain that the young man each attend to going out, and if you want him to come here to no reason why you shouldn't continue to invite him to your home. However, you might wait until he has permission to call, next time.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens and am deeply in love with a young man ten year older than I. He seemed to care a great deal for me, but lately I have heard that he cares more for a girl-friend of mine. How would you advise me to get him back?

HEARTBROKEN.

HEARTBROKEN: There is no recipe by which love can be recaptured. But it is more than likely that neither of you is old enough to feel a real and lasting love. I would advise you not to take the matter too seriously. Keep him as a friend, if you wish. But don't lose yourself in the matter as friend-hip. A real love will come to you in due time.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

For "Annabelle an Enos Herbert" the chopped parsley pump scheme and other hints are beaten in with the rain.

Ruby's bed or carriage may be kept neat and more comfortable if, when putting oilcloth or rubber sheeting over the pad, straps are sewed on to each corner. The pad may be snapped to the covering, keeping them together no matter how much baby kicks and wriggles about.

Cut stem of flowers under fresh water and then add a teaspoon of salt or a couple of aspirin tablets to keep them fresh.

The Crossed Collar Crosses Off Pounds

The Puritan maids and matrons—with whom we usually associate this sort of collar—were evidently more interested in how they should have had the world think. They must indeed have been quite aware of the charm of a soft, rolled collar and the slenderizing effect of its long crossed lines. At any rate the floating style-conscious woman of today finds this a most flattering fashion, and uses it in a host of fascinating ways de Chine, voile or crepe. They take be with short flares all around the hips and give the straight skirt fullness. This is the kind of frock that can be worn at any season, and which is always in style.

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

The indispensable item of the summer wardrobe—the "little" dance frock that is thoroughly suitable for evening, but without the "dress up" quality of formal wear, is cleverly presented by New York house departments who offer sleeveless georgette jumpers, and ably decorated with embroidery, with which are sold matching pleated skirts.

A London dressmaker notes that etchings are enjoying a considerable vogue at the present time, whilst aqua-tints and colored wood-cuts are also much sought after, as they bring life and color stimulus to the walls of our simply furnished modern rooms, and they are always effective when framed within a narrow line of black.

The smart Frenchwoman's favorite silk stockings of the present spring is neither grey nor beige, but named as between the two, for Paris is still forgetting with beige tints, but she has decided that pure mauve shall be in favor, which means that beige frocks or hats must not be the intension of having hurriedly been dashed through a bath of purple-tinted water.

The fashion of the 'pearl-trimmed day gown is one of the interesting indications of the season in Paris, for though it will have often been employed in the decoration of the evening gown, they are a new departure applied to day frocks, and new strategic levels are seen round the neck to cut a triple collar and deep cuffs to match are seen on the cuffs of the long tight sleeves.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN
By Mildred Barbour

"That's because you haven't found your heart yet," he told her seriously. "You are too young, too beautiful, too fortunate, and too wealthy ever to love anything."

Sybil's red lips twisted mockingly. Fortune had suffered. Beauty hadn't she? And she smiled inwardly at Sergeant Patton's rating of her. Quite evidently he had impressed her that day.

He was now launched on his "line" with success, because, after that, he began to make love to her in a most romantic intensity.

And Sybil mentally checked him off as a new victim—a fly fairly inviting to be allowed to enter the web of the pretty spider.

The day before the Statue of Liberty was unveiled, Sybil knew that she was sure she was the only woman who ever had understood him.

"I felt a bond of sympathy and understanding between us the moment I caught sight of you in your elegant chair. Did you know that I prided myself to outfit the chairs, so 'nine out of ten' suited?

Sybil shook her head, pretending to be impressed.

"I shouldn't tell you that," he confessed, with a tender glance. "It is unmanly. But I feel I can trust you, and it gives her an unfair power. But all women are putty in the hands of a lovely woman. Isn't that so, dear? Shall I make us suffer?"

"No yet," asked Sybil, reserving her own inward thought on the subject. He sighed deeply.

"Yes, I, in particular, suffer a great deal, because women mean everything to my life. How can I compose, how can I play a symphony, without some beautiful woman to stir my soul to its depths, to touch my heart-strings with her lovely fingers and bring forth the universal harmonies—the song of songs? My soul demands beauty, and, to me, beauty is to be found, outside of music, only in a beautiful woman's face."

"Then you have no sympathy or compassion for ex-plain women?"

"They have their place but not in my life."

"How ruthless you are!"

"Ruthless? Never!" he protested "I am warmth and tenderness to the fright Woman—to you."

When the ship docked at her North River pier, and the crowd on shore swarmed to welcome the voyagers, Sybil was standing beside Serge Patton a slim, pretty girl in a neat but unfashionable frock flung herself upon him.

"Oh, Serge, darling!" she cried. "So glad to see you again. It's been horribly, horribly lonesome."

Serge was obviously taken aback.

"Eva! I — I thought you were with your aunt in Connecticut."

"I was. But you don't think I'd miss meeting your boat, did you?" demanded the girl, as she answered his arm ecstatically.

Obviously he belonged to her.

Serge reluctantly turned to Sybil and rather hopelessly made the introductions.

CHAPTER 28
Behind the Scenes

"Miss Rees—my wife," murmured Serge Patton, looking not romantic but rather like a small boy who is caught with his fingers in the cookie jar.

"How do you do?" said Sybil coldly, rather amused by the situation and not at all surprised. The letter of Serge's love-making during the last days of the crossing had left her quite unperturbed rather bored, in fact. She saw that this was a fitting and piquant climax, even if a rather trite one, to an episode that otherwise have been of passing interest.

She held out a frank hand, as the girl acked up at her with wide, trustful blue eyes—nice, honest eyes, Sybil thought. Mrs. Patton was such a little thing—she looked more like a friendly kitten than the wife of a sophisticated a poseur as Serge Patton. She was from the south and it was evident that her total of worldly experience was slight.

"Miss Rees is—is a stranger in New York," Serge continued, rather nervously. "She plans to stay the winter. I—I've been trying to give her suggestions as to where she could get an apartment—"

"Oh, do let me help!" begged Eva Patton. "I admire finding apartments for people, and furnishing them. Everybody says I'm a perfect nuisance, because, even if I hear of the veriest bargain among flats, I know I'm right there, begging to be allowed to hang the pictures and arrange the furniture. I've always lived in a small town, you see, and I like to be friendly and helpful."

Her husband frowned.

"Eva will talk as if she'd never been

CONVENTION TO CHOOSE LEADER

National Conservative Get-Together at Winnipeg To Strengthen Party

The national Conservative convention, which is to assemble at Winnipeg on October 11, and for which active preparations are now being made by a representative committee at Ottawa, will select a permanent leader for the party, and will also lay down the broad principles of policy on which the present Federal Opposition will appeal to the constituencies at the next election. Both tasks will call for the best judgment the 1,000 or more delegates who are expected to attend can bring to bear upon them. The Conservative party, which has directed the political destinies of the Dominion under successive Governments during the greater part of its history, should gain new inspiration from the coming convention and, as a result of its deliberations, be in a position to give strong and purposeful leadership to the country.

Far more important than the question of leadership is that of the political programme on which Conservatism is to base its next appeal to the country. And this, not so much for party reasons as because of the complete failure of the Administration now in office to formulate any definite public policy, or to submit to the people any practicable solution of the many grave problems which with the Dominion has been confronted since the war. If Canada is to do any more than mark time, while other countries, less favorably circumstanced, are making unprecedented strides in commerce, in industrial development, and in all that makes for national expansion, it is perfectly obvious that the call to action must come from the party that has saved and solved the great problems of the past; that linked the spirits of this Dominion together with bonds of a common British citizenship; and that has always served the country best in the times of its greatest need.

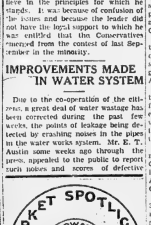

Red Rock Principle

The bed-rock principle of Conservative policy for the next electoral appeal must be equality of opportunity for all parts of the Dominion. Maritime development, through appropriate and comprehensive public measures, must surely find a conspicuous place in the declaration of policy to be adopted by the Conservative convention at Winnipeg. That the needs and aspirations of the West will receive ample consideration by the convention is assured by the choice of its place of meeting. The national programme of a national party must be the outcome of the convention, if it is to prove worthy of the traditions of the party in whose name it is being entered.

With Conservative pluralities of the smaller vote in all of the nine provinces there does not seem to be any question as to the attitude of the people, but the policy of the party must be clearly defined and the leader must have the loyal support of those who believe in the principles for which he stands. It was because of confusion of the issues and because the leader did not have the loyal support to which he was entitled that the Conservatives emerged from the contest of last September in the minority.

IMPROVEMENTS MADE IN WATER SYSTEM

Due to the co-operation of the citizens, a great deal of water wastage has been corrected during the past few weeks, the points of leakage being detected by tracking moist in the pipes in the water works system. Mr. E. T. Austin some weeks ago through the press, appealed to the public to report such holes and scores of defective

Considerable interest has been aroused by a fresh spurt in the market for Canadian Industrial Alcohol shares which have risen again over the $70 mark. Absorption of offerings has been comparatively easy. The strength in the shares is anticipating a still further improvement in the Company's earning power after the strong showing which it made last year. It is also looking forward to a possible increase of the present dividend rate of a $1.25 a share, or a possible stock bonus this year, as was done last year.

The market quickly reflected the benefit of Amulet's recent finds. Diamond drills are joining up the various ore showings and are rapidly increasing the great prospects of this property. The ore has a high content of both copper and zinc. These are not indications as from electrical surveying but are real ore showings. We look for much higher prices for this stock in the near future. Avex should also get well on this news as considerable of the work has been done near her boundary.

systems were immediately corrected by the Water Works employees. There are still many leakages which may be corrected in the same manner and the department will be glad to have the

The largest collection of trained wild animals in the world will be seen with Sparks Circus this season, among the feature displays being those of John Ringling North's fighting African lions; Franz Wosha's group of twelve tigers; Sparks seals; Luverne Smith and her seven leopards; a group of Alaskan polar bears, performing in the same arena with Great Danes; and Jack Casteel's equestrian baboons.

There are three herds of elephants, two of which are worked by lady trainers, Miss "Baby" Pope and Vivian Clark son, while Walter McLain Exhibits a group of baby elephants; the wonderful Alexander Troupe.

Here and There

Experiments in the Pacific Coast methods of halibut fishing are now being made by R. B. Cann, of Yarmouth, N.S., with his new halibut fishing boat, "Fannie Purcell II.," following his extensive studies on the Pacific Coast.

The Canadian Pacific's great earnings for the first quarter of the year were the largest on record for that quarter, at $15,236,009, or an increase of $2,991,051 over the corresponding quarter of last year. Net, however, was a little lower than last year at $6,462,628, compared with $6,531,007.

Madame Jane Sion, champion of European women swimmers, arrived in Canada about the middle of May on the Canadian Pacific steamer "Montnairn" from Antwerp. She will take part in various swimming marathons in Montreal and other centres in both Canada and the United States, including events at the Toronto Exhibition.

The total catch of seafish on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts during the month of March showed an increase of nearly 3,000,000 pounds over the catch for the same month last year. The catch amounted to 21,093,200 pounds, valued at $1,224,290, according to a report of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. The increase was due to the increased catch of herring on the Pacific Coast.

Two thousand poultrymen from the United States will attend the forthcoming world's poultry congress, to be held at Ottawa July 27 to August 4. The delegates will be headed by the Hon. W. M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, officially representing the Government. He will be accompanied by assistant secretary R. W. Dunlop. Some 25 States are participating.

That the prospects for British settlers coming to New Brunswick were good; that, in fact, arrangements had already been made for bringing a substantial number of British families to this province, was asserted by A. E. Murray, provincial superintendent of Colonization and Industry, who has returned from England where he was acting in the interests of the Government. He has received many enquiries as to the settlement prospects in New Brunswick.

That Calgary district has again taken its place in the front rank as a producer of horses in the Dominion was pointed out by G. H. Hutton, President of the Calgary Rotary Club, who declared that 17 carloads of horses had been shipped east from Calgary in three weeks, recently. Indicating the growth of the industry in the district he referred to the large number of entries received for this year's Horse Show, totalling more than 800, as compared with 600 last year.

Evidence of the interest in the new departure among Canadian Pacific engineers was seen as the C-3-a type or "Pacific" engine in its remarkable combination of greatly increased power and economy with very slightly increased weight, is furnished by the fact that principals of twenty-five technical schools in the east of Canada and nine in the west have secured working models of this locomotive with a view of hanging them in these schools for the information of the children.

Gene Tunney, world's champion heavy weight boxer, arrived in Montreal at the Canadian Pacific Windsor Street Station, May 6, and proceeded north to Mazaza in the Laurentian Mountains. From here he proceeded by motor to Five Finger Lake, spending several days fishing. Tunney was accompanied on the outing by W. G. McGarvey, sporting editor, New York Herald-Tribune, and W. A. Davenport, of Colliers Weekly.

Junior Coghlan, Erwin Connelly, and John Patrick. Zelda Sears and Tay Garnett adapted "Rubber Tires" from a story by Frank Condon.

Browsing on the swamp grass on the Ice Pond side about half a mile east of the village of Aberfoyle, a full-grown deer was seen yesterday by J. Cockburn, a farmer of that district.

Black fox ranch has been started near the village of Orono.

CAPITOL THEATRE

Entering the last half of their fourth week at the Capitol theatre, the popular Imperial Players presented to a full house last evening the screamingly funny playlet "The Battle Scared Wife," with a laugh at every turn. Every member of the excellent caste plays his or her part to perfection, and the play provides an ever increasing series of complications in the unraveling of which an hour's worthwhile entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed by last evening's appreciative audience. The popularity of the Imperial Players continues undiminished, and deservedly so for the entertainment is of a high order, and clean and refined.

The feature film also proved a hit. "Down The Stretch" as the name indicates is a fine racing picture, of tense interest all the way through, with a great climax that has the audience on the "edge of the seats" with suspense; the race track scenes are especially good. Don't miss this show. The Imperial Players will be on Monday with another great stage and screen hit—"Over the Hills to the Poorhouse."

BELLE THEATRE

Harrison Ford, whose work in "The Perfect Clerk" stamped him as the front ranks of the screen's light comedians, is said to be at his best in "Rubber Tires," a new photoplay in which he is playing opposite Bessie Love, and

INDUSTRIAL LG. CLOSES SEASON

Tigers and Ciacos Win Championships In Respective Leagues

The Industrial Softball League wound up in a blaze of glory last night when the championship double-header was played before a big crowd. McDonald's Tigers staging a whirlwind finish came from behind to nose out the American Optical Co. in the girl's league while the Ciacos of Corryville, who had accumulated an early lead captured the laurels in the men's league from the green-clad Albert College lads. Both games provided plenty of thrills for the fans and both good and bad playing was dished up.

Tigers 13, Optical 12

The Bengals with a marvelous batting splurge in the sixth inning drove across 10 runs and went into the lead over the Optical Co. and these runs were enough to defeat the Riverriders.

Up to this time Ernie Worth's girlies had been for the best but the only stage that "the game is not won until the last man is out" was again to the fore. The Opticals made a gallant effort in the final frame to pull the fat out of the fire but two runs was the best they could do.

Lena O'Neill and Bernice Baker were the best with the mitts for the winners while Nan Hedger looked the best of the Tigers. Mac Page batted fire bell with the exception of the fatal 6th inning. Molly Gray and Elsie Doolittle formed the women's battery.

Well, Grow, Bill Krutt and Allie, Stagher umpired.

Score by innings.

Tigers.....10 2 1 0 0 1—13
Optical.....0 4 6 0 0 1 2—13

Optical—B. Baker, L. O'Neill, M. Dooley, Page, H. Smith, T. Edson, M. Dooley, G. Gibb, Fryley.

Tigers—E. Doolittle, Wilson, Cornick, Hedger, Pomeroy, Gray, Wilson, Frederick, B. Doolittle, McMichael, Stagher, umpire.

Ciacos 8, Albert College 6

The Albert College squad came out with a strong finish to spoil four innings for a minute it appeared as though they might overhaul the Ciacos scant lead but the Corryville squad cut them off leaving two men stranded on the paths.

Pierre Bourque was sent into pitch by Manager Hardy Hill but it was not the big boy's night and he allowed the substitutes a four run handicap. He retired in favor of Earle in the 4th inning and the latter proved more effective. Smith went the full distance for the Ciacos and his slow ball had the Collegians baffled.

The crowd was elated over the performance of Akiyama, Jap, who is spending his first year in Canada. The oriental was marvellously fast at field and made some fine plays. In fact he was one of the sweetest looking prospects on the field. Akiyama played for Tokio University in his native land and was well acquainted with the members of the Waseda team that played in Toronto a week ago. He is popular with his school mates here at the College. Score by innings:

Corryville.....4 3 0 1 0 0 x—8

Ciacos—Tedman, Smith, Hurst McDonald, Lapenette, Barriage, Boyle, Latchford.

Albert—Robertson, Christ, Bond, Kinnear, Rodgers, Armstrong, Akiyama, Mason, Bandy.

BIRD STEALS KEY

Columbus, Ind., May 26.—After locking the doors of the Citizens National Bank the president placed the key on the perch of the custodian. A robin seized the string to which the key was attached and flew away. A posse was organized and the bird followed over her neighborhood until the burden became too heavy and was dropped.

PITTSBURGH WINS 8TH STRAIGHT

New York, May 27.—The Pirates strengthened their hold on the league pinnacle today by trouncing the world champion St. Louis club at Pittsburgh by 2 to 1, giving the Pirates eight victories in a row. This is the longest streak in the circuit this season.

Vic Aldridge held the Cardinals to three singles while his mates collected eight off the combined offerings of Haines and Keen, the former relieving way to a pinch-hitter in the eighth.

Wright doubled in the first inning, scoring Cuyler and Paul Waner, but was out at third trying to stretch the blow.

The Cubs slugged themselves to an 11 to 2 victory over Cincinnati at Chicago today by hitting Hisey all over the lot and forcing him to retire in the fifth inning. Kolp was replaced by Rixey, held Chicago scoreless for the remainder of the game. Root pitched a steady game, the visitors being able to bunch hits off him only in two innings.

Boston at Philadelphia, rain.

New York, May 27.—The Chicago White Sox remained on the heels of the Yankees by defeating the Detroit Tigers 4 to 3 in 12 innings at Detroit yesterday. Red Faber went the entire distance for Chicago, shutting out Detroit in the last nine innings. The winning run was scored on Mutzer's single to centre. Clancy had reached first on Gehringer's fumble and advanced to third on Ward's single.

Boston divided a twin-programme with Philadelphia at Boston, losing out the Athletics in the finale of engagement by 4 to 3, after losing the first contest by 3 to 1. Grove pitched shut-out ball in the opener up to the ninth, when the Sox grouped three hits for a run. Buddy Myer's single off Sam Gray in the last of the ninth of the second game drove Haney across with the winning run.

BEAVER SOFT BALL TEAM HOLD PRACTICE

The Beaver softball team held their initial practice of the season on the old Fair Grounds last night and judging from the attendance and enthusiasm showed it is evident that the Club is due for another brilliant season. Allan Meagher was in charge of the squad and some useful practice was included in. Batting practice and fungo-ing was the order of the day and the limbering up exercises loomed the kinks out.

The girls will begin practice in real earnest in preparation for the game with the Supremes on the 3rd of June and the Toronto Nationals on the 4th.

TORONTO POUNDS COLT PITCHERS

Toronto, May 2.—Weak pitching and loose defensive play by Rochester gave Toronto an 18 to 8 victory in the first game of the series here today. The Leafs made twenty-one hits off three Rochester pitchers and the fourth likely would have been treated just as horribly had he been in long enough. Altogether it was a poorly played game and long-drawn, requiring two and three-quarter hours to play. Faulkner clinched well until the sixth when his control became wobbly.

Mr. Meagher has received word from Father Vincent, star Peterboro pitcher that she will be here for both games. With good pitching the locals should give a good account of themselves. Miss Thrasher shapes up as one of the sweetest looking prospects yet covered. She is a catcher of an mean ability and can take a turn in the outfield as well. Evelyn Whalen was also on the receiving end and Helen Lee did the pitching with C. Cargill, Laura Melchoir and others in the infield. Twila Warham the hard hitting outfielder was going great guns as was Madeline Kelleher and a couple of others. The teams will practice again on Friday night.

'Father's Day" service was held in Seaforth United Church.

We INVITE YOUR INSPECTION

The Irony of Love

By Charles Garvice

Rafe looked up for a moment, then his head sank again. He knew that, even if the marriage were set aside, Maude would be brought no nearer to him; he knew that in her eyes Phenie would always be his wife. Maude was lost to him forever, and nothing else was of the slightest consequence.

"Gordon will get the opinion of the best specialists, and return immediately," said St. Ives, after a pause. "Until he does so, we can do nothing. For Heaven's sake, keep up your heart, Stranlyre; things may not be as black as they look; there may be some escape for you. Go up and change."

As Rafe dragged himself upstairs he paused at the door of Maude's room. No sound from within reached him; the house was as still as if death had taken place. He had a bath and changed, and went back to his own room. For the first time in his life he could not smoke, the pipe dropped from his hands, and he sank into a chair in the attitude of a broken man. There was a knock at the door, Rafe said "come in" mechanically, and Mr. Gilflian entered.

"If I am entruding, Lord Stranlyre, you will send me away," he said. Rafe shook his head apathetically, and the minister seated himself beside the bent figure of the young man. "I want to tell you how deeply I sympathize with you, Lord Stranlyre—how you will know that. I have come to ask you to let me help you, if I can do so, and I know that you will be patient with me,that you will remember I am an old man, who has known and loved the men who have borne your name—more, that I have a very warm affection for you.

Rafe nodded; he was touched.

"You will remember that, in the highest sense of the word, you are in my charge; and, remembering this, you will bear with me, even if I seem obtrusive. It is not my first acquain tance with the secrets and troubles of the members of my flock, and surely I should be neglecting my duty—I will not speak of the promptings of my own heart—if I were to refrain from offering you the consolation which it is my privilege to proffer, your right to demand.

Rafe nodded again. He was fond of the old man, and knew his good and tender of heart he was; and in a dull way, the only way left to him, he felt.

"I think I know how it is with you Lord Stranlyre. You are so crushed by this blow, this wrecking of the happiness which seemed so sure, so near, to you, that you are incapable of reflecting, of deciding on your course of action. Will you let me help, Lord Stranlyre, that I am confident you will strive to do what is right? I have watched you closely, I have formed my estimate of your character, and I do not think I have formed a wrong one. You wish to do the just thing, but you do not know what will be right or wrong."

"That's so," said Rafe, with something like a groan. "I'm much obliged to you for coming to me, for talking, trying to help me. I don't see how you can, but the deal's with you, Hold on! Lord St. Ives has just been telling me that this—marriage"—he could scarcely bring himself to speak the word—"may be squashed—"

"That may be so," said Mr. Gilflian gravely. "I myself think it possible, but"—he paused, and his hand fell on Rafe's cold one—"but, dear lad, do you think it would be a right thing to do? Consider. You have forgiven the woman, who sinned against you. Forgiveness must be whole and complete, or it is of no avail to the injured one who has sinned or him who has been sinned against. So far as we have, she may be forgiven, but your welfare is in your hands, should be your first care. That which she did, she did not for hate, nor for greed, but for love. You will not forget that, Lord Stranlyre?"

"Do you mean—" Rafe asked hoarsely.

"I mean that, having forgiven her, you have accepted a responsibility which you cannot shirk. She has left her house, flown like a guilty, a heart broken woman. You do not know where she has gone. In her terrible despair she may do something rash—"

Rafe understood. For an instant Phenie was not the woman who had wrecked his life, spoiled his happiness, parted him from Maude; but Phenie, his old playmate, who had loved him there at Jumping Jane. The minister's words brought him slowly, could follow the workings of his mind.

"Yes, dear lad," he said, in a low voice. "You see the right and will do it. It is not necessary for you to attempt to find and follow her to-night; no good would come from a meeting with her so soon after—in your present state of mind. But you will give me instructions that she should be found, and you can go to her in safety when your mind is clear, and you can see your way before you. It is possible that you have formed any plans already—"

Board Of Education Reaches Final Decision To Face New Collegiate Towards Church Street

BRIDGE ST. WILL LIKELY BE SITE OF LIQUOR STORE

Intelligencer's Original Forecast of Location Probably Correct

SOME ALTERATIONS

Difficulties in Way of First Choice Have Been Overcome

It looks as though The Intelligencer's original forecast of 23 Bridge street east will be the address of Belleville's Liquor Store when it shatter blitzes by two weeks time.

This was the site practically decided upon in the first place but, as stated in The Intelligencer of last Thursday, some structural difficulties interposed and it was thought that it would not be possible to adapt the store to the purposes of the Liquor Commission. It is understood however, that the difficulty has been overcome and an official announcement may be expected in the early part of next week.

If the Liquor Store is located on this spot, the necessary alterations will require about two weeks time so that Belleville may not be in a position to satisfy the thirsts of its citizens until about the middle of June. It is possible however, that the Store may be opened in the front part of the building while alterations are in progress.

The official appointment of Mr. B. H. Hyman as vendor will come through at the same time as the selection of the store site.

Situation in Trenton

In Trenton there are three stores under consideration by the Liquor Board, one of which will be chosen next week at the same time as Belleville's. The stores selected as possibilities are all vacant, and are owned by Mr. H. E. Tripp, Mr. T. W. Jacques and Mr. E. Gus Porter, of Belleville. There is no hint yet as to who will be appointed vendor in Trenton.

RESIDENTS ON JOHN STREET MAY ISSUE INJUNCTION AGAINST BOARD

Dr. Chant Would Not Deny Or Confirm Rumor This Morning

Rumors were current about the street to-day that residents of John Street intended entering a protest against the decision of the Board of Education in which they decided to face the new collegiate institute on Church instead of John Street, which was their original intention.

These residents state that the new school will be built so close to John Street that the view, air and sun will be obstructed on their street. It was also stated that Dr. J. Chant, who is probably the one most affected was considering the advisability of serving an injunction against this proposed step.

Dr. Chant, Corner Queen and John streets was non-committal to the Intelligencer to-day when asked if there were any foundation to the rumor that he intended serving an injunction on the school board to prevent the erection of the new collegiate with its back facing John Street. "I am not saying anything," was Dr. Chant's answer to the reporter when asked what his intentions were in regard to this question.

"It is an outrage to the residents of John Street to have the rear of the school fronting on John Street, a residential street," stated Mr. B. Templeton to the Intelligencer when asked what his attitude towards the action taken by the Board of Education was. Mr. Templeton stated that personally it did not matter much to him, but added "if the fronts are almost alike as they say they will be, why not put the main entrance on John Street?"

SELLS - FLOTO CIRCUS NOT LIKELY VISITORS

Sells-Floto circus, which is touring Canada this summer may visit Belleville but as yet nothing definite has been done. Mr. E. P. WEEKOLD HOMEBREW WINE BLAMED FOR INEBRIATION

Although general opinion seems to favor the idea that dandelions has not poked their tiny heads above the sod until a few days ago, Vincent Hogan, when he appeared in Police Court this morning, claimed he had made some wine from this weed, gathered by gardeners, about two weeks ago. He claimed he had made close to three gallons of dandelion wine, picking the flowers right in Belleville. Chief Kidd and Crown Attorney Bryson Donnan were both convinced that dandelions had not appeared until a week ago.

Hogan was picked up in the Bridge Street beat by Constable Smith, in possession of the wine. He was charged with drunkenness and Donnan Barrett, also on the beat, in the morning. The three inebriates appeared before Magistrate Ponton this morning and received their sentences. Hogan was fined $15 and $5 costs, Donahue $25 and $5 costs and Barrett will have to pay a fine of $15 and $5 costs. Donahue appeared in court just a short time ago on the same charge which accounts, no doubt, for the larger fine doled out to him.

LIQUOR PRICES NOT READY YET FOR PUBLICATION

D. B. Hanna Denies Anthenticity of List Given Out Yesterday

SURPRISE TO HIM

No One Authorized to Speak For Commission Says Chief

Toronto, May 28.—"There has been absolutely no distribution of the Liquor Control Act price list yet," declared D. B. Hanna, Chief Commissioner, when asked as to certain prices quoted in a despatch from Kitchener "No person has been authorized to speak upon prices," said the Commissioner, who maintained that he did not, himself if the prices mentioned in the despatch corresponded with the official price list.

Surprise in Kitchener

The Kitchener despatch stated that the price list had been published there yesterday, and listed liquor and wine prices were considered very reasonable by the general public. "There was some surprise," continued the despatch, "that beer was not cheaper than the list quoted. In the latter case, it is reported $3.75 is to be charged for a case of two dozen pints, but 72 cents will be exacted in the public chaser when the bottles are returned. Imported wines are quoted from 70 cents to $2.00 a quart, champagne from $3.50 to $4.10 a quart, gin, $2.50 to $3 a quart, and whiskey from $2.30 to $3.50 a quart."

NO APPOINTMENT

Board of Hospital Governors Are Looking Over Several Applicants

"We are looking over a number of applications now, but as yet no successor has been appointed," stated Judge J. F. Wills, a member of the Hospital Board to The Intelligencer when asked if the new superintendent had been named for the Belleville General Hospital, to succeed Miss Tait, who is resigning, due to ill health.

No doubt the Hospital Board will act expeditiously in making the selection as the position calls for a woman of executive ability as well as being a skilled nurse, to guide the destinies of this important institution.

MISS TAIT WILL LEAVE MONDAY

Retiring Hospital Superintendent Will Take Holiday To Recuperate

"I will be leaving the hospital about the first of the week" stated Miss Margaret Tait, retiring superintendent of the Belleville General Hospital to The Intelligencer, when asked when she was severing her connection with that institution. It will be recalled that it was announced in the Intelligencer exclusively a week ago that owing to ill health Miss Tait was forced to resign from the Belleville General Hospital.

"What are your plans for the future, after you have been restored to health again?" asked the reporter. "I cannot say just yet" replied Miss Tait, who stated that she would be around Belleville for a month or so yet", I will be visiting my brother in Picton for a while and will be back and forth to Belleville during that time also" added she. Miss Tait's brother, Mr. William Tait, is Superintendent of Picton Public Utilities.

As far as could be learn today by The Intelligencer, Miss Tait's successor has not yet been decided.

POLICE FAIL TO FIND TRACE OF CHILD'S BODY

A current rumor that the body of a child was seen floating down the Moira past the footbridge at Mumford, sent the police scurrying toward the mouth of the stream in an effort to uncover the mystery. Hasten Hamilton who was on duty sounded the warning and grappling irons were pressed into service.

Henry Kerr who conducts a boat livery pushed out into the river but no trace of the supposed body could be uncovered. He did, however succeed in finding a bundle of clothing floating down which resembled a body and this is believed to be the cause of the stir.

ROSE DAY TAGGERS ARE WELL RECEIVED

The Rose Day held today in memory of Queen Mother Alexandra, who was the first lady of the land to die, and objects throughout the British Empire, was well patronized here this morning. As an early hour the main streets of Belleville were well supplied with young ladies, acting as "taggers" and the latter stirred up considerable excitement to the call and at noon a person walking on the main street without a tag was a rare sight.

Although it is about seventeen years since the late Queen Mother retired from the throne, when her husband, King Edward the Seventh passed away and this full the second anniversary of her death will be commemorated by a memorial service which was held in higher esteem by her subjects than the late Queen Mother Alexandra in whose memory Rose Day is being held.

Those in charge of the affair are Mrs. Simons, Regent of the E. Julien Chapter, I. O. D. E. ; Mrs. J. Neate is convenor and Mrs. Ed. Thomas co-convenor.

LINDBERGH BIDS PARIS FAREWELL

Military Planes Escort Clever Airman To Belgian Frontier

Paris, May 28.—Paris today said au revoir to Capt. Lindbergh, the new hero of the air. There was a great roar of voices, shrill tooting of whistles and hooting of horns as the lieutenant-colonel drove in a great circle from Le Bourget Field passed over the Arc de Triomphe and Place de La Concorde, circled the Eiffel Tower and then headed straight for Brussels, Belgium, and new triumphs. He left the runway on the flying field at 12.45, every opportunity in Paris was jammed with people eager for a sight of the flyer in action. The people got him a total farewell that seemed to come from every heart. As he passed over the Place de Concord at an altitude of only 200 yards Lindbergh dropped a message which said God Bye Paris, you have been good to me." In deference to his request Lindbergh had no actual escort. Military planes detailed by the government to go with him to the Belgian frontier, followed the "Spirit of St. Louis" at a respective distance. Three other planes flanked the military planes as personal tribute.

H. B. HUNGERFORD IS DEAD TO-DAY

Noted Throughout the Continent as Breeder of Scotch Collies

Following an illness of about one year, Mr. Harry Becher Hungerford this morning died peacefully at his late residence, 62 Bridge Street West, in his fifty-seventh year.

He was the eldest son of the late William A. Hungerford and Emily Hungerford and had resided in Belleville in his early life and had made his head quarters here for the past several years.

Business activities had necessitated extensive travels and Mr. Hungerford knew almost every city of importance in Canada and the United States and had journeyed frequently to England and the Continent. His host of business and personal friends are scattered in many countries.

As a hobby he has been devoted to dogs, specializing in Scotch Collies, and as a breeder and judge he was a recognized authority throughout this continent.

Two sons, Becher, of Chicago; and Thomas, of Detroit, survive while the sisters and brothers are Mrs. Edith Sibbald, of Chicago; Mrs. John Macdonald, of Toronto; Mrs. Kirkpatrick, of Vancouver; John S., of Vancouver; and Walter, of Montreal.

Mr. Hungerford's death will bring sadness to a very great number of intimate friends here and elsewhere. He had the rare faculty of making friends quickly and retaining them permanently. He was a Conservative in politics and an Anglican in religion.

The play was presented in the Memorial Hall at Albert College.

Mobilization of the Union's interior resources has now become the most important defence, says Nicholas Bruckhanoff, Commissar of Finance.

H. B. HUNGERFORD IS DEAD TO-DAY

Mr. G. A. C. Weir Broke Threatened Deadlock With Amendment

FIVE PLANS PRESENTED

Board of Education Reached Decision Only After Keen Argument

The New Collegiate and Vocational School will be erected to the rear of the present building with the main entrance facing Church street. This was decided at a two hours' session of the Board of Education last night during which the trustees almost locked themselves into a sea of amendments and threatened to break up without reaching a decision.

The final decision came with rather startling suddeness. There was a resolution, an amendment, and a sub-amendment before the house with at least two other trustees eager to get their amendments on the order paper and the discussion had shown a sharp divergence of opinion which seemed impossible to harmonize.

At this point Mr. G. A. C. Weir rose and stated his position. He admitted, perhaps the resolution he was going to offer was not the ideal solution but it was the best in his opinion under the prevailing circumstances. To go back to the City Council he said, asking for more money would throw the whole thing in the air and delay the new Collegiate for months. He therefore offered as an amendment, the following:

"That the new Collegiate be erected on the site immediately behind the present building, but fronting on Church street, and that the grounds in front be put in an attractive condition with grass and flowers, as a permanent beauty."

Use Old Albert College

The arguments previous to this had centred chiefly on Mr. Fred Smith's resolution, which involved the tearing down of the present building immediately and placing the new structure on the Church street frontage about 45 feet from the street line and close to the St. Andrew's Church property. The point at issue was where to house the pupils during building operations and Mr. Smith, backed by Mr. Jamieson, thought the use of the old Albert College, along with two spare rooms in King George school, despite the objection expressed by Principal MacLaurin that these quarters would not provide proper accommodation.

Mr. Weir withdrew his amendment temporarily to make way for one by Mr. E. D. Ponton, which read:

"That the old High School be left in its present position and utilized until the new building was ready for occupancy."

This received the whole argument to a head and on a vote Mr. O'Flynn's resolution carried, only five trustees voting against it. — Messrs. Smith, Bone, Fairbairn, Bleecker and Mrs. McPee.

Majority of Three

The acceptance of this amendment eliminated Mr. Smith's proposals entirely and cleared the way for a vote on Mr. Weir's sub-amendment which was immediately put and carried by a majority of 2, the vote being ten to seven. Mr. Smith and Mr. Bone concurred in the decision, as they stated in presenting their first resolution that they had no intention of obstructing a decision but had presented their resolution simply as in the best interests of the tax payers and when they were voted down were quite willing to back the new proposition. Mr. Bone immediately moved an adjournment and the meeting was over at 10 o'clock.

Before the discussion opened the architect Mr. J. Arnold Thomson, presented five alternative sketches showing the possible location of the new building, the relation to the road, how these locations would affect the campus. These plans are shown around

"Let there be harmony in things essential—Liberty in things not essential—Charity in all."

TODAY'S THOUGHT

The duty of man is not a wilderness of turnpike gates, through which he is to pass by tickets from one to the other. It is plain and simple, and consists but of two points. His duty to God, which every man must feel; and with respect to his neighbor, to do as he would be done by.—Thomas Paine in "The Rights of Man."

HIGHER SPEED

Observation goes to show that the decision of the Ontario Government to increase the legal maximum speed of automobiles on the provincial highways has been justified by results. Thirty-five miles an hour is a reasonable speed for modern properly-braked motor cars on paved roads such as the Government has constructed, and it meets the demands of most drivers. A few persons disregard the new limit just as they did the old, but if it were raised to fifty miles there are some who would travel at sixty. On the whole it is doubtful if traffic moves this year much faster than it did last, but drivers are free from the sensation of law-breaking and the iniquitous speed traps and measured miles.

Most traffic authorities now recognize the fact that carelessness, not speed, constitutes the real traffic danger, and if all restrictions were taken off except in towns and villages it is doubtful if the safety of life and property would be put in additional peril. The occasional reckless motor driver has little regard for what the law says he may do, and in the event of an accident he would still be liable to the law for his recklessness. The great majority of drivers—and the great majority are careful and cautious—would proceed no faster than at present.

CANADIAN REDS

An official paper published by the British government presents evidence, discovered in the London police raid on the premises of the Russian trading agencies, of the Soviet government's hostile activities against Britain. Among the exhibits is a paper found on one of the Soviet officials, containing a list of names and addresses of well known communist agitators in Canada and the United States. There are in the list two or three notorious radical leaders in Toronto. They are prominent members of the Communist party and the Canadian Labor party, and have managed to secure a dominant influence in the Toronto Trades and Labor Council, which is the recognized central body representative of organized labor in that city.

Moderate-minded trade unionists will hardly relish the established fact that men so influential in the councils of Canadian organized labor are in regular communication with the Third International and the Russian Soviet government and are evidently working as their secret agents. Men such as these are also delegates to the Dominion Trades and Labor congress. Has the executive of that honorable body nothing to do or say to show that it is interested in the situation? Or will it continue to welcome the co-operation of comrades who are Reds, with the enemies of the British Empire, and probably in their pay?

AN IMPROVEMENT

Much as the ways of the girls of today are criticized as inferior to the standards of their mothers' girlhood, it must be conceded that in at least one important respect they have effected a marked improvement: They wear prettier and more sensible clothes. This was strikingly demonstrated at an Eastern college over the border when the class of 1900 marched in the Alumnae Day procession dressed in the very clothes they wore when undergraduates. Only twenty-seven years! but what a change has occurred in feminine attire!

Peals of laughter broke from the girls when they set eyes on the funny costumes that the lasses of 1900 wore. And well might they laugh! To the modern misses the older ones seemed as if attired to play the part of comical characters in a rustic drama. They had dresses so long that they had to hold them in their hands to keep them off the ground as they walked. One of them was attired in the athletic suit which she wore as a member of the champion basketball team of a quarter of a century ago—a tight blue blouse and heavy corduroy skirt that came to her ankles. Such big, awkward hats, with plums and other decorations of a bygone age! And high stock collars!

If girls had appeared in public in 1900 wearing clothes of the fashion now in vogue they would have created a scandal. In some communities they would have been lucky if they escaped arrest. In that period short skirts and low necks would have been regarded as highly immodest. And there is food for thought in this. It suggests the need of caution in condemning variations from the conventional. What we may condemn as improper now may be seen in a different light by the next generation. There are things that are inherently wrong and others which merely appear wrong because we look at them with prejudiced eyes.

It is a shameful thing in some Mohammedan countries for a woman to expose her face to public view. But scarcely less ridiculous was the canon of 1900 which required a woman to wear a dress so long that it trailed on the ground.

There's the flag and the green, with the bunkers between—

TAKING REBEL GIRLS AS LIFE PARTNERS

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Mother says she's the queerest girl she ever saw. Sister calls her a Flat Tire. Brother Bill frankly confesses she gives him a pain in the neck.

Dad grunts when he sees her and wonders what the boys are coming to when they fall in love with a girl like that.

And Arthur indignantly asks if it's anyone's business what sort of a girl he chooses to marry as long as she suits him.

"I know Eloise isn't exactly like other girls," he writes, "and that is just why I like her. She is very advanced, so of course, they can't understand her. She doesn't care for all this nonsense about clothes, the way my sister does. And you simply couldn't drag her to a card party or a tea.

"As for housekeeping, we both agree that it is a terrible waste of time. I have often told her what a fuss Mothers makes about running our home — how everything has to be just so or she throws a fit. Eloise agrees with me that that is all wrong. We are going to live like two comrades and not bother about details.

She isn't pretty but she is genuine, and that's something you can't say about most girls nowadays. If she doesn't like people, and there are very few she does like, she won't pretend to like them. She doesn't insult them, but simply won't have, anything to do with them. I admire honesty like that in a girl, don't you? Most girls are so affected.

"Mother is making an awful fuss over it. She says that Eloise won't be a help to me in my business. I am just starting in a brokerage office and my family think I should have a girl who can play the social game. But I tell them that is just what I don't want. And I guess I ought to know what I want. What right has my family got to criticize the girl I want to marry? I'm marrying her, not they." ARTHUR.

Your remarks are not original, Arthur.

They have been made many, many times before and the young gentlemen who made them have generally had to eat them.

I can quite understand your indignation at the family's criticism. I remember my own feelings on at least fifty-seven different occasions when I dragged home something I yearned to wed and had it trampled on by the family. I was all smoked up at the time. But as I look back at ten, boy, I agree with the family 100 per cent.

You think it is "none of the family's business."

Many a family wishes that it wasn't Arthur, and they would give much if they could escape the unpleasant consequences of a son's unwise marriage. But they can't. Whether they like it or not—and whether you and Eloise like it or not—Eloise is going to become part of that family. And the problems of the new home will become part of the problems of the old home.

You and Eloise feel that you are going to live an absolutely independent life. You aren't. When Eloise has the flu, you'll want sister to come over and take care of her. When the babies come, you'll want to leave them with Mother while you and Eloise run around leading this delightfully carefree, comradely existence. And when Eloise, with her fine scorn for details wastes your money and runs up bills, you'll be wanting to borrow a little from Dad and Brother Bill.

If you marry Eloise the family will marry her too—and naturally they don't relish the prospect. For take it from a disinterested observer, Eloise certainly does look like Some Handful. Particularly for a raising young worker who wants to stand well with his world.

By your own report, brother, you're about to marry a young woman who doesn't care two hoots for the rest of the world and isn't going to try to care. That seems delightfully independent now, but how will it seem when you want to bring a "fine prospect" home to dinner? How will it seem when she snubs all your old friends, because she's too "genuine" to be friendly and cordial to strangers who don't appeal to her?

How will it seem when she refuses to attend social functions which are vital to your business because her mind is above such trivial matters, or, if she does attend, sits around like a stupid, bored lump on a log? How will you feel about your dirty, untidy housemate when she's your hostess-wife when you enter the charming homes of your business acquaintances and meet their genial, dainty wives?

Remember, Arthur, you're not just marrying a girl. You're marrying an ENVIRONMENT — the environment which girl will make for you. Your happiness and business will depend on that environment and by your own confession, the young lady isn't concerned with anyone's environment, save her own.

So think well, Arthur, and don't get too peeved with the family. They too are going to marry her if she becomes Mrs. Arthur. In fact, most of your well-known world is going to marry her, and from present indications, I don't blame 'em for yelling loud and hard.

A-lvice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

ADVICE TO GIRLS TAKE TWO

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of seventeen and and desperately in love with a man twelve years my senior. I left home a year ago and have been making my own living since. I know my parents would object to this man. What shall I do?

RUNAWAY.

RUNAWAY: Before you do anything to estrange your family, remember that you are still very young — too young to be very much more than in love with the idea of love and flattered by the attentions of a man considerably older than yourself. I doubt that you have tested yourself or your emotions sufficiently to determine whether you can find permanent happiness with the man you describe. On the other hand, he is twelve years older than you in experience as well as age and has probably come through the tempestuous period upon which you are entering and prepared to "settle down."

Give yourself a chance before you jeopardize your whole future by a hasty and youthful decision. If he loves you sufficiently, he will be willing to be friends for a long time to come. Perhaps after your affections have stood the test of time and you have explored each other's ideas and tastes and found them compatible, you may be better able to win your parents' consent to your marriage.

EXPECTANT MOTHERS

Read Mrs. Menard's Letter, Her Experience May Help

Chatham, Ontario. — "I want to tell you how much good your medicine has done me. Before my baby came I felt so weak and run-down that I could hardly do my work. My head ached continually and I was so discouraged that I could cry from morning till night. I had another baby just over a year and a half old and it gave me a lot to do. So I thought I would try your E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as I had read so much about it in the little books. I found a difference right away as my head was relieved and my tired feelings gone. My sister had been doing my washing and she continued doing it, as she said it might set me back if I started to do it again. It sure did help me and I had taken just two bottles when my baby came. He is a fine big boy, now nearly five months old. I am taking your medicine again and I am able to do my work all by myself now. I always recommend the Vegetable Compound to women, and especially to expectant mothers, as I believe they need help at those times." — Mrs. OLIVER MENARD, 24 Harvey St., Chatham, Ontario.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

With leading London night clubs fast losing their patrons, who are m' grating to the newer and brighter dance restaurants, the biggest changes in the character of London night-life is in progress.

Some new evening dresses in Paris have shades of the material taken from the light slip and a repetition of the slip in miniature attached to the left shoulder.

Covert Garden's first week of opera has introduced a new way of wearing evening coats, for instead of putting her coat on in the usual manner, the very fashionable woman is now draping the coat capewise about her shoulders, leaving the sleeves loose at the back.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN

By Mildred Barbour

There was an open fireplace, low divans with pillows, a tea-table, a triumphantly clever, home-made dressing-table billowing with crisp taffetas, a buffet, and, on the elevated model-stand, a carved chair with a strip of brocade draped over one arm. The niche in the wall behind it held a light which cast a mellow glow in the background.

"Serge always stands there when he plays or composes," explained his little wife proudly. "You've no idea how effective the light is!"

"No, but I'll bet he has!" thought Sybil.

"Now, I'm sure you want to wash your hands and powder your nose," said her hostess hospitably.

She opened a door to the left and ushered Sybil into a small but marvelously shining and polished bathroom. There were monogrammed towels on the rack and white curtains at the window, but the room was so small that, once the door was closed, it was barely possible to turn around.

Sybil realized, with a sense of dismay, that there was no bedroom. The bathroom was also the dressing-room!

When she had made herself tidy, she came out again into the studio. Eva Patton called from a doorway on the opposite side of the big room:

"Serge has gone to get oranges and lemons. You going to give you a cocktail."

Sybil stepped to the open doorway and saw that her hostess spoke from what was, by courtesy, called a kitchen! It was scarcely more than a cupboard, but, like the bathroom, it was immaculate. Pots and pans gleamed from neat rows of hooks; a smell of baking issued from the tiny oven.

"What a charming kitchen!" Sybil exclaimed.

"Yes," Mrs. Patton's frank eyes clouded. "But you should have seen the heavenly kitchen we had at home. It was almost as large as the studio and was papered in blue-and-white tile. There was blue and white linoleum on the floor, and I painted the furniture to match." She sighed and glanced at the black ventilator which served as a window in her kitchenette. "I miss it awfully."

Serge came back just then with the oranges and powdered cocktails.

"Not much like what we've had all summer, is it?" he said to Sybil.

"It's very good," declared Sybil, but she tasted her drink gingerly.

Mrs. Patton served the lunch on a folding table in a corner of the studio, covering it first with a cloth beautifully embroidered with yellow flowers. There were tiny doilies to match. Sybil exclaimed over them.

"I did it myself," explained Eva Patton. "While Serge composes, I have to keep as quiet as a mouse. The slightest noise disturbs him, so I usually put in the time sewing."

"By the way, Bab, I picked up a marvel of a fiddle in Vienna. A real Stradivarus this time, or I'll eat my hat."

A slightly apprehensive expression crossed little Mrs. Patton's face.

"I — was it frightfully expensive, Serge?"

"Umm, a little. What else can you expect?"

"But — you've got four violins now."

"What of it?" he said loftily. "And I brought you a souvenir of Paris, too, Babe."

"Did you, Serge?" she exclaimed eagerly. "You perfectly dear of you. But hurry and sit down, you people, or my souffle will be a failure."

They sat down, and a souffle light as a feather, cold sliced breast of chicken with aspic, and hot flaky biscuits; a salad with Roquefort dressing and a fruit tart for dessert.

They had coffee afterward, lolling among the soft cushions on the divans.

"And now, Serge, where's my present?" asked little Mrs. Patton, with all the native anticipation of a child.

He dragged it out of his luggage — one of those jointless rag dolls, with absurd hands and feet, belle for toes and a flat, painted face above a Pierrot's ruff, that fashionable restaurant in Paris give away by the score.

He must have got the thing at some cafe in Montmarte—he would never have spent good money to buy it.

"It's — it's cunning, Serge. You were," she swallowed hard, "awfully sweet to remember me."

"Now look at my Strad, Babe," he commanded triumphantly, and brought the instrument to view.

His wife knelt at it—hard. But she evidently knew her cue, for she said:

"Play it for us, Serge. I'm sure Miss Ross would like to hear you!"

chin, and played. To Sybil, his playing was passionate and sharpened by claws.

"Do," urged Sybil, curbing her desire to wring his neck, as she saw the disappointment in his wife's eyes over the "souvenir of Paris."

So, Patton mounted the platform, struck what he considered a graceful attitude, tucked the violin under his chin, and played. o Sybil, his playing was no better, and slightly worse, than the second rate of the most mediocre orchestra she had heard in Europe. But Eva Patton's eyes were shiny, poor little fool, thought Sybil, with compassion—and sharpened her claws for Serge!

CHAPTER 29

Before Sybil left, Eva Patton proudly showed her the stacks of beautiful needlework she had done—exquisitely fine embroideries that Sybil remembering her mother's deftness, knew to be the work of an expert.

"How can you ever use them all?" wondered Sybil.

"I don't" admitted little Mrs. Patton, with a flush. And Sybil guessed then that these lovely things were made to sell. Did Serge Patton really make a living at all?

Serge himself insisted upon escorting Sybil to her hotel. In the taxi he assumed the romantic and slightly mel ancholy attitude which seemed so false in the presence of his cheery little wife.

Y'S MEN ADVISED OF CHARACTER BUILDING

Newton Thompson has been appointed delegate from the Belleville Men's Club to the International Convention at Milwaukee in September. Last night's meeting was exceptionally well-attended and several visitors were introduced.

Winslow Reid, the popular insurance member, was again showered with congratulations upon his approaching marriage and took the occasion to thank the members for the "beautiful present" that was given him at the inter-city meet in Peterboro last week.

Mr. Thompson spoke to a most interesting address by Mr. Archibald, commercial teacher at the High School on the importance of the right foundation in character building. "The most successful man is the man of character," he said, "and she needs them now more than any other time in the history of the country. Giving into history the speaker vividly described how each of the stones in Solomon's temple were squared and moulded into one of the greatest pieces of architecture ever known.

"Many start life with a handicap and others with a premium," Mr. Archibald observed, "and the youth of Canada get the right material for a sound character from books and their surroundings and home buildings.

"Jesus, the greatest character who ever lived had the three essentials (1) Friendliness; (2) Honesty and a masterful manner of leadership."

Sinking of its Kamiskotia shaft has been started by Hollinger on the Jamie on Claims. Thomas Gain is in charge. Hollinger has established a wharf on Kamiskotia development ground and supplies are being taken by water from Timmins.

McIntyre-and Noranda have been started active exploratory work on their groups. Kamiskotia Development Company finished a 60 foot shaft and is work their group which is hemmed in by McIntyre, Hollinger and Noranda and about the only "inside" ground not acquired by the large mining Companies.

International Nickel made its day's new high early this morning at 72 3-4bars many interesting things about this Company nowadays. The mines Handbook of New York, for instance, places an estimate of 100,000,000 tons ore reserves for the Frood deposit. The total meral content of the Frood is said to be estimated at about 849 s ton, which if correct would give the mine ore reserves valued at nearly five billion dollars. Other properties of the Company possess reserves estimating at around $750,000,000. Such figures sound incredible but they are probably not far from the truth.

DEATHS & FUNERALS

GEORGINA ROSE

The funeral of the late Georgina Rose, one year and nine months old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rose, of the Trenton Road, four miles east of Belleville, who succumbed after a brief illness on Thursday afternoon, took place this afternoon from the home of her parents to White's Cemetery, where the interment was made.

At the house at 2.30 in the presence of many sorrowing relatives and friends, Rev. Mr. White also officiated at the committal at the graveside. The large number of relatives and friends at the funeral together with the wealth of floral offerings mutely testified to the sympathy felt for the bereaved ones in their sorrow.

Mina Calcutt, wife of Richard B. Rogers, C. E., of Peterboro, died suddenly this morning at 9 o'clock at the family residence, "Beechwood Farm," Peterboro. Mrs. Rogers had been in immediate fargily besides her husband, who was engineer in charge of the building of the Lift Lock at Peterboro, six children, Major Harry Rogers, of Toronto, George of Pine street, Belleville, and Gerald Herbert, of Peterboro, Mrs. H. I. Fairweather, of Peterboro, Miss Lillian at home, and Mrs. Herbert Geale, of Peterboro. Both Major and Captain Rogers were prisoners of war in Germany for several years.

Orville Vokes, 9, was killed by a manure spreader on his father's farm near Deer Sound. He fell under the wheel.

NEW COLLEGIATE

and viewed by the trustees and the small group of ratepayers who attended the meeting and each of the five plans had its advocates. Mr. Thomson pointed out that three of these locations involved the tearing down of the old school before building started, the only one which it was possible to proceed with while utilizing the present building being to place the new structure in the rear of the old one and front it either towards John or Church streets.

Ackerman's Resolution First

Mr. H. W. Ackerman opened the discussion by moving a resolution that the new Collegiate be built according to the original plans on the John street side of the property with the entrance fronting East, and was seconded by Mr. Arthur McCoy. The first amendment offered was that of Mr. Smith to bring the building down towards Church street, but this as stated was killed by Col. O'Flynn's amendment to utilize the old building during the construction of the new, and the way was cleared for the adoption of Mr. West's amendment.

During the early part of the meeting it looked at one time as though the efforts of the trustees to reach a decision would be abortive. The fight centred upon the possibility of finding other accommodation for the pupils of the present building was torn down in order to make way for the proper placing of the new building. In support of his position Mr. Smith presented figures from a contractor who said that he could put old Albert College into condition for use at a expenditure of from one thousand to fifteen hundred dollars. Several trustees questioned whether this could be done and Principal McLaurin doubted whether decent accommodation could be provided at all. The point was settled by different members of the Board that in utilizing Albert College the children and teachers would be outside the city limits and therefore without the jurisdiction of the Board and that in any event the trustees had no legal authority to spend money on a school building which was not within the limits of the city.

Building Will Start ...

The contractors A. R. Holmes and Company of Toronto whose tender was accepted at the last meeting of the Board will be notified today that the way is cleared for building operations and work will actually be gone on with immediately. While the contract is not actually signed it only awaits formal ratification by the Board which was held up pending the final decision as to where the building would be placed.

BELLE THEATRE

"Don Juan!" What adventurous and romantic fancies that name conjures up in the minds of the literature lovers of all nations!
John Barrymore! What a very incarnation of the spirit of romance and adventure that name represents to all lovers of the stage and screen the world over.
Therefore, it is with pardonable pride that Warner Brothers present their super-production of "Don Juan," starring John Barrymore which comes to the Belle Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.
This inimitable love-chronicle artfully combining intimacy, action and splendor, loosely adheres to the tradition of Don Juan Tenorio, grandee of Spain, upon which Mollere, Balzac, Byron, Zorrilla and many others have based enduring contributions to the world's classics. The source-character of Don Juan possesses the characteristics of irresistible charm, grace and masculine comeliness. He is accomplished, aggressive, audacious in affairs of honor or the heart. Men instinctively acknowledge his natural precedence in the realms of intellect and power—women his mastery in the realm of emotion and love.

GEHRIG SLAPPED OUT 11TH HOMER; YANKS WIN ONE

Slugger Tied Ruth's Mark; Linsbee Held Hugmen To Four Hits

New York, May 28.—The Yankees split a twin engagement with the Senators here yesterday, shutting out Washington 5 to 0 in the final contest after taking the small end of a 7 to 2 verdict in the opener. Linsbee held the Yankees to four hits in the fifth game, two of them going to Ochrig, who also clouted his eleventh home run of the season in the second game, tying Babe Ruth for the season's high total.

Alphonse Thomas held the Tigers to five hits at Detroit and the Chicago White Sox won their fifth successive game, thereby climbing a step closer to the leading Yankees. The score was 4 to 1. In winning his eighth victory of the season, Thomas observed a shut out as the only Tiger run resulted from a delfy from McCurdy's wild throw. Thomas has allowed only one earned run in his 38 innings.

Sizzling six runs on faulty pitching and infield support and earning only one, a homer by Hodapp, the Cleveland Indians won from the Browns 7 to 2, at St. Louis. Cleveland garnered three runs in the third off one single, when Jones walked four, forcing in two runs, and Sisler bobbled a ground er.

Philadelphia at Boston, rain.

LEAFS RALLIED TWICE TO WIN

Toronto Bunched Hits Behind Errors; Syracuse Beat Buffalo

Toronto, May 28.—Toronto twice came from behind to defeat Rochester 7-6, in the second game of the series here yesterday. The Leafs bunched their hits with Rochester errors for four of the seven runs. Silva was the chief offender in the faltering of the Rube defence. He dropped two fly balls in the eighth, one with the bases full and two men out. Thormahlen pitched good ball and deserved a better fate. Fisher was the only Toronto hurler that was effective.

The Syracuse Stars soundly trounced the Bisons for their second straight victory of the series at Buffalo today by a score of 9 to 4. The Stars jolted Jack Stallingworth star Bison hurler, from the mound in the fifth for his second loss in six games.

The Skeeters came from behind at Jersey City to win a well-played game from the Baltimore Orioles in the ninth inning by the score of 8 to 5.

The Bears defeated the Reading Keys in a doubleheader at Newark by the scores of 13 to 4 and 9 to 8. Both game were long-drawn affairs and increased Reading's straight defeats to 27. Al Mamaux hurled ball in the first and just breezed through the game.

Lev Casey, pinch-hitting for Hawks, tied the score with a long home run in the second tilt. The Bears came from behind twice to win the game.

GIANTS DROPPED TO 4TH PLACE; LOST TWO GAMES

Pirates Won In 10th—Took Battle Eight Runs To Seven

New York, May 28.—The non-stop flights of the New York Giants to a point directly opposite that where the National League pennant flies pecked two more milestones yesterday afternoon as they crashed headlong into a pair of defeats before the dear old Dodgers, of Brooklyn while a crowd of 28,000 looked on in amazement hardly greater than that of John McGraw himself. First they got it from Dazzy Vance 5 to 3, then they took it from Jesse Petty, 5 to 1, and when it was all over all that portion of the crowd which claims Flatbush for its own did a war dance on Ebbetts Field while the Giants passed out, in a fog.

Pirates won a ten-inning battle from St. Louis at Pittsburgh, 8 to 7, and ran their string of consecutive victories to nine. Joe Bush won his own game by singling in the extra frame, scoring Harries. Coming from behind in the seventh, the Pirates tied the count, pounding Flint Rhem from the box, and reaching Littlejohn. Meine relieved Littlejohn and held the Pirates to check until the tenth.

The 154 will be pried off the local golf-ball season on June 3rd when Allan Meagher's Beavers will start up against the Supremes, Kingsley's best squad. On the following day the Nationals of Toronto will be here for a double-header with the Beavers. The latter team sent a smart aggregation against the High School last Saturday and the students swallowed the bitter pill of defeat in two straight games. With Marge Eiberly, Emily Gault, "Tinie" Seymour, Edna Crawford, et al, the locals will be up against a fast team, and the Beavers will need to be at their best. They had another practice last night and are looking better at every appearance Miss Thrasher is showing rapid strides toward developing into one of the best receivers in the city.

Mr. Meagher thinks he has a better team than last year and the Beavers were one of the best in the district last season and are strength ened in several positions and with the experience gained last year, should go a long way. Ev. Whalen, Twila Warham, L. Curry, M. Kelleher and several others compose a formidable squad.

A new second baseman has been unearthed here in the person of Akiyama, a Jap, who is attending Albert College. If he can be induced to remain in Belleville during the coming months, he would be valuable around the camp of the Canadian Nationals. He is one of the smartest-looking diamond stars we have been privileged to see in action for sometime. Akiyama had some experience in Japan and played with Tokio University and against the Waseda team that played in Toronto last week. He's taking an English course at the College and will return to his native land after he has gained an outside knowledge of the English language and customs. He might be approached with an effort to having him remain here and line up with the railroaders.

SINICAL SADIE SEES

Sinical Sadie wonders if the success achieved by a certain Belleville lawyer in getting his clients off doesn't give the other legal luminaries a Pain!

"Wireless is still in its infancy." That is why it howls every night, I suppose.

THE WORLD'S WORST ROAD.

Passenger — (Speeding through Belleville) — This is a nice looking town —wasn't it?"

ASK ME ANOTHER

1. Which way is the New High School going to face?
2. Have you got your permit?
3. When is Griffin's Theatre going to open?
4. When will the Liquor Store open?
5. How long is "Seven Days"? (Ask Mikell).

Our language has its limitations. A spinster and a married woman may both say that they are looking for a husband, but though they use the same words they mean a different thing.

SPANGITIS
Suburban Adam quits
His cup that cheers and shelves,
No longer at his ease he sits
But in his garden sneezes.
While Eve along the gravel paces
Watching the snowdrops through her opera glasses.

For spring is at the gate,
So summoning the master
That breakfast fain must wait
Or break a little faster,
The while he nets protecting threads
About the sparrow-haunted crocus beds.

At breakfast in his tea
He digs as with a spade,
And drives a spoon with savage glee
Deep in the marmalade,
And floorward lets his paper flutter,
While seeing daffodils in past of butter.

DIDN'T KNOW AT FIRST
Gentleman ran a walking tour in Scotland: "Boy, how long will it take me to walk to Kilmacraw?"
Boy:—Ah dinna ken."
Gentleman: "Do you live in these parts?"
Boy: "Ay."
Gentleman: "How old are you?"
Boy: "Eleven."
Gentleman: "And you can't tell me how long it will take to walk to Milnegavie? Crass ignorance, I call it! (Starts on his way).
Gentleman (angrily): "Why didn't you say so at first?"
Boy: "How could ah till I saw ye walk!"

Weak, Listless Girl

Need Such a Tonic as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to Restore Health.

When a girl in her teens becomes pale and sallow, especially if at the same time she shows inclination to tire easily, a listlessness and inattention to her work or studies, she needs Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a tonic which directly and specifically corrects the condition from which she is suffering. A chemical analysis of the blood of such a girl would show it to be deficient in just the elements Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can supply. But an analysis of the blood is not needed—the physical signs are plain. Among these signs are a paler red in the cheeks and lips, dark circles under the eyes, easily tired and breathless after slight exertion. Poor appetite, headaches, and sometimes fainting spells follow; often the patient is nervous and is startled at the least noise. In all run-down conditions there is no other tonic will build you up so quickly and so surely as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The statement of Miss Dorothy Lumsden, Buan Island, N.S., will show how to other weak girls. She says:—"I wish from my heart I could persuade every person who is in a run-down condition to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. About a year ago I was a weak girl suffering from impoverished blood and a run-down system, with many of the attendant symptoms. I had often read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to take them, and after using six boxes I feel as well and strong as ever. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will be my standby in the future if ever anything puts me looking up again, and I shall always find pleasure in recommending them to others."

You can get these pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A FIT REVENGE
An amusing story is told by a French writer Kerr, which will please cat lovers, methinks.
"Madame Caro, rejoiced in a magnificent cat. M. de C. amused himself one day or standing it, whereupon Madame C. set mouse-traps in her house and in the houses of her friends. When she had collected about four hundred mice (presumably alive) she put them in a box and sent it to Madame de C. Madame de C. opened it herself, hoping she would find some new gowns. All the bottom of the box was a note addressed to her, "Madame, your husband killed my cat. I send you my mice."

Ta the cool, dark depths of a forest growing beside an old oak tree, was a Violet. She was a beautiful flower, but oh, so proud and haughty.
But soon she had a lesson, and this is the way it happened.
One spring day a tired little fairy flew through the forest. She was tired of sun hot and tired and I don't see one flower where I can rest." Violet heard and cried out, "Come and rest your wings here and my perfume shall waft you to sleep."
"Nay," said the fairy "Your flower is small and your manner is so haughty I could not rest. I will go and find a sweet gentle daffodil. She is gentle and modest and will love me". And off she went. "You see" said the wise old oak. "I know the ways of the world and mortals say "Modesty is the best policy". Take this warning, be modest and be loved."

Poor Violet drooped her purple head in humility and promised the oak she would change her ways. And she did. She is sweet and modest now and all the fairies love her.

PICNICS AND FAIRIES
Two or three weeks ago I made an appeal to picnickers to gather up their scattered refuse before leaving for home, and so keep ours beauty spots a joy forever. A writer in the "Christmas" blames it on the youngsters. If any of Hastings boys or girls are guilty of such unthinkable pranks, the bothers will read them this poem by E. E. Todd.

PICNICS.
If you go a-picnicking and throw your scraps about
You'll never see the little folk go running in and out.
And if you leave your orange peel all littered on the grass
You'll never go to Fairyland to see the fairies pass.
For empty cans and tangle strings
And paper bags are not the things
To scatter where a lunch sings.

So if you go a-picnicking, remember you're a guest,
Of all the tiny people, and you'll really find it best
To leave their ballroom tidy and to clear away the mess.
Perhaps you'll catch a fairy in her newest dancing dress.
But paper bags and broken combs
Will trail your pixie pixie tonnes
And frighten all the tiny gnomes.

But if you go a-picnicking and you see no elfin-wise,
You'll maybe hear with fairy ears and see with goblin eyes;
The little folk will welcome you and they will open wide
The hidden doors of Fairyland and you will pass inside.
And maybe see a baby fay
White-cradled in a cherry spray
Although it is Bank Holiday.

The Irony of Love
By Charles Garvice

Hafe shook his head and drew a long breath, as he said: "I've only got one idea, and that is to clear out. I want to get away from—from it all—from myself!" They was a pause. "And if—when she's found, and they decide these lawyers, that—that I'm married to her, you want me to—"

"Yes," said Mr. Gilfillan solemnly. "Your place is by her side; it is your duty not only to forgive her but to treat her as you'd wish, to stand by her even against herself, to help her to wipe away, forget the past, to love her. That's what a wife is Hazel, a quiet reproduction of the angelic—"

"Don't—don't!" cried Hafe. "You've forgot, that—there's Maude."

"No," said Mr. Gilfillan pityingly. "I have not forgotten. I did not mean to speak of Lady Maude—the proud child, who lies stunned and heartbroken in her misery— But it is well to speak of her, I must say that she herself would know that I am right, that I am pointing out to you your solemn duty."

Hafe stared at him, then turned away. "I—I want to see her," he said his face covered with his hand. "But what's the use, what is there to do or do?"

Mr. Gilfillan went to him and, laying a hand on his shoulder, said brokenly, "Dear lad, I know, I understand! But though we are beaten, and I will not say we are in His hands, and He will not forget."

Without another word, the minister left the room. And the tears that covered Hazel's face as he buried his fingers proved that the good old man had not spoken in vain. Hafe paced his room many and many a time, and only in fitful snatches. He looked ten years older when St. Ives saw him the next day.

Maude—asked me to give you a message, Stradyn," he said, as he looked at he could. "She sends you her love she wants to see you, where she is strong enough. The doctor is anxious will only let me see her for ten minutes, but I'm not worried — I mean, I know she is not going to be seriously ill; she has too much pluck— But, you know that, Stradyn, she'll pull through presently, and be able to see you."

Hafe, merely nodded. Gordon had wired, and arrived by the last train Hafe was incapable of asking the question that burned in his eyes, nor could St. Ives speak. Gordon went to the manchester and flipped his hands into his pockets, polished his eyeglass with intimate, but fretful, care.

"I've nothing particular to tell you," he said. "The — the facts are peculiar; we are getting counsel's opinion. But I've learned enough about the woman," he went on, after a pause. "It's bad enough. I don't want to take up old troubles, old scandals, but the man in your natural brother, Lord Strandyre and Mr. Trevers and I are agreed that all the details of the story—it is not necessary it is not well that we should recount them to you. Be satisfied, Lord Strandyre, with the fact that your father would have avenged for his folly and righted the wrong he had done if he had found it possible to do so. Let that suffice. As to the man, Travers, he has acted as I expected he would do. You will remember that I told you your account at the bank was considerably over-drawn. Oh, well, I put it shortly"—he shrugged his shoulders—"Travers has made off with a large sum of money. A very large sum," he added gravely.

Hafe made no remark, showed no interest in the statement; it is just possible that he found a grim satisfaction in the fact that, after all, some of the money had gone to Travers.

"It is not difficult to guess," said Mr Gordon, "that Travers, on finding that his accomplice had given him the slip, jumped to the conclusion that it was a fit of remorse, she had come to the castle. And that, seeing the coast was up, he promptly disappeared with his booty. Nothing will be easier than to track and arrest him, but—"

Hafe shook his head.

"Quite so," said Mr. Gordon, in a tone that implied that it would be made to avoid publicity, scandal. I take it that the police are unaware of the knowledge of this business is confined to ourselves and Mr. Gilfillan? I have spoken to the constable with his duty. It is just possible — he sighed — that we may be able to keep it out of the papers, unless, of course, the case has to go into court."

CHAPTER XXXI.

ALWAYS FAITHFUL

It was easy enough, even without the aid of the police, which could not be employed, to track Phenie to the London terminus; but the clews broke off short there, for she had had some hours' start, and no one knew where she had lived in London.

Mr. Gordon brought the news to Hafe of the failure to find her, and Hafe received it without any comment. Low though Mr. Gilfillan's entertainment had not been send down on stony ground. Hafe's heart was the full of sorrow for Maude, and he gave himself thought to Phenie. Moreover, he was not fearful that she would make away with herself; for she believed in Jimpling Jane, and there, though a man and his fellow, he does not commit suicide.

One of the foremost court dressmakers on this island is in preference the white for costumes even of white satin.

The idea of one French designer of adding a shoulder bow to the sleeveless coat has gone like wild fire New York reports. There is in fact, a strong tendency to the neckbands, ties and cuffs the bow being very well considered, and the smartest of all garnitures for a hat.

Poems Old And New

APPLE BLOSSOMS
Somewhere, not very far from town,
Where skies are clear and bright,
The sturdy apple-trees are clothed
In fanny pink and white;
Beneath the trees the petals lie
Like rosy snowflakes reddown,
And lucky people walk on them
Instead of paving-stone.

Some day, beloved, we will leave
The grimy and fret of town,
And you shall tend your pansy beds,
And wear pink linen gowns,
You shall have maple psalms to tread,
Of grass and meadow-sweet,
And apple blossom, carpet-wise,
To woo your fairy feet.

MISS PIXIE
Did you ever meet Miss Pixie of the Sprucess?
Did you ever glimpse her morning elfin face?
Did you ever hear her collins while the whippoorwills were calling,
And observe your pork and taters up the chase?

Her feet are clad in moccasins and beads,
Her dress? Oh, next to nothing, Thomas undressed.
Her slender arms are circled round with vine,
And dusky locks cling close about her breast.

Red cherries droop below each pointed ear;
Her nut-brown legs are criss-crossed
White with scratches;

Her merry laughter stills among the pines;
Her eager face gleams pale from milk weed patches,

And though I never yet have reached her hand—
God knows I've tried with all my heart's desire—
One morning just at dawn she caught me sleeping
And with her soft lips touched my soul with fire.

And once when camping near a foaming rip,
Lying side-eyed beneath the milky stars,
Seldom I heard her voice rise sweet and clear,
Calling my soul beyond the river bars.

Dear, dauntless Pixie of the wind and weather,
Adieu with love and merriment and mirth,
I chose thee down my dreams, but cannot live forever—
God grant I catch thee ere the trail is dozed!

Did you ever meet Miss Pixie of the Thickets,
Where the scarlet leaves leap tinkling from your feet?
Have you ever heard her collins while a million feet were falling
And a million lights were crowding all the street?

Lloyd Roberts.

MATHEMATICIAN HAS DISCOVERED THE SOLUTION

Seattle, Wash., May 27.—Successful tri-section of all angles, a problem that has baffled mathematicians for 2,000 years is claimed by Bertice C. Hastings, 62-year-old Seattle high school instructor.

Trisection of angles is one of the three geometric problems unsolved by mathematicians.

The problem—which was studied by Archimedes, the Greek philosopher, as early as 250 B.C., and by Rene Descartes and Sir Isaac Newton in the 17th Century, was solved by Hastings with the aid of a miter, a compass and certain established gemotric principles, he told engineers.

Squares are constructed within the angle to be trisected, he explained, but the rest of the process is too technical for comprehension by the layman without the use of extensive diagrams.

Engineers, designers and draughtsmen, Hastings declared will find the discovery to have practical application of great value.

Mrs. Rachael Pettit, aged 85, who for 36 years lived in Windsor, died in that city. Her husband survives. The couple had been married 69 years.

Thousands Move in First Three Days of May

The time-honored custom whereby an average of 20,000 householders in Montreal move on the first, second and third of May each year is one of the odd survivals of a province era that brings woe and despair to multitudes. Every known type of vehicle is pressed into service, and the spectacle of the dislocating down on the earthly effects of (it invariably rains) of hundreds of flat dwellers as they seek their new domicile is one of the teasures of the metropolis. The public service companies—electric light, gas, telephone—are confronted with the task of compressing into a few days services transfers that ordinarily would take weeks. Telephone calls for 'information' mount as high as 25,000 per day and the operators are the last John Bull time a reckoned source of entertainment to linger mugly on such queries as, "Operator, where Archbishop's house; while wise apostlehrifts revel in of theological literature.

ALFALFA SALE IS FEATHER IN ALBERTA'S CAP

Lethbridge, Alta., May 28.—The sale of Grimm's Alfalfa seed grown in the Brooks district, and shipped to Denmark is claimed as another "feather" in Alberta's cap. For some time past experiments have been carried on in Denmark with this particular seed.

So successful have these been, that the Danish growers purchased two carloads, representing 5,000 pounds. The Danish growers would have taken twice that amount had it been available, but owing to United States growers placing large orders, the local seed men have not been able to keep up with the demand. Growers of Grimm Alfalfa seed have paid $40 an acre clear for their product.

YANKS PAID A HUGE PRICE FOR OBJECTS D'ART

New York, N.Y., May 27.—With the close of the season of the American Art Galleries here, records show the American patrons of art paid out more than $6,000,000 at auction sales in 192 for art objects and rare books. This was achieved during 81 sales and top the peak record made last season.

Fortunes are rumbled away during the re-sale of separate treasures, it is said. Sir Joseph Duveen some sold Rembrandt's "Titus in an Armchair" for $103,000 and recently bought it back for $270,000, the highest auction price ever paid in the United States for any picture. Another record price was for a royal Persian rug bought 25 years ago for $38,000 and sold at auction in 1927 for $100,000.

PURE BRED SIRE AREAS IN SASK.

Regina, Sask., May 28.—Petitions are being circulated favoring the establishment of pure-bred sire areas for horses, cattle, sheep and hogs in various municipalities in southern Saskatchewan. Signed petitions have already been received by the Provincial Department of Agriculture. Under the act passed at the last session of the legislature, any municipality may petition the Minister of Agriculture asking that the municipality be set up as a pure-bred sire area for horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. The legislation comes into force May 1 and provides that no unregistered stock will be permitted in the bounds of a pure-bred sire area.

THE SCOT IN ENGLAND

Caradoc Evans, writing in London Express—he is a Welsh novelist and playwright—says: "The Scot in England is a showman. At home he is reasonable and respectable; in England he demands bagpipes with his haggis; in Scotland he does not eat haggis at all. In England his dialect is a fake. It was invented by music-hall comedians, and is kept alive in order to make us believe that Scotland is peopled by village idiots, and that there live the Kirk cannot us is of no account.

"But the idiot of a Scottish village is other than the oracle of an English village, and while we pause in our condescension to mother the brawny fellow whose main adjective is 'tremendous', the Scot is behind himself to our property.

"His meanness, too, is a fable—a fable that guards him from distributing his cash to fools. He is shrewd enough to know that the man who saves pennies seldom progresses beyond a sixpenny-in-the-slot money

ARCTIC CIRCLE ASKED TO ALSO WATCH ECLIPSE

New York, N. Y., May 27.—The outposts of civilization in the Canadian Arctic wilderness have been asked by radio to aid the Harvard University Observatory in observing on June 15 the first lunar eclipse since 1892. Observers in the northern country in the region of Chesterfield Inlet, Bear Lake, Rampart House and Good Hope has a message of instruction broadcast to them recently.

Directions for the observation of this rare lunar phenomenon, addressed to members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, representatives of the Hudson's Bay Company and Revillon Freres Trading Company, and the Oblate missionary fathers among the Eskimos was broadcast in part as follow:

"A total eclipse of the moon will occur on June 15, 1927, the centre of the eclipse being at 2 24 A. M. Eastern Standard Time. The sun and moon will both be seeing on the horizon on the days and hour mentioned, at the posts to which this message is addressed.

"It is of great scientific interest to know as exactly as possible what the weather conditions are at that particular time at points near this line. point of all and the astronomers would appreciate any special efforts to procure observations there."

IMITATIVE DOLLS ARE FADS NOW

Paris, May 28.—Dolls in the image of noted personages or representing characters in popular books and plays are quite the thing in society just now.

When Princess Astrid was presented with a doll in her own likeness at Brussels recently as a wedding gift when she and Prince Leopold were married, the present fashion received much impetus.

Several French women artists are specializing in the making of marionettes for private performances and many women amuse themselves by making all sorts of fantastic little creatures.

FARMERS ARE DWINDLING NOW

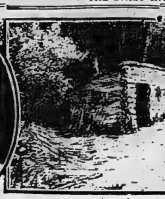

Washington, D.C., May 28.—A decrease of 649,000 persons in the farm population of the United States during the last year, the largest decrease in any year since 1920, has been announced by the Department of Agriculture.

The department estimated that 27,892,000 persons were living on farms on Jan. 1, 1927, as compared with 28,541,000 on Jan. 1, 1926, and 28,982,000 in 1925 as shown by the federal agricultural census of that year.

The movement of population from farms to cities was estimated at 2,155,-

201 GOLF CLUBS THROUGH U. S. A.

New York, N. Y., May 27.—From a single one 32 years ago, the number of public golf links in the country has grown to 201 distributed over many states, a survey by the United States Golf Association shows. Illinois now leads the country with 22, eight of which are in Chicago. New York state has 12, Texas 12, Pennsylvania 8 and California 7.

The ranks of public golf links golfers who have risen to fame include Frank Dolp, winner of the western amateur championship last year, and George Voigt, winner of the North and South and Mason and Dixon titles already this season.

MEN OF FUTURE FINE SPECIMENS

Des Moines, Iowa, May 28.—Men of the future may have "spindle-legs, pot bellies, narrow chests and toothless and chinless mouths," while future women will be slender-hipped, but unable to bear children, in the opinion of J. E. Rogers, of New York, field director of the National Physical Education Service.

Speed of modern life, abolishment of walking and other activities, and extreme diet fads are responsible for a tendency in this direction, declared Mr. Rogers.

LARGE PERCENT OF POPULATION IS ONE-EYED

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 27.—Almost 85 per cent. of the population is "one eyed" — that is, uses one eye more than the other, according to Dr. A. M. Snyder, Professor of Psychology at the University of Pittsburgh, who conducted tests in co-operation with John T. Seaton, instructor in psychology.

In a test, with freshmen and sophomores as subjects it was discovered that 89 were right-eyed, 32 left eyed and 24 undecided, the psychologists announced.

A questionnaire on the matter of glasses revealed that the boys who need glasses wear them but that the girls in many cases only admit they need them and allow the matter to rest there. Seaton said he believed vanity prompted the girls to neglect their

Facility to see and know Ontario better

This intangible contribution is the greatest the highways have made

The greatest contribution the good roads have made to Ontario is the facility they provide the people to see and know their own Province better.

Even more valuable than the easier and more convenient transportation they have afforded for merchandise and farm produce is the intangible benefit thus conferred.

Without the highways, the radius of the automobile would scarcely be greater than that of the horse and buggy. We would still be living in a 25 mile radius for our trips by train.

But motoring is a more intimate way of travel than by railway train. The motorist comes into closer contact with the country through which he passes, and the people who live there.

Good roads, with motor cars to run on them, make it possible for the people living in one part of this great Province to know the people in other parts. Thus they bring together all sections of the Province and create a better understanding among the people. They enable country dwellers to know the town and they open up to the people of the towns the beauties and pleasures of the country.

Higher Speed Limit means more Caution

The faster moving traffic under the new speed limit thrusts a greater responsibility for caution on automobile drivers.

Recklessness or carelessness in driving, now deserve and will receive more stringent punishment.

Care must continue to be exercised in going through villages, past pedestrians, and at cross roads, railroads, curves and bridges.

Courtesy in traffic is expected.

Ontario Highways have been built safe. The Department relies on motorists to keep them safe. Those who offend the law may expect to be treated as law breakers, even to the extent of imprisonment and loss of license.

Rich Returns in Healthful Pleasure

Every hill opens a panorama of well-tilled farms, industrial towns, market villages, or natural beauty unadorned.

Every valley brings you intimately into touch with colorful nature or the interesting works of man.

Along the highways of your own Province there is scenery which has no parallel. Plan to see Ontario from your car this year.

The highways will bring to your family rich returns in healthful pleasure.

Ontario Department of Highways

TRAGIC STORY OF D'ARCY M'GEE

Rebel and Fugitive He Became One of Fathers of Confederation

Political biography holds little more tragic than the story of D'Arcy McGee. Born at Carlingford, Ireland, in 1825, poet, orator, and journalist at the age of eighteen, Young Ireland rebel and fugitive from the British Government in 1848, tribune of his people in the anti-Irish agitations in America in the 50's, McGee lived to become one of the Fathers of Confederation, and in 1868, when he was at the zenith of his power, and when, in the words of Lord Mayo, he had become "the most eloquent defender of British rule on the face of the globe" he fell in Ottawa by an assassin's hand.

McGee's early mind was nourished in a revolutionary Irish school. He had been a follower of O'Connell, but when the light of the "Liberator" waned, McGee joined The Nation, a newspaper which made the written word a power in Ireland and awakened a new spirit of Celtic nationality. His colleagues were John Mitchell, an uncompromising rebel, Thomas Davis, famous as a patriot and poet, Charles Gavan Duffy, who lived to become a Prime Minister in Australia, and Thomas Francis Meagher—"Meagher of the Sword", who later won fame and glory in the American Civil War. Their object was the overthrow of British rule by resort to violence. No more brilliant band of young enthusiasts ever battled for a cause in any land, but it was the old Irish story of forlorn efforts, of crushing disaster, and of miserable defeat. With a price upon his head, and after stirring adventures McGee escaped to America.

Disliked Republic

The native American party, antagonistic to the Irish, was then at the flood tide of its power, and found in McGee an imbibed a keen dislike for republicanism. On a lecture tour through Canada he was struck with the wide measure of liberty enjoyed by his church and his race under British rule, and, in 1858, after having passed through a number of journalistic ventures and memorable conversations under the Stars and Stripes, he turned once more to the British flag and came to Montreal. McGee's expansive intellect, with its historic sweep, immediately visualized the need of Canadian federation. He caught at once the vision of a great Confederation—the union of our provinces in a federal system; and, in 1860, years before many contemporary statesmen had even dreamed of Confederation, he made this prophetic utterance:

"I see in the remote distance one great nationality bound like the shield of Achilles by the blue rim of the ocean. I see within the round of that shield the peaks of the western mountains and the crests of the eastern waves, the winding Assiniboine, the five-fold lakes, the St. Lawrence, the Saguenay, the St. John, the Basin of Minas. By all these flowing waters, in all the valleys they fertilize, in all the cities they visit in their courses, I see a generation of industrious, contented, moral men, free in name and in fact—men capable of maintaining, in peace and in war, a constitution worthy of such a country."

Prophet of Confederation

The years that followed saw McGee in opposition in the Cartier-Macdonald administration, a member of the Brandi-field Macdonald-Sicotte Government, and Minister of Agriculture in the cabinet of Sir E. P. Tache. But it was as the prophet of Confederation that he became best known. His was the sweep and range of mind which germinated the idea; his the eloquent pen and tongue which fastened it upon the consciousness of the disunited provinces; and to the very end, when faint hearts contributed but doubts and fears, his was the voice that soared most confidently and persuasively on to the final victory. Without the statesmanship of Macdonald, the patriotism of Cartier, and the moral courage of Brown, union could not have been achieved; but it still stands true that without the vision and eloquence of McGee their operations could not have been secured. "It was D'Arcy McGee," declared Arthur Meighen, "who was the triumphant missionary of Union."

On the night of April 4, 1868, McGee left the House of Commons of the nation he had helped to create to go to his home and was struck down by a member of the Fenian Brotherhood whose enmity he had invited by his patriotism.

MODERN BAKERY REPLACES MUCH HOME COOKING

Hours Previously Spent Cooking Now Enjoyed Outdoors

Hot Weather's a little delayed, but it isn't far away at that. Makes you think of baseball, and fishing and motoring and what not, doesn't it? And about this time of the year you get that feeling that work isn't so important after all, and yeah (laughs) in der to the great outdoors.

For some, holidays aren't possible, not this—but for the rest of us, accustomed in the past to spend long hours in the kitchen over a hot fire baking cakes, pies, cookies and the like, there is an easy way out, and that way out is the modern bakery.

Bake shops such as Tarlington's are doing the baking nowadays—and moreover doing it to the satisfaction of everyone for the simple reason that purest ingredients and skilled cooks combine in this well-known shop to produce pastry just as good as mother used to bake, with all the homemade flavor and purity you've been accustomed to. So there's the answer.

Just drop into Tarlington's next time you're down street. You'll find a variety to suit your taste, can make your selection without loss of time in clean neat surroundings and put it in the car and the whole thing has taken but a few minutes.

That's much better than spending the whole afternoon this weather over the stove. Try it next week-end, and you'll have many afternoons in the future to enjoy the great outdoors.

GREAT PROGRESS IN THE ART OF MAKING SHOES

Goodyear Welt Process Used By Progressive Repair Men

The art of making shoes is one of the most ancient of human handicrafts. It has been shown that one of the earliest necessities felt by man was some kind of protection for the feet and that his ingenuity was promptly exercised in providing a suitable covering for them.

Strange as it may seem, the development of the "Gentle Craft," of shoemaking—as it was called in ancient times—to the present highly organized industry, has been accomplished within the last century. It was by the introduction of machinery for performing the more difficult and laborious parts of the work that this mighty change was inaugurated. Prior to the introduction of the early machines, every process in shoemaking was purely a hand process, and the single workman using such tools and accessories as the awl, hammer, lapstone, pincers and waxed ends, performed all of them. The process of shoemaking in the past fifteen years has been most rapid. At the present time there is no important process in the making of shoes that is not performed by machinery more accurately, rapidly and economically than would be possible by hand.

The passing of the old-fashioned shoemaker, however, presents a most interesting phase of our commercial developments, for it is well within the limits of a decade that he of the lapstone, the awl and wax ends has disappeared, and in his place has come the modern shoe factory, clean, well lighted and highly organized.

One of the greatest inventions in modern shoemaking is the process known as the "Goodyear Welt," which adds greatly to the appearance and wearing qualities of the shoe. "Goodyear Welt Process," is used in all high class shoes and is also used in rebuilding shoes by progressive shoe repairers like Dutton, the Shoeman of Belleville, who has the machinery for the complete Goodyear Welt in rebuilding shoes. This adds greatly to the looks and life of shoes and reduces materially the shoe bill of the family served by DUTTON.

LOCAL DUCO SHOP PRESENTS BUSY LOOK THESE DAYS

Many Cars Now Being Duco'ed By Skilled Refinishers

What about that paint job you were going to have done on the old car? Now is the time of year to have it done then you'll benefit by it fully.

Local re-finishers seem to be doing a rushing business just now! Looked in at Isaac Stephenson's place the other day and found the shop filled up with cars of all kinds, big and small alike, open and closed models too, in various degrees of re-finishing. Stephenson ideal authorized Duco re-finisher reports that he has had, and is enjoying an exceptionally good run of business much ahead of last year.

And the reason simply that motorists are realizing that it pays in the long run to have their car spruced up with a finish that will last, and that will always look well. And you know enough about Duco to know that it is the only finish that will stand every test. Its qualities have given it a prominent place among car manufacturers to-day, and the local authorized re-finisher who does your car has been trained to do the job in exactly as it is done on a new car.

A phone call to Isaac Stephenson at his shop in the Greenleaf Building will bring prompt service, or better still drive round and see for yourself just how the work is done, and the thorough job you may expect on your car.

GLASSES REVEAL CHARACTER AS DO THE CLOTHES

Properly Fitted, They Add Greatly To One's Appearance

In scores and scores of cases wearing glasses has proved the one of the best preservers of a youthful appearance, because prolonged eyestrain causes wrinkles and "crow's-feet" to appear prematurely.

Glasses not only defend—past middle age—whose glasses seem unnaturally becoming? Is there not some one you know whose air of distinction is added to by their glasses?

Every social consideration demands that you look your best at all times. Personal appearance has determined the social standing of many a woman—has made, or lost, for her an enviable place in her own circle.

In considering the question of one's appearance it is well to remember that there is character in glasses, as well as in clothes. Properly fitted glasses make people look bright, alert, intelligent.

We use particular care in fitting glasses and in the selection of mountings most becoming—for each person's individual style. If you need glasses, or if those you wear do not become you call and let us show you what intelligent thought, understanding and skill will make.

CHANDLER MAKES RECORD RUN FOR THOUSAND MILES

Averages 86.9 M. P. H. To Make New World Record

For many years Chandler has been known among the fine cars of the world as Champion in Performance. This recognition has come because all the cars really phenomenal ability in every sort of competitive test, both in the country and abroad.

Among the many world records that stand to the car's credit, two give striking proof of Chandler's championship performance.

At Pikes Peak, Chuch Myers smashed all previous records by speeding his Chandler up the winding, tortuous grades of the world's highest mountain climb in the phenomenal time of 17 minutes, 48 2-3 seconds.

In winning this annual AAA contest Chandler beat the second car by almost a full minute, and lowered the previous record which had stood for five years by nearly a half minute.

Great as this achievement is, it was equalled if not surpassed by Chandler in a remarkable 1,000 mile record run at Culver City, Cal.

Here Ralph Mulford reeled off the fastest 1,000 miles ever travelled on wheels by driving his Chandler Cone-Rode Roadster at an average speed of 86.9 miles an hour for the entire distance.

Mulford's elapsed time was 11 hours, 29 minutes, 54 seconds—reducing the previous record made in 1923 by more than 28 minutes! It included seven stops for fuel and oil—and in speeding 1,000 miles in 689 minutes, the record-smashing Chandler exceeded 22 miles per hour, in orde rto maintain its average time per mile of 41.3 seconds.

In this gruelling test of answering the wide open throttle continuously from dawn to dark, lubrication, ignition, cooling, carburetion, motor, rear axle, drive shaft, steering, bearings—every mechanical unit in fact—were under a strain far more terrific than any car has ever undergone in the hands of any owner, in ay type of service.

Have Aselstine and Sons, local Chandler dealers, give you a demonstration of Chandler performance.

DODGE MOTOR IS VEHICLE USED IN UNIQUE TRIP

Travels From Snow-Capped Heights To Torrid Desert

In an adventurous and certainly one of the most unusual motor tours in automobile history, a Dodge Brothers touring car recently completed a trek that led from the precipitous, snow laden slopes near Mount Whitney, the highest mountain in Continental United States, to the heat-tortured floor of Death Valley, lowest point in the country.

Swirling over nearly 1,000 miles of desert roads, the adventurous party of motorists included Dodge Brothers touring car succeeded in linking these two natural extremes. Strangely enough, both Mount Whitney and Death Valley are located with in the confines of Inyo County and are scarcely more than sixty miles apart as the crow flies.

Those unfamiliar with these continental landmarks will undoubtedly be interested to know that the jagged, ice-toothed crest of Mount Whitney, rising 14,501 feet above the level of the sea was officially seen for the first time from Mount Brewer by members of the Geological Survey of California in 1864, and was named for the distinguished head of that survey Mount Whitney, despite its formidable aspect, has been a kindly giant and its toll of human life has been small, due to the lack of icy crevasses that distinguish other high peaks in the country.

GOOD TACKLE IS NEEDED TO HOOK THIS KIND

Here's an interesting one. Not any more than a week ago, a surprised and delighted angler caught — in the Grand River near the city of Brantford — with a line that was none too strong — a sturgeon, six feet long and which weighed one hundred lbs. He had an awful job landing it, because fishing in a row-boat, he was unable to get the monster into the boat and found it necessary to row it to shore to capture his prize.

As far as is known a sturgeon has never been caught in that river and no one seemed to know just where it came from, but there it was. So it can happen to be angling in the River Moira one of these days and hook a big fellow like that, you'll want to have a line and tackle that is dependable.

The Radio and Sports' Shop at 229 Front Street carries a full line of high grade fishing tackle, ready to fill your needs. Drop in and see it next time you're passing. And if you want an ideal and economical means of transportation to your fishing ground, Carl Reid, the Manager can outfit you with a C. C. M. Bicycle to reach the spot.

PURE CLEAN ICE SOUGHT NOW HAS ALL ADVANTAGES

Demand Doubled Graham's Business Last Season

Time to think about this Summer's ice supply with the warm weather just around the corner. Now comes the question: Which dealer shall I choose to supply me?

You're been reading a lot the past week or so about the Clean Up and Paint Up Campaign inaugurated by the Mayor, and in response to which citizens, are busily engaged removing and cleaning, making our city a cleaner place in which to live.

But perhaps the chief object in such a Campaign is the idea of protecting the health of the Community. Germs lurk in filth and dirt, and any effort you can make to combat those will be a move in the way of destroying a possible epidemic of contagious disease.

But there is another way in which disease may spread — and it is one you might never think of. It is your ice supply. — Until a few short years ago people in their ice without giving much thought to its source. But with Graham's list for immediate delivery, the ever increasing demand for improved sanitary conditions, came the realization that ice covered with dirt of all kinds and possibly germs was a factor for consideration.

Then people learned that it was possible to secure ice that had been made from absolutely pure water-ice that was germless and clean, because not packed in saw-dust, and ice that was fit to use in drinking water with safety They learned that Graham's Cold Storage made and sold just such ice, and moreover that it was obtainable at a price not in excess of, but actually cheaper than the ice they had been buying.

And Belleville people have since turned in ever increasing numbers to the use of this ice. As an indication of the truth of this, Graham's in 1926 —last season just doubled their business of the previous summer, and this season again promises to set a new high mark.

So why not buy ice like this that you know is clean and cheaper, simply a phone call will place your name on

TREASURE WAS STOLEN FROM A MEXICAN CHURCH

Mexico City, May 27.—Government officials announce that among the treasures missing from the Mexico City Roman Catholic Cathedral is a jeweled gold and silver centre piece of a casket for the consecrated Host. The centre piece, it was unofficially estimated, was valued at more than 500,000 pesos (about $250,000.)

The Cathedral has been closed ever since the religious regulations became effective last August for the purpose of a government inventory of its contents. This inventory is still being made. Shortly after the closing of the Cathedral, Mexican officials said that a number of church valuables had been taken out and presumably hidden in the homes of devout Roman Catholics to prevent their coming into the hands of the government.

LEPERS

Kalaupapa, Island of Molokai, Hawaii, May 27.—The children of leper parents living here in the Hawaiian leper colony are fairly sure they will never have the dread disease, and almost equally sure they will never know their parents.

About a dozen children are born each year. Inmates of this settlement on Kalawao peninsula — a natural prison hemmed in by sea and precipice — live much as their kinfolk of the outside world. They have their own government and churches; they marry and bring children into the world. But the children are taken from them at the moment of birth.

The new-born infants are placed in the hands of non-leper attendants who take them to the special nursery in the colony's hospital compound. There they live their first year of life under the close observation of the doctor who guards the health of the settlement's 823 patients.

Each Sunday mothers are permitted to see their children — to see them only. A thick pane of glass separates them from the cribs. The mothers may watch one hour — no more. Then they leave to be replaced by other mothers, who watch for another brief period.

When babies are able to walk they are given final examinations for health and if they pass, as they usually do, they are moved to Honolulu to be placed in orphanages or with relatives.

If the parents still are alive after the children are grown or at least fourteen of fifteen years old, the children may visit the colony, but in most cases the children never return.

This system has been in effect several years and only one baby has ever contracted leprosy.

Baby's Own Tablets Help A Prize Winner

Baby's Own Tablets are without an equal for little ones. From the newborn babe to the growing child they are an absolute safeguard to health. Once a mother has used them she will use nothing else. Thousands of mothers always keep them on hand.

Among the mothers who state that Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine for little ones that they know of is Mrs. Ronald Hill, of Norwood, Ont. Her experience with the Tablets should be of great benefit to any mother who has not already given the Tablets a trial. Mrs. Hill says:—"I have five fine healthy children, and from the youngest to the oldest they get no other medicine but Baby's Own Tablets. When our baby girl was eleven months old she won second prize at the Norwood Fair, and when she was a year older she won first prize in competition with twenty-eight other babies. It was the Tablets that gave her the health and development to carry off these prizes. I always delight in telling other mothers what the Tablets have done for my children."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NEW PRESIDENT OF CAN. CLUB IS A FAMOUS MAN

New York, May 27.—Waller William Colpitts, who recently succeeded Duncan W. Fraser as president of the Canadian Club of New York, was born in Moncton—N.B., on September 17, 1875, the son of Herbert H. and Lucy Ann (Bissett) Colpitts. He is a direct descendant of Robert John Colpitts, of Durhads, Durham County, England, who settled in Albert County, New Brunswick, in 1783, at what is now the village of Colpitts.

Mr. Colpitts attended the public schools in Moncton and began his railway career as office boy on the office staff of the chief engineer of the old Intercolonial Railway. For several years he served successively as draftsman, redman and instrumentman on railways surveys and in 1895 entered McGill University, Montreal, as a student of civil engineering. During his summer vacations he worked in various positions on railway construction in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. In 1899 he graduated with honors, receiving the degree of bachelor of science and was valedictorian of his class and won the British Association Medal. In 1901 he received the degree of master of science and in 1921 the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

Upon graduating he was appointed chief clerk to Lord Shaughnessy when Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Later he was transferred to the construction department at Winnipeg and was engaged on branch line construction in Western Canada.

ALBERTA WEATHER SUNNY

Lethbridge, May 27.—Weather here today is bright but cool. Work on the land is going on once more except in the foothills where there are two feet of snow as a result of last week's storm.

MAN FOUND WITH BULLET IN HEAD

Edmonton, Alta., May 28.—A grisly find was made by Crawford and Cyrus Edson when in making a call on the shack-home of Carl Henrickson, trapper, they found the latter lying frozen on his bed with a bullet wound through his temple.

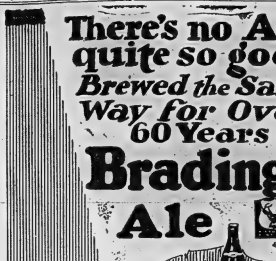

In a disjointed manuscript, the following not was found near the body: "Some fellows had been out here some time ago and left something for me. Have no opportunity to experiment with my body. What's the use of pleading with a crazy man. I shot some moose last fall that was crippled with bullet wounds. Beware of that Francois, he will make any man bad."

No furs were located, and no firewood was seen in the cabin which was unusual. The coroner decided an inquest unnecessary, as it was ample indicated the deceased had committed suicide.

DERAILED CARS BURNED

Saskatoon, May 26.—Several carloads of merchandise and automobiles were destroyed today at Bradwell, near Saskatoon, on the Canadian National Railway, when the central cars of a freight train were derailed. One of the derailed cars was a tank of gasoline, which caught fire. The front and rear ends of the train, still on the rails, were pulled away to safety.

NOVEL GOLF IS PLAYED BY THE S. A. CADDIES

Bloemfontein, South Africa, May 27.—Native caddies in South Africa become crack golfers with improvised clubs made of heavy iron wire bent at the business end into the correct lie. The club head is a short piece of iron pipe. The grip is of old rags or cloth wrapped with fine wire.

With only one club of this crude nature, Joseph, a native caddie at a Bloemfontein club won a caddies' competition-by playing a nine hole course measuring 2,000 yards in 44 strokes Boy for the nine holes is 28.

The native caddies often return better scores than do the players who carry the regular assortment of drivers and irons.

The secret of it is that the native boys play the game from the time they can walk; they have fine, natural swings and, having only the one home-made club, learn to use it to perfection.

Agitation has increased in both Liverpool and Scotland because the influx of Irish families has increased the poor relief figures.

Princess Marie Louise is now writing a travel book about Corsica to succeed her volume about her travels on the African gold coast. The Princess is president of the Forum Club.

CITY FIRE FIGHTING PLANT CONDEMNED BY MARSHALL

Two More Drunken Driver Cases in Court To-day --- City Loses Appeal in Paul Damage Case

FIRE MARSHALL CONDEMNS LOCAL FIRE PROTECTION

Urges The Establishment Of An Up-To-Date Alarm System

UNDER-STAFFED

One Engine Is Obsolete—Others Underpowered —Pumper Needed

"Fire Prevention" was the subject of an address to local Rotarians by Fire Marshall George Lewis, Toronto, at the weekly Rotary luncheon to-day. The Fire Marshall outlined the clauses of fire by-laws and methods for their prevention. Three years ago the fire losses in Canada amounted to $20,000,000 and now they have increased 68 per cent. The fire losses in Belleville have increased more than 76 per cent. in the last three years! The majority of these are due to gross negligence the speaker claimed. He did not blame the local fire department for the failure to quench fires as the cause was often due to incomplete fire fighting equipment. He stated that the local department was inefficiently equipped with chemical tanks for the two fire trucks and recommended the purchase of a "Foamite" fire extinguisher.

Faulty Alarm System

"Your city also needs an up-to-date fire alarm system," said the Fire Marshall. He ridiculed the idea of fires having to phone the police station to report a fire. Another thing the speaker recommended was a "Fire Prevention" Bureau and systematic inspection of buildings, which he said was the most important and a matter in which the local department fell down badly.

The points of criticism of Belleville's fire fighting equipment which Mr. Lewis stressed were:

1. Motor hose trucks are underpowered.
2. City needs a triple combination pumper (one and chemical truck of 600 - 800 imperial gallons capacity.
3. Steam fire engine is obsolete and unreliable made in 1873.
4. No Fire Alarm System.
5. Two platoon system. Strength insufficient for single platoon.

ROSE DAY NETTED $416 FOR FUNDS

St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E Had Successful Collection Saturday

Four hundred and sixteen dollars was the sum realized by the bevy of taggers who patrolled the streets under the auspices of the St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. on Saturday collecting for Rose Day and when the expenses of about $50 have been deducted three hundred and sixty-six dollars will be devoted to work of the Chapter, particularly the Home for the Aged.

From early in the morning the scores of pretty girls captained by Mrs. R. Lang, Mrs. George Wallace, Mrs. D. G. Ballantine, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. D. A. Waters, Mrs. B. Backus, Mrs. F. G. Chamberlain, Mrs. Bruce Bottum and Miss Eileen Thomas managed the corners and all met with most generous responses, few of the busy shoppers gaining while she girls made change, and when the money was turned over to Mrs. J. V. White and Mrs. Robert Bateman, the treasurers for the day, cash box was found to be well-filled. Mrs. J. Neate convener of the day, and Mrs. E. A. Thomas, co-convenor had worked so well with Mrs. A. B. Symons that each small detail had been attended to resulting in the excellent results and small overhead expenses.

WANTS HER FIFTH DIVORCE

She Will Still Be a Princess

The California heiress, Aimee Crocker, is at present trying to divorce her fifth husband, Prince Mirsky Galatzine. The youthful aristocrat, however, is fighting to prevent the severance of the golden chains which at present bind him to the American millions. He has much to lose if the Paris courts grant the decree while Aimee would be as well off as at present since the continental custom would permit her to continue calling herself Princess Galatzine. She gives her age as 52 while he is 27.

NO PEACE WITHOUT SUPPORT OF ARMED MILITIA IN PRESENT AGE

Rev. John Lyons Preaches Powerful Sermon to Men of the Argyle Light Infantry — Annual Church Parade Fine Spectacle—Inspiring Sight on Armouries Lawn —Veterans of Old Wars Marched.

"It is a fact that the only real guarantee, the only way peace can be preserved under the existing conditions in the world, lies in military organization." Thus did the Rev. John Lyons commence his inspiring address to the officers and men of the Argyll Light Infantry, the Veterans and the 34th Battery, in St. Thomas' Church yesterday whither the soldiers had repaired to attend the annual Church parade. "There is no body of men that the Nation and the Church owe more to than to our militia. We cannot get away from the fact that there is no possibility of protecting the world from ravage otherwise than by a well orga ized military force."

"Let us take our theme from the 13th verse of the 16th chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Corinthians," stated the speaker. "We are aware of the fact that we live far remote from the Pauline era and yet I believe that this saying of St. Paul, contained in the verse, life of the present day."

No Easy Time To Live

"I think continued Rev. Mr. Lyons", "it might be neiphtous to us all to transport that great apostle into modern life and see him and counsel read the wonds of St. Paul's with our realizing that the Christ must have been aware of the great Roman Army. St. Paul came into European life and Christianity at a time when the world was confronted by the same problems of Bureau of that day. And yet he did not stand back. He responded to the evil and in his life was one of sacrifice, work and imprisonment. He made a contribution to the enlightenment of humanity."

You of today have no easy time to live in. We should not be pessimistic but not yet over-optimistic. See how St. Paul faced conditions of his day. As we look around today we see every where revolutionary unrest.

The Russian Raid

At this juncture Rev. Mr. Lyons spoke of the recent Soviet raid in London, England. "There" he discovered brought grave results. We do not know where they will eventually lead. It has brought diplomatic relations to an end between these two great countries."

"We have had social and economic problems to face ever since the end of the war. Our very civilization is tottering. I am not painting a black picture. I think you will all agree with me that this is the very truth. To

CANADIAN HIGHLANDERS WON NEW YORK HEARTS

New York, N. Y., May 30.—Marching in the Memorial Day parade under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic, as guests of the Agent Sir Lee on the Canadian Govt. Watch, the Canadian Highlanders won the hearts of the thousands of New Yorkers who saw them march along some of the city's main thoroughfares, by the skirl of their regimental pipes.

The "Ambassadors of Peace" as they were described by Rev. Dr. Henry A. Darlington, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, were the most picturesque feature of the parade.

The Canadian Kilties were regarded by the John Purser Mitchell Post of the American Legion and accompanied by the British Great War veterans of America, commanded by Captain T. H. Armstrong.

After the parade the visitors were the guests of the B. G. W. V. at luncheon

Wilbert Knox Faces Charge Of Being Drunk While Driving Car

Mr. Wilbert Knox, a local insurance man living at 9 Isabel Street, appeared in police court this morning charged with driving a car while intoxicated and his case was held over for a week at the request of his counsel, J. D. O'Flynn; he faces the second charge of being drunk in a public place contrary to the Ontario Temperance Act.

The story is that when Knox was driving out the Foxboro Highway yesterday afternoon he struck an automobile driven by Albert Juby, 73 Foster Avenue, forcing Juby into the ditch. Instead of stopping to investigate the damage, he sped rapidly up the highway, but crashed into the ditch himself a short distance further up the road. Knox was not seriously injured, but Knox took the running board off his own car and broke the hub cap. The provincial police picked him up while he was working back to his car.

TWO HALF DAYS HELD THIS WEEK

Merchants Decide To Close Wednesday and Friday Afternoons Only

Charles Hanna, H. E. Fairfield and F. B. Smith, the executive of the Retail Merchants' Association, were elected this morning at a meeting of the Association as a committee to decide whether the stores of Belleville will remain closed on Saturday July 2nd thus making a three day holiday from Thursday night to Monday morning to celebrate Canada's Diamond Jubilee. The discussion on this point was keen Mr. Russell Wotten moving a resolution that as Saturday is one of the merchants biggest days for business it be not observed as a holiday. The matter was left in the committee to make their decision when it was discovered whether or not the day was to be celebrated by proclamation through out Canada. "It is easy for the big cities to have Saturday as a holiday as by common practice they only work half that day, anyway." Ald. Wotten observed.

Wednesday Half Holiday

The matter of closing all day Friday, the King's birthday, and remaining open on Wednesday, the first half holiday will permit, bring trade with the many who will come in for the attractions being offered that day. Finally on motion of M. R. J. Wray, seconded by Ald. Wotten, it was decided to close on Wednesday afternoon of this week and remain open Friday morning.

ASSAULT CHARGE LAID BY WIFE

Mrs. Hazel Ketcheson Claims Husband Injured Her Face Seriously

William H. F. Ketcheson appeared in police court for a few minutes this morning in answer to a charge of assault laid by his wife, Mrs. Hazel Ketcheson. The case was held over until tomorrow and Mr. Ketcheson was released on bail furnished by his father.

Mrs. Hazel Ketcheson claims that at about 8.30 this morning her husband grabbed at a photograph which she was holding in her hand and struck her. In the side of the face, lacerating the skin and necessitating medical attention. Mr. Ketcheson states that he simply knocked the photograph out of her hand as she was taunting him with it and that he did not touch her at all. In support of his statement, he will produce testimony from a reputable witness who was on the scene five minutes after the occurrence and who will swear that at that time there was absolutely no mark of any kind on the woman's face.

When the Ketchesons separated some weeks ago, the husband took their child with him to his father's home on Mont St. ct.

The courts later awarded the temporary custody of the little girl to the mother, pending a final hearing of Mrs. Ketcheson's suit for alimony from Ketcheson, but did not allow her to take alimony or legal costs. The latter has, therefore, been living at the home on William Street, awaiting a settlement with her. The husband objected to the action but Thursday morning when his father's residence and his own staying at 248 William Street ended.

FOUR ACCIDENTS IN SPEED RACE

One Driver Fatally Injured In First Hundred Miles

Indianapolis, Ind., May 30.—With a crowd of more than 150,000 in the spectators cheering them on to new speed records, 33 drivers, their tiny machines at their command, started the grind to day in the start of the 500 miles automobile race over Indianapolis speedway. Fred Lockhart, 23 year old Los Angeles driver, who came out of the first turn entrance on the 1926 race, was a red hot favorite with Tommy Milton, but met with dangerous disaster.

Lockhart knocked off the first fifty miles in 2h. 9m. 32, an average of 100.93 miles an hour, the fastest time in the history of the race. He clocked the next 100 miles in 1h. 4m. 44 and 4s. and earned $4,000 in lap prizes.

Before the first hundred miles were finished, there were four accidents, Norman Batten, of Brooklyn, was badly burned when his rear caught fire. Standing up he drove his car to the pits where the fire was extinguished, rather than jump for life and let the burning car dash into the grand stand. Fatally Injured

H. Kohlert, garage owner of St. Charles, Illinois, driving as a relief for Leck Linder, of Elgin, Illinois, was probably fatally injured when his car dashed into the machine driven by Clid Bergere, coast driver on the south turn of the track, as they were hitting off their 104th mile. Kohlert was rushed to the hospital. Bergere injuries were so slight that he was able to resume the race after changing a couple of tires.

Lockhart was still leading at 150 miles, having stepped the distance in 1:26, 73 an average of 104.49 miles an hour. Bauman was second. McDonald was third.

GEO. YOUNG'S MOTHER BACK IN TORONTO

NOW THE JOB IS TO CATCH THE WILD WILDCATS AGAIN

Big game hunting is open to any one in Belleville at the George K. Graham farm which is fenced two miles west on the city limits where two wild cats which were imported from Kansas last week are caged in an improvised kennel.

The cats were brought into the county by the customs house officer when they exited much interest, but Mr. W. Montrose in whom they were consigned failed to come for them and to go trid of the nuisance of the howling, smelling animals, customs officials forwarded them to the Graham farm where they were penned in the kennel which had been built for them in order that they might be fed.

When the consignee failed after several Hours to pay the duty one of the staff was delegated to recover them as the express company had been ordered to re-ship the cats to Riverside Park Zoo.

Meanwhile the little cage in which they travelled from the states is tenanted by the female portion of the cats and they will require more nerve than the ordinary individual customarily displays. One of the animals is exhausted and both are cut and scratched from the numerous altercations in which they have indulged.

In the interim fruitless efforts have been made to locate Mr. Montrose, head of the movie concern, who ordered the lynx.

—COWPER.

LOOKING BACKWARD

Surely an unusual number of men and women are celebrating their Golden Wedding anniversaries in this good year of '27. There has ever been a seventieth anniversary wedding, an event so unusual custom has given neither name nor ritual to such an occasion. As we read the life stories of the long-lived couples, we catch a glimpse of the whole history of changing conditions during the past five, six or seven decades.

The bride who rode horseback to the parsonage to meet the groom, also on horseback, has a granddaughter who drives a high-powered car. The fine gravelled main road has become a paved highway that stretches its smooth mileage all up and down and across a continent. Sixty years ago the bride bought her household gear and her simple wardrobe mostly in the well-stocked village general store. Today the bride does much of her shopping in the cities or by mail, and the village shop, in many districts, has fallen from its old proud place as the center of community life. Sixty years ago much of the trousseau was handmade. Not only hand-sewn, but hand spun and hand-woven and even dyed at home. Now the smart ready-made is found everywhere, and homemade dresses are cut in the latest styles by the aid of expertly designed paper patterns.

Looking back over the years, the old folks remember so much, and often they tell us that life was happier and simpler then. They remember the prosperous and populous villages and cities of moderate size and are sad to see how the village today is often but a shadow of its former high estate, while the cities have grown and grown and drawn to themselves the young and ambitious from the countryside. And they wonder what the end will be. We all wonder with them in this Jubilee year of remembrance. Perhaps in 1967 the village will once again be the thriving centre of the best of our national life, with industries returned again to the countryside and rapid transportation linking the best of city life with the best of country life.

But will the present generation have anything to show at their Golden Jubilee to match what has been achieved in the last sixty years? We doubt it.

BRITISH CAPITAL

Apropos of the talk constantly heard about United States economic conquest of Canada (much of it absurdly exaggerated) it is interesting to note that recent figures show a substantial advance in British enterprises in the Dominion. The Spillers' interests only recently made a big investment in Western Canada, and their new flour mill in Calgary is to start producing in a couple of months. The English firm of Cortaulds pioneered the Canadian fields for the manufacture of artificial silks. The Anglo-Canadian Pulp and Paper Company, a combination of British capital and Canadian enterprise, is extending its operations. The English firm of Rowntree has entered in impressive manner into the Canadian cocoa and chocolate fields. And British capital is reported to be entering upon a large scale into the development of Northern Manitoba and other Canadian mineral fields.

Last but not least is the announcement that an English syndicate is planning a great industrial development in the Lake St. John district, Quebec. The enterprise, it is said, will include railway, pulp, paper and mineral possibilities, and will involve an enormous amount of capital.

Canada welcomes such investments. We want all the capital and all the development we can get, no matter where it comes from; but if it can come from Britain, then so much the better.

SIXTY YEARS

Beginning at Confederation as a poor colony, unimportant in national affairs and insignificant in population, Canada has in sixty years achieved a distinction without a parallel in democratic government. No people in the world have ever developed so vast a territory to the point where we have developed it with so small a population. We have crossed and criss-crossed our country with a system of transportation that has made commercially available the national resources of every part of our territory. We have developed our agricultural areas to the point where we have become a factor of prime importance in the food supply of the world. We have established innumerable manufacturing industries of a basis which gives us international rank. In import and export trade we have achieved a place beside the great trading nations of the world. In per capita wealth there are few if any nations that can make a better showing.

These brilliant results surely are testimony to the success of the Confederation whose Diamond Jubilee we are this year celebrating, and a guarantee of still greater achievements in the future.

SEEING THE LIGHT

"The thing we need more than anything else is a balanced industrial development. Our development up until now has been one-sided. We have 160,000,000 acres of land in Manitoba of which we farm only 78,000,000 acres, yet agriculture produces three-quarters of the total wealth of the province."

The foregoing is not, as might be expected, from an oration of a Conservative politician or from a leaflet of the C.M.A. It is a quotation—and it is this that makes it noteworthy—from a speech delivered in Winnipeg last week by Premier Bracken of the Manitoba farmer government. When more farmer leaders begin to see what Premier Bracken has grasped we shall hear much less talk about free trade from beyond the Lakes. A balanced industrial life is approaching very rapidly.

LONGING

I'm longing for the summer breeze,
The sparkling of the brook,
The speeding of the dragon fly
Through every sheltered nook;
The sound of cow bells ringing slow,
As evening calls them home;
And then to tread where owlets call
Along the pathway lone.
The fire-flies glowing with the stars
As overhead I look.
I'm longing for the summer day
The gurgling of the brook.

TOURISTS PASS THROUGH

Today being Decoration Day in the United States and a public holiday, a large number of tourists from the country motored to Canada over the week-end passing through this city. One house on Highland Avenue accommodated nine tourists on Saturday evening and had also a number last evening. This is the first influx of tourists to any extent from Uncle Sam's Domain which have invaded this section of Ontario so far this summer.

AUXILIARY TEA

The Junior Auxiliary of Christ Church closed the season with a delightful tea in the Parish Hall on Saturday afternoon. The work done by the children during the past year was known to a large crowd of visitors and members of the congregation. The Hall was prettily decorated with lilacs. The Juniors were in charge of Mrs. C. E. Clarke, Mrs. A. E. Wannamott, Miss Margaret Christie, Gertrude Holcheson, Mrs. G. Wilson. Mrs. Coulter poured tea. The members of the Senior Auxiliary waited on table.

A banner won by the Junior Auxiliary for having obtained the highest study mark in the Diocese was shown.

WENT INTO DITCH

An automobile containing Mr. R. B. Wales, Napanee, his daughter, Mrs. Woodyer and daughter, went in the ditch about five miles west of Belleville on the Trent highway yesterday afternoon. Miss Wales was driving the car and in attempting to pass another car directly in front of her, she saw a third automobile going west on the highway proceeding directly towards her. To avoid an accident she sharply turned her wheels and crashed into the ditch. None or the occupants were injured and the car was only slightly damaged. It was towed into Belleville where speedy repairs were made.

NEW FIRE PREVENTATIVE

Extinguishing a blaze in a motor car merely by tossing a handful of white powder upon the flames startled car owners who witnessed the demonstration at several city garages this morning. Philip Brown, representative of Firestop, one of the latest inventions, conducted the test. First he threw a quantity of gasoline upon the motor and ignited it with a match. The "Firestop" is a white powder and when thrown forcibly smothers the blaze in a second. He conducted a similar experiment on the ground and on the street. The "Firestop" can be used with equally good results in private homes, stores, etc. A local agent will be appointed.

PENNSYLVANIA MINES TO BE NON UNION QUICKLY

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 27.—In the bituminous coal fields of Western Pennsylvania is being waged a struggle which may make the operation of future operations in the entire central compact nite soft coal fields, now in idleness.

Union miners and operators alike are watching the effort of the Pittsburgh Coal Company in that section to operate on a non-union basis. Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal, organ of the miners, asserts the view that the "break" in the present suspension of work, however remote it may be, will come in this district.

Officials of the company declare that the non-union policy is successful, but union "fires deep fires.

"In the Western Pennsylvania district," Searles says, "the suspension has developed into an evil and evil facto to exterminate the union. The Pittsburgh Coal Company, largest operator in the district, was one of the first companies to repudiate the 1924 Jack sonville wage agreement and to operate on a non-union scale. It has said it will not mine coal again on a union basis."

Officials of the company say reports from eighteen operating mines show that the open shop policy is successful. They cite a production of 110,263 tons for the week ending April 23, a gain of 12,845 tons over the week before and of 19,888 over the week ending April 2. The average number of men at work, increased, they say, from 4,659 to 5,128 in a week.

But Searles says the company lost $2,225,000 in 1926 and that "for the first three months of 1927 its losses have been much heavier, and for the same period last year."

UNUSUAL SWINE BORN IN WEST

Cardston, Alta., May 28.—(C.P.)—C. E. Hemingway, a farmer of this district, is the proud owner of a freak of the animal kingdom. The pig in question was born with two mouths, has two sets of teeth and two tongues, but does NOT require double the amount of fodder. One of the mouths is stationary but both tongues move in unison. The creature appears to be normal in all other respects.

On one day the Hemingler farm saw an increase of thirty-nine animals with in three hours. In all 28 pigs, a colt and ten chicks were born within that time.

If every rancher had a similar increase, the country would be seen over stocked." Mr. Hemingey humorously observed.

Canada has half the fresh water of the earth.

AFTERNOON TEAS AS TROUBLE MAKERS

By ELSIE MARLOWE

"I don't care what you do with your afternoons, only I expect to find you home, and dinner ready when I get home!" asks Bella's husband. "And I don't want to eat alone, and have you pecking on crackers either!"

That's Bella's trouble in a nutshell. And if you don't think it's trouble you don't belong to a card club or sewing society, or any other little group of earnest workers that meet on the second Thursday of the first Monday and serve creamed crab, hot chocolate and French pastry at five minutes past five.

"What's the use of going if you can't stay for teas" inquires Beth, and if you do stay for tea, how can you get home before half-past five and have dinner ready? And how can you eat dinner after you've just had a lot of things to eat?"

And if you don't belong to the club your girl friends belong to, and can't have any of the fun they do, what's the use of being a married woman with your afternoons free? You might just as well be working!

DEAR ELSIE:

Please tell me what I ought to do in justice to both myself and my husband. I will try to make it as brief as I can. To begin with I am just married six months and love my husband very much, but there is one thing we have had trouble about and that is my going out in the afternoon.

I used to work before I was married and I would not mind working now, but my husband wants me to have a good time and go with the girls in the afternoon, but he expects me to be home and have dinner ready at half-past five and he won't eat unless I eat with him. I belong to a couple of afternoon clubs, and the girls always serve tea around five, and naturally by if I stay I am late.

I can have dinner all ready to warm up for him and a good dinner, too, but I can't really eat it with him. You can't when you have just had a big meal at tea, the way most of the girls serve. Twice I went home before they served at everybody was proved, ed at me. It spoiled my whole afternoon.

I can't understand how anybody as nice as my husband can be so unreasonable about a thing like that. He gets into a perfect frenzy if I am not at home on time. We have had one or two quite bad fights. Of course, we made up afterward, but he just sticks to it that he must have me home when he gets home.

Half-past five is so early for a man to get home. He says that is all he asks of me and it is the least I can do but it happens to be the only diversion I care anything about. It makes such a mummy out of me before all my friends. I know what the girls think. I wouldn't mind it so much, but I can't bear to have people sorry for me. I would rather be working, I really would.

What do you think I ought to do? I really want to do what is right. BETH.

Well, where do you want to please most, Beth—the girls," or your husband? Of course, it's no fun coming home in the middle of the party, but neither is it particularly festive to wait into a cold, empty house after a hard day's work and wait around for an hour or so for your dinner while your wife sits across the table from you and explains that she really does not care for anything save she's just had chicken patties or something with the girls.

If you knew the truth, Beth, you'd probably discover that your husband wasn't the only one who wished these little parties began an earlier. You don't you suggest that the refreshments be served at four—and not so much of 'em? Of course, if you are a guest at someone's house, and are detained later than you expected to be your husband ought to be reasonable and take it sensibly. But when it is a matter of a social club program it seems to me that you might either try to have the program changed or make up your mind to leave early.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

After using a chamois, it should be carefully washed in warm soapy water passed carefully so a flat surface to dry. Do not hang it in the air or place it on a radiator, as this will make the skin hard and dry.

Often one wishes her peonies for a particular occasion. If they show signs of opening before dinner, cut them when the color begins to show in the bud. Put them in paper cone with cold bud, put in them in a dark cellar of the refrigerator in a pan or tub of water. When you wish to use the flowers cut the stalks and the bud begins to open as the water is renewed. You may keep the buds for several weeks in this way.

If the milk is warmed before adding the egg there will be no water at the bottom of the dish in which baked custard is cooked.

If you intend cooking the spinach immediately, give it several washings in hot water instead of cold. It will be much more effective in removing and quickly than cold water.

Newspapers seem to be the best protection against moths and if they are spread on the boards under the double carpet it will help greatly in keeping away these pests.

Dots That Have a Certain Dash

BUTTERICK 1435

Josephine has decided to be a writer when she grows up, and as she already has learned to dot her i's and cross her t's daintily, it seems as though she might become a most successful fashion writer. Here she is seen wearing one of her favorite frock-and-pantie ensembles, whose bright red dots are matched by the ribbon tie and by the little round clickers on the frilly white organdy collar and pockets. This same style is charming in patterned percale or in printed cotton, sateen or dimity, with plain to match as handsome.

A-vice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have been out with a certain boy several times. He is very nice and always tries to give me a good time. Somehow I cannot get to like him and do not want to go out with him. I have broken several "dates" with him, but he always comes over for more.

How can I let him know, without hurting his feelings, that I do not wish to go with him any more?

P. E. F.

P. E. F.: I can understand how you feel, my dear, and I know you don't want to hurt this boy's feelings. Consequently, there isn't any way I can suggest but the one you have already tried. After all, if you refuse to see him every time he invites you out he won't have a chance to further the friendship. Just say you are going to be busy until he tires of hearing "no."

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

Is it proper, when a boy is in the hospital, for a girl to visit him if he is no relation to her?

BEBE.

BEBE: It is not only proper, but almost necessary if the young man is a good friend of yours.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

My mother will not let me have anything to do with boys. She says I am too young. I am in my early teens and in the junior year of high school.

Do you think I am too young to have boy friends?

There is a boy whom I like very much that lives fifty miles from our town. When he comes to town I see him and ride with him, without my mother's knowledge. Is it wrong?

LEE.

LEE: You must have a little more confidence in your mother's judgment. Remember, she is only concerned with your welfare. No good can possibly come of doing things of which she disapproves without her knowledge.

Why don't you have a talk with your mother? Perhaps she will give you permission to have a party for boys and girls visit at your home. You really are too young to go out with boys, although I can see no harm in your seeing them in the home environment.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of eighteen and am in love with a man of thirty. He says he loves me and wants to marry me, but I am afraid there is too much difference in our ages.

Please give me your advice.

PEARL.

PEARL: If you have known this young man for a long time and really feel that you can share his tastes and interests, then the difference in your ages is not important. But I think you ought to wait a few years before planning on marriage. Then you can be more certain that you are not making a mistake.

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Plate blue is very smart in Paris.

Paris likes the taupe with the high front line.

Black suede shoes are growing in favor with good dressers—probably because they look so smart with the spring costume.

Smart New York women at the Belmont races are wearing satin and tweed two-piece costumes with self trimming.

Printed frocks observed at the Ritz in Paris recently sponsoring the small light-colored patterns, and these diminutive prints are favored by the matron as well as the young girl.

Blue is rivaling white for evening wear, from the darkest to the lightest shades, in Paris where navy blue, so popular for street and sport wear, is seen in the evening also.

White crepe satin was chosen for some of the newest gowns observed at the recent opening of the Deauville casinos in Paris, where white, pale shades, or silvery effects predominated to the color choice.

A Frenchwoman whose shoe designs are known all over Europe is soon to become London's first feet lone boot-maker.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN
By Mildred Harbour

"You won't let the fact of my marriage destroy our friendship, will you?" he said, trying to press her unresponsive fingers.

"Of course not," Sybil smiled upon him unsteadily. "I have a feeling we may be good for each other," she added.

"How wonderful you are—how understanding," he whispered, and leaned forward to look out of the cab window at a pretty woman standing in the front seat of her car, evidently waiting for the traffic to turn at Forty-second street.

For the next few days, Sybil was too busy to think of the Serge Pattons. She was seeking, and eventually found the apartment she wanted. It was luxuriously appointed affair on Forty-ninth street, overlooking the Park.

There followed a session of buying. Her European trip had taught her the beauty and charm of odd pieces in furnishing. So she browsed through the best shops and indulged her stifled craving for beautiful objects to the limits of her considerable purse. She found Hilda an indispensable aid in these expeditions; the maid had an uncanny gift of discerning the true from the fake, and was shrewd at driving bargains.

By the time the New York winter season was in full swing, Sybil was settled in her new environment—like a bird of paradise in a golden cage. No one seeing her then would have believed that she was not in this manner born; no one would have credited the revelation that, only a year before, she had been no more than a slavey for her unappreciative family, cheaply dressed, without pleasure, solitary, almost an outcast.

When she was settled, Sybil's thoughts turned again to the Serge Pattons. She rang up the studio with an invitation for dinner. Eva Patton answered the telephone herself, delightfully that Serge was out of town. "He's giving a concert," she explained proudly.

"But you'll come anyway," urged Sybil. "We're all in the dumps, because my household is still a trifle sketchy, and go to a play afterward. If you'll tell me you'll come I'll get ready sent."

"Oh, I haven't seen anything this week," corrected Eva Patton cheerfully. "We spend our pennies at concerts and the Symphony — it's so good for Serge."

Eva Patton was entranced with Sybil's apartment, when she arrived for dinner the following evening. She wandered about, meeting beautiful objects with wistful fingers, expressing her admiration with the frankness of a child.

She glanced shyly at Sybil's costume, which was straight from the Rue de la Paix — a gown of black velvet velvet and a cape of velvet, with a collar and lining of fur.

Eva was looking very pretty in a simple evening frock of yellow silk. Sybil suspected that she had made it herself.

Over their dinner at the hotel she remarked, with seeming carelessness:

"I wonder whether you'd be offended if I asked you to let me have some of your lovely embroidered things for my apartment? I have no sense at all about fine linens, so I haven't bought any."

Eva Patton flushed with eagerness.

"Oh, I'd love to, Sybil," she exclaimed naively. "I pick up a little pretty money doing needlework. But Mrs. Serge doesn't make a bid," she confessed to add hastily, "but living is so expensive in New York. And it's difficult to find a market for my stuff; people don't really appreciate handwork. I have money enough to buy imported things. At home it was different—but at home I only did things for my own pleasure." She sighed. "We had so much more money when Serge kept his interest in his — his father's business. But, of course, one couldn't expect any one with Serge's temperament to be connected with anything so —"

"Sensible," murmured Sybil, with a quick, remembering Serge's confession.

"Did Serge tell you about the picket-line?" It's awful, isn't it?"

"I don't think so," said Sybil. "I like pickets."

"So do I!" confessed little Mrs. Patton. "But Serge is terribly ashamed of any connection with the business. He never speaks of it to his women friends. I'm surprised that he mentioned it to you."

"He has many — er — women friends?"

"Oh, yes!" replied Eva, with a calmness which Sybil felt was not quite natural. "Heaps of them. He needs to be surrounded by women, you know," obviously quoting Serge. "I don't mind — really."

But Sybil knew she did.

"What these women who friends of yours?" Sybil asked.

"Oh, no! They don't know about me. One time a very beautiful lady, Mrs. Wrish, was under the impression about Serge, came to the studio when Serge wasn't there. But she thought I was only the maid and she gave Serge a lot of her her old clothes for me, because, she said, I didn't look up to the atmosphere of the studio."

Eva Patton recounted the story with a pathetic effort at amusement, but Sybil could appreciate the bitterness which must have flooded the loyal little soul at the time of the episode.

"My dear, there's a man in the enfilade just opposite the doorway, who's been staring abominably at you," Eva said suddenly. "I've noticed him ever since we came in."

Sybil turned her head in the direction indicated. It had taken her a very short time to become accustomed to the fact that her knew she was lovely and superbly gowned, why not reap a tribute so long denied her? Only she had no illusions about the motive for that tribute!

Later, when they had finished their coffee, the two girls went out into the corridor to get their wraps.

Instantly the dapper occupant of the sofa opposite the dining-room was at their elbow. He bowed low to Sybil, saying: [illegible]

"Miss Courtney, is it not?"

Sybil swept him with a cool glance "No," she said briefly, and turned to receive her wrap from the attendant. As she was slipping into the rich fabric the intruder said to Eva Patton:

"But I'm sure — I really couldn't be mistaken, you know——"

Flushed and uncertain, Eva flung an appealing glance at Sybil. Several people in the lobby were beginning to stare. The stranger hung on.

Then a tall, erect young man in the uniform of an army officer, suddenly stepped between the two women and the importunate gentleman. Somehow the gentleman was dexterously allowed aside, with a whispered, but distinct, injunction. He vanished precipitately.

The young man who had intervened, smiled with a frank, open boyishness.

I hope you weren't too annoyed?"

"Thank you so much for coming to our rescue," Eva Patton was grateful. "I do hate to be made conspicuous, and I know everybody was watching."

"In that case," suggested the young man, "would you permit me to escort you to your car, since I see you are going out?"

He addressed Eva, but his eyes were on Sybil.

"Oh, yes, please," faltered Eva glancing irresolutely at Sybil.

Under the porte cochere, while a taxi drew up and the starter flung the door, Eva held out her hand.

"Thank you again," her eyes wandered to the insignia on his shoulder, "Lieutenant—"

"My name is Sheldon."

"Oh — you don't happen to be one of the Georgia Sheldons, do you?" asked Eva, with a shyness that was desire to establish kinship in an alien land.

"None other," he laughed. "The Macon branch."

"Oh, then you're—" Eva fairly spurred by her delight.

"Dick — the grandson of Abner Sheldon, of whom you must have heard."

In three minutes they had discovered six mutual friends and an equal number of cousins, seven or eight times removed.

Finally he believed he saw a way.

TRADE AGREEMENT WORKING OUT WELL

Winnipeg, Man., May 26. (C. P. A.)—The trade agreement between Canada and Russia is working out well and Canada is importing caviar, fish, wood products and some furs from Russia, while the Soviet has purchased $2,000,000 worth of agricultural machinery and general farm equipment from the dominion in the last six months. These facts were brought out at an interview here with members of the Russian delegation that attended the International wheat pool conference held recently in Kansas City, Mo.

Members of the delegation intend spending some time in western Canada studying workings of the Canadian wheat pool organization, which they term "the best in the world." They also will study farm conditions on the Prairies.

NO PEACE

bring things right we must face facts. We must be strong. Serious minded men in our time, like St. Paul, know what the world needs. But we seem to be at a loss to get the world to do away with those contrary to civilization." The speaker told of different peace movements that have failed since the conclusion of the World War.

"We, as Christians, believe that Jesus Christ is the power and foundation upon which all problems must be solved. In Jesus Christ is our power, upon his principles is based all we do and all we undertake. The principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ, must enter into relationships between great nations. If Canada could become Christ-like in the sense of what the word implies, what a power she could be in the world."

The speaker told of the good fellowship during the war and of the spirit of self sacrifice. He said that we largely responsible for the successful completion of the war. "We must endeavor today to bring back that spirit of enthusiasm and comradeship that existed during the war."

Diamond Jubilee

He spoke of the commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee that is to take place shortly. He continued, telling of what a wonderful land we live in Canada, its natural resources and its possibilities. "We glory in these, in Canadian has no opportunities, nevertheless, but what he had with them responsibilities. What is the future of our country, rising to be? It is our duty as a citizen to hand on what has been given us enhanced. Let us strive to what we are capable of and put our hands to the plow and produce great things for Canada.

"But, just as soon as a nation becomes so large it does begin to go downhill. We must develop outposts by sober Christian lives. We must do it in the spirit of St. Paul We must be strong and men of conviction. There is nothing that will keep heroes nor minds better than the following: 'Live contentedly and do our part in that state of life that pleases God.'"

In-spiring Sight

The Armourie's town presented an inspiring sight yesterday morning when the Argyll Light Infantry, the 34th Battery and ex-officers and men of the Canadian Veterans, were drawn up in full parade. Hundreds watched Belleville's militia go through the preliminary drill preparatory to the march marching to St. Thomas' Church. The Rifles Band and the Argyll Light Infantry Band, the Rifles with swirling kaggipes and the brass band alternate by furnishing martial airs. Colonel Bussee Vandervaart was in charge of the parade, Capt. Sword and Capt. Caldwell took charge of the Colors relieved by Capt. Hubert Jones.

The 34th Battery was commanded by Major Rec. Bumpstead, while Col. R. B. Officer took charge of the veterans. Major Keller commanded the Argyll Light Infantry.

At 10.50, headed by the Rifles, the parade swung out into Bridge street. The Rifles came last, then the Veterans followed by the 34th Battery. Argyll Band, followed by the Argyll Light Infantry. The soldiers marched up Bridge street into the carriage entrance and from thence into the church.

The service was featured by the Argyll Band playing two of the hymns, "Onward Christian Soldiers," and "O God Our Help in Ages Past." Immediately after the offertory the beautiful strains of "The Last Post" floated in through the church window, and sounding the "Last Post" the bugler blew the "Reveille."

After the church service the parade took their customary route march up Bridge street to Charles, from Charles down Victoria avenue, and so back to the Armouries. Col. S. S. Lazier took the salute from his home on Victoria avenue, and Brig-Gen. Bywater took up the offertory.

Distinguished Veterans

Conspicious amongst the veterans who were in the parade were Col. Hambly and Mr. John McKeown, both veterans of 1866 and Mr. Lou Soules, and J. W. Barlow veterans of 1885, Major Geen, Captain Green, Lieut. A. S. Quick and Lieut. R. Bumpstead took up the offertory.

Master Ross Downey is able to be out around again.

Mr. Bill Reynolds has boucht the old Hall property and will erect a new house and garage on it.

Mrs. Gascoigne and sons of Detroit and Mr. Watt-Cunin, Montreal, were recent visitors at Mrs. Lwood's.

Mrs. Allen Lennon and daughters of Watertown, are visiting her mother Mrs. Pinewar.

Coincident with the further substantial advance which has occurred in the market value of International Nickel tion in the street as to the possible action of the directors, when they hold their regular quarterly meeting on the first Monday in June.

The Company requires funds for extensive plant in order to secure there, it is felt that there are two courses that may be followed to advantage. At the present time there are in its coffers surplus funds amounting to over $10,000,000.

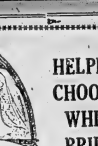

The programme which is now in view will require in the neighborhood of $6,000,000 to complete. The work in prospect in this connection involves the building of a new copper refinery, alternations to the existing refinery at Port Colborne, and the sinking of the main shaft at the Frood Mine, the largest shaft of its kind in the world, to a depth of 3,000 feet. The Company at present has 1,673,384 shares of common stock outstanding, having a par value of $25, a share. One course of action open to the directors is to issue the remaining treasury shares of common stock to the existing share-holders, and it has been suggested that this might be done at $30 a share, which would more than provide the funds necessary to carry the various works to completion.

Nipissing Mining Company has made its second shipment of high-grade ore from the South Lorrain property. Monday and Tuesday of last week trucks were busy transporting the high-grade from the dock at Haileybury to the telegraph house at Cobalt. The ore was brought from South Lorrain to Haileybury by boat. Some of the ore is very rich and massive. This was amply proven by the breaking of the crusher at the mill in endeavoring to crush the ore before treatment in the refinery.

3500 Canadian Veterans Still in Hospital

THE RED CROSS as your agent brings them cheer

SUPPOSE you were condemned indefinitely to the dreary round of hospital life—after four years of fighting and suffering for Canada!

Your friends far away . . . your means restricted . . . your family perhaps, having a hard struggle to get along . . .

Wouldn't you long for kindly visitors . . . books, smokes, dainties to brighten the long days . . . the knowledge that someone was watching over the welfare of your family?

About 3500 of Canada's war veterans still face months in hospital. Some are permanently "shut in."

To these the Red Cross brings friendship and cheer. Radios and recreation rooms . . . Christmas treats and summer outings . . . weekly visits and frequent entertainments . . . such things serve to show to those who suffered for Canada that Canada cares.

In the three Red Cross Summer Homes, the convalescent and the "hospital-weary"—some never to be well again—are given a chance to exchange the murk of the city for the pure air, the fresh breezes, the sunny days and the cool nights of the open places.

In three Red Cross Workshops, disabled men who cannot compete in the open labor market are given sheltered employment . . . encouraged to regain their skill and capacity and become independent and self-sustaining.

When sickness comes or work cannot be found, the Red Cross is again the help of the ex-soldier and his family. Medical and nursing aid . . . clothing, food, whichever is needed, the Red Cross helps them to get it. The soldier settler on the frontiers of civilization also finds in the Red Cross a never-failing friend.

The Red Cross supplements the justice of official agencies with the friendliness of personal interest. By supporting the Red Cross, YOU can do YOUR bit for those who fought and suffered.

Since the War THE RED CROSS has disbursed 7 Million Dollars for the Soldiers, Women, Children and Frontier Families of Canada.

GARDENING

There is nothing easier to grow than asparagus, and this vegetable, which is in demand, is never cheap. A ten-foot square will give a respectable supply for a small family and will become more productive each year. A bed may be started from roots or seed, though where a fairly good sized bed is wanted it is advisable to use seed. The Washington, a rust proof asparagus of giant size, is gaining real favor because it appears to be free of disease and is a vigorous grower. A bed may be established in three years from seed and two from roots. The seed should be soaked in warm water for 24 hours before planting and sown in drills outside as soon as the ground can be worked. It is rather slow to germinate. The plants should be allowed to grow in the seed row for one season, and the following year the strongest and straightest selected to form a permanent bed. In this the plants should be spaced two feet apart in rows three feet apart.

Hilling the Compost Heap

All good gardeners carefully collect grass clippings, weeds and other garden refuse, piling the same in some corner of the yard, where, helped by a layer of soil and a little watering, this waste gradually turns into a heap of valuable humus. In the small garden at least, the pile always appears unsightly, but this can be avoided if a few surplus dahlia bulbs and some seed of Bachelor Buttons and trailing plants are included in the heap. The bulk of the refuse is collected in early spring and any late additions will not seriously handicap these flowers, which should make a brave show from the middle of July until frost.

Early Vegetables

Radishes, spinach, lettuce, early peas, and onions are staple crops of the early gardener and are the first fruits of the labor in the yard behind the house. The radish supply can be started at one timenor begin with the usual repetitions, with an extra early, early, mid-season and late variety all going in together, but maturing in succession. The same varieties can be put in two weeks later and the work is done for the season. Head lettuce should be sprouting in boxes or hotbeds by this time to be ready to transplant into permanent quarters as soon as it is safe to do so. Many gardeners refuse to bother with headless, head lettuce any longer and have taken to the cos variety. This grows upright, with long leaves which enclose the heart, and it is self-blanching. A little tying up will hasten the process. The new spinach, as Nobb will grow and grow without going to seed are a big advance over the old types. They give a bigger and better supply of leaves and can be cut down to within an inch of the ground and will grow up again. These new varieties are called King of Denmark and New Zealand, White Portugal and many of the newer varieties are now popular onions, and can be easily grown for seed. These may be pulled now or for pickling. There are half a dozen good early peas and anyone of them will give satisfaction. All vegetables must be grown quickly if they are to be crisp when brought to the table. A check in growth makes them tough. To prevent such an occurrence, especially when the weather is inclined to be cool, it is well to apply some quickly available fertilizer such as nitrate of soda. This may be raked in between the rows at the rate of a scant handful to the square yard, or it may be dissolved in water, a tablespoonful to the gallon and applied with the regular watering can. Care must be used when applying dry that none of this fertilizer is allowed to rest on the leaves of the plants as it is liable to burn. If the bone is dissolved in moisture after the nitrate has been sprinkled over the garden or if the job is carried out just before a rain or heavy one, there will be no chance of any injury.

BELLE THEATRE

The coming of John Barrymore in the Warner production of "Don Juan" to the Belle Theatre today has revived an old literary controversy as to whether such a character as Don Juan ever really existed. True, there are records in Seville of a number of persons who were actually named Don Juan Tenorio, but the weight of authority is that the Spanish monk of the Sixteenth Century who wrote the original play upon which the story of Don Juan legends are founded drew upon his imagination in creating and arranging. God-defying, lighting love-maker whom he called. "The Deceiver of Seville."

The claim of those who believe in an actual Don Juan is weakened some what by the fact that the word, "tenorio" that the monk, Gabriel Teller, selected as Juan's surname, means in Spanish "lady-killer." And that is what all Don Juans of literature have been—"lady-killers."

There have been two distinct sorts of Don Juans in fiction. The earlier ones were always unrepentant lovers who were consigned to eternal torture at the end of their wicked lives, and these were usually known as Don Juan Tenorio. Then sprang up a new Don Juan, generally called Don Juan de Manara, who managed to repent of his sins before death.

ELLIOTT PITCHED ROBINS TO THIRD WIN OF SERIES

Pittsburg Won 11th—Hammered Chicago Pitching To Win

Brooklyn, N.Y., May 30.—The Robins may never even climb close to the National League pennant of 1927, but they accomplished a number of things as they closed out a long home stand at Ebbets Field in the presence of about 25,000 sympathizers yesterday afternoon that should make all Brooklyn think kindly of them for some time to come. They downed the Giants, 5 to 2, capturing the series three out of four; steam-rollered right over their one-time playmate, Burleigh Grimes; and in conclusion most certainly must have given Mr. John McGraw a terrible pain in the neck. From a Brooklyn viewpoint it is hard to conceive a more pleasant way to bid farewell to the folks at home and that is what most of the non-participants must have thought, if they thought at all. As they rent the air with ear-splitting shrieks of joy unrestrained.

Pittsburgh ran its winning streak to eleven games today by hammering Chicago's pitching at every turn to win 8 to 5. Carman Hill went the route for the Pirates and had only three bad innings. Hack Wilson smashed a home run with one man on in the third inning, while Harris made a four-base hit in the ninth with none on. Approximately 30,000 saw the game.

St. Louis hit Carl Mays at will and won at Cincinnati by an overwhelming score of 11 to 3. Cincinnati got nine hits off Grover Alexander, four of which were doubles, but they were shot to bunch them only in one inning. St. Louis scored successively in the first three innings, once more in the fifth and three times in both the eighth and ninth innings. Frank Frisch took a prominent part in the victory, making three hits out of five times at bat and cutting off at least two blows that would have been hits ordinarily.

13TH HOMER FOR SMASHING BABE; YANKS WIN 15-7

Lyons Piched Chicago To Triumph Over Detroit; Philadelphia Won

New York, May 30.—When the tail-enders and the front-runners meet in a contest of skill and endurance, you can generally expect just what happened at the Yankee Stadium yesterday before 35,000 eye-witnesses. It was a nice little holocaust, with the Yanks scoring seven runs in one inning, running themselves ragged on the base lines and staggering through to a nip and tuck victory, 15 to 7.

Four Boston pitchers were merely grist for the Yankee mill. The twirling fare was rich and luscious for boys, who corralled seventeen blows, including two in one inning by Mr. Ruth, who is beginning to find himself now that spring has arrived and the birds are singing happily in the tree-tops.

The inning in which George got his pair of socks was the eighth. He started it with a home run and ended up five or ten minutes later and slapped a single to mid-field with the bases full. Driving in three runs in the chukker with two hits is no contemptible incident, even for Ruth.

Alright pitching by Walberg and three long drives by Al Simmons gave Philadelphia a 6 to 1 victory at Washington today. Simmons pounded out two doubles and a triple, driving in three runs and scoring one himself. Washington got only four hits off Walberg, two of which were bunched.

Chicago outbatted the Tigers and took the closing game of the series at Detroit, 8 to 6. Ted Lyons, who pitched for the White Sox, gained credit for his eighth victory of the season. He has been beaten only twice. Lyons was hit hard in the last two innings after pitching brilliantly for the first seven.

The Browns garnered four runs in the sixth inning at St. Louis and won the first game of a double-header from the Cleveland Indians, 7 to 4. Hodapp hit a home run.

The Indians came back in the second game and reserved the score, 10 to 2. In the seventh, Levsen, of Cleveland, hit into a triple-play. O. Miller took his grounder and threw to Dixon, forcing Myatt at the plate. Dixon relayed to Sisler, doubling Levsen, and Sisler's return threw to Dixon nailed Neis, who was trying to score from second.

Constguard and patrol boats are searching off Boston for wreckage said to resemble the wing of an aeroplane.

NEW WORLD'S POLE VAULT RECORD SET

Philadelphia, May 30.—Stanford University was the fifty-first annual track and field championship of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America here Saturday, and Robin Carr, of Yale defending the title won last year, sailed to a new world's record of 14 feet in the pole vault. Thus the Yale man surpassed the mark of 13 feet, 11 3-8 inches set by the famous Charley Hoff, of Norway, at a meet in Finland on September 27, 1925.

A gathering of 15,000 saw the Stanford athletes score in eight of the fifteen events to roll up a total of 36 1-2 points and send the championship back to the coast for the third successive year. Southern California, which was defending the title, took fourth place, but Stanford's victory assured the west of another triumph over the east, the sixth in the last seven years.

TILDEN WON OUT; HUNTER BEATEN

St. Cloud, France, May 30.—All the outstanding favorites survived the first week's play in the international hard court tennis championships, with Big Bill Tilden still the popular choice to win the men's singles. Even the French experts pick Tilden, although Borotra, Lacoste and Cochet, France's big three, remain in the tournament.

Tilden is the only American left in the single competition. Francis X. Hunter was eliminated today, losing a hard five-set match to P. D. B. Spence, South Africa, 3-6, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2.

Tilden put Charles Aeschlimann, Swiss champion, out of the tournament today in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1, 7-5, by an unrelenting series of hard drives. Aeschlimann thought so highly of his conquerer's game that immediately afterward he offered to bet $1,000 that Tilden goes through both the St. Cloud and Wimbledon tournaments undefeated.

LEAFS CUT LEAD OF SYRACUSE

Toronto Nosed Out Victory In First Appearance On Leader's Diamond

Syracuse, May 30.—Toronto making its first appearance of the season at Syracuse, defeated the Stars yesterday, 6 to 5.

Pounding three Reading hurlers for 24 hits, Baltimore took the first of the series at Reading, 17 to 6. It was Reading's fortieth consecutive defeat.

The Bisons waltzed to a 13 to 3 triumph over the Rochester Colts in the opening game of the series at Buffalo.

The Bisons displayed a penchant for scoring their tallies in cycles of threes and slammed out this number of runs in four different innings. Mangum had an easy time disposing of his rivals.

The Skeeters won both ends of a double-header from Newark at Jersey City, the scores were 6 to 0, and 3 to 2. Monahan's homer in the seventh inning won the second game for the Skeeters. Coffman pitched fine ball in order to blanket Newark in the first game. Ellis was the Jersey's successful hurler in the second game.

8 YEAR - OLD LAD IS DROWNED IN TANK

Ingersoll, May 28.—Bobbie Legrie, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Legrie, Wilmot Township, was drowned about 8 o'clock last night in a large concrete reservoir on the premises of the Borden Milk Co. here. The boy, in company with others, was throwing sticks into the water. In reaching for one he fell headlong into the water. He and his companions were unable to save him. The other boys at once ran for neighbors, but by the time help arrived life was extinct.

The baseball fans in this district will have a chance to get a line on the respective merits of the Deloro and Point Anne teams when they clash on the cement misers diamond on Wednesday afternoon. Frank Guyer has been sending his proteges through their paces during the past week until now he has them in fairly good shape. Several new faces will grace the Polarite line-up when they take the field, notably Alex Weir, Cretney, "Jerry" Hurley and Harry Blakely. With last, years team intact the suburbanites should give a good account of themselves.

The Deloro team will be strong this year and a merry battle is promised in the Bay of Quinte circuit.

In the meantime the Canadian Nationals will have a week's intermission in which to round into shape.

The Albert College team was handed a surprise by the Cisco squad in the Industrial League. The Collegians were favored to dispose of the Corbyville crowd, but Smith and Company threw a wrench into the machinery.

McDonald's Tigers came through with a wonderful finish to win the beautiful silver trophy in the Girls League. Both indoor circuits have drawn fine crowds and the officials in the Senior as well as the Industrial have set a good precedent by donating a portion of the season's surplus to the Kiddies' Camp fund.

The Canadian Nationals are holding nightly practice and fans are marvelling at the progress being made under the direction of Manager "Peeny" Mills. The outfield is undoubtedly the best in several years and the trio as well as being a hard-hitting crew, patrol the garden well. Punch Berry will add strength to the pitching corps and some younger blood should give the needed punch to make a winning combination.

Your Motor Should Be Lubricated With Veedol Motor Oil

Here's the Reason—

When oil goes into action, it forms a thin film over vital motor parts. As long as that film remains unbroken, the motor is protected from destructive heat and friction. Far too often, ordinary oils fail to give the motor this protection because they burn or evaporate.

Here's the remedy—

Because the whole problem of correct lubrication lies in a film of oil, Tide Water Technologists, after years of study, perfected Veedol, the oil that masters heat 100 degrees hotter than the hottest friction spot in any car—the oil that gives the fighting "film of protection," thin as tissue, smooth as silk, tough as steel.

Here's the way to get it—

Stop today at the orange and black Veedol sign, have your crankcase drained and refilled with the correct Veedol oil for your particular make of car. Always ask for Veedol by name.

MINISTER HAS WRITTEN PSALM

London, May 27.—The Reverend Basil W. B. Matthews, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, has experienced so many problems of ministerial department in his parish that he has written the following psalm about them:

Be he grave or serious in his demeanor, seeking to uphold the dignity of his cloth,

He is said to be standoffish, pi and uppish; yes, the ungodly call him "Holy Joe."

So then he trieth to be gay, greeting all and sundry with a merry jest; but, this, too, displeaseth some.

With young men and maidens, too, the parson hath his problems; for if from them he hold aloof, they mickle him much.

So that when to him they should turn as to a friend in need, wily them he cuteth no ice.

Again, if beholding overmuch intemperance in his flock; he exhorteth all men to abstain from strong drink.

He is said to be a killjoy, and inhuman; a very Simpkins whose mind is straitened.

But if he entereth a tavern, a pot-teth his foot upon the rail of brass; there he those who say, "Behold a wine-bibber."

So when he bloweth froth he commiteth iniquity; and when he bloweth it not he is likewise a sinner.

Let the servant therefore walk in the steps of his Master; and enough for the opinion of man.

Newsy Neighborhood Notes

OLD RESIDENT DIES

Cobourg, May 28.—George Langdon, 87, probably the oldest resident of Northumberland County, passed away at the Home for the Aged here. Langdon was an old resident of Warkworth and his remains were taken to the cemetery there for interment.

KICKED BY HORSE

Bancroft, May 28.—Mr. Anson Wood est, an aged resident of this village, while attending to a team of horses at Baptiste on Sunday, was severely kicked in the face by one of the animals. Dr. Linn was called and dressed the wounds and removed the patient to his home here, where he is progressing nicely under his care. A couple of nasty cuts were inflicted in the face.

ESCAPED DROWNING

Lakefield, May 28.—Another young people of Lakefield had a narrow escape from drowning yesterday afternoon when their sailboat was upset just above the narrows, near Lonely Island. Miss Evelyn Northey, Ic. H. Dunston, and Harry Stabler, all employees of the Royal Bank, were in the water for an hour and a half before they managed to get their boat to shore at the narrows.

SEEKS TO INCREASE INTER-EMPIRE TRADE

London, May 27.—"I am here to visit Canadian trade commissioners in Britain and on the continent and to acquaint myself more fully with the possibilities the markets here offer for Canadian products," Hon. James Malcolm, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, told newspapermen in an interview to-day. He added that he was more particularly desirous of increasing inter-Empire trade of which he had been a constant advocate.

The minister mentioned the grant of $100,000 made by the Canadian Government for advertising Canadian goods in Britain. To secure the best means of applying the money was an important object of his visit, he said.

Mr. Malcolm acknowledged that the figures of Canadian trade with Britain lately had shown a decrease, through the lessened ability of Britain to purchase Canadian products, although Canadian purchases from Britain showed a slight increase. He believed adequate publicity would soon help to correct the balance. There was always, he said, some unevenness about statistics and they did not invariably show the exact position at trade between two countries like Canada and Britain. In 1925-26 Canada's exports to Britain were $454,000,000 and imports $330,000,000. Last year exports were $430,000,000 and imports $320,000,000.

HELD UP BY WET LAND

Cobourg, May 30.—The wet weather of the last ten days has been particularly discouraging to farmers in the Cobourg district, w hose lands lie low. Just as they had their fields fitted for seeding, the rains came on, and this has occurred several times, and now farmers are again obliged to wait until their land is in condition for the seed. Many places are so wet it is possible to get them with a team. On high land crops are coming on fairly well.

The Irony of Love

By Charles Garvice

All Rafe's thoughts were fixed on Maude; and, knowing it, she came to him as soon as her strength would enable her to do so. She saw him walking in the small avenue of firs in which he had so often spent the evening in love's communion; and there could have been no more fitting place for this morning and farewell; for she knew that it must be farewell.

He caught the glimmer of her white dress, as he turned in his pacing, and he went to meet her, not quickly, but with his hands grasped each other behind his back, in his effort to obtain command of himself; he had only one object in life now, and that was to spare Maude as much pain as was possible. Both were startled and shocked by the change which grief had wrought in them; but both of them rallied up the courage which was latent in their natures, and it was with something like self-control that Rafe spoke her name.

She held out both her hands to him and he took them in his; but though he gripped them hard and his eyes dwelt on her with love and despair in them, he did not draw her to him, did not raise her hands to his lips. She was his no longer; he belonged to another woman; he was passing out of Maude's life.

"Oh, Stranlyre!" she said; but she did not wait her words; her eyes met his bravely, and he read in her pupils the pity for him, as well as the anguish of their separation.

"It's good of you to come to me, Maude," he said; and as he spoke, she noted that the old, youthful timbre of his voice had gone; that it sounded flat and broken. "I couldn't have gone without seeing you. But now you are here, I—I don't know what to say. And yet, I had such a lot to tell you, a moment ago. But it's all gone; the sight of you has driven it out of my mind."

"I know, I know, Stranlyre," she said, choking back her sobs and closing her hands tightly round the trunk from which he drew them with a gasp. "I know. Do you think I don't know every-thing?"

"I know you do, and I'm glad," he said. "I'm not going to ask you to forgive me; there is nothing to forgive. I can see it in your eyes. I've been a fool, Maude, but you don't want me to tell you that; I didn't mean you any harm—that ever since that day I first set eyes on you I've never given a thought to another woman. Stop! that's not quite straight. Once—and later, after I'd met—Pleasants, when I believed you were going to marry Sim Horne, I think, in a kind of desperation, that I was only fitted to be Pleasants's husband. I knew that she cared for me, wished me, and I tried to feel the same way toward her; but it wasn't any use. No, not for a moment have I been—how do you put it?—disloyal; yes, that's it, disloyal to you."

"I know you haven't," she repeated, almost inaudibly. "Let us sit down, Stranlyre." He released her hand, she sank onto a rustic seat and he took his place beside her. "And we must be loyal to each other now, Stranlyre," she said, after a pause; "we can't be otherwise, can we? You know what I mean—"

"I think I do," he said, his eyes fixed on the ground; for the sight of her face, so lovely in its pallor and weariness, might at any moment be too much for him. "I think I do, but tell me all you've got in your mind. I'm the kind of relying on you, Maude; you're all I've got to rely on."

"I feel that, Stranlyre," she said, closing her eyes, for her heart, so full of love for him, was being drawn toward him; she too, felt her own weakness and had to guard herself against it. "I have told myself ever since—I know, that you would want my help. That is only natural, considering how you and I love—love loved—"

"And still love," he said, almost tiercely. "Let there be no mistake about that. Whatever it is whatever becomes of me, I shall always love you, Maude. There's no going back on that."

"Don't, don't, Stranlyre," she murmured brokenly, and her head drooped down and I shall do so if—if——" Ah, despair!" she broke out, with, for the third time, a note of wailing in her voice, "we must be strong. You must help me. We must help each other. There must be no sin and no love between us now. All that is over—no don't speak, Stranlyre. I have to trust to me now what I've come to say, and you must give me something of your strength, for I need it very sorely. Yes, your strength, Stranlyre, for you are very strong, and that—that is why I love you."

She stopped and fought for self-command.

"I wanted to see you once more—for the last time—to tell you, that you know already, that I understand all. There shall be no word of forgiveness between us, as you said; but I want you to know that—that though I judge we shall never meet again, I shall always think of you—no, not as the man I loved, but as the man who first taught me how good and great a thing a strong man is. In my heart and in my thoughts you will always remain; I could not tear you out if I wanted to do so, but I shall keep the memory of you as one remembers a very true, a very dear, a very staunch friend."

Rafe was a prey to love, that she was forever with her then, and he kept his eyes fixed on the ground and summoned all the strength with which her belief in him had endowed him.

TWO TESTED RECIPES FOR SALAD DRESSINGS

Now that salads are the order of the day, really good recipes for salad dressings will be welcomed. A salad is often made or marred by the piquancy of the dressing used, so that tested recipes are very desirable. Since some prefer an uncooked dressing and others a cooked dressing, we give two recipes, both of which we know will please:

Salad Dressing (Uncooked)

2 eggs beaten until light; 1-2 teaspoon salt; 1-2 teaspoon mustard; 1-2 can Eagle Brand Condensed Milk; 1-2 cup vinegar. Beat the first four ingredients vigorously for a few minutes until the vinegar, stir well and set aside for a few hours to thicken. Excellent for fruit or vegetable salad. Will keep for weeks. For Russian dressing add Chili sauce to taste.

Salad Dressing (Cooked)

1-2 tablespoon salt; 1 teaspoon mustard; 1 tablespoon flour; 1 tablespoon butter; 1-4 cup Eagle Brand Condensed Milk; 1-2 cup water; 1-4 cup vinegar; 1 egg. Mix dry ingredients, add slight ly beaten egg, butter, milk, water and vinegar. Cook until thickened. Strain and cool. Whipped Borden's St. Charles Evaporated Milk, or cream, may be added before serving if desired. Yield, 1 cupful.

TELEVISION
—how to "see" your Customer

AS they listened to Herbert Hoover's voice, speaking from Washington by Long Distance a few days ago, his New York audience watched a picture of him in action while he talked. The voice and picture were sent over electric waves at the same time. Television was thus given to the world.

But telephoning a distant customer is still the one best way to "see" him—in any business sense.

More important to you than the expression on your customer's face when you sell him a good-sized order by Long Distance, is the necessity of "seeing" him frequently—by Long Distance.

For him, in this sense, "seeing is believing."

LINDBERGH GETS AIR FORCE CROSS FROM THE KING

His Majesty Chatted With Aviator Hero For 20 Minutes

MEETS PREMIER

Baldwin Interested In Experiences of Flight Over Atlantic

London, May 31.—A young man with keen eyes and winning smile called at Buckingham Palace today and told His Majesty, the King, how it feels to fly over the Atlantic, all alone, from New York to Paris. The King received his visitor cordially and before many minutes had passed decorated him with the Air Force Cross, to add to the French Legion of Honor and the Belgian Insignia of Knight of the Order of Leopold, which Capt. Lindbergh already wears. The Cross, instituted in 1918, was designed for bestowal upon officers and warrant officers of the Royal Air Force for acts of courage and devotion to duty when flying.

The honor conferred by his Majesty seemed to stump the hero; he thanked and for a second hesitated as to what he should say next, but another handshake from the King soon put him at his ease. Then they sat down and the aviator told the King how it was done. The flyer arrived at Buckingham palace a few minutes ahead of schedule, coming from number 10 Downing Street, where he was received by Premier Baldwin, whom also he related some of the most interesting details of his flight and subsequent experiences. He was presented to Mrs. Baldwin as well as Miss Betty.

Several palace officials were assembled in the vestibule to greet the aviator as he entered. At this moment, Capt. Lindbergh noticed a baby in the arms of an uniformed nurse. It was Prince Edward, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York. Lindbergh was with the King just five minutes and it is understood he did his share of the talking, although his Royal host showed much curiosity about some of his experiences and asked numerous questions. Soon after Lindbergh's departure, the King left by motor for the opening of the racing at Epsom, on the same course where the Derby will be run tomorrow.

O. T. A. DIES TONIGHT AFTER BEING IN FORCE SINCE SEPTEMBER 1916

War-Time Measure Finally Passes—Liquor Stores Open Tomorrow

To-night at 12 o'clock the Ontario Temperance Act will have been in force and in the statutes of Ontario to something of the past, after an existence of nearly eleven years. This Act came into force in Ontario September, 1916.

The Ontario Temperance Act was a wartime measure to facilitate the work of manufacturing ammunition, foodstuffs and other necessities of wartime the war, and was only entered on the statute books until the cessation of hostilities, and since before the signing of the Armistice and December 1st, 1926 the people of the Province of Ontario were given an opportunity of voting on modifications of this form of temperance, but each time owing to the well organized temperance forces, and the lack of interest shown by the other camp, the act remained law. Last year, Premier G. Howard Ferguson realized that with the backing he received by bootlegging, drunkenness and debauchery, snarching in the way of relief to the non-temperance camp would have to be given and thus must go into the provincial election with the government control of the sale and handling of liquor a key of the chief planks in his election platform.

In the campaign of last fall both the advocates of Government Control and the Ontario Temperance Act fought a hard battle, but after the returns were all in and since before the 18th of September Premier Ferguson was returned to power with an overwhelmingly majority.

As announced during his campaign Premier Ferguson appointed a Liquor Commission of strong men to handle the control of the selling of liquor in Ontario and to-day with the act almost as perfect as it could be the Royal Proclamation will be issued and the Ontario Temperance Act will cease to function at mid-night. Its interest in pure.

SMALL FRUIT SHOULD BE PLENTIFUL THIS SUMMER

Fruit of every variety grown in this district should be unusually plentiful and accordingly inexpensive this year if the blossoms and conditions generally are a mere perfect as in the memory of the oldest fruit farmer. As yet the cold nights have held back the strawberry crop which will probably be the largest in years, from present appearances, but each time owing to the well organized temperance forces, and the lack of interest shown by the other camp, the act remained law. Last year, Premier G. Howard Ferguson realized that with the backing he received by bootlegging, drunkenness and debauchery, snarching in the way of relief to the non-temperance camp would have to be given and thus must go into the provincial election with the government control of the sale and handling of liquor a key of the chief planks in his election platform.

JUDGE ORDERS WRITTEN CASE

Children Sue Step-Father For Alleged Mortgage Of $2500

The trial of an issue directed by His Honour Judge Denbeigh, Master in the County Court House today in the estate of the late Ellen Fowler, Belleville, deceased, Mrs. Snider's children by her first marriage, allowed that the executor, Mr. H. E. Snider was the husband of the deceased should have included in the assets a mortgage for $2500, given by him on the 4th of April 1921, and also a promissory note for $700 given by him to his wife. Mr. Snider alleged the note had been paid in full before his wife's death and that the mortgage was given to secure Mrs. Snider's bills, etc., until her death, of which he states he did.

The trial Judge reserved judgment and directed counsel within one week to file written arguments on law relavent to the admissibility of certain evidence. Col. E. D. O'Flynn appeared for the beneficiaries and Mr. Chas Cameron for the executor.

Mrs. Chaplin's attorneys last night reversed their previous demand that newspaper reporters be present while she was being questioned

TAX RATE FOR BELLEVILLE JUMPS TWO MILLS TO A NEW HIGH LEVEL

Schools Account For Some Of Increase—Suburban Roads Costly

HIGHER NEXT YEAR

Overdraft From 1926 Of Over $9,500 Take Up One Mill

Belleville's tax rate for 1927 will be 2 mills higher than last year, having been fixed by the City Council last night at 41 9-10 mills which is the highest in the history of the city. Part of the increase is accounted for by an overdraft of $9,542.52 from last year, arising from unexpected expenditures in the various departments. This takes up one mill of the increase and the other mill is absorbed in larger school expenditures and interest payments on a bigger debenture debt.

Spoken to over the telephone Ald. Morley Duff, Chairman of the Executive, said he would shortly have a statement to make to the taxpayers in regard to the rate. Much of the expenditures this year is not within the control of Council, the general tax rate having been fixed at 2 5-10 mills. The public school rate is 9 7-10 and the High School calls for 4 mills more.

If it is any consolation to the tax payer the rate this year is considerably lower than it will be for 1928. The new Collegiate will mean a big jump for next year and there are rumors afloat to the Bay Bridge which will add to the load which the poor uncomplaining taxpayer has to bear.

NORTHERN ARMY ABANDONS HONAN

Tokyo, May 31.—Looting and other disturbances are feared as a consequence of the occupation of Pengpu by the Southern Chinese armies, which was announced by the Japanese Foreign Office today. Grave danger is also looked for at Peking and Tientsin and for this reason the Japanese intend to take every precaution. It is generally believed that Marshal Chang Tso Lin, the Northern war lord, is certain to fall.

Peking, May 31.—Northern authorities made announcement today of the wholesale withdrawal of Northern Forces from the front owing to reverses in Honan. Withdrawal means the surrender to the Nationalists of all the Honan Province, south of the Yellow River.

SIDNEY FARMERS ESCAPE INJURY

Car Is Partly Demolished By Fast Canadian National Train

Messrs F. J. Carr and J. Long of the 3rd Concession of Sidney Township narrowly escaped serious injuries and a possible death when the car in which they were driving was badly demolished at Harder's School House Crossing by one of the fast trains on the Canadian National.

Mr. Carr who is a prominent farmer in the district was accompanying Mr. Long an assistant and although they noticed the approach of the locomotive thought they had ample time to cross the tracks. Just as the car reached the rails the engine visibled and although frantic efforts were made to start the machine it reached its destination and as the express bore down twas men jumped to safety. The front portion of the car was struck and the radiator and fenders completely smashed.

WILL NOT STAND FOR BOLSHEVISM

Paris, May 31.—The speech of Myron T. Herrick, United States ambassador in the Memorial Day exercises at Suresnes, United States military cemetery, in which he emphasized that the United States would not tolerate the spread of Bolshevism to its shores, is given special prominence in today's newspapers, but "The Matin" is alone in commenting on it. "This powerful speech," it says, "coming after Britain's rupture with the Soviets will be viewed as an indication that United States will not only defend itself as in the past, against the invasion of the communist microbe, but will second any concerted action designed definitely to ruin Soviet Bolshevik power."

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Constancy is the compliment of all the other human virtues.—Mazzini.

MODERATION

Official announcement is made that the Ontario Liquor Control Act will come into force tomorrow and the Ontario Temperance Act will have had its day and ceased to be." Chief Commissioner Hanna's appeal to the people of the province should be heeded. He asks that the same self-control and moderation manifested in the applications for permits be exercised in the application for liquor. It is earnestly to be hoped that there will not be unseemly rushes to the government stores, and that the early orgies predicted by enemies of government control will not take in evidence.

Let it be considered that the new system will be on trial. By its supporters it has been represented as a real temperance measure; but if one of the immediate results of its operation were to be an epidemic of open drunkenness, it would be discredited and its supporters humiliated. Everyone, therefore, who helped to bring the new law into existence should feel it a matter of personal honor to refrain from doing anything to bring the law into discredit. Should it be discredited at the outset, from that moment a reaction in favor of real root-and-branch prohibition will set in.

ADVERTISING

Readers will not have failed to note the interesting fact that a new tone in advertising is being struck by a number of important Canadian corporations, such as the Confederation Life Association, the Northern Electric Company Limited, and the Canadian Pacific Railway. In nation-wide publicity they have developed the idea of calling attention to various phases of Canada's progress in the decades leading up to this Jubilee year, and of linking with it the record of their own achievements as important and integral units in the Confederation. While material standards are not in themselves sufficiently broad to measure a nation yet it is a fact that civilization marches in step with industry, commerce and transportation, and none has done more for Canada than those with the vision and spirit which created our great national enterprises.

BETTER LIVING

The thought frequently comes to many of us, as we think of the old people we knew 25 years ago, what these folks would have said if they could have seen conditions as they are now. As they looked out on their quiet streets, in which their family horses jogged along leisurely toward their goals, what would they have said if they could have seen this motorized age, with people darting through the streets at railroad speed?

The last quarter of the 19th century developed wonderful inventions. But it seems doubtful if it could be compared with the marvels of the first quarter of our century, with its automobiles, its radios, and its airplanes.

The effect of automobiles has been one of the most far-reaching changes in the history of society. It has pulled people out of their stationary habits, and given them a free range of movement. It enables people to have homes in the country and work in cities and towns. It has saved country neighborhoods from decay. At the same time it does make many people restless and little inclined to settle down and work as the faithful old timers used to.

It must be the mission of the years immediately ahead to give these people who have acquired added power a true conception of aims and purposes. They must be shown that sports and pleasures alone will not do them much good. They need to seek knowledge, intelligence, and interest in the good causes of the time. With enlightened motive added to increased power, then we shall see rapid advance in society welfare.

SPORT

It is a remarkable tribute to Britain's love of sport that it furnished, as was the case on a recent Saturday, in the presence of no less than a quarter of a million people at a football game. This was the attendance at the final game for the English Football association cup between Arsenals and Cardiff City at the great Wembley stadium when Cariff won, its victory being the first in the long history of the cup for a Welsh team. This remarkable attendance at an athletic contest recalls that, even in the years when Britain resourcefulness and endurance were being taxed to the limit, there was still a time for sport and also for general appreciation of it.

FOR ENGLAND

Great hearted little island,
The children sing thy praise;
The wonder of thy glory, whom hail
the world obeys.
The sweetness of thy hedgerows on fragrant summer days.
Thy greatness and thy sweetness,
Bind us to thee always.

—Shelagh Kirby

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Barrister—What possible excuse did you fellows have for acquitting that murderer?

Juryman—Insanity.

Barrister—Really. The whole twelve of you?

Happy Man (just accepted)—When can we be married? May it supposed to be unlucky, but—

WHAT THEY LIVE ON

Soldiers live on hash and beans,
Sailors live on ships,
Workers live on what they earn,
Waiters live on tips.

Old men live on borrowed time,
Old maids live on tea;
Then there are my relatives—
They all live on me.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

The arrival at Montreal of the White Star liner Alberic has been made the occasion of much discussion as marking the beginning of a new era in the St. Lawrence transportation, for the Alberic is the largest ship that ever went up the river as far as the commercial metropolis of the Dominion. It has served also as a reminder of the remarkable development in steam navigation since the day, nearly a hundred years ago, when the first steamship to cross the Atlantic fared forth under her Scottish captain from Quebec.—Halifax Chronicle.

We would like to enquire in what school of nature our modern designers of wallpapers are trained.

Our bedroom boasts of a flamboyant design of golden maple leaves with navy blue roses happily growing on the same stem, all coyly perched on a back ground of macaroni. Our living-room sports birds in many rare species plucking cherries from a magic tree, which also sprouts purple cabbages and morning glories—seed catalogues please copy. No, our bootlegger did not call tonight, and we are not seeing things.

Our dining-room is simple; merely a design of fragments of puppy-dogs, vainly endeavoring to reassemble their parts. Now, we ask you? Well, hardly.—Montreal Herald.

Jo—I wish I had enough money to get married.
Jo—What would you want to do that for?
"I wouldn't. I'd buy a decent car!"

Every Workman a Guardian of Quality

INSPECTION . . . careful and uncompromising . . . is diligently carried out by General Motors of Canada through a large and competent, specially appointed staff.

This inspection deals with materials, with workmanship, with assembly . . . and will not tolerate the slightest variation from precision.

And, in addition, each veteran Canadian craftsman constitutes himself an inspector no less critical and exacting.

Each is just as truly a guardian of that high quality which is the solid foundation of General Motors' constantly rising position in public esteem.

So deeply rooted and doubly assured, General Motors precision manufacture is of the greatest importance to the owners of its cars . . . and to all who consider buying one.

It results not only in better performance and the matchless satisfaction of dependability. . . .

It makes itself decidedly felt in those more important attributes of true value which are slow depreciation and long life!

CAPITOL THEATRE

The Dual Bubble show at the Capitol Theatre the first three days of this week is one well worth seeing. Shown for the first time last night the double bill provided two hours and a half of first class entertainment—both on stage and screen—to a good sized house. On the stage the Imperial Players, commencing their fifth week locally, made one of their biggest hits yet in presenting the well known farce ie "Over the Hills to the Poorhouse," with a delightful blending of comedy. pathos and drama which made the offering a really good one with the excellent caste as usual, headed by Miss Myrtle Rigden, playing their various parts exceptionally well.

One of the season's biggest screen hits is the comedy sensation "The Hats", also on the bill. It's a screen all the way through, with Claire Windsor, Conrad Nagel and a good supporting caste." It is interesting to note that one of the leading parts is played by Tom O'Brien prominent in the greek screen "The Call of the North." The adventures of three Yankee soldiers who fought their Army and after the signing of the armistic landed in a German town, is a laugh all through, and a picture which last night's audience thoroughly enjoyed.

Boys' Disappearance Causes Anxiety In Campbellford

Campbellford, May 31.—On Saturday morning two scared like wildfire that the waters of Bradley Bay, on the Trent, had claimed two young lives. Two young boys had been absent from their respective homes over night, and on Saturday morning one of the merchants reported having seen them in a boat on Bradley Bay late on Friday evening. Searching parties were not long in being formed, one of which went to Anderson's Island. There the party found a pair of shoes in the boat in which one or two boys had been seen, and concluded that they had met their fate in the waters of the bay. They continued their search of the Island, however, and on going into Attwell's summer cottage, for the purpose for the season, they found the two boys preparing a hearty meal for themselves. Early in the morning they had landed a large fish, and having found some potatoes the noble fishers cooked and ready for the pot. It was going to be just the swellest dinner imaginable.

It is thought that on reaching Anderson's Island, which is a mile across the bay, the boys decided that it would be unsafe to attempt to return over ing in the dark, and with the night looking none too promising, decided to make themselves at home on the Island.

GIRLS WHO OUTGROW IDEALS OF MOTHER

By ELSIE MARLOWE

"You don't understand!" What a familiar cry that is in our homes today and what tragedies of suffering and resentment lie behind it!

You've heard it, haven't you? And you, too, have been hurt and resentful. I wonder which side you'll take as you read Hope's letter.

DEAR ELSIE:

Am I conceited, selfish? Mother tells me I am, but I don't believe she has ever understood me truly.

My friends all respect and love me, and they themselves are respectable. Other mothers and my older friends respect and trust me when they know me.

Yet my own mother of all the people in the world thinks differently.

Do I appear under a false disguise in the presence of my mother or of my friends? Though that solution might seem plausible, it cannot be true, for I talk more freely to my mother than to my best chum. Yet my chum is more interested. She rejoices at my tiny successes, feels when I am wrong, smiles when I am happy, trusts, admires and loves and needs me like no one else in the world. I feel the same about her.

Mother always seems too occupied by worry or rejoice over some petty success of mine which means all the world to me. When I speak of my ideals, ambitions, hopes, she usually replies: "Your ambitions and hopes are beyond you. Remember you're not a millionaire. That won't get you food now. Of course, you talk like a child. When you've suffered as much in this world as I have, you will change your ideas."

I rebel. She teaches us to lie and to deceive, explaining that honesty does not exist. I refuse to lie or deceive for her or anybody else. Experience has taught me that honesty is the only policy, that God is merciful, and that I am blessed with riches far more valuable than any that money can buy.

I talk and talk to her, begging her to quit killing herself with worry and be happy trusting God. But she will not. She is so weak that we children all share in defraying our living expenses. Being out of employment at present, I am the object of her constant worry.

I do not condemn her, although she has never brought me up to the finest ideals. She has sacrificed and suffered for us. I do not see her shortcomings as well as I see her beautiful face worn with years of worry—bits of her former self shining through her eyes—though rarely, when she thinks of others rather than herself. Poor little mother-of-mine has thoughtlessly flung her power of discriminating between right and wrong to the four winds.

Maybe I should have spared her this which I believe to be the truth but I haven't. When she keeps nagging me about being lazy and not wanting to work—I love any respectable work I can do and I have sought it daily—I tell her frankly what I am telling you, both good and bad.

She resents, remembers only the bad, accuses me of being conceited and selfish, says that I'm thinking I'm "somebody" and finding fault with everyone but myself.

I know I have a great many faults. We all have, but I am better than I used to be. I admit making mistakes, too, but I try not to make the same mistakes twice.

My mother has no influence over my character. Though I will always do everything for her benefit, I shall never be like her. I flatter myself that I am respectable girl. I don't drink, smoke, wear sweet paint, lie, deceive and steal. I am popular at dances and among my friends. Only at home I am unpopular.

Will you tell me frankly what's So she doesn't understand you Hope? wrong with me?

HOPE.

Well, little girl, it would be a miracle if she did. Suppose you stop for a minute and think of HER side of the question.

It isn't an easy job to be a mother in 1927. Never has there been border for one generation to understand an other than it is now, for never has there been a greater gap between the training and traditions of two generations than exists between parents and children today. Life has changed more in the last fifty years than it did in the previous 500 years. Your mother's youth followed the pattern of her mother's before her, and her grandmother's, back and back. But your youth is being cast in an entirely new mold.

You feel quite able to cope with this new world, and I love and sympathize with your confidence and ambition. I don't suppose it ever occurs to you that once upon a time your mother had just such confidence and ambition? She had. But she has seen life wreck both of them. She has seen the rules all turned upside down, as you, some day will see them turned up side down. And in her heartache and confusion she shows you the bitterness of her soul.

Advise Women to Adopt new hygienic method; new way offers true protection; discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

LARGELY on medical advice, women are abandoning the old time "sanitary pad" for a new way that supplants uncertainty with positive protection.

Sheer frocks and ill-timed social engagements no longer remain as worries. Lost days are fewer, and health better.

It is called "Kotex." Ends the insecurity of old-time sanitary pads; 5 times as absorbent! And deodorizes—ends all fear of offending.

As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it at any drug store simply by saying "Kotex." Buy without hesitancy, and be sure to get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

Eight in 10 better-class women employ it. Proves the risk of old ways.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young girl seventeen years of age. Have been going with a young fellow of twenty-three. I care for him very well.

He is very sensitive. Something I have said has hurt his feelings. The way he acted on that occasion has hurt mine.

We have quarreled before, but have always made up. Shall I call him or wait for him to call me?

BETTY LEE.

BETTY LEE: After all, it is a question of which is to blame. You must determine that for yourself. If you initiated the quarrel, you must write him a note and apologize. I am sure he will be glad of the opportunity to make an apology in return.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I met a young man about a year ago who is about nine years older than myself.

We went out together, and he seemed to enjoy my company.

Now, I would like to have this young man over here for dinner some evening or some Sunday.

Should I write an invitation and ask him to come, or should I wait until he comes?

GUNHILDE.

GUNHILDE: There is no reason why you should not ask this young man to call, or invite him to dinner, whenever you wish. You need not wait until he calls before inviting him. Write a cordial note, and if he wants your friendship, he will be delighted to come

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Cross-barred checks are smart.

London modistes are showing elbow sleeves on some Ascot models.

The white georgette evening gown with a scarlet flower flaming on the shoulder is having a vogue in Paris.

White crochet hats are to be even smarter than the colored, which now lead either bailiscart, bangkok or felt.

Two capes stressed in Paris now are velvet for evening and the full length capes for sports.

Fresh pineapples are being given to people at their first meals on the great ocean liners because this fruit will prevent seasickness.

Crepe de chine is the popular material of the present season in Paris and in Ascot new poplin has a satin back and is reversible.

The importance of rosy, coppery and gray tones is strongly felt in a general color survey. The recent Paris midseason openings, which as has been said, bear many hints of fall adaptations.

Chanel is showing wide handkerchief collars in spotted crepe de chine and foulard which are used around the necks of the coats and the loosely tied girdles of similar material defining rather a high waistline in the dresses.

SYBIL, TRAPPER OF MEN
By Mildred Barbour

Sybil had already combed in the taxi and was waiting, while the starter scowled at the delay, one never quite knew how it happened that Lieutenant Sheldon suddenly became their escort but Eva seemed so delighted with the companionship of somebody "from home" that she accepted the situation. Several hours later, she was dancing with the young officer at one of the smartest night clubs.

CHAPTER XXX

The Smarting Spirit

Sybil settled into her niche in New York as a woman of wealth and leisure with admirable aplomb. She had taken to luxury like a duck to water. But she was cleverly aware of her inward limitations, and she spent that first winter making up for the deficiencies in her early education.

To that end, she signed up for dancing and fencing lessons; joined classes in languages and literature; bought tickets for concerts, and attended lectures on a variety of subjects.

Her natural appearance needed no further cultivation—she was lovely, exotic, and yet frankly remote in her demeanor.

Her sense of triumph was partially lost from the day she ran across Arthur Winslow, the first time she had seen him since she had fared him in his hotel suite, and had told him that she had used his infatuation to further her own ends.

She was stepping from a car to do some shopping, shortly after her arrival in New York, when she came face to face with him. It pleased her that, for an instant, he didn't recognize her. She was wrapped in a fur coat, and a drooping osprey rimmed her small hat and caressed the satin curve under of her cheek.

Arthur looked thinner and a bit shabby. Sybil hesitated an instant, then nodded with a sweetness totally foreign to the Sybil he had known.

He hesitated: "How do you do," and moved quickly on. He was with an older man, immaculately dressed, and Sybil of face, who stared at Sybil appraisingly.

It would first have amused and later infuriated Sybil if she could have heard the conversation of the two men at luncheon.

"Who's the fair Diana?" asked the older man, who was a wealthy client of the brokerage firm where Arthur doggedly hung on to a job to subsist on.

"Why do you know 'Diana'?" demand Arthur sullkily. He was rather red after the encounter which had reminded him what a fool he had been.

"Oh, I don't know—there was a sort of air about her that suggested the chaste huntress."

Arthur gave a short laugh.

Elmer Dearborn turned his heavy eyes toward his companion.

"She came to New York with me at most two years ago," said Arthur, between compressed lips.

"Well, you seem to have given her a good start," laughed Dearborn. "She looks as though she'd travelled far on the path of prosperity."

"She's the sort who'd do it," muttered Arthur.

"Well, I'm glad you tipped me off," remarked his friend. "A minute ago I was about to ask you to arrange an introduction, but I'm pretty wary of gold diggers. If I hadn't been, I wouldn't have the money I've got today."

"You're right" said Arthur. "Wish I'd had a little more sense two years ago."

"Always too late in coming—what—first bit of knowledge that would have saved the day?"

The conversation turned to other topics, but Arthur was patently distraught. He knew he ought to excuse that hour in pushing a sale of bonds to this valued client, but he couldn't keep the image of Sybil out of his thoughts; he couldn't forget what an idiot he had been. He started at once under his defeat at her hands.

Oliver Dearborn watched him with grim amusement. He was the typical New York man about town. The club windows along Fifth Avenue are filled with his sort. Verging dangerously on middle age; wealthy, leisured, surfeited—that was Dearborn and his brethren. But, unlike many of his associates, he was wary—too old a bird to be caught.

He was the sort of man to whom there were only two kinds of women—the good and the bad. The bad were not expensive for the pleasure involved and the good didn't count.

When they were parting after lunch eon—and Arthur, to his surprise, had made a sale of bonds after all, despite his lack of effort—Dearborn suddenly returned to their earlier topic of conversation.

D'ye know, Winslow, what you said about that girl interests me somehow. Maybe it was the looks of her. I do not suppose you could fix up an introduction?"

Diamond Jubilee Inspires Song

GORDON V. THOMPSON.

Canada's Diamond Jubilee has been the inspiration that has given birth to a waltz of a new Canadian song "At The Canada Jubilee" which has recently been published to commemorate the sixtieth year of confederation.

His composer, Gordon V. Thompson, has already established the reputation of being one of Canada's leading song writers. His popular war songs composed and published during the stirring days of 1914-18 are well-known. There are few who do not know by heart the airs of "When Jack" Comes Back", "Khaki" or "When Your Boy Comes Back to You", three patriotic songs in particular composed by Mr. Thompson during the War.

Mr. Thompson composed this new song recently while staying at the Chateau Frontenac at Quebec. Here at the very birthplace of Canadian history Mr. Thompson felt the urge to write something that would express the joy of Canadians at the coming great event. Having produced "At the Canada Jubilee" Mr. Thompson felt that another song, expressive of the optimistic sentiments of Canadians, would be irresistibly appropriate. "Land of Glad To-Morrow" was the result of this inspiration which the composer feels expresses something of the optimism for the future throughout Canada at the present time.

SINCLAIR'S

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

Pour a little vinegar into the water when poaching eggs and prevent their spreading and separating.

Never put bananas in the refrigerator. They will not only flavor every uncovered eatable, but will turn black themselves.

If brushing will not remove the mud stains from a garment, rub them with a raw potato. It will not fail.

Use the ice pick to remove doughnuts from the hot fat. Two or three can be removed at one time by this method.

Mitten mutters, of fluffy, chemically treated yarn like nope. It soaks over the hand and polish as they clean.

The very latest artificial button hole in Paris is a Parisian affair made of coral and framed in tiny silver leaves. And a similar decoration composed of emerald berries is poised up on a single leaf of black kid.

Arthur hesitated. It flashed through his mind that Oliver Dearborn might furnish him a sweet revenge. Dearborn was an old hand with women. What chance would even such a girl as Sybil have against him?

"I—might," hazared Arthur, not the least seeing very clearly how he was going to manage it.

"Good boy. Try and arrange something, will you?"

Dearborn nodded good-bye and hailed a passing taxi.

Arthur returned to his desk in the brokerage office.

That night he mulled over the possibilities at the scheme of presenting Oliver Dearborn to Sybil.

The doctor said I was weak and would never be able to have a child, but I did, and from the time my baby came I suffered all the time and doctored and took medicine. Life became a burden, and doctor said an operation could help me, but my husband was opposed to that. I had seen Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine advertised, and told my husband that I thought I would try it, that I might get some relief. I had not taken one bottle when I could feel it helping me. IMPORTANT FACTS ABOUT FIRES; CAUSES AND PREVENTION IN CITY

Fire Marshall George Lewis Shows Grave Defects In City's Fire Fighting — Quotes Facts — Belleville Has High Fire Average — City Has Inadequate Force of Fire Fighters — One Truck Is Obsolete and New Pumper Is Needed — Citizens Are Careless.

Interesting facts were brought out by Deputy Fire Marshall George Lewis at yesterday's Rotarian Luncheon at which Mr. Lewis was a guest. The chief gist of these remarks tended to show what an inadequate fire fighting force and what faulty equipment the local fire-fighters had. The following are facts which the Fire Marshall brought out in his address yesterday:

Causes of Fire in Belleville

	1924	1925	1926	Average per year
Carelessly handled and defective heating apparatus	29.81%	36.54%	25.07%	23.81%
Matches and careless smokers	24.60	26.92	29.83	27.13
Gasoline and coal oil	14.04	7.70	10.54	10.76
Electricity	12.28	11.53	10.50	11.44
Gas	3.53			1.15
Igniting grease	5.26	1.76	2.99	2.99
Exposure	3.51	3.84	7.02	4.79
Lightning	1.75	7.70	1.76	3.74
Spontaneous ignition	1.74			.58
Explosion	1.74	3.84	3.52	3.03
Firecrackers	1.74			.58

An analysis of these figures shows conclusively that the great majority of these fires are caused by Carelessness and Indifference and are therefore preventible.

While the fire losses in the Dominion have decreased to the extent of 20% in the last five years, the fire losses in Belleville have increased more than 74% in the last three years. This is a very serious state of affairs and one that should receive the attention of every business man and of property holder in the city. You can not evade the responsibility nor the Fire Tax.

These figures also show that there are 7% more fires in dwellings than in Miscellaneous buildings. The average number throughout Canada, and that the fires caused by smokers and Carelessness with matches is on the average 80% greater in this city than throughout the country.

Fires caused by gasoline and coal oil are 100% greater and those due to defective electric wiring are 43% more than the average for the Dominion.

Loss for Three Years Here

	1924	1925	1926
Number of fires	60	69	77
Loss	$33,000	$34,253	$57,639
Total fire waste in three years	$124,919
Average per capita fire loss	$3.23

Occupancy Classification of the Number of Fires and the Percentage of Loss in Such Occupancy.

Group	Per Cent. of No. of Fires. 1924	1925	Average 1926	Per Cent. of Loss
Dwellings	70%	60%	68%	$25.73
Mercantile Stores	11.25	14.50	12.05	30.60
Auto Garages	5.	5.60	5.20	7.23
Barns	6.25	5.80	3.07	4.88	2.58
Hotel	1.25	4.30	1.30	2.25	.15
Colleges and Schools	1.25	1.40		.88	.55
Factories	2.50	2.80	2.90	2.07	31.00
Miscellaneous	2.50	5.70	2.60	3.59	2.69

Three Occupancies—Dwellings, Mercantile Stores and Industrial Plants account for 80% of the total loss.

Dwelling Fires—68% of the total number are responsible for 25.7% of the total loss.

Factory Fires—3% of the total number are responsible for 31% of the total loss.

A 6-inch main has 2 1-4 times the capacity of a 4-inch main, and if we take into consideration the relative discharge capacity of these two pipes we find a 6-inch main is equal to 2 1-4 times a 4-inch main. In other words nearly three times as much fire protection is afforded from a 6-inch main as the public get from a 4-inch main. The flow capacity of an 8-inch main is 5.66 times a 4-inch main. Why should 27 1-2 miles of water mains be subject to terrific strain when a fire occurs when all that is necessary is to furnish pressure where the hydrants are used for a distance of only two or three blocks?

The economical and practical solution of that matter is to provide adequate flow in the mains and furnish fire pumping engines to give the necessary water pressure. This will take all strain off the mains.

In proportion to other municipalities I would estimate that there is an unnecessary expense of 8000 to 10,000 dollars yearly added to your citizens' bills for plumbing repairs on account of damage caused by fire pressure.

This expense which is spread over the entire citizenry is however insignificant to the damages and annoyance caused directly and indirectly by a broken water main. If a break occurs in a length of view distance—as a result of the engineer in charge of the pumping station increasing the normal pressure, it may result in decreased water supply, or no supply at all, with the inevitable destruction of an enormous amount of property. The average life of a water main is 30 to 40 years, and naturally as time passes, the resistance of the strain on your water pipes will be more and more noticeable.

Dead ends should be placed in circuit.

Fire Halls

Improvement needed in fire halls, and they should be lighted by electricity.

Stand Pipe

Standpipe is closed off for direct pressure by a hand operated valve at its base. Controlled from the pumping station, an electrically operated valve should be installed so that fire pressure will be automatically following an alarm.

Hydrants

Hydrants should be staggered on streets in business section not more than 250 feet apart—they are now up to 400 feet apart.

Salvage Equipment

Salvage equipment should be added on the service truck—35 waterproof covers 12 x 9 feet together with hooks, brooms, etc.

Fire Prevention By-law and its application.

An up-to-date by-law controlling modern hazards should be adopted.

Storage of gunpowder should be limited to 25 pounds to meet standard requirements.

No wood shingles should be allowed, especially in high-value areas.

Chimneys should be built on solid foundation from the ground up and conditions exist chimneys in frame buildings may be supported on posts from the foundation, but not on wood brackets if the brick work is over 12 feet in height.

Watchman's clocks needed for night fire patrol at points to cover business section and vicinity.

Population 12,405.

Assessed value of buildings $8,222,192

Memo re. Belleville

Fire Brigade—

5 men o ndutyy at night oin each hall.

2 platoon system. Strength insufficient for a single platoon.

16 men including Chief, all paid, 6 in No. 1 Hall, 9 in No. 2 Hall.

No next standard requirements for the two platoon system in a city this size requires 24 men on duty in the halls by day and 23 by night.

Fire Alarms—

No fire alarm system.

Alarms transmitted to Police Headquarters and re-transmitted to the Fire Hall.

Errors in receiving alarm through misunderstanding, etc. An automatic fire alarm telegraph system should be installed with a sufficient number of non-interfering succession type street boxes in connection with electro-mech anical gongs in the Fire Halls and pumping station, tap bells in the dwellings of members of the Fire Brigade, and a tower striker on the general alarm bell.

Apparatus—

Motor hose trucks are under-powered.

Each hose truck should be equipped with 35 gallons chemical tanks, also with foam tank for oil fires.

City needs a triple combination pump per hose and chemical truck of 600-800 imperial gallons capacity.

Steam fire engine is obsolete and unreliable—made in 1873.

Water—

27 1-2 miles of distribution mains, of which 20% or approximately 30,000 feet are only 4 inches in diameter. 4-inch mains continue to be laid. The laying of 4-inch mains should be discontinued, as they are not standard for fire fighting purposes. The initial cost of laying a 6-inch main instead of a 4-inch is practically the difference in the price of the metal. The cost of trenching is the same, and there is only a very slight difference in the cost of laying.

OSHAWA BOOMS

Oshawa, May 31.—Nelson S. Baird, 59 Drew Street, has taken out a permit to build a five-apartment house on the west side of Simcoe Street south of number 156. Probable cost of the building will be $12,000. The apartment house will be brick with concrete foundation, with oak floors and pine trim throughout.

FARM MARKET SPOTLIGHT AND MINING STOCKS
HOWAT M&M McGILLIVRAY

With plans for diamond drilling under way, and as the result of a decidedly favorable report on finds that are said to be shaping up as important as those made on Towagmac and Amulet the stock of Capital Bouyn Gold Mines is causing considerable attention on the Montreal Mining market. Officials are preparing a report which is intimated as being of considerable interest and an assay of the latest discovery will be known during the present week.

There is much speculation over the McIntyre statement which is expected to be made this week. Just what it will indicate is the cause of considerable interest. In some quarters it is said that the McIntyre Kamiskotia holdings may play a prominent part in the statement of operations for the year 1926, and the future outlook.

CAR DEPT. LOSE TO MOTIVE POWER BOYS

Softball between the Canadian National teams was ushered in at Pine St. School grounds last evening when the Motive Power Dept. took the measure of the fast Car Dept. squad by a score of 17-6. The game was fast and interesting. Schreider served them up for the winners and had as his battery mate "Scotty" Knott who is one of the premier softball catchers in Belleville. Great rivalry exists between these rail road teams.

The winning team was composed of the following: W. Schreider p; Knott c; Yeomans 1b; E. Schreider p, Knott c, F. Rainbird 2b, Lloyd H., Rigsby 3b, and Seeney rf.

News Of Movies

John Barrymore as "Don Juan!"

That is the treat promised for local picture-goers at the Belle Theatre where this spectacular Warner Brothers production opened for a run of three days.

Barrymore plays a dual role. First he appears as Don Juan, famous lover, Don Jose, a courtly, punctilious, noble Spanish aristocrat, who, discovering his wife is unfaithful, dies with this warning to his boy, Juan: "Destroy women or they will destroy you."

Next Barrymore appears as Don Juan, grown to manhood amid the magnificence of the Rome of the Borgias. The role, so developed in the picture, bears points of resemblance to that memorable character of the Renaissance lover which Barrymore played on the stage in Edmund Rostand's "The Jest"; a silken, sensuous, seductive lover, who, with a smile on his lips, poisons the minds of the women who yield to his irresistible fascinations. Thus he becomes the destroyer.

Barrymore's magnetic personality has never, according to all reports, been more effectively projected than in this picture. Excellent as were his performances in "Beau Brummel", and

GIANTS SPLIT WITH PHILLIES

St. Louis Cardinals Take Both Ends of Double Header

New York, May 31.—The Giants and Phillies split the Decoration Day double -header at New York, the Giants winning the first 14 to 10, and the Phillies the second, 1 to 0. The Giants outslugged the Phillies in the opener, though Pitzsimmons failed to finish the game. The early lead of the Giants could not be overcome by the Phillies. In the second game Clarence Mitchell was in rare form and he shut out the Giants with three hits.

After seeing their eleven-game winning streak shattered by the Chicago Cubs in the morning, 7 to 6, the Pirates came back at Pittsburgh in the afternoon to win 6 to 5. Both games were ten innings, the second struggle marking the first time and Cubs have won an extra-inning game this season. A triple-play unassisted by Jimmy Cooney, Cub shortstop was the thrilling feature of the opener which was marked by heavy hitting by both sides. Joe Harris' single in the tenth gave the Pirates the second encounter after Bartnetta's homer had knotted the count in the ninth.

The St. Louis Cardinals celebrated their home-coming by winning both games of a double-header from the Cincinnati Reds, 3 to 2, and 7 to 1. In the first game the Reds nicked Haines for ten hits, seven of them for extra bases, but he was master in the pinches and a dozen Red-legs were left stranded on bases. It was Haines' eighth victory of the season. The second game was a pitching duel between Sherdel and Ritter. The Cardinal moundsman kept the visitors hits scattered.

Brooklyn took both ends of the holiday double-header at Boston, 5 to 2 and 6 to 2. Doak let the Braves down with five hits in the first game, while the Robins pounded Charley Robertson out of the box in the opening inning. Edwards held the visitors hitless until the sixth inning of the second game and then weakened Brooklyn continued its assault on three Boston pitchers who followed him to the mound.

COLLEGE STUDENT CAPTURES AUTO RACE

Indianapolis, Indiana, May 37.—George Souders, a shy unassuming boy from Lafayette, Indiana, became somebody in the business of automobile racing yesterday. Souders, a former student of Purdue University, driving his first major event, won the fifteenth annual 500-mile grind at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway before a record breaking crowd of 140,000.

This twenty-four-year-old youth from the sticks, driving the entire distance without relief and making only two quick stops, piloted his tiny racer, painted a dusty shade of gray, two hundred perilous trips around the bumpy two and a half mile track in 5.07.33 for an average of 97.54 miles in hour. He had a lead of seven and a half miles when he got the checkered flag as a signal of victory.

By his victory Souders enriched himself to the extent of about $30,000 in cash money. He won $20,000 as first prize and picked up $5,100 in lap rich bonuses, getting one hundred dollars every time he led the field each lap.

Souders can use this money because he intends to resume his studies in mechanical engineering at Purdue.

RUSSELL OATMAN MARRIED

Kingston, Ont., May 31.—A wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Taylor, Napanee, when Miss Taylor was united in marriage to Warren Russell Oatman, both of Montreal. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. R. Tanton, Trinity United Church, in the presence of immediate relatives. Mr. Oatman is a professional hockey player, being right left wing for the Montreal Maroons in the National Hockey League.

RUTH'S HOME RUN WINS FOR YANKS

Large Scores Featured Yesterday's Big League Games

Philadelphia, May 31.—G. Herman Ruth rammed the leather-covered sphere into the upper left field stands yesterday afternoon and saved the Yankees from total extinction at the hands of the Athletics in the Memorial Day programme at Mr. Shibe's Park.

In his long and honorable career Herman the Great has hit several hundred homers, but none so timely as his fourteenth blow of 1927, which came in the eleventh inning at a time when the Yanks were not inclined to smack the little matter of one run.

The slightest slap in the Shibe garret gave the Yanks a 6 to 5 decision over the Athletics and cost 49,000 customers home with a sour taste in their mouths. The same number of folks stamped at the park in the morning and saw the Yanks lose, 9 to 8, though they hammered Robert Moses Grove for fifteen hits and should have won, hands down.

The afternoon game was played under protest by the Athletics, who intend to make a formal complaint to Tom Johnson over an umpirical decision in the fourth inning. With Collins on second and Cobb on first and one out, Summons hit a foul close to the Philadelphia bench. Grabowski raced out from a brilliant catch and then dived head first over an iron railing. Jack hit the top of the dog cut and half dived down a flight of stairs landing in the rear of the stands His feet waved frantically in the air and friendly Athletic hands attempted to pull him out of the hole.

St. Louis and Chicago divided a double-header at Chicago, the Browns stinning the first game by smashing pitchers all over the field, making the score 11 to 5. FINE RACE CARD FOR JUNE 3RD

Horses Entered From Best Stables In Province—Soft Ball

At a meeting or the officers of the foothall Association League together with officials for the 3rd June celebration last night the draw was made for the King's Birthday Tournament at the Agricultural Field. Four teams will compete for the prires and Foster Ward will be pitted against the strong Provincial girls squad in the opening tilt.

Following this game the Tigers champions of the Indoor Industrial Loop will clash with the Deacon Smirt team. The winners of each game will meet in the final game. These four teams are all evenly-matched and should provide plenty of excitement for softball fans. The Umpires' Association which was recently organized in the city will appoint the arbiters to handle all four games. Certificates were handed out to the players last night.

Race horses from all over the province will be here for the speed tests and followers of the turf will see some of the fastest animals in action. Johnston of Percboro will bring two or three horses including Arnadale who has built a fine record up to a sulky horse. Akey of Peterboro with a string of eight thoroughbreds will arrive at the track this week. Jack Abbe, a fast horse, is among Mr. Akey's stable.

Mr. Roe, Member of Parliament for Simcoe County with a trio of track favorites should cause plenty of competition.

Bownree of Weston who is known throughout the Province through his associations with horse-racing is coming to Belleville with several animals. Entries have also been received from Lowe of Cobourg, Herrington of Picton, and Reynolds of Napanee.

All in all it shapes up as one of the most interesting days of racing that has been arranged in Belleville for some time. Geo. Tice will act as starter and his reputation as the ideal man in this position is known far and wide.

The Argyle Light Infantry Band will play in the band stand for an hour preceding the races and ball games and later they will take up their station in the main grand stand.

Only the chairs in the boxes will be reserved and the other seats will be thrown open to those paying general admission. The seat sale will open at Chas. Symons' store on Wednesday.

LEAFS WALLOPED BY SYRACUSE

New York, May 31.—The Stars made thirty-eight hits at Syracuse yesterday in defeating Toronto twice, 13 to 5 and 11 to 11. All told, there were sixty-three hits. Harry L syne and Joe Brown, of Syracuse, two leading contenders for the base-stealing leadership, stole three bases apiece. Layne getting three in the morning game and Brown three in the afternoon. Brown stole same in the third inning. The double victory placed Syracuse in first place in the league standing.

Bradshaw broke its losing streak which had reached 31 straight games by rally ing in the seventh inning this afternoon to nose out Baltimore, 9 to 8, at Reading. The home team lost the morning contest, 4 to 2. Fred Merkle, manager of the Keystones, pinch-hitting for Pitcher John Watson in the seventh inning of the afternoon game and with men on first and second, angled sharply to deep right, scoring Nolan with the winning run.

After Herb Thomahlen delivered an 8-karat pitching performance to win 2 to 0 decision in the morning game at Buffalo, Jack Holdingswoth, Bison ace duplicated in the afternoon to give the Westerners an even break. The scores were 6 to 1 and 4 to 0.

Newark got back at the Skeeters in fine style this afternoon, winning both games at Jersey City, the first by a score of 12 to 3, and the second by 9 to 1. The Neewarkers slammed the ball hard in both games.

Several local baseball followers will nicnic in Point Anne tomorrow afternoon to witness the opening of the Bay of Quinte League when the Deloro Club will be the guest of Coyer and Co. The office open ing was to have taken place in Belleville May 24th but the elements were unkind and forced a postponement. Point Anne have strengthened their club considerably since last year and the Deloro Club have Boudreau back again and "Inky" Woods a pitcher from Peterboro. Jack Eden star shortstop is lost to the smelters having entered a Kingston Hospital as an interne. It looks like a merry battle all the way through with our Canadian Nationals en.ered a slight edge over the other two.

The Nationals one of Toronto's fastest female softball clubs will be here next Saturday for two game with Allan Meagher's Beaver girls. The Nats who are Ontario Interprovincial champions are cutting a wide swath in softball circles down around Sunnyside this year and are regarded as one of the smartest teams in the Queen City. "Babe" Vincent, of Peterboro, who is a clever pitcher and his catcher Miss Mortimer will be here to form the local battery and with such well-known names as Twin Warham, Evelyn Whalen, L. Thrasher, K. Curry and others in the line-up the nine shots should give a good account of themselves. The Supremes of Kingston, will come back with the Beavers on the Armouries lawn on Friday night at 6.15. With these three games down on the card for over the week end fans will not go sport hungry. Ladies softball made a big hit here last year and should go over bigger than ever during the coming season.

The Intell soft batters are looking for games with city or outside teams. Communications will be gladly received by the Sporting Editor or the manager.

Belleville rueing enthusiasts were prominent in last week's crowds at the Woodbine and no doubt many will avail themselves of the opportunity to see the ponies in action at the Thorneliffe track this week. The scenes will shift to Dufferin Park next week. No long shots have been reported up-to-date by local turf fans.

Congratulations are due Cliff Bricker the gallant Galt runner who captured the Caine marathon. The western boy has an excellent future in the marathon game following his excellent showing in the Boston marathon.

Both Golf Clubs are besieged with new players this year anxious to take up the ancient and honored game. Special talks are being given at the Belleville Club by two professionals. The Country Club has an added membership and tennis, yachting and social functions are part of the season's program.

WILSON'S BACHELOR 12c

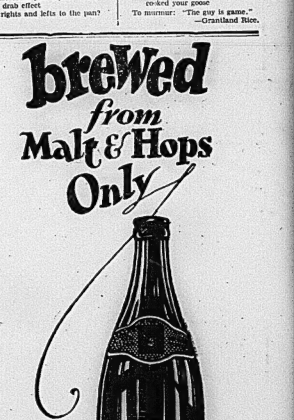

ON BEING ABLE TO TAKE IT

Bill was a murderous sucker;
Bill was a bum;
He was the champion bouncer
Of splinters out of a block;
Bill had a fist hooked on to a wrist
That was built for shattering rock.

Bill had the flowered token
Worn on the small-cloth;
The bridge of his beak was broken
As wide as a double span.
What could you expect from the drab effect
Of rights and lefts to the pan?

Bill may have done his duty
Deep in the tawdry muck,
But, losing his manly beauty,
Why was he out of luck?
When a cove let fly for his chin or eye
Bill always forgot to duck.

Life is full of samples
Of those who forgot the same;
Fate in its wild rush trambles
Over the battered frame;
But what's the use when they've cooked your goose
To murmur: "The say is game."

The Irony of Love

By Charles Garvice

"Mr. Oldfilan has been to see me; he has told me what he told you, and I—and you, too, Strandyre—know that he is right. He has chosen you the only course you can take. You—you must go to her, you must abide by your act. Oh, I know, Strandyre, how bitter it must seem to accept unexplainingly the consequences of a monarch's heedless folly. And now I'm preaching!" she broke off, with a smile that was more harrowing for him than her tears had been. "And I meant to guard against that. You don't want any one to preach to you, to point out to you what you should do; there is always the right thing to be done, and you will do it, Strandyre."

"It's dorned hard," he said grimly, "but if you say so—well, I've got to do it."

"She is your—wife; she loves you," said Maude, her voice so low that he could scarcely hear her. "You owe her something—but I won't go over all that; there is no need; you'll go at once, Strandyre? They tell me that the train cannot be found—"

"I can find her," he said absently. "I know where she'll go. Yes, I'll go at once. I couldn't stay here; I should go off my head—to have you near me, and to be able to see you—Oh, I've got to go right enough, and now. Say, Maude, will you write to me?"

"No, Strandyre. Oh, dearest, don't you see— It would make things worse. Try as I might to write as if I were just a friend, some word would creep in to remind you of what we were to each other, to show you that still—"

He turned to her suddenly, a groan on his lips, his arms outstretched; she felt that he was shaken by the passion which consumed him. She put out her hands and they rested on his breast, very lightly but restrainingly.

"No, no dear," she pleaded and commanded. "You must not touch me—I'm not strong enough. I can let you go, if you don't make it too hard for me; and you must go, you must, you must!"

His hands fell to his sides, and he rose and took a step from her, his back turned to her, so that he could not see her face. Then he came back and held out his hand, his face set, as if it were carved from marble.

"You're right, Maude," he said look only. "I—I won't worry you. I'll say good-bye now. I won't see you again. I'll be off at once. You'll hear about me—I write from your father. But whatever you hear, don't forget"—his voice was almost inaudible—"that I'm still thinking of you, that you're still the woman I want—"

She took his hand in both of hers, and unconsciously, drew it toward her lips; but, with an effort, she restrained herself and, half choked by her sobs, turned away from him. A few paces from him, she paused.

"Good" she whispered.

Rafe shook his head. He laid borne just as much as he could bear. She understood, and went on her way. Then he turned to the house and, sending for Wilson, told him to pack a small portmanteau.

"No dress clothes, no London clothes of any kind," said Rafe. "Say, Wilson I asked you, as a favor, to happen to have that rough blue suit of clothes I once wore. I find easier?"

"Well, I do happen to, my lord," said Wilson, as if he were congratulating himself on his foresight. "For it occurred to me that it might be useful here on the moors, so I didn't sell it, sir."

"That's right," said Rafe. "Put it in—and the hat, too."

"Yes, my lord," said Wilson. "Is your lordship going on a shooting-and fishing excursion? Do you take me, my lord?"

"No," said Rafe, looking at him queerly. "I can't take you—I almost wish I could, for you've been a decent chap to me, but I've got to go alone."

He went down to the village, walking, his eyes bent on the ground, his hands on his stick; but when the child ren came to him as was their wont, he found it possible to talk to them, and they ran off, with the coppers which they had confidently expected. At the end of the village he met Dalrnid, of the young laird.

"I was coming up to the castle, laird he said. "The grouse are plenty, and his time that ye were among them. Ye've been away too long, laird, and the birds will be growing wild. Will ye be coming tomorrow?"

"Not tomorrow, Donald," said Rafe as cheerily as he could. "I have to go away again, on business.

The loyal old man shook his head and regarded Rafe with grave doubt and something like reproach.

"It I may speak my mind, laird, ye're feeling as ill with Gleniyre, and I've had it in my heart to tell ye ever since the twelfth passed and ye no here for the shootin'. I ken I'm overbold to speak so plain to ye,
